Other Wheaton preferences: good humor in a husband (personality and ambition with intelligence trail); presidency of the United States, poetry writing and conducting of a symphony orchestra are desired occupations.

This, we feel, is a complete picture of the modern woman. She likes Ogden Nash, a twenty-five dollar husband, intelligence, and symphony orchestras.

Phased by none of this, we present the preferences of ten of our senior friends:

Favorite newspaper—Seven can't read; one, New York World; two, La Vie Parisienne.

Favorite magazine—Seven, Liberty; three, Film Fun.

Best actress—Ten, Sari Maritza.

Favorite authors—Seven, Edgar Guest; one, William Faulkner; one, Dorothy Dix; one, Tiffany Thayer.

Favorite sport—Seven, solitaire; three, Greensboro.

Qualifications for Wife—Ten, money.

Ambitions—Ten, vague.

Science

The Machine Age, we beg to report, has made progress since this time last column. Man, unmindful of the labor problem and unemployment, is still the inventor of time saving appliances. Our latest is known as the melodious Awakener, and is installed in a dormitory room in the lower quadrangle.

The ingenuity of two undergraduates was combined to construct the Awakener (patent pending), which we will endeavor to describe. The inventors fastened a stiff piece of wire to the alarm key on the back of a cheap alarm clock, detaching the bell beforehand. When the alarm goes off in the morning the wire hits the bait on a mousetrap, the trap snaps back and pulls a cord attached to the starter on a phonograph. And the phonograph, wound the night before, is set for action. In a few minutes the strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again" fill the room, awakening the occupants.

We're not so sure about the name of the record, but we presume that they use that one for week-ends. Or maybe "The Moon is Low."

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

EXAMS are in the offing. Why are exams? Why do students periodically submit themselves to the mental anguish of cramming? Why do professors or their underpaid readers suffer both mental and physical fatigue in the matter of grading papers? This matter is of the greatest importance. Columns are devoted to the subject yearly. Editorial writers wax eloquent in the cause of abolition. Psychologists engage in extensive research work in this field, for letters home grow thin and plaintive. Fair damsels grow likewise. Deep, dark circles appear under eyes formerly bright and shining. All for grades. And there are grades for all—ranging from A's to F's. Examinations are not a fair test of a student's knowledge or ability. Even the professors admit that a mere mark of distinction such as "pass" and "failure" would be better than a graduated grading system. But exams, medieval though they may be in some respects, have a purpose. Yes, indeed. If it weren't for exams there couldn't be any of those delightful little Boners and More Boners collections. Just think what a dismal world this would be if a student had never written that Queen Elizabeth sat on a thorn longer than any other English sovereign, that Bacchus was a famous Greek bootlegger, that William Jennings Bryan was "the biggest and best show on earth," that the vast western reaches of these United States were settled by a transpiration of sturdy pioneers across the Appalachians, and that Mike Angel entered the pearly gates because he was a famous Florentine painter (those last three are from my private and yet unpublished collection). The way to avoid boners, of course, is to smoke a certain brand of tobacco. The way to avoid exams might be to have the TAR HEEL conduct a poll on the subject of abolition or retention of the time-honored custom.

ADS are funny. "Nature in the raw is seldom mild" is a slogan which advertises a brand of cigarettes supposedly somewhat milder than competing brands. These ads are generally adorned with some artist's conception of nature in the raw. Sometimes the bones of dinosaurs are depicted. At other times a ferocious wild beast is crouched ready to spring upon an unsuspecting prey. But the best one I've seen yet is entitled, alliteratively enough, "The Pillage of Paris." Two strong men are shown bearing away the supine body of a young woman with flowing tresses. She is supposed to be an unwilling captive. Turn the picture upside down and look at the self-satisfied smile which plays about her lips—nature in the raw is seldom mild.

ALL the world loves a holiday. The Romans may not have originated the custom but they had their holidays, and we of today emulate the habit of those who dwelt on the banks of the yellow Tiber. If exams come can Christmas holidays be far behind? Here's wishing for one and all, including Tiny Tim, happy holidays!

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Touche!

The denunciation of the TAR HEEL's dramatic critic in yesterday's TAR HEEL which purports to represent the sober views of the campus ventured the highly original and humorous suggestion that the critic's name was drawn from a hat. The letter then proceeds with some examples of dramatic criticism that beggar the attempts of George Jean Nathan. How they make our own poor critic feel can be imagined.

It does not seem quite sportsmanlike for H. K. to attack the poor work of the TAR HEEL's critic while at the same time making a veiled bid in the shape of highly superior work for the post of the man he shows unfit for the position. It is probable, however, that disgusted with the work of bunglers he has determined to step in and take the duties upon himself in one fell swoop and not go through the formality of having his name drawn from a hat.

The letter concludes with a question that brings up a very valuable plan for the future. How, asks H. K., can a Wilmington lad criticize a play about Tin Pan Alley. The answer is that he cannot. This shows the long felt need of the dramatic criticism at Chapel Hill. A man from western North Carolina for plays of that locality, one from the east for eastern plays, a man from Georgia for the Georgia plays and a man from New York for the New York plays. In this way many would be given a chance and we would have criticisms from capable men. And for the plays of universal scope and import who but H. K. himself a man whom we could point to with pride as really fit and chosen for his ability as a critic of critics.—J.F.A.

BOXERS TO START IN HARD TRAINING AFTER CHRISTMAS

Tar Heel Mitmen Will Take Out
Gloves on January 3 to Train
For Meet With V. P. I.

Training for the varsity and freshman boxing teams will end tomorrow for the holidays and it will be resumed on January 3, the first day of classes. Coaches Rowe and Allen request that all their men report then to begin intensive training immediately.

On that day the last and most important training siege starts. The V. P. I. meet comes on January 14th, leaving the boxers just eleven days in which to polish their attack and put on the finishing touches. As they are sure to be a bit rusty following the Christmas vacation, it will be necessary that they start working for perfection as soon as they return to Chapel Hill.

Three boys, all of them sophomores, will go to this winter's wars far the varsity with unblemished records. Nor Quarles, last year's freshman sensation as a 125-pounder, Lee Berke, 155-pounder, and Sam Gidinan-sky, who was the frosh mainstay at 165 pounds, will be fighting to keep that record intact. They are in fine condition and appear ready to go right now.

Marty Levinson, who will put on gloves for the last time this year for Carolina, will be watched closely. He has been one of the greatest stars ever to fight here. In three years of inter-collegiate competition, he has

Carolina Theatre To Give Charity Matinee

All adults and children bringing canned goods will be admitted to the Saturday morning matinee at 10:00 o'clock at the Carolina theatre to see an all comedy program for the first time. Students are urged to attend and, in this manner, help charity in Chapel Hill.

At the regular Saturday shows, starring Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy in "Me and My Gal," by the courtesy of the Carolina theatre, girls will be admitted free if accompanied by escorts.

It is suggested by the cashier that students save time by attaching their bill to a money order or check for the amount due and mailing it to him rather than waiting in line. The bill will be receipted and returned. All students who do not pay by mail will pay at the cashier's window beginning January 3 and continuing through January 13, according to a schedule printed in an earlier issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. All students who do not pay their bill during this period will be assessed $5.00 for late payment.

Fine for Late Registration

Students who have been in attendance at the University during the fall quarter, and who register late for the winter quarter will be placed on one month's probation for each day their registration is delayed. They will also be charged a delayed registration fee of $5.00. The same penalty as for late registration, including the $5.00 fee, will apply to those students who fail to attend their first day's classes. No excuses are accepted.

Those students who find that they are unable to return for a continuation of their work are asked to notify the dean of the school in which they are registered before January 3.

Contrary to any previous announcement, the Christmas vacation for law school students will be the same as that of the other students at the University, from Wednesday, December 21 to January 3.

lost only four bouts, and it is expected that in his swan song to college boxing, he will run up another string of victories.

Furche Raymer, who is expected to return after the holidays, will be an added asset to Coach Rowe. Raymer was unbeaten in six freshman bouts two years ago and last year, his first on the varsity, he won four and lost five. He holds something of a record in Southern conference competition, having scored a 45-second knockout over Bill Towler of V. P. I. last year.

Peyton Brown, Carolina's shugging light-heavy, who may also return to school, is another knockout artist. As a freshman, he scored six knockouts in six starts. Last year on the varsity, he won five bouts and lost three.

Best House Leads In Intramural Race For Cup With A. T. O. Second

Six Dormitory and Seven Fraternity Teams Have Scored More Than One Hundred Points, Garnering Them in Football, Boxing, Wrestling, and Cake Race Competition.

Thirteen teams, six dormitory and seven fraternity, have rolled up more than one hundred points in their quest for the cup awarded annually by the intramural department to the team which scores the most points throughout the year.

With all returns in from events of the fall quarter, during which competitions were held in football, boxing and wrestling, and the cake race was run, Best House, which competes in the dormitory division of the campaign, is far in the lead with 585 points.

Alpha Tau Omega, which leads the fraternity outfits and trails only Best House for campus honors, has 437½ markers, while Lewis, another dormitory organization, is third with 341½.

Best House Versatile

Best House rolled up its tremendous total by scoring heavily in all four branches of fall competition. The 1931 campus football champions fared less well on the gridiron this season, but gained 75 points for entering a team. In the cake race the Best House runners tallied 150 markers, while its wrestlers and boxers accounted for 175 and 185 respectively.

A. T. O.'s points were gained as follows: 175 for football, in which the fraternity's eleven won the campus championship; 160 for wrestling; 57½ for the cake race; and 45 for boxing.

Lewis, runner-up for campus leadership in football, scored 125 for its gridiron efforts, 79½ for the cake race, 135 for boxing, and 2 for wrestling. Had Lewis representatives fared better in this latter department, they would be in a position to threaten A. T. O.'s hold on the runner-up position.

Final Statistics

Final statistics on competitors in the fall intramural program reveal that 43 teams took part, with 470 individuals competing for fraternities and 405 for dormitories, making a total of 875 men taking part altogether.

Final standings of the leading teams at the close of fall quarter competition follows: Best House, 585; A. T. O., 437½; Lewis, 341½; Sigma Nu, 184; Everett, 177½; Chi Psi, 174½; Tau Epsilon Phi, 162½; Aycock, 160; Grimes, 155; Zeta Psi, 155; Beta Theta Pi, 137½; New Dorms, 125; Kappa Alpha, 107.

The Tar Babies will have their annual trip into Virginia the first part of February, meeting Virginia frosh, Woodberry Forest, and Augusta Military Academy on successive days.

Good Team Expected

With a long practice period behind them and with the good material which has reported, Coach Dameron will be pointing for the state frosh championship and should have his team well in the race.

Boxing Champs Feted At Paulsen's Supper

The winners of the intramural boxing tournament were the guests of Dean and Mrs. Paulsen at a dinner given in their home Tuesday evening.

Medals were awarded to the eight new champions, who are: Gene Eustler, Max Frucht, Ben Kalb, Charlie Sutton, Joe Pratt, Val Edwards, Mort Ellisberg, and Murry Kanner.

Coaches Rowe and Allen, Herman Schnell, director of intramurals, and Jimmie McGurk, DAILY TAR HEEL boxing reporter, were also present and called upon by Dean Paulsen to address the gathering, after which the host, who is an ardent boxing enthusiast, told the interesting story of the inception and development of boxing at Carolina.

COUNCIL TO RID DORMITORIES OF EXCESSIVE NOISE

Student Government Group Prepares To Take Drastic Action Against Offenders.

Excessive disturbance in campus dormitories and particularly the shooting of firecrackers during study hours has led the student council of the University to prepare to take drastic action if such disturbance continues.

The council took official notice of the disturbance Tuesday night when it called a meeting of all the dormitory officials and prepared to stop annoyances which have been reported.

The dormitory presidents and committees promised co-operation in helping the council eliminate such disturbance and aid in bringing offenders before the group.

Student government officials stated last night that unnecessary noise in the dormitories is a serious offense.

Economics Journal Has Ferger Article

The current issue of the Quarterly Journal of Economics, published by Harvard University, carries an article by Dr. Wirth F. Ferger of the department of economics and commerce here. The title of the article is "The Static and Dynamic in Statistical Demand Curves."

This article is a study of the basic meaning and significance of statistical demand studies. Elasticity of demand has long been one of the tools of economic theory, but only recently have students made attempts at actually measuring it and indicating to what extent the quantity of a commodity consumers will buy is determined by price changes. The study takes up several of the views expressed by recent writers, and shows that statistical results may yield static demand curve.

The next session of the 316th field artillery troop school will be held in Davie hall Thursday evening, December 15, at 7:30 o'clock.

Possum-Hunting Developing Into Gentle Pastime

E. E. Ericson Captures "Erasmus," Serious-Faced Possum, Near Bell Tower.

It all happened down near the Morehead-Patterson memorial tower. Dr. E. E. Ericson of the English department was on his way to his class one morning recently when he heard a noise—more a hollow thud than a falling limb of a tree would make he thought, so he investigated. About that time a little bushy animal with a stringy tail scampered across his path, and began climbing the tree away to safety, away from the horrors of the ground below, away from the mighty hunter.

Armed only with his English texts the valiant professor sprang forward and grabbed the possum by the tail, turned around, and headed for home again, his Christmas dinner dangling at arm's length.

Erasmus Is Strange Beast

"Erasmus," who has a long nose, and a serious expression, and the black, beady eyes of a fanatic, was safely installed in a box, covered with a wire screen, and given a hunk of apple to sustain him in his solitary meditations.

Daily, "Erasmus" grows in savoir-faire. Not certain of the occasion's etiquette—we understand that copies of Emily Post are rarely seen around Kenan stadium—"Erasmus" wouldn't eat his apple when anybody watched. But "Erasmus" has overcome his fear of making a social blunder—we haven't consulted Emily on the subject of just how possums should eat apples—texts on etiquette are also rare around the offices of THE DAILY TAR HEEL—but we are certain she would be delighted at the manner with which he attacks breakfast, dinner, and supper.

Having reduced possum-hunting to a polite art, classes in English under Dr. Ericson continue with renewed zest—"And we'll sing Tally-ho, and we'll shout Tally-ho, and . . . Oh well!

DR. NYGARD CONDUCTS CHILD CLINIC AT TARBORO

J. Wallace Nygard, recently appointed assistant psychologist of the bureau of mental health and hygiene of the North Carolina state board of charities and public welfare, has been assigned to conduct a clinic at Tarboro for the children of the public schools.

Starting last Friday, Dr. Nygard has been examining the problems of the children who are having difficulties with their school work or who are in need of readjustment.

Other notables in the cast are Almet Jenks, author for the Saturday Evening Post, who will play the male lead, and Katherine Newlin Burt, well-known authoress and wife of Struthers Burt whose recent Festival aroused the admiration of literary circles. weight, he named several factors which make for weight increases in men entering college for the first time. He said that it was natural that healthy boys at the growing age should gain weight when they enter school and are forced into regular habits and are required to take physical exercise. He stated that the observance of regular meal hours, at which wholesome, well-prepared food is eaten, accompanied with plenty of milk, plays an important part in causing a growing person to gain weight.

EDMUND LOWE IS STAR IN SHOW AT CAROLINA TODAY

Wynne Gibson, Dickie Moore, and Lois Wilson Also in Cast of "The Devil Is Driving."

Edmund Lowe, Wynne Gibson, James Gleason, Lois Wilson, Dickie Moore, and Allan Dinehart have leading roles in "The Devil Is Driving," today's feature at the Carolina theatre.

The plot of the picture is developed around an entirely new theme—the operations of one of the gangs of organized auto thieves who operate in every large city in the country, stealing cars, rebuilding them enough to prevent recognition, and then reselling them.

Lowe plays the role of a mechanic in a garage which is operated by such a gang. Easy-going and good-natured, he suspects the nature of the enterprise, but pays little attention to it until his young nephew is seriously injured as the result of the gang's operations, and the boy's father, demanding a showdown, is brutally murdered.

The role of the child is played by six-year-old Dickie Moore. James Gleason is his father and Lois Wilson his mother. Allan Dinehart is the leader of the band of thieves.

Y. M. C. A. Relief Fund Drive Almost Finished

Total receipts in the annual Christmas seal drive carried on by the freshman friendship council under Ed Lanier reached $17, according to a report issued by Lanier yesterday. Although a few members of the council working in the canvass have not turned in their proceeds, it is expected that the above total will represent the final results of the work.

The entire proceeds of the Christmas seal drive will be turned over to the state fund for the cure of tuberculosis. Mrs. F. H. Edmister is the local director in Chapel Hill.

Open discussions with leaders will be conducted on playwriting, scenery, and lighting, business management, high school dramatics, and Little Theatre organization.

BLAZE DESTROYS LOCAL TENEMENT

Fire Department Saves Surrounding Property After Getting Call Late.

At 3:50 o'clock yesterday morning the Chapel Hill fire department was aroused to attend a fire on Graham avenue. The alarm having been turned in late, the department arrived on the scene two or three minutes after the first call and found the roof on the point of caving in. The house, a negro tenement owned by Arthur Kirkland, was practically demolished by the blaze which had got under way to such an extent that the resources of the fighters did not have any appreciable effect. The department saved the buildings adjacent to the burning structure, which would inevitably have burned had not precautions been taken.

The department which consists of eighteen volunteers and two regularly employed men had an unusual turnout yesterday morning of from ten to twelve men. No estimate of the damage has been yet determined nor has the cause or the origin of the fire been ascertained. An investigation will be instituted immediately under the direction of the fire department.

ENGINEERS WILL ISSUE MAGAZINE DURING QUARTER

"Carolina Engineer" Will Be Financed
By Small Assessment From Engineering Students.

The official magazine of the engineering school, the Carolina Engineer, will be off the press the middle of this quarter. This magazine is the continuation of a magazine that was published here several years ago under the same name, and which presented articles written by engineering students and instructors.

The staff at present consists of George Gorham, editor-in-chief; Fisher Black, business manager, and three associate editors from the mechanical, civil, and chemical divisions of the school. The associate editor from the electrical division will be elected at their next meeting, January 12.

The magazine will be financed by a small assessment from each student in the school of engineering, and this fee was collected at the registration period.

FOUR DELEGATES FROM UNIVERSITY ATTEND MEETING

Carolina Sends Group to Southern Faculty-Student Conference in Atlanta.

Thirty-three delegates from North Carolina representing the University, the Woman's College, State College, Duke University, E. C. T. C., N. C. College for Negroes, Johnson C. Smith University, and other schools attended the Southern Faculty-Student Conference in Atlanta December 28-31. Bill McKee, L. L. Hutchison, Roy McMillan, Claude Freeman, and Jesse Parker made up the delegation from the Chapel Hill division of the University. About 250 delegates from colleges and universities throughout the southern states were present.

Conference Interracial

The conference was interracial, and many eminent negro educators were included in the program, which featured the theme: "Responsibilities of the forces of religion in building the south of tomorrow." Among these were Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, Washington, D. C.; B. E. May, graduate student at the University of Chicago; Miss Jane Sadler, of the National Interracial Council; and Dr. Howard Thurman, also of Howard University. Dr. W. A. Smart, of the faculty of Emory University, and other Emory professors also made addresses to the conference.

On Friday night the North Carolina delegation assembled together at a banquet and had a get-together meeting under the leadership of Bill McKee, of the local delegation, and Miss A. V. Poe, of the Woman's College. Several student leaders of the south were present.

RE-ADMISSIONS GROUP TO MEET THIS AFTERNOON

The re-admissions committee will meet in 203 South building with Dean A. W. Hobbs this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All upperclassmen who passed only one course during the fall quarter are on probation for the winter quarter and are required to pass three courses in order to remain in the University.

Twelve Major Events Stand Out In University Life Of Past Year

Review of Happenings on Campus During 1932 Reveal That Ashby Penn Shooting Received More Publicity in State and Local Papers Than Any Other Event at Hill.

By Don Shoemaker

With the tumultuous year of 1932 relegated to the pages of history in the appropriately derisive manner but a few short days back, twelve events of singular importance loom in THE DAILY TAR HEEL files from the winter, spring, and fall quarters. There was little sensationalism in the news of the campus, so our events of import are those which have influenced in some manner the history of the University and the life of the student body and faculty members.

Events included in this list are relevant to numerous fields of student endeavor, to the University administration, and to the various activities on the athletic field and floor. It is, of course, impossible to include in this list all of the outstanding victories and defeats experienced by University athletic teams during the year, since the diverse program of the C. A. A. includes dozens of sport clashes of a spectacular nature.

Summary of Events

In summary, the twelve major news events of 1932 are: University Student Loan Fund drive, dedication of Graham Memorial building, the death of Professor J. C. Bynum, Carolina runner-up in the S. I. C. basketball tournament, the University victory in the S. I. C. indoor games, the Ashby Penn shooting, election of Haywood Weeks as president of the student body, the frequent faculty salary cuts, the inauguration of the North Carolina state symphony, the election of Frank Porter Graham to head the Greater University of North Carolina, Duke's football victory over the University, and the selection of Louis Round Wilson as vice-president of the Chapel Hill branch of the Greater University of North Carolina.

John Lang Fostered Formation Of State-Wide Student Group

North Carolina Federation of Students Organized by Carolina Student to Better the Relations Existing Between Students at Schools in State.

Announcement of a new monthly magazine to issue from Chapel Hill as the official publication of the North Carolina Federation of Students has focused student attention on the organization which is responsible for the new paper.

The North Carolina Federation of Students, better known by its initials as the N. C. F. S., like its official publication, was born in Chapel Hill. John Lang, who graduated from the University in 1930, is properly "the father of the federation," and is responsible for its local founding.

Started in 1929

In the fall of 1929, when Lang was a senior here, he conceived the idea of forming a federation of North Carolina student bodies, with the particular aim of bettering hitherto unfriendly relations between Carolina and Duke University. A national student federation was already in operation, a conference of which Ray Farris, president of the student body at Carolina, attended at Stanford University at Palo Alto, California. Inspired by Farris' account of the workings of the national organization, Lang voluntarily assumed the responsibility of realizing his idea.

A year later as president of the Phi society, Lang brought the two literary societies of the campus together and invited literary societies from Duke and the student councils of both schools to attend the meeting. Two memorable resolutions were discussed and adopted. The first was for bettering intercollegiate relations. The second was: "Be it resolved, that this body endorse and support the effort to found a student federation in this state."

Previously, in February of the same year, President Farris had invited the student officials of Duke University to meet with those of Carolina at a banquet which took place at the Carolina Inn February 17. This "love feast," as students of both schools called the meeting, was the basic step in the movement toward federation, although its primary purpose was to better Carolina-Duke relations. To this original end the now well-known Duke-Carolina friendship football trophy was conceived and established. At the same time plans called for a convention of representatives of all senior colleges in North Carolina.

Sensational Penn Case

The Penn shooting was the most sensational news event of the year, according to the space afforded the case in local and state newspapers. Penn, then a University junior, was shot by one of four bandits at the culmination of an automobile chase on the Graham road the night of March 31, after his automobile had been commandeered by a local police officer. After a long fight for his life, Penn finally recovered and his assailant was later apprehended.

The selection of Dr. Graham to head the newly consolidated Greater University was probably the outstanding academic event of the year. The consolidation plans and the election of

BERT LOWN WILL PLAY FOR CLASS DANCES IN SPRING

Lown Selected Over Ted Weems in Final Choice of Orchestra for

The combined committees of the junior and senior classes under the leadership of Bill McKee have definitely made the selection of Bert Lown and his orchestra to play at the junior-senior dances scheduled for May 12 and 13.

Prior to the Christmas holidays, consideration of various orchestras had been narrowed down to Lown and Ted Weems. Lown is famous for his playing at the Biltmore Hotel in New York for his numerous engagements at debutante dances.

The series of dances next spring will be comprised of the junior prom, Friday night from 9:00 until 1:00 o'clock, the junior-senior tea dance Saturday afternoon from 4:00 until 6:00 o'clock, and the final dance of the group, the senior ball, scheduled from 9:00 o'clock until midnight.

FACULTY IS GIVEN FIFTEEN PERCENT CUT IN SALARIES

Administration Has Attempted To Reduce Other Expenses
Rather Than Salaries.

University professors, members of the administration, and others serving the University have received a further cut of fifteen percent in their salaries. This cut comes as an addition to the previous cuts of ten and twenty per cent and is the result of a thirty percent cut affecting all state departments and institutions.

The first cut of ten percent went into effect at the beginning of the present fiscal year, July 1, to meet the requirements of a law enacted by the past session of the state legislature. The state budget bureau made the second cut of thirty percent in the expenditures of all state bodies and institutions. According to the bureau it was necessary to cut the appropriations of the University along with those of other state institutions in order to balance the budget.

C. T. Woollen, business manager of the University, and members of the University administration have attempted to apply the last cut, put into effect by the North Carolina budget bureau, in as far as was possible to other items of the University expenses rather than to the salaries. However it was found impossible to apply this entire cut to the library, equipment, supplies, and other miscellaneous expenses alone. These expenditures having been reduced to a minimum it was found necessary to further cut the salaries of those connected with the University.

ALUMNI HAVE MEETINGS DURING HOLIDAY SEASON

The University alumni in the state met in Gastonia, Rutherfordton, and Lenoir during the Christmas holidays.

President Frank P. Graham addressed a meeting of the civic clubs of Rutherfordton December 22. Following this meeting, the alumni who had been invited held an adjourned meeting at which they reorganized their association. R. E. Price was elected president.

LANG PICKED TO HEAD NATIONAL STUDENT GROUP

Alumnus of Class of '30 Chosen
Over Orville Mohler, All-American Quarterback.

John A. Lang, '30, was elected president of the National Student Federation of America in the final session of the tenth congress of the body, which closed at Tulane December 31, after a five-day convention in New Orleans. Elizabeth Read, president of the Vassar student body, was named vice-president; and C. Girard Davidson, president of the Tulane University student body, was named secretary-treasurer. Washington, D. C., was selected as the next meeting place over the bids of Tulsa, Okla., and Wichita, Kansas.

Weeks Chosen Officer

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body of the University, was elected chairman of the Southeastern district by the delegates of the states in the Southeastern district. He will also serve as an ex-officio member of the executive committee of the federation by virtue of his chairmanship.

Mayne Albright, Southeastern district representative at this congress, was chairman of the discussion group on "International Relations." Mary Frances Parker represented the women students of the University at the congress.

Lang Prominent in Group

Lang's opponent for the office of president was Orville Mohler, all-American quarterback and president of the University of Southern California's student body. His position will be Lang's third office, having served as treasurer and executive committee member.

DAILY PAPER WILL REORGANIZE STAFF

Daily Tar Heel Seeks New Material to Bolster Working Efficiency of Staff.

Three divisions of the editorial staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL will meet this afternoon for the purpose of reorganizing for work during the winter quarter. Persons who wish to try out for the staff are asked to report at the offices of the paper in Graham Memorial this afternoon.

The editorial board will meet in Graham Memorial at 2:30 o'clock while the city editors' conference has been set for 3:00. Reporters and students desiring to try out for the staff will gather at 3:30 o'clock.

Several openings on the staff have developed recently and these positions will be filled with candidates who will try out this afternoon.

Meritorious service in these positions will lead, after three quarters' work, to the receipt of charms as recognition of work in what is considered one of the leading campus activities.

In addition, the journalism department of the University offers course credits to students who do excellent work with the paper.

Yackety Yack Notice

Work on the Yackety Yack will not be resumed until Monday, January 8. Members of the staff are not expected to report this week.

When Education Begins

However temporary a student's determination may be for more concentrated work when he finds that he did not do as well as expected during his first term of the year, he has, nevertheless, taken an important step towards his education when he encounters a struggle in his academic pursuits and begins to apply himself to its overthrow. The student who merely drifts along in his courses, never thoroughly applying himself, is not securing an education. His being in college brings him nothing in return, and he might just as well be loafing around the hometown drug store.

It is oftentimes to the student's advantage to receive a lower mark on a course than he had expected. To the normal student, it not only makes him realize that he is not doing his best work, but it also gives him a taste of defeat, which if taken in the proper spirit should whet his desire for more mental exertion. And not until such an incentive for work comes into the student's being does he actually begin his education. So long as there is no striving from within, there is no education.

At this time of the year when, for the present, at least, each student has a good intention to work, if he will but fulfill this intent and consciously study, he will suddenly realize that for the first time he is honestly getting an education.

So many new ideas have come out of Nicholas Murray Butler's institution recently that some wag has suggested that it be called: "Columbia, the Germ of the Nation."

The Legislature is out to set another endurance record. Except this time it is trying to find what record of endurance the University can set with its budget being cut to the bone.

After All Hoover Is Still President

The business-like way in which Roosevelt has started work as President is, indeed, admirable. Yet his conferring with leaders of Congress at this early date would seem to lack something in the way of good taste. His action very likely is based on the best of motives. Still his term as President does not start for three months, and Mr. Hoover remains the chief executive.

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt's action cannot but embarrass Mr. Hoover shows the weakness in a system which inaugurates a man four months after his election. The "lame duck" session of Congress has long been the object of criticism, but the folly of the delay before inaugurating the President has not been given sufficient attention. It in no way complies with our demands for national dignity to have the retiring president half in and half out of the White House, while the incoming president monopolizes the spotlight. Yet few citizens are aware that Mr. Hoover has sent long messages to Congress on topics of national importance. He is obliged to resort to the veto as the only way in which he can make his presence felt at all.

It does not seem either necessary or proper to force a president to take four months to wind up his administration. Nor is it respectful almost totally to ignore a man who is occupying the position of highest political authority in the country. Mr. Hoover was not elected for a term of three years and eight months. His term is four years.—B.B.P.

With Contemporaries

Jerkwater Stuff

At our University, as we all know, collegiatism in dress and physical appearance is discouraged for the sake of the inherited atmosphere. First Year men have been told a thousand times that sweaters in place of coats are taboo here, and that they must wear hats. Public initiations into societies are slowly becoming subdued. Moreover, all of this apparent conservatism is greeted with popular approval. Every thinking student appreciates intensely the advantage of a dignified background.

Yet all is not uniformity. There is the alien element which threatens the ancient atmosphere and which arises from a class that does not deserve a cultural shelter because, while conforming to the traditions of appearance, it forgets the basic requirements of gentlemanly conduct. This "jerkwater" element constantly threatens the security of an atmosphere which it does not deserve. In spite of its superiority of appearance, the University may yet be lowered to the jerkwater level by the inferior conduct of the misplaced "jerkwaterians."

Bad conduct among university students is evidence by unsportsmanlike gestures on the athletic field, discourtesy in the lecture room, and by mass booing, hissing, and stamping in all public places. Persons, misnamed "Virginia gentlemen," jeer like Eastsiders at the mistakes or efforts of players and officials in athletic contests. At a recent First Year football game a Virginia jeering section yelled so at the coach of a visiting team that other students moved away from the vicinity of the group to avoid the disgraceful association.

Mass stamping in the lecture room is the method used—always with the worst results—to restrain overzealous students or to force an instructor to recognize the will of the class. Mass stamping, hissing, and booing in public are old Bronx customs which have taken root in a center of Southern culture. In public dining-rooms the unusual is greeted with raucous applause. At public gatherings the unpopular meets with genuine Bronx yells—and such could not make the entrance requirements of dear old Siwash, so came to the land of admission by certificate.

Part of the glory of the University will be forever protected by its historic appearance, but we are in danger of losing its whole inner meaning by insidious rah-rahism. Too much emphasis upon coats and hats and not enough on gentlemanly conduct may yet result in our losing the spirit of our traditions while frantically clinging to the literal observance of them.—Virginia College Topics.

Conference In the Making

Sometime next summer representatives of the leading nations will meet in London to decide the world's problems along economic and monetary lines. For the purpose of preparing an agenda for the delegates, two American members of the preparatory committee are now enroute to Europe, bearing the consent of President-elect Roosevelt as well as of the administration to proceed with plans begun last October.

To Norman H. Davis, U. S. delegate to the Geneva arms conference, goes much of the credit for whatever lines have been thrown across the gap between Hoover and Roosevelt. Governor Roosevelt's insistence that President Hoover take no action in connection with war debts that would commit the new administration had for a time, at least, thrown proceedings into a turmoil. Even now it is doubtful whether Roosevelt's policies will be a deciding factor in the work of the two American delegates.

But Davis' work has somewhat cleared an embarrassing situation for both the president and president-elect. Operating as an intermediary between the two forces, Davis has gained an insight into the views of both men, enabling him to continue his work toward some definite American stand at the forthcoming economic parley, of which he is an important figure.

It would certainly be unfortunate if American delegates at a world economic conference were unable to present the views of their government on matters pertaining to the interest of all the nations. Present indications point to some U. S. policy on tariffs and other economic matters, none on war debts. For, with all his good work, Davis has been unable to reconcile the views of the present and future chief executives in order to develop a definite policy. For that reason, the coming conference at London even now totters on the brink of failure, many months before it opens.—Daily Iowan.

ENGINEER CHOSEN FOR STATE COLLEGE STAFF

Dr. E. C. Brooks of State College announced last week that Theodore S. Johnson has been appointed professor of the newly created department of industry. No new funds will be required for the position as one place in the department of textiles was discontinued to provide for the new office.

Professor Johnson is a graduate of Denison University. He also attended Cornell University and Ohio State University as a graduate student. Recently he has been a partner in W. C. Olsen, Inc., of Raleigh, as consulting engineer.

present. Prominent speakers were President Frank Graham, Dr. Archie T. Allen, state superintendent of schools, and Dr. Francis D. Bradshaw, dean of University students.

John Lang was quickly recognized as the leader of the movement. He was elected the first president of the federation. W. D. Murray, Duke football star, was elected vice-president, Mary Jane Wharton, of N. C. C. W., secretary, and Mayne Albright, then a sophomore at Carolina, treasurer.

Activities of the infant organization commenced at once under the hand of John Lang. At the conference a rule was passed to admit junior colleges to the federation, and a rapid expansion program followed. A radio broadcast on student government was made by Lang under the auspices of the federation in Raleigh. Beginning October 12 the federation sponsored a state-wide student government week, in which twenty-five college professors and many prominent men participated. President Murrow of the National Student Federation was present to address numerous meetings with Lang.

Joined National Body

In December, 1930, the North Carolina Federation of Students officially became a part of the National Student Federation at the national convention at Atlanta.

The second state congress of the federation took place at Duke University May 16, 1931. Frank Gorham, of State College, was elected to succeed Lang in the state presidency. Charles G. Rose, of Carolina, was elected vice-president, Martha Pierce, of Duke, secretary, and Jack McKinnon, of Davidson, treasurer.

Under the direction of President Gorham and the congress chairman, Miss Pansy McConnell, the third conference, which had now become an annual affair, convened at N. C. C. W. at Greensboro May 6, 1932. Tyre Taylor, executive secretary to the governor of the state, was the principal speaker.

Weeks New President

This congress, which elected Haywood Weeks its president for the ensuing year, decided to affiliate its next convention with a Social Service Conference which meets annually in North Carolina. In the event that no association should be effected, the next conference of the state federation will meet at State College.

Work in the president's office since the adjournment of this congress has consisted largely of correspondence with the non-member institutions in the state who are being invited to send representatives to the next conference.

A meeting of the officers and the executive committee took place in Chapel Hill November 19. An invitation to affiliate the next conference with the Institute of Government, newly formed here, was accepted, and plans to send a delegation to represent the North Carolina federation at a meeting of the national congress at Tulane University in New Orleans during the holidays were completed.

Publication Founded

At this meeting the journal to be published as the official organ of the federation was authorized. President Weeks was empowered to select an editor from among Carolina student journalists. Claiborn Carr received the appointment. His staff is composed of Vermont Royster, Carl Thompson and Donoh Hanks. The initial publication was issued before Christmas.

"The policy of the officers in regard to the work of the federation," President Weeks stated recently, "is to continue building the organization along the sound lines pursued thus far, so that when all colleges in North Carolina have become members, and the federation has reached its maturity, it will be ready to fulfill its purpose, in the words of its founder, 'To perfect institutions for self-government, to improve their intercollegiate relations, and to create a wide interest among students in social and political problems of the day.'"

Duke Victory

The Duke victory over the University, from a standpoint of uniqueness, was the outstanding athletic news story of the year, despite the fact that Duke gridiron record for the season had been infinitely more formidable than that of the University. It was the first Duke victory since 1892 and signaled the breaking of the Carolina jinx, which Duke has consistently been unable to overcome, though her teams were often stronger in years past.

North Carolina's state symphony orchestra, founded much through the instigation of local music lovers and faculty members, was one of the outstanding cultural news items of the year.

The election of Haywood Weeks, Swansboro, to the highest student executive post, featured in the student news of the year. Weeks' victory was unprecedented.

Graham Memorial building, dedicated in the presence of numerous alumni and state officials, figured prominently in the news during the winter quarter.

Obnoxious Salary Cuts

One of the most vital alterations in University affairs was the series of faculty salary cuts in force from the outset of the year and augmented by additional cuts this fall.

The Student Loan Fund drive, which elicited several hundred thousands of dollars from students, alumni, parents of students, and statespeople, figured prominently in the local and state press. Various University groups pledged support and hundreds of students did their part in soliciting funds through the state.

Some of these people who have been so successful with stamps, coins, rare books and antiques ought to try their hands at collecting war debts.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

teeman-at-large. He was one of the most active members of his class in his undergraduate days, and after graduating was active in the founding of the North Carolina Federation of Students.

The University has been very active in the federation for the past four years, having had a treasurer, two district representatives, and this year a president. The following statement by Weeks shows clearly the leadership of the University: "That the University of North Carolina is a leader in student government, not only in the state but also in the nation, is unquestionable. This fact was brought out again, as in previous congresses, by the value which the delegates to the N. S. F. A. Congress at Tulane placed upon the discussion of the institutions of student government here at the University and the respect in which they hold them. The high respect in which our student government is held was more vividly shown when, in a discussion of redistricting the south along better geographical lines, certain universities fought violently to remain in the same district with North Carolina in which the University is the outstanding leader."

BULL'S HEAD WILL OFFER LECTURERS IN WEEKLY CHATS

Regular Tuesday Afternoon Programs To Include Interesting Subjects and Speakers.

A series of interesting programs to be presented at the regular Tuesday afternoon meetings of the book-minded in the Bull's Head has been arranged by Mary Dirnberger. The programs will begin with the first gathering of the winter quarter at 4:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon.

The presentations will include a special talk on T. E. Shaw's interpretation of the Odyssey, which will involve an interesting discussion of Greek life and the natural background for Homer's masterpiece; a lecture on bullfighting as suggested by Ernest Hemingway's latest novel, Death in the Afternoon; and the reading of the season's outstanding plays, Dinner at Eight, by Ferber and Kaufmann, and Thornton Wilder's translation of Lucece, Katherine Cornell's current stage success. An interesting discourse on technocracy will also be included in the set of entertainments.

The case is reported of a small boy who says his prayers in his sleep. We are reminded of the man who said Grace in his sleep, his wife's name being Amelia.—Punch (London).

White Phantoms Entertain Quakers Tomorrow Night

Coach Shepard Drills Team Twice Daily in Preparation For Initial Game.

LINE-UP STILL UNCERTAIN

Hard Fight Raging Over Center Position With Four Candidates in Contest.

Carolina's White Phantoms are fast rounding into shape for their initial test of the season against Guilford tomorrow night in the Tin Can. A squad of fifteen has been working out twice daily since last Thursday in an effort to determine the starting five.

Coach Shepard experimented with new combinations in each of the early practice sessions, and the starting team has not been definitely named. The tasks of finding a center to fill the gap left by the graduation of Paul Edwards and a successor to Tom Alexander at one of the guard posts have been the chief worries the Carolina coach has faced.

Center Fight Close

The fight over the center position is a four man affair, with George Brandt holding a slight edge at present. Earle Beale, Ike Minor, and Jack Glace are the other pivot aspirants. Beale especially has shown to advantage in several of the early scrimmages but because of his steadier defensive play Brandt has been getting the call. Minor and Glace have each shown up well, and all four will see action tomorrow night.

Stud Henry, Stuart Chandler, Buck Harris, Dan Jones, and Snooks Aitken have been fighting for Alexander's guard post. Aitken, a forward on the freshman quint last year, has been shifted to a guard because of his fine showing thus far and because the forward posts are well taken care of by Captain Hines and Weathers. A shifty and speedy floorman, Aitken has been running well with the first team and seems slated to start against Guilford.

The other four guards have also displayed a marked improvement in their play and Coach Shepard is sure to use them tomorrow night. Bill Markham and Morrie Long have been paired as understudies for the forward combination of Hines and Weathers which has at times shown flashes of their last season's scoring sprees.

The game with Guilford tomorrow night will give Coach Shepard a chance to see whether or not Aitken will fit in as a guard despite his short stature. The Carolina coach may use Brandt as guard after the tip-off, allowing the speedy Aitken to lead the offense.

All student bills to the University were payable yesterday, but for the convenience of those students who have not paid their bills through the mail, the following schedule for payment has been adopted:

The Can Opener

by
CLAIBORN M. CARR

THE BIGGEST HEN PARTY I have ever seen was staged on the second floor of the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York recently when the college coaches from all over the country gathered for their annual meeting. The young mentors crowded around such eminent story tellers as Yost, Stevens, Dobie, and Anderson and tried to match their yarns. From all corners of the ante-room great guffaws would arise as some coach scored. Coach Collins was there and some coach asked him where Coach Bob was. Collins told him that Coach Bob was over with the sissies (track coaches) at the Paramount hotel. At this time the newcomer swore to a statement he heard Coach Fetzner make when he arrived in the Pennsylvania station. "Um," said Coach Bob, "I bet this place holds a pile of hay."

COACH COLLINS MADE A motion to the effect that the point after touchdown be determined in another fashion. Collins suggested that two points be given a team for rushing the ball over and one point be given for a kick. Discussion was opened but as their was a difference of opinion no action was taken. I asked Coach Fielding Yost of Michigan what he thought of the plan and the aged mentor, whose undefeated team was forbidden by Big Ten rules from participating in the Rose Bowl affair, said, "I am sure it could not be used as it would give too much room for luck to decide a game. If it was used however, I would move the ball back to the six yard line for the try." Coach Yost was busy explaining to New York sports writers why the Big Ten leaders prevented Michigan from playing Southern California. He did say quite emphatically that he could have beaten the Trojans. Coach Yost described Harry Newman, his quarterback, as "the most dangerous man he had ever seen handle a football."

COACH SHEPARD'S BASKETBALL team makes its bow tomorrow night against Guilford in the Tin Can and after working out with them for the past week it is our guess that Carolina supporters are going to see some snappy hardwood play. Improvement in the play in every particular has been evident throughout the last few practices. In the scrimmages the passing, shooting and teamwork has improved and such minor errors as faking at teammates have been ironed out. Little Snooks Aitken, the sophomore flash, has been showing up very well. So well, in fact, that Coach Shepard has shifted him to a guard in order to get him in the lineup. With Weathers and Hines clicking, Aitken would not play and yet with him in the game the Carolina attack would be strengthened no end. Consequently Snooks has been working at guard.

VIRGIL WEATHERS, ALL-southern forward last year, is not the least bit superstitious. Weathers was born on a Friday 13, 1913. Then last year he was given the number "13" to wear on his jersey. "Virge" has no feelings and it doesn't seem to keep him from ringing 'em up. George Brandt has a little sentiment built around his basketball career. Last year at the tournament in Atlanta, "Champ" scored two points in every game the White Phantoms played except the championship fray with the Georgia Bulldogs. "Catfish" Smith stood on George's feet then and he was unable to ring up those two points—Carolina lost the title 26-24. Dave McCachren is another hardwood specialist who seems to be dogged by ill-fortune. Last year he suffered from some leg trouble (yeah, leg trouble) and then this year he sprained a finger several weeks ago and it has not as yet healed. This swollen finger hinders Dave's dribbling and the sooner it clears up the better.

THOUGH THE CONFERENCE has already been broken up and Carolina and Duke are left in the cold, news comes out of Atlanta, the shrine of the Southeastern Conference, as to the standing of the conference teams for 1932 in ten divisions of sports. Carolina was first, Duke second, with Louisiana State and Georgia following in order. All this dope was of course brought to our attention by Dale Ranson, cross-country coach who considers track at Carolina the "forgotten man." Old "7-14," as George Barclay calls him, thinks that if someone would look up the records for the past ten years, Carolina would still be on the top of the heap, that is, without emphasis on football. Play on Dale.

McLEAN WILL LECTURE BEFORE STUDENTS HERE

James A. McLean, well known North Carolinian artist and director of the Southern School of Creative Art at Raleigh, will lecture before students here January 13, at the Playmaker's theatre. There will be no admission charge by the Playmakers, under whose auspices the artist is being presented here.

BOWLING TOURNAMENT TAKEN BY HUDSON

Jim Hudson Wins Final Match Of Tournament From Bob Atwood, 400 to 379.

Jim Hudson was named winner of the bowling tournament as a result of his 400 to 379 victory over Bob Atwood in the final match which came Thursday before the Christmas holidays.

This is the first bowling tournament staged on the new alleys in Graham Memorial and the first tourney of this kind ever conducted by the University. The tourney was run off in an elimination process. Anyone scoring more than 120 in a game was allowed to enter. Then each contestant shot three games and was ranked according to their score. The four highest ranking players then were matched against each other in semi-final and final matches.

Hudson also ranked the highest after each individual had finished his three games. The champion had a score of 448 and was followed in order of their rank by Atwood, 410; Brewer, 402; M. Tucker, 389; Kanner, 387; Peeler, 381; Sloan, 375; P. Hudson, 360; Markham and Napier, each 354.

In the semi-finals Atwood downed Tucker 388 to 362 while Hudson was winning over Brewer 442 to 422. In the finals the title holder got off to a good start in the first game scoring 145 to Atwood's 112 score. However from then on Atwood gained on the winner, scoring 181 and 136 games, while Hudson was getting 121 and 134 games respectively. Hudson's long lead in the first game was enough to give him the 400 to 379 margin of victory.

CANDIDATES FOR MAT TEAM HAVE INITIAL WORKOUT

Only Fifteen Men Turn Out for First Wrestling Practice of Year Yesterday.

Old Santa Claus sure forgot Coach "Chuck" Quinlan when he presented the Carolina wrestling team with only fifteen mat candidates in their first workout of the year, yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can as his Christmas present. The depression or anything bordering on distress further clouds itself when one considers that the first wrestling meet is only twelve days off, January 16, the date set for the double meet with the N. C. State College varsity and freshman teams.

Coach Quinlan is disappointed in this poor showing of spirit among his wrestlers; just before examinations took place wrestling equipment was issued to more than sixty candidates and yesterday only fifteen boys showed up for the first workout of the year. The three letter men who came on the scene of action were Captain Percy Idol, J. Spell, and Conklin.

Something else struck a hard blow to Carolina's hopes for a

UPPER WEIGHTS STRONGER

Brown, Landis, and Parsons Are Candidates for Squad This Year.

The return to the squad, following the Christmas holidays, of three varsity boxers, all of whom will be candidates for the reputedly weaker upper weights, has served to boost Carolina's 1933 boxing stock considerably.

The returning boxers include Peyton Brown and Platt Landis, light heavyweights in 1932 and 1931 respectively, and Tom Parsons, a middleweight on the 1931 team. Parsons is the only one of the trio yet to win a varsity letter.

Landis Great Prospect

Landis, considered one of the greatest prospects ever to come to Carolina, is a heavy punching 190-pounder. As a freshman he lost but one bout, but after going up to the varsity in 1931, he suffered a broken hand and did not see action until the Duke meet. He came through with a win over Don Hyatt in a wild affair that saw the Blue Devil on the floor several times, and later went to the semi-finals of the Southern Conference tournament before losing to Fenton Gentry of Virginia, who won the title.

Last year Landis was not in school, and hope had been given up that he would be back this year, but Coach Crayton Rowe persuaded him to change his mind over the holidays.

Brown was a sensation as a freshman in 1931, winning all of his six bouts by knockouts. Last year he did some good work and finished the season with a record of five wins and three losses. Listed among his victims in 1932 were fighters from Navy, Penn State, Duke, Washington and Lee, and V. P. I.

Parsons had an excellent record as a freshman and showed good possibilities, but was in-

STUDENTS GIVEN SELF-HELP WORK THROUGH BUREAU

Ed Lanier Announces That Approximately 630 Are Doing Part-Time Work Here.

Approximately 630 students in the University were employed last quarter in part-time work at jobs secured or recommended by the University self-help bureau, according to a statement issued recently by Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary. Of this number of working students, over 400 have regular jobs and occasional outside labor.

Townpeople Help

These figures are approximately the same as last year's, in spite of general business conditions. This remarkable state is explained by the fact that townspeople and University authorities are aware of the increased demand and need of outside support and have not cut down on their employment. Local townspeople are using far more students than the self-help bureau anticipated.

However, it has become increasingly difficult for the bureau to secure positions for many students, as concurrently with the maintenance of employment by the townspeople and authorities, there is a greatly increased demand for jobs. Nearly 1800 students applied last summer of the bureau for part-time positions, although only from 1350 to 1500 of these students entered the University this fall and some were merely prospects.

Committee Awards Jobs

All jobs under the jurisdiction of the University are administered by the University committee on self-help, appointed by President Graham. The President's defined policies and principles concerning student self-help are carried out by the committee and the committee functions through the Y. M. C. A.'s self-help bureau. A bulletin issued by President Graham at the beginning of the quarter made clear several facts: the award of all self-help jobs shall be made on the basis of character, merit, and financial need of student, regardless of any other consideration; that no job ordinarily of self-help status and under the control of the University or any of its branches shall at any time be assigned to other than a bona fide resident student of the University; and that all self-help jobs in the University would be cleared through the self-help committee.

As to jobs off the campus, the self-help bureau acts as a recommending party and helps the needy student make the necessary contacts. Numerous positions have been afforded University students in this manner.

Campus positions under the jurisdiction of the committee and secured through the Y. M. C. A. bureau include work in Swain Hall, dormitory service rooms, the laundry, and dormitory inspectors. Though the bureau does not have specific authority in the selection of the students, it acts as a check on self-help workers in the Library, buildings department, Book Exchange, and Graham Memorial, often supplying additional help and checking the status of the present employees.

Established in 1921

The Y. M. C. A. bureau was established in 1921 by Harry Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who is now chairman of the president's self-help committee. Although in many large universities the self-help bureau is a part of the school administration, Carolina has maintained its work through the Y. M. C. A. The official self-help committee appointed by Graham is com-

World War Largely Responsible For Adoption Of Quarter System

Semester System of College Education Has Been Displaced by Quarter Arrangement in Many Universities; Plan Started To Permit Teaching of Military Tactics.

With the World War sweeping established customs and precedents before it to bend every conceivable field of endeavor to its own uses, the quarter system of college education was born. The exigencies of the war period required that students in American universities be subjected to an intensive period of military training. Since the college campus offered ideal facilities for this work, the War Department brought to the peaceful educational institutions an elaborate system of military science.

In working out the time required for this extra activity it was discovered that a term of three months could offer the necessary courses and the military training to far better advantage than the semester arrangement. Accordingly, nearly every college in the country adopted a school year divided into four periods of three months each.

Adopted Here in 1918

The University was one of the schools which changed from the semester plan to the quarter system. This alteration occurred here in the early part of 1918. An S. A. T. C. unit was established at the University. Courses in military science were added to the curriculum. Courses directly connected with the science of war leadership were also taught.

So as not to discommode those students who had had courses under the new system, and who might lose some credit if the University should revert back to the older semester plan, the quarter system was continued through the latter part of 1918 and the school year of 1919. A study of the catalogue discloses that the new system was officially incorporated into the school in the fall of 1919.

The three months term was so well liked from the beginning that it was decided to continue it. There was doubt expressed in some corners, at first, that the new plan would not be able to cover as much ground as the former four and a half months term. But it was soon proved that by increasing the number of hours a class meets a week the same amount of work could be covered, while in some cases this method actually allowed the accomplishment of more study.

A class meeting three or four times a week under the older plan convenes approximately from fifty-four to seventy-two hours a week in a semester. While under our system a class meeting five or six hours a week meets in a term of twelve weeks from sixty to seventy-two hours a week.

Although many of the schools which were obliged to adopt the quarter system at the behest of the government have since returned to the orthodox semester plan, the innovation has continued to enjoy a decided popularity in educational circles. Now soundly popular at Chapel Hill, as was manifested in a recent canvass of student opinion by this publication, it has also maintained itself at other large schools, notably the highly progressive and experimental University of Chicago.

Dean Beard Marries Miss Gladys Angell

Stringfield Home Damaged By Fire

The home of Lamar Stringfield, director of the Institute of Folk Music, was slightly damaged by fire late Sunday morning. The house, located on Pittsboro road, escaped serious injury, but clothes and furniture were destroyed. Value of the property damaged is considered small.

The blaze is thought to have originated through a defective flue a few hours after the family had departed for a holiday trip to Asheville. Stringfield returned yesterday.

During the fire fear was expressed by neighbors for the safety of Stringfield's flute, valued at $1,000. The musician fortunately had his instrument with him.

Line-up Strengthened

As things now stand the Tar Heels will probably have Landis in the heavyweight, Brown and Edwards in the lightheavyweight, Giddens and Parsons in the middleweight, and Berke and McIntosh in the 155-pound class, a much stronger line-up than was anticipated earlier.

Marty Levinson, Norm Quarles, Cliff Glover, Pete Ivey, and Nat Lumpkin should give the Blue and White battlers an abundance of strength in the lighter weights. Levinson and Lumpkin are seniors, Glover a junior, and Ivey and Quarles are sophomores.

title in mat circles when the Tar Heels' grappling mentor received the news that Frank Hargreaves would be lost to the team for the rest of the year. Hargreaves is one of the most promising reserves on the entire squad; and looked as if he might oust Hiller, the monogram man in this division, from his berth. So far this is the only bad news received as the result of the beginning of a new school quarter; as yet no ineligibilities have hit the wrestling team.

In speaking of the State mat club, Coach Quinlan said, "In my estimation State has the surprise club of the state, and is awfully strong. In order to score a double win over the State College team, we must be in top form and fine physical trim."

The grappling mentor urges that all wrestling candidates who entertain any hopes of making their wrestling awards this year come out regularly for their workouts. The team begins its calisthenic drills promptly at 4:00 o'clock every afternoon in the Tin Can.

DELEGATES FROM UNIVERSITY GO TO MUSIC CONCLAVE

Dr. Dyer, Professor McCorkle, And William Hunt Attend Music Teachers' Meeting.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, dean of the music school, with Associate Professor McCorkle, director of the Carolina band and instructor in music theory, and William Hunt, president of the local chapter of the Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia honorary musical fraternity, attended the annual convention of the Music Teachers National Association in Washington, D. C., December 27-30.

Through the efforts of this association public musical education has for the first time received the attention of one of the official government departments in the college division of the National Commission on Education, with headquarters in Washington. This year's meeting was for the purpose of presenting reports of progress among the teachers of the association and of dividing plans for furthering its program.

Professor Dyer attended the convention in an official capacity as acting chairman at the luncheon of the advisory council of presidents of state and city music teachers associations. He also gave a short speech on a program with several of the most outstanding musical celebrities of America, including Deems Taylor and Harold Bauer.

The program of the convention was interspersed with several varied types of musical presentations given especially for those attending the convention. These programs included instrumental chamber music concerts, organ recitals, choral concerts, and a special complimentary concert to the members of the Music Teachers National Association by the National Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Hans Kindler.

FOUNTAIN CHOSEN AMERICAN LEGION CONTEST SPEAKER

L. H. Fountain, Winner of Mary D. Wright Medal, Gets Place; Griffin Is Alternate.

L. H. Fountain, who has been chosen to represent the University in the oratorical contest to be conducted under the auspices of the American Legion at Raleigh January 20, and E. E. Griffin, selected as alternate, will meet the representatives of the other colleges throughout the state, competing for a first prize of seventy-five dollars and a gold medal. Other prizes that the Legion is offering in this annual contest are: fifty dollars to the second best speaker, twenty-five dollars to the third, and fifteen dollars for the fourth.

Fountain, one of six competing for the honor of representing the University at the Legion contest, was the winner of the Mary D. Wright Memorial medal for debating this year. E. E. Griffin, the alternate, was the winner of the state Legion contest last year.

The speaker was chosen by a rather unique method. Every member of the audience, some seven or eight persons, and the speakers, themselves, voted on their choice by means of signed ballots. Speakers were not invited to consider themselves, but they rated the other speakers. Professors George McKie and W. A. Olsen analyzed the ballots, and made public the results of the balloting several days later.

The representatives from the various colleges in the state will speak in the final contest at the Needham Broughton high school in Raleigh. Their subject will be, "Public Education in North Carolina—Its Past and Future."

SALON ENSEMBLE TO GIVE PROGRAM

Fifteen Musicians Under Direction of Thor Johnson to Present Series of Programs.

The first in a series of concerts to be presented in the lounge room of Graham Memorial by the Carolina Salon Ensemble, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will be offered Sunday afternoon, January 15, at 4:00 o'clock, inaugurating a new plan of entertainment in the student union.

The first Graham Memorial program of the salon group will consist of works of modern French, Russian, and American composers in representative styles of composition.

Fifteen in Group

The salon ensemble has presented several programs on the campus during the fall quarter and has provided the incidental music for several Playmaker productions. The group of fifteen also made one out of town appearance last quarter, in Kingston. The present series of concerts in Graham Memorial will probably continue through the spring quarter.

The program on January 15 will include Lamar Stringfield's Cripple Creek from his suite From the Southern Mountains, and Herbert Hazelman's Danse Moronique, both of which were recently performed in Washington, D. C., by the National Symphony Orchestra.

Seven Alumni To Be Inaugurated Today

Seven University alumni will be inducted into high offices in the state government in the inaugural ceremonies at Raleigh today.

Hon. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, '01, will succeed Governor O. Max Gardner, also an alumnus, as governor of the state while Hon. A. H. Graham, '12, will become lieutenant-governor. Other alumni to be inaugurated today are: A. T. Allen, superintendent of public instruction; W. A. Graham, commissioner of agriculture; A. L. Fletcher, commissioner of labor; Stanley Wimborne, corporation commissioner; and D. C. Boney, insurance commissioner.

W. G. Clark, '95, was yesterday chosen president pro tempore of the Senate.

Modern Language Association Meets at New Haven During Christmas Holidays.

Five Read Papers

Yale University was the host to more than a thousand delegates. Five Chapel Hill professors read papers on various specialized subjects. They were: Dr. Ralph Boggs, who spoke on "The Halfchick Tale in Spain and France," Dr. Sterling Stoudemire, who read a paper on "The Popularity of Soli's Refundiciones of Siglo de Oro Plays," Dr. W. L. Wiley, who discussed "Translations of Ovid in the French Renaissance," and Dr. George R. Coffman, who spoke on "Old Age from Horace to Chaucer: Some Literary Affinities and Adventures of an Idea," which concerned the experiences of a passage from Horace in its changes at the hands of writers during the Middle Ages, bringing in Chaucer's use of the passage in the Canterbury Tales. Dr. N. B. Adams, who was scheduled to speak on "The Year 1837 in the Theatres of Madrid" was unable to attend the conference on account of illness.

Other professors who attended the meeting were: Dr. R. B. Sharp, Dr. J. M. Booker, Dr. Raymond Adams, Dr. Dougald MacMillan, Dr. Gregory L. Paine, editor of the American literature section of the Annual of Bibliography, one of the most useful of the Modern Language Association publications, and Dr. S. E. Leavitt, the secretary of the section of Spanish literature of the Renaissance and golden age.

Dr. J. M. Booker left earlier than the rest of the professors from Chapel Hill who attended the conference, and was the University's delegate to the American Association of University Professors.

Buccaneer Staff Meeting

SHAW'S LETTERS TO BIOGRAPHER PLACED ON SALE

Archibald Henderson's Shavian Collection Will Be Sold in New York After Art Display.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor of mathematics, has a collection of George Bernard Shaw letters, postcards, books, and pamphlets which will be put on display at American Art Association-Anderson galleries in New York Monday. The collection will be sold January 16.

The books comprise an almost complete set of Shaw's first editions. A 54-page letter written in 1905 to Dr. Henderson in answer to a series of questions about Shaw's life and career is included in the collection. It is really a biography of the dramatist.

Shaw has long advised all his correspondents to keep his letters and to sell them for the best possible sum at the earliest opportunity and Dr. Henderson is taking the advice.

New Book Published

Recent Social Trends, the report of President Hoover's research committee, on which Dr. H. W. Odum of the University served as assistant director, has recently been published.

The book, in two volumes, makes a very comprehensive survey of social trends in the country and has an entire chapter entitled "Public Welfare Activities" by Dr. Odum.

GEORGE LAWRENCE ADMINISTERS HELP TO ORANGE COUNTY'S POOR

Welfare Officer Plays Part of St. Nick to Many Hundreds of Negro And White Families Which Find Themselves in Need of His Careful and "Slow-But-Sure" Handling.

By Starlin Whitaker

His fellow townsmen know him as "George," but to the innumerable persons about Orange county to whom he is known as "welfare officer" he is "Mr. Lawrence."

On a day's journey with him in Orange county, one soon learns that George Lawrence is more worthy of the latter title with emphasis on the handle. His being St. Nick in person to hundreds in both white and colored families has acquainted him with their problems, which present the tragic as well as the comic slants on individuals every day of the year and which also touch the human heart, so deep-seated and varied are his duties to mankind.

While the so-called "depression" began with some only this year George Lawrence familiarized himself with that term long before it had been publicized. He began to hear stories of "hard-put," "out-of-work," "disabled," "helpless," and other such expressions early in his career as welfare officer. Depressions may come and depressions may go, but George Lawrence has been in one ever since the day he became a graduate student in the University; and although the way has been hard for him he has borne the depression well and in his darned sincere English drawl will tell you he likes his work.

Chose Welfare Work

It was while at Jackson Training school, at Concord, that he became interested in welfare. After having spent three years there, he decided that he was best fitted for social welfare work. He organized and con-

TICKET SALE FOR LECTURE SERIES TO START TODAY

First Discussion Sponsored by Student Expression Group Set For January 12.

Sale of tickets to the lecture series planned by five campus organizations originally banded together as the Council for Student Expression will go on sale this morning. Members of the executive committee of the old council will distribute season tickets good for the series of eight lectures and a ticket desk will be opened in the Y. M. C. A. building near the latter part of the week.

Miller to Speak

The two speakers for the first open forum discussion, scheduled for January 12, will be Dr. Broadus Mitchell, prominent young Johns Hopkins University professor and Dean Justin Miller of the Duke University law school. The subject is "The American Scene, 1932." Mitchell takes the place of Powers Hapgood, first scheduled to appear on the program.

More than a dozen speakers have signified their intention to appear on the discussion platform at some time during the two months-long series. Both sides of every question will have ample elucidation.

Members of the committee who are selling tickets include Alton Lawrence, Bill McKee, Don Shoemaker, Vernon Ward, Bill Eddleman, and Don Seawell.

Wright Accepts New Position in New York

Rev. Thomas Wright, formerly assistant rector of the Chapel of the Cross and closely connected with University life, departed from Chapel Hill during the holidays for New York, where he accepted a new position offered him by the national council of the Episcopal Church. Wright's position is that of acting secretary for college work all over the country.

Wright came to Chapel Hill after completing work in two institutions, Sewanee and Virginia Theological Seminary, at both places making an enviable record. While in Chapel Hill, Wright's work was connected with the fourth Province of the Episcopal Church with headquarters in Chapel Hill.

STUDENT LOANS TOTAL $25,568 IN FALL PERIOD

Loans to 424 Students Exhaust Fund for Short Term Notes This Quarter.

Student loans totalling $25,568.22 were made to 424 University students during the past fall quarter, according to a report issued yesterday by F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students. Individual loans, including both the long and short-term funds, averaged in amount approximately sixty dollars.

According to the report, there are apparently enough funds to meet the demand for long-term loans for the remainder of the quarter. The supply available during the final school session, however, will depend on the collection on previous loans and interests, and special gifts.

At the present, only funds for long-term loans are available. The Hogue and Seely funds, which supplied the necessary credit for short-term loans, have been completely exhausted. These lesser loans average in amount about fifteen dollars and need no other endorsement than the borrower's signature. Endowments and gifts are the only means of replenishing the supply.

Students have been urged in the past to try to secure loans in their own communities rather than from the University, due to the limited and inadequate funds of the school. However, an extensive loan work has been carried on through the office of the dean of students.

To secure University loans, students must obtain from the dean of student's office a blank note, which must be signed by the borrower and two other persons as security. The last two signatures must be certified as genuine by a notary public. The borrower must then get a letter from a register of deeds or a clerk of court stating that the two securities are worth the face of the note over and above homestead and encumbrances. The note, properly signed and executed, is returned to the dean of students, who then takes the necessary steps to complete the loan.

All notes bear interest semi-annually at the legal rate of six percent, such income being added to the loan funds. In order to comply with the terms of the donors of the various funds and to increase the number to whom these notes are of service, the

JOHN J. PARKER SUCCEEDS LEWIS AS ALUMNI HEAD

Dr. Hubert Haywood and Ray Armstrong Chosen New Vice-Presidents of Association.

Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte, has been chosen to head the General Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina for 1933, succeeding Kemp P. Lewis of Durham, according to the results of a mail ballot by members of the association announced today by J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary.

A committee headed by Dr. Leonard E. Fields, Chapel Hill physician, opened and tallied the ballots.

Other Officers Chosen

Judge Parker, an honor graduate of the class of 1907, defeated Agnew H. Bahnson, Winston-Salem manufacturer, in a close race. Other officers elected were: Dr. Hubert B. Haywood, Raleigh physician, first vice-president; and Ray Armstrong, superintendent of schools in Goldsboro, second vice-president. Dr. Haywood defeated Carter Dalton of High Point, while Armstrong won from his classmate, Leo Carr of Burlington.

Dr. Foy Roberson of Durham was elected to serve with Ben Cone of Greensboro and Frank P. Spruill, Jr., of Rocky Mount, as alumni representatives on the University athletic council. Dr. Roberson, named for re-election, was the only nominee of the alumni nominations committee, though some scattered votes were cast for a score of other alumni.

The new head of the University alumni organization has been a member of the University's board of trustees since 1921, being at present a member

GEOLOGY MUSEUM TO OPEN SUNDAY

Twelve Cases of Geological Specimens Will Be on Display as Museum Is Reopened.

Twelve cases of specimens will be on display in the geology museum in New East building when it is opened to the public next Sunday.

These cases, which were prepared by Dr. W. F. Prouty, E. N. Kjellesvig, Charles Lawson, and several students, include three exhibits of special interest. One is entirely given over to the display of various kinds of mineral quartz, while another shows several very artistic models of the more important Mesozoic Dinosaurs, together with bones from some of these forms. A third exhibit includes the skulls of many of the better known prehistoric and early specimens of man. This group was lent to the museum by Dr. J. B. Bullitt of the medical school.

To Open Every Day

The museum has been closed up to this time because of an insufficient number of cases and lack of funds for making arrangements, but beginning next week it will be open daily from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

Some time during the year special exhibit cases will show a collection of North Carolina minerals arranged by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt and a collection of arrowheads found near Chapel Hill.

John A. Lang, a Student Pioneer

The recent election of John A. Lang, '30, as president of the National Student Federation of America in the meeting of the group in New Orleans, comes as a fitting climax to his long period of service in the work of that organization. A pioneer of the association in this state, Lang was the leading organizer, and first president of the North Carolina Student Federation.

It was under his leadership that the seed of a cooperative collegiate association definitely took root in North Carolina. To his diplomacy and management can likewise be attributed the successful beginning of better relations between Duke and Carolina. And it was because of his guidance that the friendship trophy was established between these two institutions, to be presented yearly to that team winning the annual Duke-Carolina gridiron classic.

Since his graduation he has confined his connection with the National Federation and has served the group in the capacities of treasurer and executive committeeman.

Lang's recent honor comes as a result of his having definitely aligned himself with a cause, and concentrating his efforts in that field until achieving his goal. When he first became the champion of the Federation idea in North Carolina, he was looked upon by many of his student associates as just another pioneer with a good plan which seemed hardly practical. But by placing his complete confidence in the cause and working with almost super-human consistency, he soon was able to open the eyes of North Carolina students to the innumerable advantages of his new project.

Not satisfied with merely educating his own state to the invaluable possibilities of the Federation, Lang continued his work in the national organization with just as active an interest. And it was through his industrious effort that North Carolina has come to be looked upon as being among the leaders in the National Federation movement.

His election to the presidency, aside from being a distinct honor in itself, also gives him powers which he should be able to exercise with telling results. If he can accomplish in his new office only half as much, comparatively speaking, as he did while president of the North Carolina Federation, the national organization will this year enjoy the most prosperous in its history thus far.

With a headline appearing in the News and Observer, "Liberalists to Invade the State," the tense of the verb seems to indicate that there are still a few persons who don't believe all David Clark had to say about conditions here at Chapel Hill.

A column in the McGill Daily headed "Celestial Snaggers" by Noji Fujimurahashi would more appropriately have been entitled "Terrestrial Stagers," for one could not help but be left dizzy after trying to pronounce the author's name.

Thinning the Muscovite Ranks

The Soviet government greets the new year with the announcement of a self-imposed party-purging whose object will be to weed out the least useful of the three million members of the Communist party. Each factional unit will be subjected to rigorous examination by a number of non-partisan judges, and those members weighed and found wanting will be very much in absence as cogs in the machine of Lenin's famed New Economic Policy. Those ejected are usually so because of lack of "works," however profuse they may be in loyalty or profession of loyalty to the cause.

Inquiry is made even into the private life of each "comrade" brought up for examination. In 1921, when another such weeding out took place, many were expelled for failure to conform to the atheistic orthodoxy of post-war Russia; for example, church marriage or baptism of one's children was a breach of party duty. But this year's eliminations will be made mostly on the grounds of lack of effort and of usefulness to the Communist party.

However, excessive personal luxury is a condemning offense, for the government considers that even its party members should not be exempt from the burden of denial which must be shared from highest to lowest by Russia's millions. And this means no Soviet merry-go-round.

Would it be entirely absurd to imagine such a situation taking place among our Democrats and Republicans? Picture the look on some fat lobbyist's face if his usefulness to his party was brought into question, or his personal habits of consumption, or, laying aside the atheistic ideal, his promptness in paying church dues. More than one of our public servants would be ruled out for undue consumption of mineral water.—A.T.D.

New Exhibits in Library

Two new exhibits, "Fifty Books of the Year," an exhibition of fine printing, and "Printing for Commerce," a selection of commercial printing, are to be put on display at the library some time this week. These exhibitions are sent by the American Institute of Graphic Arts and are to be shown for several weeks.

Bradshaw to Speak Friday

Dean F. F. Bradshaw will address freshmen at student assembly Friday morning in Memorial hall. This will be the first assembly program of the new series that demands sophomore attendance on Mondays only, and freshman attendance on Mondays and Fridays.

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

By DON SHOEMAKER

Talknecracy

With the unveiling of our new name we had hoped to be sufficiently informed on the latest of American fads, Technocracy, which now seems to threaten the firm old institution of jig saw puzzles. But so far we've only been able to learn that Technocracy is neither a new kind of sandwich spread, nor a mechanical exerciser, nor something in the stratosphere. The newspapers and magazines are filled with articles and squibs for Technocracy, against Technocracy, against the capitalists who are against Technocracy; yet there has been little common sense elucidation on the subject, since the findings of the Energy Survey of North America are almost wholly confined to statistics and highly technical data.

Technocracy was first discovered in America last August 15, when the publicity director of Columbia University became suspicious of the activities of a group of professors and economists who were tinkering about in a college lab. Much against their wishes he disclosed a short item dealing with their findings, but it was ignored by all but one newspaper. A curious city editor clipped the press bureau story and sent one of his reporters out to Columbia to learn about Technocracy. The reporter wrote his story and really its news possibilities, contracted for a series dealing with Technocracy to run in The New Outlook. And this started the mad rush. Today news services are pestered by subscribers for news of Technocracy, camera men snoop about the laboratories at Columbia, lecture bureaus have come forth with princely offers urging any one of the Technocrats to appear on the lecture platform.

But today there is little real material available on the subject. Technocrats are tight lipped with the exception of one Howard Scott, who titles himself Director of the Energy Survey of North America in a magazine article in this month's Harpers Magazine. Unquestionably the survey group is discreet in refusing to divulge much of their discoveries. Unless Technocracy is approached without crippling sensationalism the value of these energy statistics may be disregarded.

Guide

"Dress-O-Guide"—The Directory to Correct Dress for Men—has just been brought to our attention and we must confess that the machine age is becoming something of a peril. Dress-O-Guide is a cardboard contrivance which kinda slides about and shows what color of sock to wear with your new tie. As the ad said (that's where we got all this), "Today business and social contacts are one. Be sure your dress indicates background, culture, class—for you are appraised on first impression . . . it tells how to judge cut and fit—how to select patterns and shades in accord with one's personality . . ."

For instance—we have a very poor personality in the early morning. Oftentimes we get up without a thought for our personality and come to class wearing a green shirt and a blue tie, or something of the sort. That's where Dress-O-Guide comes in. A simple twist of the finger.

Things are beginning to look better, but just the same it isn't safe to sit around twiddling your thumbs on the assumption that it's you business is looking up.—Boston Herald.

With Contemporaries

Mr. Babbitt's Evolution

In the latest number of The American Spectator, one of the writers is moved to hold forth at considerable length with a profusion of witticisms anent the 1932 model of Sinclair Lewis' old stand-by, Mr. Babbitt. It seems that the gentleman is even now completing a metamorphosis that has subtly transferred him from the Rotary club, Chamber of Commerce, Loyal Order of Moose (or what have you) rut to that where he goes in for the ultra-modern, super-intellectual school of everything.

Disregarding the obvious fact that the great Common Man seems to have been forgotten by politicians and not the literati, and will ever remain the subject of innumerable bon mots from the sophisticates, there is more than a grain of truth in the article. Whereas formerly one kept up with the Joneses by joining divers lodges, boost-the-home-town clubs, and similar outfits, the Joneses now go into raptures over futuristic painting, books-of-the-month, and every new "school" that happens along.

So Mr. Babbitt, with sheep-like mimicry, hops diligently on the bandwagon and reads deep, great truths into literature in which none occur; sees outstanding imagery and symbolism in the hodge-podge of curves and circles characterizing the last word in art; and industriously goes places to do things merely because it is considered by his friends to be the thing to do. Mr. Babbitt has even become quite the brisk Bohemian.

The new Babbitt family is haunted by culture-conscious contemporaries. He has forsaken his former interests to a large extent to gambol about in new fields. He even reads deprecating remarks about himself in such papers as The American Spectator, and loves it. Be his scope broad or narrow, he is destined to remain the butt of considerable kindly railery from the observing novelists. Scoffing and exasperated as they may be, however, Mr. Babbitt with all his petty faults and naivete will go right on as America's backbone.—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Synthetic Personality

Personality, or the effort to achieve it, is one of the most astonishing fetishes of this astounding age, and the business of developing personality has become one of America's curious industries which follows the factory method of production.

Why, nowadays, with only ten lessons (a dollar down and a dollar a month), one may emerge from the chrysalis that has kept him a wallflower for so long and thrill the assembled guests at any party by his brilliant rendition of the Wagnerian operas; such, at least, is the guarantee of the advertisement in any current magazine. With the magic formulas contained in Mr. Sell-yourself's latest book (selling for only $4.98 and just a few copies left at that desirable price) the earnest office slave who has labored long and faithfully in some humble capacity while less gifted men than he have been promoted over his head can go into the boss' office, throw out his chest, give the big boy a cigar, tell him easily to just keep his seat, and inform that impressed gentleman that the general manager is a fool and a flop and here before his eyes is the man who can fill the bill with real efficiency and distinction. Of course, he gets the job, for who can resist a Sellyoursell trained personality?

This desire to put oneself over, to show the old personality, has reached such a point that night schools all over the country are offering free lecture courses in personality development which have to be conducted in auditoriums in order to accommodate the eager attendance. When some well-advertised personality expert hits town for a lecture series, he ties up traffic for ten blocks each way.

And meanwhile, what have we? Salesgirls with fancy accents who call you "dearie" in dripping tones; brightly smiling business-is-fine-ain't-I-the-personality salesmen who haunt doorsteps; and all the jittering, rah rah curiosities who clown at night clubs while the admiring public gasps, "My, what personality!"

Despite all, the real personalities of the world continue, as always to be the people who have the courage and the sanity to go along not thinking always in terms of their effect on the other fellow, but being naturally friendly, honestly enthusiastic, reasonably discriminate, and perfectly human.—Daily Trojan.

Naughty Nonsense

We take great pleasure in publicly announcing the fact that we are now permitted to read, outside the secret haunts of our own rooms, unexpurgated editions of "The Decameron" without becoming conscience stricken. The United States has been so condescending as to admit that this particular volume is neither obscene nor immoral and have decreed that it is fit literature for its citizens.

The institution that our legislators have maintained for the expulsion of bad books has often been called farcial. We rather choose to label it ignorance seasoned with sense. The motive is worthwhile, but the judgment of these literary officials has at times been appalling.

There is a decided contrast between publications which are unadulterated filth and others which are unquestionably fine literature. The latter, in approaching the realistic, may seem a bit naughty to our sanctified officials. However, they have been loath to see a difference between these two areas and have insisted upon the expulsion of both.

The acceptance of "The Decameron" is to be commended for its sensibleness and condemned for its tardy arrival. The literary horizon of this country might well be broadened if a little more thoughtful judgment were entertained by the members of this governmental group.—Pennsylvanian.

Sic 'Em

Heywood Broun and his bosses are at it again. Disagreement on the question of city economy blazed out in the columns of the New York World-Telegram last Wednesday to bring back fond memories of the "old days" to many New Yorkers. Mr. Broun used to make it a definite point to either be disagreeing with his own paper, the old "World," or causing legal actions of one kind or another, or doing both with some degree of regularity.

Mr. Broun and his bosses (though we shouldn't say "bosses," for no one ever bossed Mr. Broun) aren't mad. They merely fail to agree. As usual, we believe in the views of the columnist. We greet his denunciation of any policy which demands drastic cuts in the salaries of our teachers, policemen, and firemen with a hearty, "Amen!"—Ohio State Lantern.

Ostracize the Unofficial Basketball Referee . . .

In former editorials we have referred to two of the most objectionable species of Michigan undergraduates, the Noise Maker who attends the movies, and the Campus Painter who writes "Beat Ohio State" in red letters on the Library steps.

And now we believe we may add a third species to the family of objectionables, the Unofficial Basketball Referee.

You will find the Unofficial Basketball Referee packing the stands of Yost field house for every home game. He knows all the rules and he wants the others in the stands to know that he knows. He can see every action that takes place on the floor. He knows when a player walks with the ball. He can see the outside lines even in the farthest corner. His decisions are never wrong.

He is a firm believer in psychology. If a penalty is called against Michigan, he hisses. If it is called against the opponents, he cheers. Sometimes Michigan is penalized because of his hisses. Then he hisses louder and calls the referee a thief and a robber. Sometimes other spectators laugh at his abusive language. This encourages him to still louder hisses and worse language.

He is intelligent enough to realize that he is not helping Michigan's athletic reputation by bringing boxing fan tactics of the Bowery into a gentleman's sport. But he is not intelligent enough to keep quiet. It's anything for a laugh with him—he's an exhibitionist.

What are we going to do about the three objectionables, the Noise Maker, the Campus Painter and the Unofficial Basketball Referee? We suggest that ostracism is perhaps the only adequate remedy.—Michigan Daily.

Too Late

Is it fashionable to be late? Or is it merely an expensive luxury? In either case it seems to be the one unbroken rule of the great majority of college functions, and he who values his time is likely to have his habit of punctuality seriously deranged before he finds that at Old McGill 8:30 means 9:00 o'clock, and "sharp on time" merely proves that some executive has a sense of humor.

Club meetings usually start a full half hour late. Executives themselves are frequently among the latest arrivals. Dances are scheduled to start at 8:30 sharp. The strains of the first waltz are seldom heard before 9:00. As a result the last few numbers are cut in half. When a sufficiently large number have decided they will be among the last to arrive, social functions open their programmes. If you feel in need of a solitary half hour spent in quiet meditation, be on time at your next meeting.

The one thing which the business world demands is promptness. When the majority of the present generation of students make their initial appearance in business life they will receive a shock. That shock will invite most serious reflection. The victim of an unhealthy habit will decide that he has overlooked a principle fundamental in every walk of life—Punctuality. It may be fashionable to be late but fashion collects a heavy luxury tax.—McGill Daily.

Short Cuts

It is an established fact that college students will take short-cuts whenever it is at all possible, no matter what premise or rule they may be violating by doing so. Whether the short-cut be geographical, verbal, social, or educational the collegian takes

Tar Heels Five Meets Guilford In Season Opener Here Tonight

White Phantoms in Final Workout Yesterday for Initial Test of 1933 Season.

GAME WILL BEGIN AT 8:00

Weather, Hines, Brandt, McCachren, Aitken Slated to Start for Carolina.

Coach Bo Shepard ran his first two fives through a brisk workout yesterday and rested his case until tonight when Carolina supporters will return a verdict on the 1933 edition of the White Phantoms.

The Tar Heels open tonight against the Quakers from Guilford and court convenes in the Tin Can at 8:00 o'clock. There will be no admission charge at this game, the athletic offices announced yesterday.

Coach Shepard had his reserve team scrimmage a long time yesterday while the first two teams were limbering up with foul shooting and passing. Then the two clubs ran through their signals and the practice was over.

Starting Lineup Certain

Carolina's lineup at the start of the game will show Captain Hines and Weather at the forwards, Brandt at center, and Aitken and McCachren at the guards. Though this will in all probability be the starting club, the second team composed of Markham and Nalle at the forwards, Glace at center, and Henry and Harris at guards, will be sure to see much action.

Chandler, Beale, Long, and Minor are other players who are sure to be used tonight against the Quakers who are not expected to furnish too much opposition. They have lost early season encounters with Y teams and should afford Coach Shepard ample opportunity to get an eye on what his squad will do under fire. After the game tonight, the Phantoms will work tomorrow for their first Big Five tilt of the year Saturday in Charlotte with the Davidson Wildcats.

TENNIS TEAMS IN WINTER PRACTICE

Kenfield Trains Varsity Netmen For Spring Games Before Bad Weather Sets In.

Coach Kenfield, tennis and golf mentor of the University, is taking advantage of the good weather to give the members of the tennis teams work-outs on the outdoor courts.

With the courts in good shape and the weather ideal, Coach Kenfield is going to give his men as much practice as possible before bad weather sets in again. Harley Shuford, a member of the number one doubles team last year, is back in school after laying out last quarter and will add strength to the team. "Betsy" Grant, number one man on the team for the last two years and a sensation in college tennis, is still out of school and it is almost certain that he will not return this year.

In the junior national indoor tennis tournament held during the Christmas holidays Bernie Friedman and Harry Lott, both members of the freshman tennis team this year, were entered. Friedman went to the semi-finals before being defeated while Lott went to the finals of the squash tourney before being downed.

Wilmer Hines, promoted to number one man during the absence of Grant, and Ike Minor are both members of the basketball squad and will not work out this quarter. The rest of the tennis squad are all at practice for the season, which opens in the spring quarter.

Tin Can Tales

by MARLINSPIKE

Perhaps any talk concerning where Carolina winter sports teams will find themselves at the end of the season is a bit premature, but to stop and figure things out on paper is certainly harmless and sometimes amusing. Therefore and herewith let's pick up a piece of paper and whatever pencils the roommate left on the table, and see what we can see.

First take a look at the basketball situation. Put such names as Hines, Weather, and McCachren down on your piece of paper, and try to suppress a grin. Whatever happens to the basketball team when the wars start this winter, it will have to be admitted that the names just listed sound pretty good and should be quite helpful in returning Carolina to the top of the basketball heap again. Maybe they won't.

Then wrestling with its seven letter men. Percy Idol is the big noise here. He had an undefeated season in 1932 and that should speak for itself. Also, don't forget to list Hussey, Conklin, Auman, Efland, and Matthewson. V. M. I. and Washington and Lee will present the heavy opposition as usual, but, still, barring Quinnie's usual tough luck, the outlook is not dark.

Crayton Rowe hasn't smiled in months, but came pretty close the other day when Peyton Brown and Platt Landis showed up. Landis, who was a lightweight year before last, now weighs 190 pounds, and if Coach Rowe can get him into shape there should be trouble brewing for some of the big boys in the Conference. Brown will likely fight as a lightweight again this year, and there are lots of teams in the South hoping he's not nearly so successful as he was in 1931. That year he scored six consecutive knockouts as a freshman.

Then it seems that there are other fighters down at the Tin Can, a couple of them going around calling themselves Levinson and Quarles. Their presence will hardly cause any groans.

The pugs face the toughest problem of any of the winter teams. All they have to do is prove themselves better than Virginia, Duke, State, and several other strong clubs, all of whom will be a bit hard to convince that they haven't a perfectly good right to the Conference championship. Virginia looks the best of the lot, but if the Tar Heels get going as Coach Rowe hopes they will, somebody's going to get a swell headache trying to pick the winners. You do that—but get another piece of paper first.

Intramural Basketball

Today is the last day to enter teams for intramural basketball. As many independent teams as possible are requested. The season starts Monday.

An eminent educator says all his sympathy goes out to the youth of today who is up against a stone wall, but a lot of ours goes out to poor old dad, who will have to settle the garage repair bill.—Boston Herald.

Former Davidson Coach Fears Bad Season For V.P.I.

Monk Younger, Now Coaching Cadet Cagers, Predicts Usual Dire Fate for His Team

Sport fans in North Carolina recall how Monk Younger used to tell his usual tale of woe at Davidson. The old maestro, friend of drap mystery and the fates, has returned to his alma mater, V. P. I., in the capacity of a basketball coach with the same old line.

Just yesterday, Monk Younger turned Blacksburg upside down with his sad musing and dire predictions for the Gobblers' coming cage season. Although Younger is blessed with four experienced lettermen of two basketball campaigns, the Tech mentor is lamenting the passing of Benny Palmer.

Palmer, a seasoned veteran of two years experience, is lost to the Gobblers line-up by virtue of being ejected from the game by Referee Academic Work on too many fouls against the Scholastic club. Younger believes that Palmer's loss is serious, and accordingly is changing the Tech starting line-up.

The juggling that Younger is proposing is turning the Gobblers team inside out. Bus Hall, captain and high scoring forward, has been shifted to a guard post; Wolfe, six foot center, is to be Captain Bus Hall's running mate as guard against the Maryland Terrapins in the season opener Saturday night.

The fight for the center position now looms as a hard one for the cadets. Al Seaman, a Michigan senior, and Byron Velote seemed to be the most outstanding aspirants.

Younger, while at Davidson prophesied frequently that the Wild Cats would have tough sledding; he was often right, but all too infrequently his stories were taken as just his usual season forecast for sports scribes. V. P. I. alumni are inclined to believe that Younger is pulling his old game of pessimism, and that the Gobblers really have a strong club.

ALL LETTER MEN RETURN FOR MAT TEAM WORKOUTS

Only 25 of 60 Men Who Were Out for Team Before Holidays Attend Practice.

Despite the fact that only twenty-five wrestling candidates turned out for the varsity and freshman mat teams yesterday afternoon, Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan found all the letter men returning to his fold to take their regular workouts.

The men now back for work, sporting grappling monograms, are Hussey, Mathewson, Auman, Hiller, Conklin, Spell, and Captain Idol. All these experienced veterans put the rookies through their paces, showing them the tricks of the game while Coach Quinlan supervised the work.

Only eleven days remain before the wrestlers journey to West Raleigh on January 16, where they will meet the varsity and freshman clubs of State College. The Wolfpack is supposed to have one of the strongest mat teams that it has put out in many years, having several fine prep and high school stars to bolster their roster of veterans. Some of the State men are sophomores who won their first spurs in the state high school tourney held here two years ago.

Coach Quinlan is going to call back the equipment, issued to sixty candidates before Christmas, unless these men come back out for their daily workouts.

Carolina Boasts Two Men In Ranks Of Three-Letter Club

Days of specialization in college athletics are rapidly passing at Carolina. The Tar Heels have only two men who can claim the right to wear the varsity monogram in three sports. Stuart Chandler and George Brandt are the only men on the campus who have managed to achieve this honor.

Chandler, a senior, who has played his last game for Carolina in the capacity of a gridiron luminary, has managed to shine in three major forms of athletics, winning his letters in football, basketball, and track. Although Chandler was a reserve on last year's edition of the White Phantoms, he proved to be invaluable as guard. Chandler won his monogram on Coach Bob's track team, throwing the javelin. He is five feet nine, weighs 182, and hails from Durham.

George Brandt, a junior, made his first football letter at right end this year; but did so well at the flank position that he was prominently mentioned for mythical all-state honors. He gained his letter as a reserve on the basketball team last year, too; but this year seems to have an inside track as a starter. During the spring, Brandt played in the outfield on the Tar Heel baseball nine to win his third honor. He stands six feet one in his stocking feet and tips the scales at 174. Brandt's home is Washington, D. C.

Within the past few years, men wearing three letters have been scarce as hen's teeth, to use a proverbial expression. Three fine athletes can be recalled by Carolina sport fans. Odell Sapp, "Puny" Harper, and Bill Doddender. Sapp, who is now a member of the Carolina coaching staff, won letters as a football end, a boxer, and a diamond star, pitching for the baseballers. "Puny" Harper won letters for services as a gridster, a basketball, and a track man. Bill Doddender won his laurels on the football, basketball, and baseball teams; he was an all-southern in basketball for three years.

HIGH CAGE TEAMS TO START ACTION

Five Teams in the East and Eight Western Teams to Battle for Charlotte High's Title.

North Carolina class "A" basketball teams will swing into action January 12 when Durham's quintet will oppose Rocky Mount high school's team in the season's opening tilt. Five teams from the eastern section and eight from the western division will compete for Charlotte High's state title.

Other teams in the eastern division will begin the campaign several days later. Wilmington will oppose Fayetteville January 17 and Raleigh will play Rocky Mount January 19 in early games. Each eastern team will play a complete round-robin schedule of eight games.

In the western section, Charlotte's championship five will open the 1933 activities with a game with Greensboro. On the same night, Gastonia will play at Salisbury. Other early battles will be the High Point-Gastonia fray, at High Point January 20, and the Greensboro-Winston-Salem tilt January 17.

PITCHER CROWDER BOOSTS SENATORS

Washington Hurler Believes Team Stands Good Chance to Win League Pennant.

"General" Alvin Crowder, dean of the Washington Senators' pitching staff, while in Winston-Salem recently, came out of his usual taciturn hibernation to tell the newspapermen that he thought Washington would take off the pennant honors.

Crowder was stretching himself in a cafe in the cigarette city when he ventured, "I believe that Washington will win the league pennant if she plays the same fine type of ball that she played during the past season. New York will give us the most trouble, but I think that we will be able to beat them."

Washington recently did some trading which all sports savants believe will enhance their chances to cop the league flag this summer.

Crowder is spending a few days at his North Carolina home before leaving for the Florida training grounds.

COACH ROWE NOT SO ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PROSPECTS

Boxing Mentor Deplores Terrible Condition of Fighters With Meet Close at Hand.

Crayton Rowe, the Gil Dobie of boxing coaches, does not share in the general demonstrations of joy that are at present being made by Carolina's ring fans.

With everyone elated at the prospects of a brilliant season due to the return of several veterans in the heavier divisions, Coach Rowe emphatically makes it known that he is not so certain that his leather pushers will have a glorious string of triumphs when the Southern Conference tournament ends in February.

"Sure they are coming back," he says. "Sure the heavy classes are strengthened. But look at the condition they are in. One fast round and they are through. And even though they have plugged the gap in their divisions, what about the lightweight situation? Raymer hasn't come back, has he? And don't forget that a victory in the lighter classes scores a point as well as it does among the big boys. I don't see anything to be so happy about."

Lightweights a Problem

It is true that he is in a quandary about his lightweights. With two great fighters, Marty Levinson and Norm Quarles, in the featherweight group and no good prospect among the lightweights, Coach Rowe is faced with the problem of either having Quarles build up to 135 pounds or developing some new-comer. He had been certain of the return of Raymer and Fritz's absence now leaves him with the perplexing situation of who to use and the meet with V. P. I. is only nine days off. It is not so difficult to understand why he is not cheerful over his team's chances this winter.

Landis Needs Conditioning

Platt Landis looked good in his first workout. He gave several hopefuls the last lesson first and appeared to be the bright prospect that he was two years ago; but he tired badly in the latter rounds.

Marty Levinson is the same smart ringman that he has been for the past three years. He hammered several sparring partners, was in great shape, and is a sure-fire bet to pile up a great record this year.

as badly as his co-worker. Scarcely any of his team have as yet reported for training and when they do appear Coach Allen fears that they will be in as poor condition as some of the varsity men. The frosh outfit's chances appeared to be as bright as the varsity's; but, with the condition jinx haunting him, Allen is feeling as pessimistic as Rowe.

Several more veterans returned to the Tin Can yesterday afternoon for training. Jimmy Williams, bantamweight, although he does not expect to participate in any of the dual meets this winter, will be on hand for the tournament if he is needed. He carries much excess poundage at the present time, but he expects to weigh 119 by the time the conference gets under way.

Hugh Wilson added even more strength to the already promising heavyweight ranks by reporting for practice yesterday.

If this year's campaigns turn out to be dismal failures as Coaches Rowe and Allen fear they will, bad condition and not a lack of excellent material can be blamed.

turbances, involving matters that require no little amount of study in order to satisfactorily determine the proper action for each of those concerned. He is not only a go-between for numerous maladjustments but also has many juvenile problems among which is his duty as probation officer for the county schools, trying to keep children of age in regular attendance at their respective schools. Add to this also the task of caring for 400 to 500 needy families and we have a small conception of the lot that is his.

This burden, though, is lessened somewhat as he goes about his tasks, for there is always pleasure in seeing everyday results of accomplishment. He may be, as is his reputation in Orange county, the slowest man hereabouts but that is to his advantage for if he were a hasty man great would be the trouble and serious the consequences. If in his conclusions he should someday tell a colored woman to take her kith and kin into the next neighborhood he might in turn be given the job of transferring them the next day, or in the night, to some distant community where the financial situation might be improved or where he during one of his visits had left Red Cross flour, some bread or meat for those who had not had a bite to eat.

So it is, in his daily trips abroad that he carefully analyzes the individual's tales of woe. He deducts and allows, but always makes amends where amends are to be made with care and precaution in order that the colored may remain colored and the white's may not be offended.

Skeptical Beneficiaries
There was the case recently of a woman in one of the communities he visits where several children and the mother were in need of clothing. Late one afternoon he called on the woman, told her that he was a welfare officer and that the government was giving cloth from which clothes might be made. He explained to her that it would not be necessary to pay for the materials, if she would take the order which he had written for her she might have the cloth free. The woman, who was white, hesitated a moment and said that she didn't know what to do, that it would be necessary for her to consult her husband.

But, never you think that all cases are so serious that one cannot find a humorous note. There is the story of the colored woman whose husband died with pellagra. The woman was sickly and several times she had been helped, but she came to "Mr. Lawrence" and told him that she had found tiny, white snakes in her well. She recalled that her brother-in-law soon after her husband's death had told her he "would get" her. She interpreted this to mean that someone had thrown the snakes in the well from which she drank, and instead of the disease which the doctor said had taken her man that he had swallowed the snakes and died. She was horribly frightened and knew very well that she, too, was being "plagued." Lawrence, not being skilled in medical science, had here not only to rid his patient of a plague but to readjust her to an environment where she would not be "plagued."

The story of stories, however, comes from Chatham. While serving both Chatham and Orange counties he was, one Saturday, at the courthouse in Pittsboro. As he waited, a Negro man minus an arm came into the courtroom. As the Negro was about to leave George halted him and said, "Say, fellow, it isn't any of my business but I would like to know how you lost your arm."

Then and there he started something. The negro told him that his arm had been lost in a mill somewhere and proceeded to ask him if he knew that he was talking to "Sir John" So and So, of England. Lawrence being an Englishman said, "Now, is that so? I am an Englishman and I cannot understand how you too are English." The negro went further with his explanation saying that his grandmother was an African and that his grandfather was an Indian. The grandfather was knighted for his services in the British Army, and strange as it seemed, he later proved his argument by producing letters from an old trunk addressed to himself as "Sir George," of England.

Discovered: a Proud Convict

On an ordinary day a year or so ago Lawrence was visiting. He had planned to call at the home of an ex-convict where he was told help was needed. Upon arriving there he was invited in the home. He stepped inside the front room and there hanging on the wall was an enlarged photograph of the master of that house in the stripes he had worn on the roads of North Carolina while he served a term for a criminal offense.

As Lawrence goes his rounds there are always incidents which bespeak of the closeness to humanity, and it is with a deal of pleasure that he tells the stories about names of children in the larger families. There is the girl Kathleen whose name is recorded in the family Bible as such. Immediately in front of the name also is written: "A. B. I. F. E." The mother was asked what the extra letters were for and if they were a part of the child's name. She smiled and said, "Yes, you see Kathleen was born during the World War and we just named her for each of the allies: America, Belgium, Italy, France, and England."

There are the usual crop of children named for the past presidents of the United States respecting no particular political faith. For instance, in one family there are three boys and a girl, and their names are: "Theodore Roosevelt," "Calvin Coolidge," and "Woodrow Wilson." The daughter who came into the world between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Coolidge was left out so far as being named for chief executives was concerned.

In a colored family there is the father who has no unusual name for that race, his being "Abraham Lincoln" or plain, old "Link." On the other hand "Link" has some taste in the matter of choosing names, for his immediate ancestors inherited these as their first names, in the order they arrived, "Schyler," "Colfax," "Ulysses Grant," and "Faust."

It would seem that the numerous activities Lawrence already engages in his regular duties would most certainly monopolize his time. However, he directs a church choir, manages to appear in concerts and at funerals, is director of a boy's band in Carrboro and keeps ever near his music, wherein he delights.

And, "Sir George Lawrence" it might well be, between puffs on his pipe, carries on. Day in and day out he deals with his and other folk's problems. Steadily at it, slowly but carefully, and he in his individual world is fully aware of it all.

advantage of it as often as he can.

In mere geographical matters the hap-hazard paths that continually appear on the campus demonstrate that if there is a sidewalk or a formal path leading to a building that is not the shortest distance between two points, the students will make another that is. The only way to prevent the forming of such paths, and that method is only partly efficacious, is to erect a wire barricade necessitating walking around the long way. Verbally the collegian shortens the words "library," "gymnasium," "chemistry," "demonstration," "psychology," "professor," and hundreds of others into diminutives that will conserve his precious time and energy. In social matters the college student can, with the assurance that it is the ordinary thing, call any one by his or her first name on being introduced, and become engaged after a week's acquaintance if it seems a good idea at the time.

All these short-cuts violate no rules more binding than those of good taste, good English and a respect for orderly laws, and as such are not impressively dangerous. It is the cultural and educational short-cuts that the average student resorts to that can be a real risk both to himself and the entire university system. The student who copies notebooks, term papers, and experiments of former years instead of doing the work himself has saved time and energy and perhaps received a better grade for his effort. But by taking such short-cuts he is cheating himself out of the advantages of actually taking the path which was intended for him to take, and which has in its course certain things he will never see along the short-cut. When he is confronted later with the necessity of explaining the phenomena along the conventional path he is unable to do it because his short-cut did not include his un-

"Madame Butterfly" Featured At Theatre

"Madame Butterfly," modernized and done into a motion picture by Marion Gering, with a cast headed by Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant, and Charlie Ruggles, is featured today at the Carolina theatre.

Miss Sidney plays the role of Cho-Cho-San, the demure Japanese maiden wooed by the young American naval officer stationed in the city in which she lives. Cary Grant plays the role of the American.

The two fall in love and are married in accordance with Japanese law, but only after the officer has discovered that the oriental law provides for automatic divorce when husband leaves wife. He decides that he can go through with the ceremony under such circumstance. Their married life is brief, for ultimately Grant is transferred back to the United States.

Understanding of them. In making these educational effort-conserving actions the undergraduate only is taking the path that those who went before made for him by willing their term papers and notebooks to oncoming classes. It is a short-cut that in the end does not pay, for it is the time and effort consumed in actually doing the work that go to make up real learning.—Indiana Daily Student.

UNIVERSITY MEN ATTEND MEETING OF ECONOMISTS

C. T. Murchison Delivers Address
At Convention in Cincinnati
During Holidays.

Drs. C. T. Murchison and W. F. Fenger of the University department of economics took part in the program of the meeting of the American Economics Association in Cincinnati during the holidays. Dr. Murchison delivered a paper which was one of the high lights of the convention.

The address delivered by Dr. Murchison detailed his views on the "Requisites of Stabilization in the Cotton Textile Industry."

Submits Plans

Two plans, "a radical re-organization of the industry itself, or vigorously directed co-operative action with a retention of the present structure," were advanced by Dr. Murchison as means of stabilizing the industry. He pointed to the beneficial reform measures such as the limitation of working hours and the voluntary abandonment of night employment of women and minors as great accomplishments of the Cotton Textile Institute.

"A diminished rate of speed in bringing about speculative over-production induced by the cotton market," stated Dr. Murchison, would be the chief economic gain of legislative prohibition of night work, leaving untouched the major causes of instability. Such legislation would in addition "precipitate a new orgy of mill construction which could probably not be checked until excessive plant capacity once more prevailed."

Dr. Murchison stated that what is most essential to the industry is the stabilization of the market.

SALES TAX QUERY WILL BE DEBATED

Di and Phi Societies With Extension Division Inaugurated Debate Organization.

Entries for competition in the twenty-first annual contest of the high school debating union of North Carolina are being received by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the central committee. The question to be discussed is: Resolved, That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue.

The finals will take place some time during the spring quarter at the University. Each school participating in the contest will be grouped with two others for a triangular debate, each school putting out two teams, one on the affirmative and one on the negative side of the question. The schools winning both debates will be entitled to send their teams to the University to compete for the state championship and Aycock Memorial cup.

The high school debating union was inaugurated twenty years ago by the Dialectic and Philanthropic literary societies and the University extension division with the cooperation of state high schools. Twenty questions of state-wide importance have been discussed. The queries are suggested by the two societies and the extension division, and adopted by the governing committee.

Calvin Coolidge Dies From Heart Trouble

Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, died suddenly at Northampton, Mass., yesterday. The doctors stated that death was due to heart disease. He was sixty years old last July 4.

Returning from a shopping tour, Mrs. Coolidge found the body of her husband on the bed in a room at "The Beeches," the estate to which he retired at the conclusion of his career at the national capital.

His death was wholly unexpected although for the past three weeks Mr. Coolidge had complained of indigestion.

The former President, who, up to the time of his death, was the only surviving former President of the United States, had gone to his law office as usual yesterday morning. After being there a short time he became distressed and returned to his home—five minutes after he arrived there he was dead.

FRITZ KREISLER WILL PLAY HERE DURING QUARTER

Band, Orchestra, and Glee Clubs Will Be Active; Grand Opera Will Be Given in Sound.

During the coming quarter the several musical organizations of the campus will engage in an enlarged program of activity. Not only will the University orchestra band and the glee club present several programs, but new musical events are to be added by the department of music to its series of campus presentations.

Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, will appear in Chapel Hill on February 27 in a return engagement to the University. In Durham the Duke entertainment series will present Walter Gieseking, the German pianist, February 13.

January 20 a concert of chamber music will be given at the Playmakers theatre under the auspices of the Institute of Folk Music and under the direction of Lamar Stringfield.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will continue his series of Vesper organ recitals, beginning Sunday, January 22. In addition, several organ concerts are to be given by visiting organists.

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present its winter quarter concert Wednesday night, February 22, in Hill music hall. This concert will feature solo appearances of several students of the school of music.

The University concert band, directed by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will appear at South.

Plans For Dormitory Smokers Are Finished

At a meeting of the inter-dormitory council on the mezzanine floor of Graham Memorial Wednesday night plans for dormitory smokers for the year were made.

One smoker a week will be given in Graham Memorial. A program as well as refreshments will be given. The dormitory being entertained at the time will be the guests of E. Carrington Smith at the Carolina theatre after the smoker.

The inter-dormitory council is formed by presidents of all dormitories. W. C. Medford heads this group.

Organization Busily Engaged In Raising Funds For U. N. C. Library

Friends of Library Organized Last Spring to Spread Influence of Local Library; Rockefeller Contributions Have Proved To Be Immense Help in Carrying on Work.

Although still in its infancy the organization for the increasing of funds for the support of the University library has already shown its influence through increasing the forms of contributions and utilizing them in an efficient manner. The Friends of the Library was organized last spring and is the result of a movement to aid the University library, already influential throughout the south, branch into larger fields of cultural interest.

For years the University has been forming an outstanding library. Its activities during the past generation have been numerous and varied. In addition to its primary purpose of providing a source of interesting and intensive reading to the students, professors, and townspeople of Chapel Hill, the library has carried its work to the people through extension enterprises. Thousands of volumes are loaned annually to persons outside of Chapel Hill. Every effort has been made to render the contents of the library generally available.

In recent years the library has received active and enthusiastic support from an increasing number of friends. At the dedication of the present library building, gifts totaling $146,250 were announced. Since then a large number of significant and munificent donations have been received.

Rockefeller Gift

The Friends of the Library was formally formed last May when the General Education Board, one of the Rockefeller foundations, gave the University library $30,000 to provide bibliographical apparatus to make available to scholars of this section the catalogue of several of the leading libraries of the world. The announcement of this gift was made by President Frank Graham at the first meeting of the organization.

The purpose of the Friends is to bring together in an informal group a number of friends of the library who have given their time, money, and materials for the enrichment of the library.

Members may promote the interest of the library by giving or securing funds for building up special collections, books, newspaper files, pamphlets and manuscripts. The library often has unique opportunities to acquire valuable private libraries for which there is no provision in its appropriation. The Friends of the Library will perform a great service by creating general funds, with no limitations attached for such emergencies.

Membership

According to the constitution adopted by the organization, any person interested in the object of the association may become a member. There are three classes of members: First, contributing members who pay $5 annually; second, sustaining members who pay $25 or more annually; third, life members who give the library $1000 or more in money and materials of unusual and distinctive value.

Dr. E. R. Groves Pioneers In Social Science With Book On Marriage

Purpose of Book Is to Present Marriage as Human Experience To Give Student Insight and Familiarity With Discoveries of Science in Field.

For the fourth time Dr. Ernest R. Groves of the University sociology department has pioneered in the field of social science text books and has produced a text whose purpose is "to interpret marriage as a human experience in such a way as to bring to the student insight and a familiarity with the resources that science has given for dealing with marriage problems."

In 1927 Dr. Groves published Social Problems of the Family which was the first text book dealing with family relations. Since he opened the way to such texts many others have appeared. Again in 1930 Dr. Groves entered into a new field of sociology text books by the publishing of Introduction to Mental Hygiene. Then, realizing the need in high schools of a text which would illuminate to the younger student some of the problems of the family, Dr. Groves wrote for high school use the text, Family and Its Relationships.

Course in Marriage

Eight years ago Dr. Harry W. Chase, former president of the University, at the request of a number of senior students inaugurated a course in marriage at the University, the first of its kind in the United States. Last year two other colleges began courses in marriage and a third college is also preparing for one.

Since there is no text relating to the subject of marriage alone, Dr. Groves, a nationally recognized authority on family relations, sex, and marriage, prepared his text because, in the words of the Preface to Marriage "not only is there great need of renewing the one-time social practice of training young people for marriage but we have at present sufficient information emerging from the various fields of science that have to do with human behavior to justify the serious study of marriage by college men and women."

As recognition to two men who have been instrumental in introducing into the colleges courses to enlighten the college generation on the problems of family, Dr. Groves dedicates his book "To Arthur H. Wilde who as Dean of the School of Education authorized at Boston University the first college course in preparation for family life and Harry W. Chase during whose presidency at the University of North Carolina was offered the first college course in preparation for marriage."

Purpose of Book

Excerpts from the preface to Dr. Groves new book show the author's high purpose in giving to college students such a text. He says: "It is folly to attempt adequately to train young people

Here January 11

Uday Shan-kar, Hindu dancer, billed to appear here January 11 under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee, will bring with him a company of sixteen composed of eight male and female dancers, and eight musicians who play 120 instruments.

ORIENTAL GROUP TO APPEAR HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

Shan-Kar and Company Hailed by Critics as Leading Exponents Of Their Art.

Shan-Kar and his company of Oriental dancers and musicians will be presented by the Student Entertainment Committee as the fifth in the series of student entertainment at the University during the year. The Hindu group will appear in Memorial hall, January 11, at 8:30 o'clock. Tickets can be purchased for one dollar by those who do not hold the entertainment booklets.

Shan-Kar, an East Indian dancer who once collaborated with Anna Pavlova, heads a company of sixteen, eight male and female dancers and eight musicians who are heralded as masters in executing the intricate artistic movements of the East. John Martin, in a recent Sunday feature in the New York Times, says "for all the age and repose of spirit which characterizes the art itself, there is such youth and warmth in the performance that it becomes a singularly delightful experience."

Performance at Exposition

In the presentation of Shan-Kar are included many exotic interpretive dances and selections of Oriental music that will thrill the Western audiences. The company recently completed an European tour that was successfully climaxed with brilliant appearances with the Colonial Exposition in Paris.

The sixth presentation in the entertainment series will be the Boston Light Opera Company's production of "Robin Hood," March 2.

Playbook Completes Five Years' Service

The Carolina Playbook, which is edited in four issues a year by Prof. F. H. Koch, completed its fifth year with the current December issue.

Featured in the December issue of the Playbook are a play, "Sleep On Lemuel," by John Parker; "Folk Drama Defined," by Paul Green; and an editorial on Uncle Tom's Cabin.

During the time the magazine has been published, it has grown until it now has subscribers in twenty-eight states and in England, Germany, the British West Indies, and the Hawaiian Islands.

ANNUAL REVELS ANNOUNCED FOR TOMORROW NIGHT

Program of Stunts, Skits, and Take-offs on Drama Both Old And New Will Be Given.

The Carolina Playmakers will stage their annual Twelfth Night revels tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre, with a program of stunts, skits, take-offs on drama both old and new. This is part of the program for the annual meeting of the Carolina Dramatic Association.

Twelfth Night is a traditional celebration and has become so with the Playmakers because of their revels staged each year following the Christmas holidays. Although the revels are not open to the public, no personal invitations will be extended. The performance is open to everyone who has been or is at present connected in any way with Playmaker activities.

Program Announced

The program begins with an introduction by "Proff" Koch. Then will follow the first part of the program which is devoted to Elizabethan drama. The revel scene from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night will be given by Professors Urban T. Holmes, W. T. Wiley, George McKie; and Mrs. Claudius Murchison and Milton Williams. Then the election of the lord of misrule and his queen, by faculty members, and introducing the mummery by Professor J. M. Booker will be followed by The Sheep Stealing of Mak, a scene from The Second Shepherd's Play. This cast is composed of Professors E. E. Ericson, A. C. Howell, J. O. Bailey, H. K. Russell, and R. P. Bond, and D. D. Carroll, Jr. The director is Professor P. C. Farrar.

HEADS ARRANGE UNION BUSINESS

Memorial Directors Rule to Install Radio and Settle Question of Barber Shops.

Action to reach a satisfactory agreement between the Graham Memorial barber shop and the independent shops in the town and the decision to purchase a radio were the principal points of business taken up by the board of directors of Graham Memorial at the last meeting Wednesday night.

The decision regarding the Graham Memorial barber shop was to raise the price of haircuts to thirty-five cents and to close the shop regularly except on special occasions when closing may be fixed by consent of all the shops.

The purpose of the action was to make a suitable agreement to avoid unfair competition. Y. Z. Cannon, representing the Carolina shop, J. E. Pullen for the University shop, and Mr. Greene representing the Graham Memorial shop appeared before the board.

According to the plan of the directors, a radio will be installed in the building with loud speakers in the lounge, the banquet hall, and possibly in the game room with controls in the manager's office.

A committee was appointed to make this purchase and the radio will probably be installed during this month.

Calvin Coolidge

In the death of Calvin Coolidge the citizens of the United States are losing a respected leader and a valued friend. In his quiet, subtle manner, he has worked his way into the hearts of Americans as few of this country's leading citizens have.

Son of a simple Vermont farmer, he scaled the heights of political success with a perseverance which did credit to his honest ambition. But his ascent in the scale was so unobtrusive and so gradual that few realized that his steps were unfalteringly headed for the White House. His old New England taciturnity earned him the famous nickname of "Silent Cal."

Yet his silence was not the tactful silence of ignorance. It was a silence accompanied by the shrewdness for which old New England families are noted. His was the wisdom of laconicism and common sense. He showed by his actions, in the last analysis the only way in which a man can show his true worth, that he was quick and a master of situation. Calvin Coolidge believed in the old proverb to the effect that open ears and a closed mouth would send a man ahead. This was his gospel. His rapid and effective action while governor of Massachusetts in the case of the Boston police strike first brought him to the attention of the public.

His rise after that incident was swift, and, as chief executive of the nation, he was, as ever, shrewd and silent in speech and allowed actions to speak for him. Fate undoubtedly had a hand in a rise to success which depended to such a great extent upon accident. Still Calvin Coolidge knew well how to welcome opportunity, and by the results which he obtained proved himself worthy of all the honor which his country heaped upon him.—B.B.P.

Righto, Mr. Barnum

Man's insatiable lust for the things of life gloriously known as "bigger and better" is currently epitomized in the most fantastic of modern idols—Radio City and its components the new Roxy and the Music Hall. Mr. Rockefeller's latest libation to King Dollar fairly raises its Gargantuan stone head to the stars and shrieks "biggest and best."

The fundamental aim of Radio City is to house the cinematic, operatic and fine arts of this and other continents within its portals; yet the proportions which the venture has acquired seem indicative only of the desire to raise masonry to cubic heights exceeding those previously attained. Within the limits of the city, space is provided for dozens of offices for business ventures—space which is going begging in dozens of New York office buildings including the recent obelisk of Messrs. Smith and Chrysler. It is entirely inconceivable that the vast new buildings will be able to fill this space within decades.

Music Hall and RKO Roxy are but components of this great accumulation of space. Other than being the current "biggest and best" the Music Hall has no excuse for existence. If its vast number of seats is ever filled by patrons of the arts it seeks to promote, the consequent depopulation of dozens of theatres now barely operating must inevitably ensue. The new Roxy is a bird of the same feather. Both are a challenge to over-production, an enemy to the stage and cinema of no mean proportions.

But one cannot disregard the employment offered to thousands in erecting these vast temples. One hundred and twenty-five millions went into the complete project. Perhaps Mr. Rockefeller can sell some more oil, tear down Radio City, rebuild to offer more employment, and give us something "bigger and better."—D.C.S.

A Difference In Attitude

"I admire the undergraduate mind," a University professor recently declared, indicating that he recognized a difference between the graduate and the undergraduate.

More or less trivial complaints are frequently made by undergraduates of the extraordinary amount of work that competition with graduates in graduate-undergraduate courses forces them to do. No complaint against the amount of work required of undergraduates, unless it is exorbitant, is legitimate in the eyes of the faculty.

However, if a difference exists between the graduate and undergraduate minds it should be recognized and allowance made for it in the curriculum and in methods of instruction. The new humanism would demand this recognition and adjustment.

One University official suggests that the interest of the undergraduate mind is principally of a dilettante nature. Arguments that such a difference should not exist or that its existence is a fault in the undergraduate mind are not legitimate. For, if the difference is inherently fundamental, it must not only be accounted for but provision must also be made for the greatest and most satisfactory development of the mind which is responsible for it.

Cognizance of this dissimilarity is taken in arranging for undergraduates to dip lightly into several fields before choosing a major line of academic endeavor, while graduates are encouraged to devote their activities to a single field or two.

It has been observed that in graduate-undergraduate classes, the point of view and methods of study of the graduate differs from that of the undergraduate. This is unfair to both types of students and complicates somewhat the problem of the instructor.

In a liberal arts school, the graduate has reached his full maturity, presumably. He has discovered his primary interest and is intent upon pursuing it. Usually, he has put aside juvenile concern with extra-curricular activities. He is absorbed in study.

On the other hand, the undergraduate has not attained his full maturity. His interests are varied and extensive. His thought trends are perhaps incoherent and devious. He finds so many avenues through which his mind may reach stimulating ideas and interesting new knowledge that he does not care to confine his attention to a single subject. Campus activities still offer him diversion and quite often development.

Although pedagogues may contend that in his junior and senior years, when he first enters graduate-undergraduate classes, the undergraduate is supposed to have settled upon a field for specialization, the fact must be recognized that some students specialize because they are required to do so and that they register for graduate-undergraduate courses because no others are open.

The urge to and need for specialization is decided upon early in the student's career or not at all. In cases where students neither have a need or desire to specialize before graduation, their difference in attitude should be recognized.—E.C.D.

It is not unlikely that some of our professors here may—upon occasion—dream. What the subject-matter of their dreams is seems of little importance in this consideration save for the comment that since dreams are reflections, at least to some extent, of unvoiced desires, there must be a multiplicity of dreams concerning model students; students who are never late, students who always bring proper equipment, students who listen to lectures with rapt attention (chin-on-hand), students who never flunk anything, never "crab," keep up with readings, —stout students, lean students, medium and sundry—just so the vital spark of intellectual animation is there they can look like Frankenstein's monster.

Dreams of this sort must be rather common to all teachers at Carolina, but especially must it be true in the case of those unfortunates who conduct freshman and sophomore classes. The royal and ancient game of "Beating the Teacher" is still engaged in with remarkable fervor and delight. Not to strive for more knowledge, more instruments for the creation of a broader, freer existence,—but to study as little as possible, to be able to "spot" the professor, to make a passing grade with the ultimate goal being the esteem and distinction accorded the recipient of a college degree—these are the watch-words of the high-school type of mind.

Is it little wonder that pop quizzes are given by some professors? The wonder of it is that so few are really given.—V.J.L.

CAFETERIA ENTERTAINS STUDENTS AT BANQUET

The twenty-five student workers of the Crescent cafeteria were entertained Wednesday evening at a banquet given by the management of the cafeteria. After the banquet there were cigars and speeches. Bill Jerrell acted as toastmaster.

The purpose of the banquet was to inaugurate the new rates featured by the Crescent and to familiarize the students with the new plans. Ways and means of improving the service and menu were also discussed.

With Contemporaries

Be It Resolved

With the death of anaemia of Old Man 1932, the world, and consequently Ithaca, faces a new era. In the short span during which we have been away from this territory, many startling changes have been effected in the world of affairs. Technology has taken its place as a topic of conversation among those who know nothing about it. Radio City under the wing of the Rockefeller's mouth to gape. Chain selling has cropped up again to provide a new racket for those so inclined. Times change, and events come and go before the startled onlookers have a chance to understand what is going on.

Tradition has placed its stamp of approval on the practice of making New Year's resolutions. Usually they go no further than to vow abstinence from a minor vice or two, and as a rule they are honored more in the breach than in the observance. But having made some very private ones for ourselves, it is not inconsistent to resolve a thing or two for others. And so, without being too greatly concerned with other people's business, we highly resolve:

That, the sooner the Hoovers and Roosevelts start co-operating with each other, the better it will be for the entire populace.

That, Senate Committees should stop sampling different types of beer and get around to passing a few bills so that the country may imbibe of that mysterious 3.2.

That, generosity instead of greed govern future international discourse on reparations, debts, and disarmament.

That, the University Trustees take some action on the question of compulsory Drill instead of constantly tabling the matter for further information. In the time that they have taken for the gathering of the few pertinent facts, an entirely new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica could have been written.

That, the fraternities forget their selfishness long enough to pass a sane, feasible plan of rushing which will eliminate the present haphazard, cut-throat, break-neck, unfair hodge-podge by which freshmen are lured into "brotherhood."

That, the Traffic Bureau be reorganized with reduced prices, elimination of the sales-tax on violations, and that the students be relieved of what is the equivalent of an income tax. If that can't be done, it should be merged with one of the less successful rackets.

That, students and alumni co-operate to help the eminent Mr. Berry out of his present financial straits as guardian of the athletic coffers.

That, in exchange for this, Mr. Berry seize the opportunity for re-organizing his department so that from the ashes will rise a new and nobler edifice.

That, Prom and Banquet Committees forget lavishness and remember the depleted purses of the students a bit more than they have in the past.

That, the University astrologers evolve a calendar of recesses that will preclude for evermore the coincidence of the resumption of instruction and a national holiday.

That, the little fortune spent annually on needless traffic lights in Tompkins County be used more effectively in the filling of cavities in highways and byways.

That, you forgive us our foibles even as you would have dusty is a form of control which would supply "a continuity of supervision all the way from the spinning process to the final disposition of the finished product." In substantiation of this conviction, he declared that if such control were adopted, instead of productions schedules being arranged by men not even remotely associated with the market and wholly ignorant of the forces shaping market tendencies, the paramount objective of each process would be the efficient performance of its own role, and the arrangement would assume that the basic controlling influences in the industry emanated from the market for the finished product.

Deploping the conditions arising from the present system which permits and necessitates a loss of individuality in the products long before they reach final hands, Dr. Murchison concluded with a discussion of the integration now being diffused throughout the many fields of the industry.

A few nights ago Lowell Thomas, radio speaker, commented favorably upon Dr. Murchison's address, which will be printed in the March issue of the American Economic Review. Various sections of the speech are to be published by the Associated Press in numerous newspapers throughout the country.

Phantoms Tear Into '33 Season In Smashing Win Over Guilford Quakers

Shepard's Aggregation Sounds Warning by Murderous 66-9 Victory in Opener

MANY SUBSTITUTES USED

Tar Heels Use Twelve Men to Dazzle Quakers With Speed and Accuracy.

The University of North Carolina basketball team, finalists in last year's Atlanta tournament, rang up the curtain on the 1933 season last night in the Tin Can with a 66-9 defeat of the Guilford Quakers. Coach Bo Shepard used his entire varsity squad in the contest.

Although the score would belie the fact that the White Phantoms' offense wasn't clicking in mid-season form, nevertheless Coach Shepard's charges didn't look any too impressive at times, the passing and the shooting on crisp shots being of a very low order. Then again, at other times, the Tar Heels looked like champions.

Judging from last night's performance, there is every indication that the Carolina squad will have one of the most air-tight quints in the conference. The Quakers made but one field goal in the entire game, and that was on a long shot.

George Brandt, Tar Heel center, scored the first point of the game on a free throw after about three minutes had elapsed. Aitken then scored one and Brandt two field goals before the visitors were able to find the basket. Parker sinking the lone field goal for the Quakers. Then the Big Parade was on. With Captain Hines, Virgil Weathers and Aitken leading the way the half ended with the score 31-5.

Coach Shepard used his second stringers during most of the second half, and they continued where the varsity left off. It was during this half that the White Phantoms showed to their best advantage. The passing was excellent and the shooting was on the same order.

Wilmer Hines led the Carolina scorers with fifteen points and was closely followed by Aitken and Weathers with ten markers each. Brandt and Aitken starred for the Tar Heels while Guilford's best playing was done by

RALEIGH LEGION PREVENTS MIX-UP

Concert of Paderewski Cancelled to Avoid Conflict with Southern Conference Meet.

Art seemingly made a bow to sports in Raleigh this week when the American Legion post of the city voted to cancel the engagement of Ignace Paderewski, world famous pianist, which threatened to prevent the holding of the Southern Conference basketball tournament which will be conducted in the city February 24-25.

The Legion had obtained the auditorium for the concert February 25 which will be the second day of the tournament prior to the Junior Chamber of Commerce's arrangement with city officials to get the building for the conference tournament. A mix-up occurred when a 1932 calendar was consulted and the auditorium was declared open on the tournament dates.

In their meeting Thursday the post's executive committee generously voted to cancel the recital and postpone their plans until a subsequent tour by the pianist. This action was taken to further the plans to conduct the Southern Conference tournament in the city as an annual event.

I Only Heard

By Morrie Long

Two basketball teams thought to be unbeatable this year were given the annual upset defeat this week. Kentucky's veteran quint which is all set to capture southeastern conference honors was handed a 46 to 30 defeat on its own floor by Ohio State's troupe . . . and Purdue, usually the Big Ten's outstanding cage team, took a drubbing at the hands of Pittsburgh 33 to 29. Which all goes to prove that the "big time" aren't always so tough.

Two dangerous contenders for the Big Five basketball gonfalon appear in the Duke Blue Devils and the North Carolina State contingents. Thought to be weak this year, Duke's aggregation took a northern jaunt and licked three foes including George Washington's giant club. State took a beating at the hands of the Capital City crew but the score was close. With a little more seasoning both State and Duke will offer Carolina as much competition as last year. The Tin Can should be packed when these two coteries meet Coach Shepard's White Phantoms.

Miami inaugurated the Festival of the Palms of this year with the hopes that the event will become as popular as the Rose Bowl game held annually in California. The best team in the south is to be selected to meet the outstanding northern team at Miami. This year Manhattan College of New York clashed with Miami, the latter grid machine winning 7 to 0. If the Festival of the Palms is to be a success, it would be wise to have the two outstanding elevens in their respective sections meet . . . rather than the two weak sisters who played this year.

Southern conference basketball teams had better regard the University of South Carolina's quint as anything but soft. The Laval-coached crew have scored several impressive victories this year, and the fact that the team is rangy, fast, and excellent shots should carry the Gamecocks far in the Raleigh tournament. Included on the squad are several members of the famous Athens, Texas high school team who garnered two interscholastic titles at Stagg tournament in Chicago in 1929 and 30. Freddie Tompkins, left handed forward and all-American prep for two years, is the best man on Laval's squad.

Two North Carolina students have their names among the elite of the national tennis players. Byran Grant, number one man of Carolina's national championship team, paired off with George Lott to win the national clay court doubles. Bernard Friedman is co-holder of the national junior indoor doubles. This year Hunter Lott, a Carolina student, reached the finals of the national junior squash tournament in Philadelphia, while Friedman competing in the national indoor junior tennis play at New York advanced to the quarter finals.

FETZER, RANSON CALL TRACKMEN FOR MORE WORK

Practice for Indoor Meet, to Take Place Here March 4, Begins For Track Candidates.

Track practice will start today. The Tar Heel track coaches, Fetzer and Ranson, are calling for all candidates to report for their initial workouts this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock on Emerson field.

The early workouts are to get the Carolina tracksters in shape for the coming indoor track conference meet on March 4, to take place here.

Hold Four Records

Since the split in the Southern Conference, the Tar Heels will hold the edge on defending four records, established in past meets. The new Southern Conference holds six of the eleven records, four of which are held by Carolina, the remaining two being held jointly by two southern and one southeastern college.

Carolina holds the records in the 60 yard dash jointly with Ole Miss. The Tar Heels' claim to this sprinting event was established by Charlie Farmer in 1930, later to be tied by Burnett in the 1932 meet. The time is 6.4 seconds. The 440 title is held by Captain Lionel Weil with the time of 54.2, this record being made in the 1931 meet. The mile record was hung up by Clarence Jensen when he ran the event in 4:29.8 minutes in the same meet.

Carolina's other claim to the laurels to be obtained in the indoor meets comes by virtue of the mile relay. In 1931, the relay team composed of Jensen, Marland, Weil, and Drane captured honors for the Tar Heels by setting up the excellent time of 3:38.6 minutes for other relay clubs to break.

The indoor meet this year will be the fourth one that Carolina has been host to its conference guests, but this year it will be to a new conference, one composed of the more northern colleges in Dixie's sport world.

REGULAR FENCING PRACTICE BEGINS THIS AFTERNOON

Candidates for Freshman and Varsity Outfits Advised to Report At 4:00 O'clock.

Carolina's varsity fencers will resume practice this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. All men hoping to gain positions on either the freshman or varsity clubs are urged to be out.

The fencing team will practice on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from now on, pending the formation of the club's schedule. The card should be made up of the usual southern teams which have foil clubs. The annual southern tourney will be conducted this year at V. M. I. It will be remembered by sports fans that Carolina inaugurated fencing tournaments in the south some three years ago when several schools were invited to send teams to a meet here. (Carolina won the title.) There is no conference among the schools boasting sword teams, since no southern combinations would be representative.

Before Christmas, a large number of boys were reporting for practice regularly, and a good number of likely candidates with experience had bolstered the Tar Heels' title hopes.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt says that high public office is bad for the official's children. Well, the G. O. P. is going to do all it can for the Roosevelt children. — San Diego Union.

Coach And Captain Of White Phantoms

Coach Bo Shepard and Captain Wilmer Hines were two important factors in the Tar Heels' opening victory last night in the Tin Can. Coach Shepard is beginning his second year as Head Coach of basketball and his club showed plenty of class last night. Captain Hines is starting his last year as a member of the Phantoms and played a prominent part in the win over the Quakers, scoring 15 points.

Forty-Two Teams Entered In Local Basketball Tournament

RAYMER RETURNS TO COMPETITION FOR LOCAL SQUAD

While Return of Raymer Rounds Out Varsity Team, Freshman Prospects Are Poor.

The return of Furches Raymer yesterday afternoon assured Carolina and Coach Rowe of a formidable standard-bearer in the lightweight ranks and practically completed a line-up that had been otherwise promising but rather disarranged.

Raymer worked out for a while on the bags and then shadow-boxed.

The lineup will probably see Pete Ivey or Cliff Glover at the 119 pound post. These boys have been about equal in ring ability all season; but if there was a slight shade of difference between them, the edge was Glover's and he will see action in the meet against V. P. I. on the 14th.

Marty Levinson will fight in the 125 pound division, with Norm Quarles ready to relieve either Marty or Raymer who will be doing the lightweight fighting.

Nat Lumpkin will be the welterweight, and Lee Berke, with Frank McIntosh as his understudy, will fight in the 155 pound group.

Sam Gidinansky will be regular 165 pounder, Peyton Brown the 175 pounder, and Platt Landis the heavyweight.

Fresh Material Scarce

Freshman Coach Archie Allen sees his predicament grow darker and darker every day. No more than four or five of his boxers have appeared so far; and it now begins to look as though he will have difficulty in getting together a lineup to face V. P. I. on the same night that the varsity does. Even if the boys do come out from now on, the time until the meet is so short that it is doubtful as to whether they will be fit to face such strong opposition as V. P. I. is expected to present.

A dearth of freshman boxers is something unprecedented for Carolina. In past years, Carolina has been noted for its strong frosh scrappers. Last year, they lost but one match to a powerful V. M. I. team. Quarles, Berke, and Gidinansky were stars, all three of them being unbeaten throughout the year. It was hoped that this year would see another powerful array of talent, as the intramurals turned out great prospects, but few of the intramural champs have reported to Coach Allen as yet.

Fraternity and Dormitory Teams To Compete for Crown Won By Ruffin Last Year.

PLAY WILL BEGIN MONDAY

Schnell Announces That Rules of Last Year Will Govern Decisions This Season.

Forty-two teams had been entered yesterday for the 1933 intramural basketball campaign. Twenty-six fraternity and sixteen dormitory and independent outfits were included in this number of contenders for the crown won last year by Ruffin over S. A. E.

Competition will start Monday afternoon in the Tin Can, with six games listed for every afternoon. Each team will play an eight-game schedule over a period of six weeks. After the regular seasons have come to a close, playoffs will be run if necessary and the final winners of the two leagues will meet in a game for the campus championship.

Will Use Old Rules

Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics, revealed yesterday that the games this year will be played according to last season's rules and that the changes adopted this year will be disregarded.

Schnell also announced that an intramural fencing tourney will be staged during this quarter. No definite date has been set for this event, but it is expected to take place sometime about the middle of February.

Candidates for Magazine

All persons wishing to try out for the business staff of the Carolina Engineer, newly organized publication of the engineering school, are asked to meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the senior electrical room in Phillips hall.

QUINLAN WORKS PROTEGES HARD TO TRAIN THEM

Turn Out for Wrestling Improves as Men Reach Peak For State Meet.

Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan, varsity wrestling coach, continued to press his proteges hard, trying to get the men back into top physical form before the coming meet with the N. C. State Wolfpack, in West Raleigh, January 16.

For the past three days, the grappling mentor has been rushing his charges through the stages of conditioning. Each day the workouts are opened by hard calisthenics, followed by work on the mat and then track work.

More Turn Out

The mat coach was more than gratified to see more than two score candidates return for workouts yesterday. The list of aspirants at the first of the week was slim, but now the grappling candidates are beginning to return to the fold in large numbers. However, before Christmas, the athletic association issued equipment to more than eighty mat candidates.

"I will not be satisfied with the attendance to daily workouts until at least more than sixty men of the original eighty come back into the line-up. I still miss a few faces of the most outstanding men." This was Quinlan's statement yesterday afternoon.

Freshman Candidates

The freshmen are coming out in large numbers; and are doing well, despite the general lack of experience. At present the letter-men are out in full force, none being missing from the mat roster, along with some good reserve material.

So far, injuries have not troubled the workouts of either the varsity or freshman clubs. There have been several mat burns and cuts, it is true, but the grappling coach is gratified at the fine shape the men are getting into quickly.

The State team is supposed to be unusually strong and should be one of the hardest teams that the Tar Heels will meet this season. State seems to have the surprise package in the state, and will trouble all wrestling teams.

Graduate Student Makes Talk to Writing Class

Dennis G. Murphy, graduate student in the University, addressed the members of the creative writing class of the University at the weekly seminar of the group in Graham Memorial last night.

The speaker took up several aspects of writing poetry and led the discussion of the class. He is a contributor to some of the leading magazines of the country and has published a volume of his poetry.

VARIED PROGRAM SET FOR ANNUAL DRAMA MEETING

Instructive and Entertaining Convention Has Been Planned For Carolina Theatre Folk.

A varied program has been arranged for the entertainment and instruction of members of the Carolina Dramatic Association who will gather here in the Playmakers theatre Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock for the opening session of the annual convention.

The morning session will be presided over by President George Farrington of Alexander Graham junior high school, Charlotte. After greetings and welcome by Professor Frederick Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, an open forum will be conducted with discussions on playwriting, scenery and lighting, business management, high school dramatics, and Little Theatre organization.

These discussions will be led by Samuel Selden, technical director of the Playmakers, on lighting and scenery; John Parker, of the High Point high school, on high school dramatics; Mrs. Clem Strudwick, of the Hillsboro Little Theatre, on Little Theatre organization; and Professor F. H. Koch of the University on playwriting.

Lecture by Spann

A lecture by Dr. Meno Spann of the University German department on "The Modern German Theatre" will follow the discussions.

After a business session, "Four on a Heath," a one-act play by Foster Fitz-Simons, will be presented by a Playmaker cast.

An original play, given by Durham high school students, will open the afternoon session at 2:30 o'clock. This is directed by Mrs. Raymond Gilliat. This is followed by a stunt by R. J. Reynolds high school, Winston-Salem students under the direction of Miss Hattie Watts; "Pyramus and Thisbe," from Mid-Summer Night's Dream by High Point high school students under the direction of John Parker; and a one-act play by the Playmakers of the Woman's College at Greensboro, under the direction of W. R. Taylor.

Musical Program

Lamar Stringfield, research director of the Folk Music Institute, will introduce a musical program of "Pretty Polly" (and old folk ballad) given by Mrs. Rebecca Jones of Ebenezer, N. C., and "After Mid-Night," (based on "Pretty Polly"), written by Stringfield and played by Carolina Salon Ensemble under the direction of Thor Johnson.

After the afternoon session Mrs. F. W. Hanft and Miss Ellen Stewart will be hostesses at an informal tea in the Green room of the theatre. At 8:30 o'clock the Twelfth Night Revel will start and all guests of the University are invited to this annual Playmaker celebration.

Dr. Groves Pioneers In Social Science With Book On Marriage

ple for life adjustment while offering them no opportunity to gain insight into the meaning of domestic experience upon which they stake so much of their happiness. Although sex cannot be ignored in such a discussion without receiving the contempt of college youth, both men and women, this text does not conceive domestic adjustment as merely sex adjustment. Further the author explains, that he is conscious of "the difficulty of deciding what material to include, how to treat certain problems and what emphasis to give them . . . I have tried to keep in mind the age-level and the purpose of those for whom the book is written."

Contents of Book

In the contents Groves begins with the types of social change that have influenced marriage and family. Building from this foundation he deals respectively with science in its relation to marriage; the purpose of marriage as a convention and sacrament; and the physical right to marry. Explaining the preliminary procedure of choosing one's mate demands many chapters of his books and requires intelligent and careful handling for the subject is delicate. After dealing with the wedding and honeymoon, Groves explains at length the various hazards of marriage life and offers a clear-sighted view into the various ways of avoiding marriage difficulties. The final chapters of his book are devoted to divorce, its reasons and its ineffectiveness, and with the problems of the unmarried.

Press Releases Book On State Vegetation

The University of North Carolina Press has announced the publication of The Natural Gardens of North Carolina, by B. H. Wells, professor of botany at N. C. State.

The book was written to aid in the popular understanding and appreciation of native vegetation of the state, and the material is more practical than technical. Professor Wells has made a new approach to the study of the vegetation of the region. Instead of devoting the usual attention to technical descriptions of plants, he attempts to show the plant in relation to its environment.

Since the book is written for popular use and for amateur gardeners, it is thoroughly illustrated with non-technical photographs by the author.

University Professors Hear Address At Duke

Members of the faculty of the University departments of economics and history attended last night a dinner at Duke University in honor of Professor E. Lipson, well known English economist. The dinner was a joint meeting of the Trinity College historical society and the department of economics of Duke University.

Professor Lipson, who is from New College, Oxford University, is editor of the Economic History Review and is spending the year as a visiting lecturer at Harvard University. His address last evening was on the subject, "New Views of the Industrial Revolution."

Tonight at 7:00 o'clock he will lead an open discussion meeting sponsored by the graduate club of Duke University.

Robinson Portrays Famed Silver King

Edward G. Robinson, star of "Silver Dollar," a First National picture which is playing at the Carolina today, has a role portraying a character which parallels that of Haw Tabor, Colorado's sensational Silver King in the days of the gold rush and silver strikes.

Robinson is cast as a typical westerner who rose from poverty to a multi-millionaire and was a political leader and United States senator.

An unusually strong cast includes Bebe Daniels, Aline MacMahon, Jobyna Howland, De-Will Jennings, Robert Warwick, Russell Simpson, Harry Holman and Charles Middleton.

Woman's Association Plans Next Meeting

The Woman's Association of the University will conduct its first session of the winter quarter Tuesday afternoon, January 17, in Graham Memorial, it was announced by officers of the society yesterday.

Although no outside speakers have been secured for the meeting, an interesting program has been arranged. Miss Parker represented the association at the meeting.

Jack Glace apparently has the makings of an excellent center as soon as he becomes more familiar with college play.

The way Brandt played last night, the center problem is solved. George played the best all-around game defensively and scored eight points. Not bad.

When the Guilford players started bumping Stuart Chandler around, it was like trying to push over the Rock of Gibraltar. They evidently forgot Chandler was all-state fullback.

Markham thrilled the crowd with two seemingly impossible shots, scoring both goals with backhand flips.

McCachren's floorwork is still a thing of beauty. Dave ought to go places this season.

PLAN SEMINAR ON LIBERAL RELIGION HERE THIS MONTH

"Mission Brotherhood" of Universalist Preachers Plan Ten Lectures in This State.

An extensive educational campaign of liberal religion will be conducted in North Carolina during the week of January 15-22, when simultaneous lecture series are to be held in ten cities and towns of the state by members of the newly formed "Mission Brotherhood," a Liberal Preaching Order. The order, which has its headquarters in Boston, is composed of Unitarian and Universalist clergymen who have pledged themselves to do a certain amount of lecturing and teaching each year, and is the first inter-denominational band of liberal mission preachers in all church history.

The ten series of meetings in North Carolina will be conducted with the assistance of the Unitarian Laymen's League, which has held preaching missions during the past eleven years and whose staff preacher, the Rev. Dr. Horace Westwood of Boston, is director of the order. The Rev. Dr. Francis B.
Bishop of Rocky Mount, state superintendent of Universalist churches, is directing the organization work for the missions.

The meetings in Chapel Hill, which will convene in Carolina Inn will take the form of a seminar in liberal religion, conducted by Dean Clarence R. Skinner, of the Crane Theological School of Tufts College, chiefly for students and faculty members of the University. The other places to be visited are as follows:
Asheville, Winston-Salem, Wilmington, Greensboro, Goldsboro, Durham, High Point, Raleigh, and Rocky Mount.

DEAN BRADSHAW URGES COURAGE

Freshman Assembly Speaker Tells of Needy Students as Evinced by Letters.

The first freshman assembly of the winter quarter was conducted yesterday by Harry F.
Comer. The speaker for the period was Dean F. F. Bradshaw, who first spoke briefly on getting a fresh start this quarter and then spoke mainly to those under financial or other difficulties.
He said that the correspondence he had received last week seemed to indicate that a large percentage of the students were either sons of widows, one of a family of ten, had lived on a mortgaged farm or else had just been moved from one.

Dean Bradshaw emphasized the fact that courage was necessary in times like these when the majority of students are finding it difficult to stay in school. He closed his talk by saying that intestinal fortitude was the most important thing in life.

At the next assembly period,
Monday, R. B. House will deliver a message from the president's office.

Feature Board

All present members of the feature board on THE DAILY TAR HEEL must report at the office this morning at 10:30 o'clock for a short conference with the chairman.

GRAIL SCHEDULES SATURDAY DANCES

Three dances this quarter will be offered by the Order of the Grail. Definite plans have been made for the first dance for Saturday, January 14, which will take place in the gymnasium.
The music will be provided by Nick Laney and his Blue Devils from Duke.

Dances given during the fall quarter were well attended, realizing a profit of between $500 and $600 dollars. Returns were to have gone for the new Carolina song, but as nothing has ever been done about this matter, the money will probably be contributed to the loan fund.

DRAMATISTS WILL TAKE STATE TOUR IN LAST QUARTER

Three Original Plays Will Be Presented on First Trip
In Three Years.

Returning after an absence of two years, the annual tour of the Carolina Playmakers will be conducted again this year for the twenty-ninth time.

The last tour was made from April 18 to 30, 1930. Conditions in 1931 and 1932, however, prohibited any exhibitions out of school. A quartet of plays were presented on the 1930 tour, No-Count Boy by Paul Green, Job's Kinfolks and Black Water, by Loretto Carroll Bailey, and Ma-nolia's Man by Gertrude Wills.
Coffin were presented.

Three plays will be presented on the 1933 tour. These are Davy Crockett, Half Horse, Half Alligator by John Philip Millhouse; Four on a Heath, a grotesque by Foster Fitz-Simons; and Stumbling in Dreams, a folk comedy of Tin Pan Alley by George Brown. All three of these plays have been successfully presented in Chapel Hill.

All leading characters who appeared in the plays here will retain their roles, but there will be doubles for other parts. Fifteen Playmakers will make the trip in a thirty-two passenger bus.

Scenery and lighting effects used in the productions here will be carried on the tour.

The complete itinerary has not been arranged. Raleigh, Greenville, and Wilmington have definitely been booked for presentations, while Goldsboro, Ash-boro, and Southern Pines will possibly be included. Carolinians in the east will have an opportunity to see the plays this year, since the last tour was made in the western part of the state.

Dormitory Banquet

The first of the dormitory smokers will be conducted next Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock when residents of Lewis dormitory will meet in the banquet room in Graham Memorial for a round-table talk and refreshments. Following the smoker the students will attend a show at the Carolina theatre as guests of the manager, E. Carrington Smith.

Rushing Resumed

Pledging of new men by the fraternities may be done at any time, according to the interfraternity council. All invitations of this sort must be handled through the dean's office in the same method that was used during the fall rushing.

Dr. Odum Aids In Research Work Of Committee On Social Trends

Head of Department of Sociology at University Was Assistant Director of Research on Executive Staff of Hoover's Group Studying Country's Social Conditions.

When President Hoover said:
"It is the first attempt ever made to study simultaneously all of the fundamental social facts which underlie all our social problems," he referred to the newly published volumes Recent Social Trends in the United States which is the result of three years of study by many of the leading social workers in the country and the expenditure of $1,000,000 or more.

In September, 1925, President Hoover authorized the organization of the Research Committee on Social Trends whose purpose was "to examine and report upon recent social trends in the United States, with a view to providing such a review as might supply a basis for the formulation of large national policies looking to the next phase in the nation's development."

Dr. Howard W. Odum, head of the University's sociology department, was one of the prominent members of the committee appointed by the president to promote the research. Not only was Dr. Odum a member of the committee but he was appointed assistant director of research on the executive staff.

Odum on Committee

For three years the committee worked on a study of social condition in the United States.
A composite work of all the sociologists includes a study of the population of the United States, the manner of the utilization of the country's natural wealth, the influence on the country of invention and discovery, and agencies of communication in this country.

In the first volume are chapters on the trends in economic organization and shifting occupations, a study of education and changing social attitudes and interests, and the rise of metropolitan communities. Other subjects treated in the first volume are rural life, the status of racial and ethnic groups, the vitality of American people, the family and its functions, and the activities of women outside the home.

Second Volume of Work

The second volume continues the subjects discussed in the first. Chapters on childhood and youth, labor groups in the social structure, people as consumers, recreation and leisure time activities, the arts in social life, and changes in religious organizations are contained in this volume. The volume also contains a study of the health and medical practice, crime and punishment, privately supported social work, and a chapter by Dr.
Odum on public welfare activities. The concluding chapters deal with the growth of governmental functions, taxation and public finance, public administration, law and legal institutions, and finally the relation between the government and society.

This survey was made under the direction of the committee by twenty-eight authorities in the field of social work. These were aided by a staff of collaborators and research assistants comprising 117 of the nation's leading educators, scientists, and sociologists. This body of experts made separate surveys of

Poor Reception In Chapel Hill Due To Radios Not Atmosphere

Research by University Consolidated Service Plants Mechanic Reveals That Campus Enjoys All Advantages for Good Reception Afforded by Any Section of State.

When crackling and smashing are heard inharmoniously along with the best dance orchestras and when the voice of your favorite comedian fades into nothingness just as he gets to the point of his joke, don't yield to that first impulse of shouting in censorable terms against the atmosphere of Chapel Hill which seems to be responsible for the failure of programs to "come in" properly.

Look to your radio set instead for Chapel Hill gets just as good radio reception as any place in the state; no better as claimed by the owners of the numerous midget sets that have ranges out of all proportion to their size, and no worse, as claimed by the owners whose sets are dragging out the tenth year of their existence.

Radio Phenomenon Found

An interesting fact was disclosed by the radio mechanic of the University Consolidated Service Plants, who at one time or another tends to the ills of nearly all the radios in town. Reception on Rosemary street, he noted, was for some unaccountable reason not as good as in the rest of the town. Since there are no electrical plants in the vicinity that might interfere with reception, this is an unexplained mystery.

The contention of the physics department that radio reception was normal when compared with the state as a whole was borne out by statements from a number of students, faculty, and others. The radio at Spencer hall, which often sees overtime duty, was reported as getting Guy Lombardo, Hal Kemp, the Lucky Strike Orchestra, and Isham Jones without any difficulty. The radio at President Graham's home has been little troubled by atmospheric conditions, and except for occasional "fading" has been hearing stations from Denver to Mexico clearly. The consensus of opinion from the students as a whole has been that the radios in their dormitories and fraternity houses work not only efficiently but too well.

Best Reception in Winter

The best reception is in the winter time. Cold, dry nights offer ideal conditions. However, reception during the summer is unusually good, although it is often marred by electric storms that bring on that bane of all programs, static.

Those who have been experimenting with short wave sets have found atmospheric conditions quite normal and have no trouble in getting stations clearly from all parts of the country.

PLAYMAKERS WILL TRY OUT MONDAY

Tryouts for Shaw's comedy
You Never Can Tell, the next Carolina Playmaker production, will be conducted in the Playmaker theatre Monday at 4:30 and 7:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday.

You Never Can Tell will be presented on February 2, 3, and 4, as a part of the Playmakers'
Shaw-Henderson program. A public address by Dr. Archibald
Henderson, "George Bernard Shaw as a World Power," and an exhibit of Shaw posters from European theatres, will begin the lecture program on January 29.

DRAMA GROUP TO CONDUCT ANNUAL REVELS TONIGHT

Playmakers to Convene for Business Meetings on Morning and Afternoon Before Fete.

A full round of activities has been scheduled for the Playmakers theatre today when the members of the Carolina Dramatic Association will gather for their annual meeting in the morning and afternoon and Playmakers old and new will celebrate the annual Twelfth Night Revels tonight.

The morning session of the association's meeting will begin at 10:30 o'clock with an address of welcome by Professor Frederick
H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers. Following this will be discussions of playwrit-ing, scenery and lighting, business management, high school dramatics and little theatre movements.

After a business session will be the presentation of Four on a Heath, one-act play by Foster
Fitz-Simons.

Durham School Play

An original play given by students of Durham high school will open the afternoon session and will be followed by a stunt by the Winston-Salem high school while High Point high school students will offer "Pyra-mus and Thisbe" from Mid-Summer Night's Dream and the

HAPGOOD INJURED; MITCHELL CHOSEN TO LECTURE HERE

Open Forum Lecturer Accidentally Shot and Political Economist Will Replace Him.

Dr. Broadus Mitchell, associate professor of political economy at Johns Hopkins University, famous authority on the rise of industrial problems in the south, has agreed to speak here during the open forum discussion series in the place of Powers Hapgood, who was accidentally shot by a gun held in the hands of a friend, during target practice near his home in Indianapolis, Ind. A blood transfusion and an emergency operation have probably saved Mr.
Hapgood's life, but he will be unable to keep any of his engagements as a lecturer in this and other cities this year.

Dr. Mitchell will speak at 8:00 o'clock, January 12, on "The American Scene: 1932."

Studies Social Change

Dr. Mitchell has for many years been interested in social change. Beginning as a newspaper man, after graduating from the University of South Carolina, his natural bent led him into the study of political economy. He received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Johns Hopkins University, and became a teacher of political economy, and studied the rise of industrialism in the south.

His writings include: The Rise of Cotton Mills in the South, (Johns Hopkins Press); Frederick Law Olmsted, A Critic of the Old South, also published by the Johns Hopkins Press, and William Gregg, Factory Master of the Old South which was pub-

ORGANISTS PLAN CONTEST IN MAY

Students' Contest Scheduled by American Guild of Organ-ists at State Meet.

The sixth annual students organ contest, sponsored by the North Carolina chapter of the American Guild of Organists, will be conducted in Chapel Hill,
May 8, in connection with the annual meeting of that organization.

Entrance enrollments are being made by students who are residents of this state with Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, instructor in piano and organ, who is the dean of the North Carolina Guild and who is acting chairman of the contest committee. Any organ student who is under twenty-five years of age and who is a resident of this state is eligible for entrance in the contest.

Inaugurated in 1927

At the annual meeting of the North Carolina chapter of the American Guild of Organists at St. Mary's College, Raleigh, in April, 1927, it was unanimously decided that the chapter would thereafter sponsor a contest for organ students to be conducted in connection with the annual meeting of the chapter each spring.

The contest is intended to encourage young musicians to study the pipe organ, and to raise the standard of proficiency among the organists of the state.

A Properly Conducted Course

A course entirely different in its structure from the others in the curriculum has recently been opened for registration. Although this course carries absolutely no credit towards a diploma, nevertheless the subject-matter which it will contain is as essential for a thorough education as that contained in any required course in the University. It is being presented in the form of an eight-lecture course being sponsored by the Council for Student Expression.

The teaching staff of this new course will consist of authorities on the questions of finances, labor problems, international relations, power trusts, unemployment, and social adjustments. And for this reason it might well be considered as a course in current problems. To those who decide to register for the course by buying tickets to the eight-lecture series, the instruction obtained will be invaluable to the understanding of problems that are daily being discussed in these fields.

The method to be employed in the presentation of the material differs fundamentally from that usually followed by professors. Rather than deliver the lecture giving only one side of the question, this eight-lecture course will present both sides, with one lecturer offering each side.

In this type of presentation the course takes on more of the nature of a discussion between the two speakers, and as a consequence the class is able to judge the merits of each side, and then come to its own conclusion.

In too many college courses, the professor sees fit to discuss only his viewpoint, which as a result of his research appears to be the logical, leaving little to imagination of the student.

The system which will be used in this eight-lecture course should prove not only interesting, but also quite instructive, from the standpoint of variety of opinions offered. Those persons who do not take advantage of this course are letting pass a rare opportunity to gain a knowledge of current problems, which can be gained in no other way.

The Case for The University

The most unfortunate result of the depression that we are now experiencing is the fact that the classes and institutions most injured are those least responsible for the conditions from which they suffer. The most apparent example of this is the state of the University of North Carolina where repeated budget and salary reductions are fair on their way to reduce a once celebrated school to a level of low mediocrity. Protestation against the reduction of the University's finances is an old story. It has gone on since the legislature embarked upon its insidious policy of punishing higher education for errors made in the handling of state finances. Protests, however, have served only to spur on the destruction and the salary slashing goes on.

The inevitable is only too obvious. It means that we must sink eventually into the sorry oblivion of an unknown, provincial, and inferior institution, and the sage legislators have started us well on our way. It seems neither fair nor just that what diligent and far seeing men have built up through measureless effort and unselfish labor may be torn down over night at the whim of a group of men holding office for a short term, but long enough to destroy the fruit of a hundred and fifty years of striving and endeavor.

The state legislature cannot be blind to the results of their economies at the University's expense. Already too many valuable men have left and others will soon follow. Our libraries and other departments cannot keep abreast with the demands for new books and new equipment. Carolina hovers on the moment of stagnation that presages inevitable decay if our means of life are not restored.

There can be no exaggerating the unhappy predicament we are in. There can be no shutting our eyes to the plight that friends of the oldest state university know exist. There is, however, no recourse. Pleas have been fruitless. There is no power to which we can turn for succor. We have no course but to sit and wait and hope that the men who have the welfare of Carolina in their hands will realize that North Carolina cannot be restored to prosperity through economies in the University that will aid the state hardly at all while doing irreparable damage to the school. We must remain idle, praying to be saved from a disastrous descent into the gloom out of which we have so painfully emerged at the cost of sweat and tears that now, alas, seem to have been in vain.—J.F.A.

Lifting the White Man's Burden

According to a group of engineers and economists who call themselves technocracy, it is high time that laboring man knocked off work and called it a day. This organization was begun in 1918 during the height of productive activity caused by the World War and was headed by one Howard Scott, whose researches in the field of economics and whose theories of energy have created quite a furor. Technocracy has been engaged since that time in surveying and measuring the productive energy of North America.

The human race, say the technocrats, may soon enjoy the fruits of its centuries of toil and acquisition of capital goods. One of their startling discoveries shows that in the past century our ability to produce has multiplied something like nine million times, and the bulk of this increase has come within the past thirty years. In fact, the

By DON SHOEMAKER

Peace Comes To Indiana

Indiana too, it seems, has its troubles of state. A dispatch to metropolitan newspapers from the Hoosier state relates the trials of one James Carpenter, chief of the automobile license division in the Secretary of State's office. Indiana, just arrived in the ranks of Democracy, has found her license bureau a veritable Jacksonian spoils system for aspiring politicians desirous of obtaining license numbers in the first twenty. In Indiana one is a big shot if his license number is under four, a minor boss if it is below fifty, and a good deserving politician if the number contains less than three digits.

The governor and the secretary of state were given their customary Nos. 1 and 2 plates, but number three just couldn't be placed to the satisfaction of everybody. U. S. Senator-elect Van Nuys thought that he ought realization of technocracy, they claim, is inevitable, for the rapid and continued increase of this productive power, without means to utilize it, will necessitate a drastic reconstruction of our present economic system. And work as a moral virtue will cease because of lack of necessity for it.

Among the benefits that the wide-spread activities of technocracy promises are a substitute for wool made possible by the cultivation and use of a new fiber, "ramie," which surpasses wool in durability and grows about three times as fast as cotton; an automobile which is guaranteed to run 350,000 miles without need for repairs; and a razor blade that lasts a lifetime. And these products can be manufactured at a cost only slightly above the present one—at least low enough to more than warrant their production.

Henry Ford's activities in favor of a five-day week has nothing on the technocrats. They go him one better by proposing a four-day week, and, still better news for the tired business man, he will only have to work four hours per day.—A.T.D.

United and Standing

With Democracy at the peak of its strength for the first time in decades throughout the country, Governor Ehringhaus may contemplate a tenure of office in which the affairs of government may progress smoothly and efficiently with the cooperation of a uniformly sympathetic government. With more than thirty out of forty-eight governors elected on the Democratic ticket, in many cases together with Democratic legislatures, party conflict is stilled for three years while the nation and the states go about the difficult task of finding the way out of our puzzling labyrinth of civic trials.

North Carolina finds herself at the outset of 1933 with many problems of utmost importance before the administration. In declaring that conditions were at their lowest ebb since reconstruction days, Governor Ehringhaus appraises the situation in perfect clarity. With an unbalanced budget, a public debt of almost unprecedented proportions, and unemployment and other social and industrial evils more pronounced, the state indeed faces a dark chapter in her tumultuous history.

Happily, North Carolina and many other states may present an united front, unbroken by political disharmony. Divided we have fallen. Arise we must—and together.—D.C.S.

to have number three, but both Democratic State Chairman Peers and Lieutenant-Governor-elect Townsend shared the same opinion. Finally gave the Democratic state chairman number 3 (he's had it before: last year the triumphant Republican Sec'y of State softened and gave him number 3), Mr. Van Nuys then was given a number 2 plate with a cute little star just like the governor, and Mr. Townsend got a number 3 plate with a star. Everybody, we report, is pretty happy. All five big shots are in the first three.

Riot

In Cincinnati police headquarters one day last week an excited police captain marshalled his men into three squad cars and hurried to the scene of a riot. "There's a riot at McMillan and Woodburn avenue," someone had shouted over the telephone. With sirens screaming the squad cars rushed to the scene of the disturbance. On the corner were fifty people, milling about. Fists clenched resolutely about night sticks, the policemen made their way toward the crowd. In the middle of the group was a tiny kitten, pushing a large spool across the sidewalk.

Spring

We are happy to report that we have discovered the cause for the demonstration in front of Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon under the trees on that part of the campus. A hundred or so students gathered under several large trees to gaze skyward, not at a captive balloon, nor an autogyro, but a family of six squirrels engaged in a domestic fracas. Crowd stayed for the better part of an hour (several brought out chairs from New Dorms) and then gradually drifted away muttering about the spring weather.

With Contemporaries

Scrappy New Year?

We sent you our wishes for a Merry Christmas and a balanced budget for 1933, Mr. Roosevelt. We're tempted to withdraw the latter if it's really so that you're responsible for the Democratic party's shift to a sales tax.

They said, the skeptics, that you couldn't play ball on both sides at once—that the few who put up the money for your campaign and the many who put up the votes could not be served, completely. And they said, for proof, that you'd be for a sales tax in spite of talking about income and inheritance taxes when you sold yourself to the common citizen. Were you sold in advance to others than the people?

It's too early to judge a March president by what a December congress does, Franklin D., so this session is just a warming up for "the people's party." But if you choose to add a tax on the cost of living instead of on the cost of making money—well, we can promise you a scrappy new year.

Maybe the sales tax will balance the budget—and maybe it will unbalance those who have to balance the budget. Its only value, as we see it, is to make citizens take an active interest in their government—perhaps, unfortunately, a belligerent one. Don't expose yourself to any boomerang from your remark last April that "Nothing so frightens the unfaithful or inefficient official than the threat that citizens may become politically minded."—Daily Iowan.

Essentials of Business Man

The question of what are the requirements of a successful business man arose among a group of college students. Various answers were given, all embodying the same idea that every person who wishes to accomplish anything must have perseverance, initiative, and punctuality. As the group disbanded, all but two members requested that they be called for breakfast at the proper hour.

That is the request which at least one-half of the University students leave as they retire each night. It will be exceedingly hard for these students to be the "early bird" when they enter the business world. A day "well begun is half done," and to those people who fail to arise in time for breakfast, without the services of a "call boy" are not strengthening their character, during the formative years of their lives.

It takes will power to get out of a warm bed into a cold, semi-dark room, but it develops a constructive and beneficial habit that in the long run pays dividends.—Daily Kansan.

Voluntary Classroom Attendance

Education is becoming a major student activity at the University of Chicago under the new system of voluntary classroom attendance and comprehensive examinations, according to Dean Chauncey S. Boucher, who spoke for the faculty in a recent interview.

The attainment of such a goal in student interest long has been the ambition of educators. Much public criticism, in part exaggerated, has been directed toward the fact that anything but scholarship seemed to be the aim of thousands of young men and young women who attended colleges and universities.

A year's test of Chicago's experimental departure has brought gratifying experiences and results. Students who entered the university under the new plan have proved to be ten per cent higher in scholastic aptitude than the average of three prior classes at entrance. The health authorities of the institution give them a better physical rating. That the old instructional and examination system wasted time for some students has been demonstrated by the fact that in the last year fourteen passed one or more of the comprehensive examinations without taking the courses which led up to them.

One gratifying evidence of student interest is to be found in the fact that although attendance at classes is no longer required, regularity in attendance has not suffered. Demands for pretests, additional lectures, longer library hours, and tutorial conferences with professors have given further proof that the new educational methods are whetting the student appetite for scholarship. Obtaining enough credits to get by, an endeavor to which much lazy ingenuity has been applied in the past, gives way to desire for the real values of education.—Chicago Daily News.

Something Must Be Done

Many criticisms of American universities—some of them just, some unjust—are being made today, but one attack which just cuts us to the quick was written by Bernardine Freeman in the Journal of the National Educational Association. Under the title of "Is This Education?" Miss Freeman presents several points, which we reprint here with what seem to us to be suitable comments.

"I can solve a quadratic equation, but I cannot keep my bank balance straight." She probably forgets to add on the two-cent federal tax; we thought our banker had forgotten all his college training until he reminded us of this little matter.

"I can read Goethe's 'Faust' in the original, but I cannot ask for a piece of bread in German." Miss Freeman might console herself with the thought that she probably wouldn't be able to get a piece of bread in Germany now anyway, with conditions what they are.

"I can name the kings of England since the War of Roses, but I do not know the qualifications of the candidates in the coming election." Most people who couldn't name one of these kings had the same trouble—even after reading all about the candidates.

"I know the economic theories of Malthus and Adam Smith, but I cannot live within my income." Living within one's income has nothing to do with the theories of these two economists; it is a matter of common sense, which educators admit they cannot teach to some persons.

"I can recognize the 'leit-motif' of a Wagner opera, but I cannot sing in tune." Since when has it been the duty of a university to teach its students to sing.

"I can explain the principle of hydraulics, but I cannot fix a leak in the kitchen faucet." Perhaps Miss Freeman should have gone to a trade school and taken up plumbing.

"I can read the plays of Moliere." (Continued on last page)

Carolina Still Favored to Win Despite Wildcats' Improvement in Floor Play.

Carolina's basketball team will receive sterner opposition tonight when they meet Davidson at Charlotte in the opening Big Five contest.

The Wildcats at the start of the season were faced with the worst basketball prospects in years and lost three pre-Christmas games to the Charlotte Y. However, latest reports from Charlotte say that the Wildcats were a greatly improved club Thursday night when they dropped a 44-30 decision to Furman, one of the finest cage outfits in the Palmetto state.

Beat Jinx Last Year

Carolina overcame a two year jinx last season by taking Davidson in the Charlotte contest. Previously the Wildcats had nosed out the Phantoms on two occasions. Tonight the Shepard-coached quintet will be a top-heavy favorite to score its first Big Five victory of the season, although the game is not going to be a runaway as first expected.

With tonight's contest the Tar Heels settle down to their Big Five and Southern conference schedule. Thursday the freshman and varsity sweep into action against Wake Forest in the Tin Can and the following night engage their first conference opponent, V. P. I.

Captain Bruce Peabody of Davidson ranks with the state's best guards and is a dangerous scoring threat along with Holland at center and Harris at forward. For other good men Davidson can call on Lafferty, Ross, and McLean, forwards; West, center; and Wagner, Dickerson, and Boucher, guards.

The Tar Heels hope to be able to get a line on most of their material under the fire of Big Five competition.

The other leading candidates are Bill Markham, letterman, and Bill Beale, Morris Long, and Ernest Blood, youngsters, at forward; Ivan Glace, lanky sophomore center; and Stuart Chandler, Dave Henry, and Charlie Jones, monogram men, and Bucky Harris and Gene Zaiser, youngsters, at guard.

KENTUCKY 'CATS MAY BE CHAMPS WITH HEELS OUT

Blue Grass Cagers Favorites in Southern Conference With Carolina Absent From Tourney.

University of Kentucky cagers may be installed as Southeast champs this winter, but if they are, it'll probably be due to the absence of North Carolina teams.

In the past three tourneys of the then decrepit and now exploded Southern Intercollegiate Conference, a fast, tall, and accurate firing quint blew in from the Blue Grass state. In each of the past three tourneys clubs from the Old North State have eliminated the 'Cats with clock-like precision.

The year 1930 saw Duke's Blue Devils bowl over the highly publicized 'Cat aggregation of that year in the semi-finals, 37-33. A couple of years ago, the Kentucky team came down to Atlanta, highly touted, only to drop the championship to the

TECH'S TRAINER SUCCEEDS HAMM

Mike Chambers, who is known throughout the south as Georgia Tech's famous trainer, will succeed Eddie Hamm, famed Olympic track star, as coach of the Tech Yellow Jackets' track team this spring.

Chambers has been connected with the Engineers' athletic personnel for more than a decade. During that time he has served in the capacity of an assistant track mentor. Chambers coached at Ohio State and University of Iowa at Ames prior to coming south to his job in Atlanta.

Hamm will be remembered by southern sports fans as the great broad-jumper who smashed all records existing both in college and in the Olympics at Amsterdam. He is resigning his position to take up a job in the business world at Atlanta.

During the past four years, track stock, like all other stock holdings, has decidedly fallen. The Tech track team this year is hoped to have the best material in many seasons and should go far in the new Southeastern conference grouping.

CLEVELAND INDIANS AID GRASS WITH ELECTRICITY

In order to facilitate growth of grass on the diamond of the Cleveland Indians, fast American league baseball club, the owners of the team have conscripted scientists to use their ability in the cause.

After much thought and meditation on the project, the scientists claimed that they could make the grass grow quickly and have a healthy crop, provided electric cables were used on the job. Money was no question, and the Indians will have not only one "hot" corner at third—but lots of them, all over the diamond.

STAR CAGER LOST TO STATE COLLEGE TEAM

Jimmie Brown, star forward at N. C. State, has been declared ineligible.

Dr. Arthur J. Wilson, chairman of the athletic council of the Raleigh institution, announced this setback to State cage hopes Wednesday. Brown, who was rated by many court authorities as an all-state man last year, did not comply with the one-year residence rule of the Southern Conference since he was absent from school last quarter. His absence was felt heavily in the George Washington and Catholic University encounters this week.

BOWLING, PING-PONG AND POOL TOURNEYS PLANNED

Tentative plans are being made by the directors of Graham Memorial to conduct tournaments in ping-pong, pool, and bowling this quarter. The ping-pong tables have been painted and the bowling alleys have been completely refinished.

There is a possibility that bowling may become an intramural sport, according to the plans now being considered by the managers of intramural athletics.

Maryland outfit, who came out winners of the tourney.

Carolina did the trick last year. The local team came within an ace of winning the Dixie crown after defeating Kentucky 43-42 in a heart-breaking quarter-final go.

FIFTY GRAPPLERS IN WORKOUT FOR STATE MAT TILT

Carolina Wrestlers Are Shaping Up For Meet With Wolfpack at Raleigh January 16.

The Tar Heel mat club went through its paces again yesterday with more than fifty candidates taking part. The first part of the workout consisted of a stiff calisthenic drill which lasted a good five minutes. Then the grappling mentor showed the men some new wrestling holds. The holds were later put into common practice by pairing off on the mat for the practical use. Following the tiffs on the mats, the candidates took some work on the track to get their leg muscles in shape.

The Tar Heel grapplers will open their mat schedule Monday week, January 16, meeting the N. C. State Wolfpack in their lair at Frank Thompson gymnasium, West Raleigh. This meet will be a double bill affair, the combined varsity and yearling teams participating.

All the lettermen were out yesterday although Thad Hussey, varsity 115-pounder, is suffering from a bad case of boils on his arms. No other injuries stalked in the camp of the mat men.

ALUMNI DEMAND FIRING OF COACH

Former Carolina Football Star Leads Move to Hire Only Alumni As Coaches.

At last the "let's fire our coaches" bug has bitten the University alumni, and now one Marvin "Philly" Ritch, Charlotte lawyer, who played on Carolina's football teams and is credited with starting basketball here, is heading alumni to a general housecleaning of the Tar Heels' coaching staff.

Ritch said, in a statement published in the Charlotte News, "I have favored for five years a coaching staff made up of alumni of the University; and that excludes me, not includes!" He emphatically declared that his move is not just beginning, but is being taken seriously by alumni.

The Charlotte barrister proposes that the Carolina staff be fired outright. Washington and Lee, V. P. I., and Florida have cleared their coaching departments and now have coaching staffs composed of former alumni. Ritch listed Harry Schwartz, Ray Farris, Nemo Coleman, and Casey Morris as possible coaches for Carolina. Schwartz captained a Carolina team in 1928, while Farris won all-American honors as a captain in 1929. Coleman is coaching at Asheville School for Boys with some degree of success. Morris is selling insurance in Shelby.

When asked what he meant by his housecleaning proposal, Ritch stated: "I'm looking for the athletic council up there to represent us alumni, to act like they know what they're doing. I'm after retiring the members if we think we don't need them and cleaning out the whole set up."

Ritch was asked if he thought his ideas would be carried out. "Not necessarily mine," he answered, "but there will be some kind of a 'new deal' and it's coming this spring or fall."

Plans toward carrying out this move are believed to be up before alumni group meetings throughout the state while prominent alumni are being sought for indorsing the action.

The news that 25-cent George Washington coins are now in circulation leads us to believe that we can look for financial relief from a new quarter.—Pathfinder (Washington).

In Fightin' Trim

Marty Levinson is the scrappy 125-pounder on whom Coach Crayton Rowe is counting heavily during the coming ring season. Marty is entering his third and last year as a member of the boxing team and from pre-season indications, the speedy little brawler is set for a banner year.

FIGHT PROSPECTS BETTER AS THREE VETERANS RETURN

Varsity Boxers Put in Hard Week's Work in Preparation For Match With V. P. I.

The week's boxing activities came to a close yesterday afternoon with the newly returned Tom Parsons giving notice that he is to be reckoned with as a two-fisted menace to anyone in the opposite corner.

Parsons, a middleweight on the 1931 team, was punching hard and straight yesterday and he impressed the ring worms with his classy exhibition. His performance was the outstanding one of the afternoon and it showed that his presence will be an added source of comfort to Coach Crayton Rowe this winter.

Veterans Return

The highlights of the week were the unexpected appearances of Furches Raymer, Peyton Brown, and Platt Landis, three fighters to bring joy into the heart of any boxing coach. Brown and Raymer are veterans of last year's fighting while Landis fought here the year before.

All three looked fairly good in training bouts considering their long absence from the ring. With another five days of training left before the V. P. I. meet, they should have most of the rough spots smoothed out and be ready for three hard rounds at the hands of the Blacksburg scrappers.

Raymer and Brown each can boast of something like a record in intercollegiate boxing. In Brown's freshman year, he won six fights by knockouts and six knockouts in as many starts is rare in collegiate record books. Raymer holds a 45-second knockout over Bill Towler of V. P. I. to his credit and this quick finish is regarded as one of the quickest ever recorded in a Southern Conference tournament.

Freshmen Look Good

Three undefeated stars of last year's freshman team are humming merrily along to the conclusion of pre-season training. Norm Quarles, Lee Berke, and Sam Gidansky look even better than they did last year in establishing a spotless score for the winter's work.

TAR BABY TEAM BACK IN ACTION

Dameron's Frosh Basketeers Start Practice for Opener With Wake Forest.

After a slight layoff during the Christmas holidays, Coach Sandy Dameron had the Tar Baby basketeers back at practice yesterday and has sent them through one of the toughest workouts of the year.

With the first battle, which is against Wake Forest, only a week off, Coach Dameron has been running his men hard in an effort to get them in tip-top condition. The starting line-up is still a little uncertain in one or two positions. Jim McCachren and Red Phelps have just about cinched the two guard positions. Both are outstanding floor-men and are fast enough to add strength to the offense.

Nelson at Forward

Melvin Nelson has shown the most at forward so far and will probably start in one of the forward positions. He is exceptionally fast and a dead shot at the basket. The other forward position is a race between Bill Moore, Herman Snyder, and Ernest McKeithan, with Moore holding the edge at present.

Murry Kanner will likely get the call for center but he is being pushed for the position by Bill Rankin, Frank Orr, and Morris Rhodes. Many others will probably get a chance in the first game to show what they can do and may replace some of the first string mentioned.

Coach Dameron has been giving his men shooting and passing drills. The Tar Babies have been practicing their various plays. They finished the night with a snappy scrimmage, with most of the squad getting in action. Practices will be carried on at night except on the days of a varsity contest, when the freshmen practice in the afternoon.

was much better yesterday with Max Frucht, Eugene Eusler, Harold Blalock, Jim Flaherty, Mort Ellisberg, and Murray Kanner out swinging gloves for him. Ben Kalb, 135-pound intramural title winner, is lost to Coach Allen for the season, leaving the 145-pound division empty as Allen was going to use Kalb there.

Murry Kanner looked good against several varsity men as did Morty Ellisberg. Kanner is a great prospect as his height and reach make him almost impossible to hit. Ellisberg is powerful and smart and has possibilities.

Coach Kenfield and Duke Coach Enlisting Students for Big Combined Match.

DUKE MEN ENTHUSIASTIC

All Registered Students, Irrespective of Class, Are Eligible to Compete.

J. F. Kenfield, tennis coach, yesterday stated that there is to be a giant tennis match between the combined forces of Duke and Carolina. This match is scheduled to take place at the beginning of the spring quarter.

Coach Kenfield also said that every registered student of the University, whether he be freshman, senior, or graduate student, is eligible for the match. Everyone who wishes to will be allowed to play, there being as many places on the team as there are entrants.

This type of giant tennis match is entirely new, never having been tried before in college. The outcome should be interesting.

Members of both the freshman and varsity squads are eligible, the only restrictions being that each team have the same number of players.

Coach Gregory, Duke tennis coach, said that this match had aroused a great deal of interest among the students of Duke and that he, himself, was greatly interested in the outcome. The Duke students have already started practicing for the match.

Motorists Get Bad Treatment In Other States

Two Chapel Hill Residents Subjected to Arrest for Not Displaying New Licenses.

The state police of both Virginia and Maryland arrested residents of Chapel Hill on New Year's Day because they still had 1932 license tags on their cars, seized the cars, and demanded money as fines, although North Carolina allowed five days' grace for the affixing of the new 1933 tags.

Professor Arrested

Raymond Adams, professor of English in the University, accompanied by his colleague, A. C. Howell, was returning on New Year's day from the meeting of the Modern Language Association in New Haven. He was arrested by an officer of the Maryland state police at the little settlement of Barlington, a few miles northeast of Baltimore. Dr. Adams demanded to be taken before the trooper's superior officer, and they drove back to the police station at Conowingo Dam to interview Sergeant C. E. Minick.

Dr. Adams introduced himself and Dr. Howell as professors in the University and explained that North Carolina allowed five days of grace for the affixing of 1933 tags. The sergeant consulted a paper, shook his head ominously, and said the Maryland police had no record of any such indulgence. "You'll have to pay $13.40," he said, and Dr. Adams paid him the money. Finally the professors persuaded him to consult state authorities in Raleigh by telephone. They put in a call to Revenue Commissioner A. J. Maxwell, and within two minutes Maxwell had satisfied the sergeant. The police were then all apologies, and Sergeant Minick gave Dr. Adams a certificate, on official stationery, to the effect that the government of North Carolina had O.K.'d the use of the 1932 tag for the return home.

Meanwhile the professors' car had been impounded in a garage. It was returned to him, along with his $13.40, and he came on home.

Pullen Fined

Linwood Pullen, a barber, a native of Virginia, was held up with his wife and sister on the road from Lexington to Lynchburg, about two miles from Big Island. The state trooper took him into Big Island to a justice of the peace; Pullen offered to pay for a telegram to the North Carolina authorities to confirm his statement as to the five days of grace allowed in this state, but the J. P. said the confirmation wouldn't make any difference—that Pullen had to pay $14.40, as a fine and costs, and then would have to leave his car until he could get the new 1933 license tags.

The J. P. issued a summons; the state trooper who had made the arrest took the travelers into Lynchburg, and there they had to leave the car and take a bus home. The bus trip cost them $12.50, and now Pullen must go back to Virginia with his new tags in order to recover his car.

Med School Applications

Dean I. H. Manning of the University medical school has issued a statement to the effect that all applications for admission to the medical school next fall be sent in as soon as possible. These applications must be sent in before the end of this quarter.

Depression Fails To Decrease Enrollment

Despite the economic depression and adverse conditions, a report issued yesterday from the registrar's office shows that 125 more students are registered for the winter quarter than for the same period last year. 2,441 students have been formally registered for the University courses. It is expected, however, that there will be several more registrations within the next week to swell the total.

Of 2,441 students who were undaunted by prosperity's disappearance this quarter, 116 were students entering for the first time this fiscal year, having not attended the fall quarter. Thirty-six pupils entirely new to the University were also included in the amount.

A report of the number of law students, who register only at the beginning of the fall quarter and again early in February, shows that 123 students are registered, eight more than the roll last year for the first registration period.

the main divisions of American institutions and social activities. The results of the surveys are embodied in separate reports, presented as chapters in the books.

Make-up of Committee

The committee appointed to complete the undertaking was composed of the following distinguished sociologists: Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell of Columbia University, Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago, Shelby M. Harrison, director of the Russell Sage Foundation, Alice Hamilton of Harvard University, Dr. Howard W. Odum of University of North Carolina, and William F. Ogburn, University of Chicago.

Professor Ogburn, who was director of research, is a native of Georgia, and as Dr. Odum was assistant director of research, the two leading men on the executive staff were from the south.

To introduce the work to the public, the committee collaborated in condensing the results of their work into a short summary from which can be gleaned a fairly complete knowledge of the nature of the work.

Following the two volumes which have been published will be thirteen additional volumes containing "special studies and supporting facts, giving in greater detail the facts upon which the findings rest."

Hoover Writes Foreword

President Hoover in a foreword to the works says, in part, "Since the task assigned to the committee was to inquire into changing trends, the result is emphasis on elements of instability rather than stability in our social structure."

"This study is the latest and most comprehensive of its kind. It should serve to help all of us to see where social stresses are occurring and where major efforts should be undertaken to deal with them constructively."

Pharmacy Honor Roll

Eight of the pharmacy students made the honor roll for the fall quarter, it was announced yesterday. Those making the honor roll were: M. M. Brame, C. H. Cobb, L. Gilbert, Jr., F. B. Ham, H. M. Lawrence, C. L. Neal, D. C. Purcell, and R. S. Whitely. Cobb led the pharmacy school, making the grade of "A" on all subjects.

Many Problems Face Legislature

Economy and other financial measures continued to dominate the first week of the session of the state legislature. The bill to reduce the salaries of the elective officials fifteen per cent was still clouded with uncertainty as yesterday's session closed.

SIZE OF INFIRMARY LIST CAUSES EPIDEMIC FEAR

Twenty-two people were confined to the infirmary yesterday to bring the infirmary list to the largest number in recent years. A statement from Dr. Abernethy said that although there were a few cases of "flu" in the infirmary, there was no danger of an epidemic. "The usual holiday ills and even a case of mumps are in the infirmary now," he said.

Those confined to the infirmary are Raleigh Allsbrook, R. O. Ward, Lewis Barnes, H. T. Taylor, Alfred Miller, Hugh Primrose, W. W. Oakley, W. G. Coletrane, C. G. PROFESSOR GIVES INSTRUCTIONS TO NORMAL STUDENTS

Rev. John A. Berens, dean of men at Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has prepared the "ten commandments" of the ideal collegian. He said that a student does not have to "bend over backwards" to approach these qualifications, but any normal boy is a candidate for the title.

Father Berens "commandments" are:

1. He should have a strong ambition to succeed, together with the determination to overcome obstacles.

2. He should take part in the normal activities of extra-curricular affairs, but without excess in them.

3. He should possess qualities of leadership, but this does not imply that he must be a class officer or hold office in campus organizations.

4. He may do outside work if he must, but it is better to save money for one or two years after preparatory school, and then to enter college.

5. As to character, he must possess the qualities of honesty, uprightness, courage and fidelity.

6. He must be temperate.

7. Inasmuch as the countenance reflects the quality of the soul, he must give an outward appearance of pleasantness. He need not be good looking or a Beau Brummel.

8. He must be neat in appearance and in habits.

9. He must be mature. A boy who appears immature at the age of 18 should delay entering college. A year or two of work would bring him into contact with the difficulties of life; he would learn the value of money and develop a better outlook on education.

10. He must conduct himself in such a manner as will give evidence of a sincere, Christian gentleman.

Included in the cast are Victor Jory, Effie Ellsler, Esther Howard, Clay Clement and Karol Kay, a child violinist.

The views of religious liberals on the meaning and function of religion today, and on Jesus, the Bible, God, salvation, and immortality will be the subjects of the lectures. There will be question periods at each meeting, and opportunity will be given for personal consultations on individual religious problems.

It is hoped that a lay group for the study of liberal religion will be formed in each place immediately after the mission, except in Greensboro and Rocky Mount, where Universalist churches are already in existence. A conference of key people of the liberal groups in the ten communities will probably also be held soon after the meetings to organize the work on a statewide basis.

Group Will Offer Several Pieces Including "After Midnight"
And "Cripple Creek."

The Carolina salon ensemble, a chamber music group composed entirely of students and directed by Thor Martin Johnson, yesterday afternoon began its winter quarter schedule of appearances in the Playmaker theatre before the convention of the Carolina dramatic association. Yesterday's program was illustrative of North Carolina folk music and consisted of a setting of the folk tune Pretty Polly by Lamar Stringfield.

The ensemble is scheduled for an appearance in the lounge room of Graham Memorial in an informal concert Sunday afternoon, January 15, at 4:00 o'clock. This is to be the first of a series of programs to be presented by the ensemble in Graham Memorial.

To Play at Press Meeting
January 18, at the meeting of the North Carolina Press Association at the Carolina Inn, the salon group will present a program of music by North Carolina composers. Included on this program will be After Midnight and Cripple Creek by Lamar Stringfield, and the Danse Morisque by Herbert R. Hazelman, a sophomore in the University.

Thor Johnson will also conduct his group of student musicians in a series of out-of-town concerts beginning in February with an appearance in Aycock auditorium, at the Greensboro branch of the greater University of North Carolina. Subsequent appearances will occur in Raleigh and Charlotte, ending the series with a schedule of several concerts in Winston-Salem.

Excellent Positions in Gov-

Back from Washington, where he and Kenneth R. Byerly of the University department of geology and Dr. Crittenden of the Woman's College of the University attended the annual sessions of the Association of American Geographers, Dr. Collier Cobb reports that he learned the University has twenty-five men engaged in geological or geographical work in the various governmental departments of the United States.

"It made me feel proud when I saw the fine record these men are making," Dr. Cobb said. "They are doing excellent work and are making good salaries."

These men got their start here in Chapel Hill under Dr. Cobb, who, until he went on a part-time teaching basis recently, had been head of the department of geology for 45 years.

University Alumni Play Prominent Parts In New Government Of State

Twenty-Four Sons of University Take Places in Senate and Thirty-Two Enter House, While Governor Ehringhaus and Six Other Elective Officials Are Also Alumni.

When the gavels were rapped to call the two branches of the North Carolina General Assembly of 1933 together Wednesday, fifty-two men who have attended the University answered the roll calls which list 170 members in both houses.

Twenty-four of the fifty members of the state senate are alumni of the University while thirty-two alumni represent their counties in the lower house composed of 120 members.

Shortly after the convening of the senate an alumnus was honored by the body when it elected as its president pro tempore W. G. Clark, a student in the University 1893-95.

Alumni Inaugurated
Thursday a number of alumni figured prominently in the inaugural ceremonies which began the new elective officials of the state government on their four-year terms.

Most prominent among these were Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, '01, North Carolina's fifty-fourth governor and the twenty-fifth son of the University to hold this position. He succeeded Governor O. Max Gardner, '05, in this position.

In addition six of the other nine elective state officers inaugurated Thursday were alumni of the University: Lieutenant governor A. H. Graham, '01, Superintendent of Public Instruction A. T. Allen, '97, Commissioner of Agriculture W. A. Graham, 1897-98, Commissioner of Labor A. L. Fletcher, 1904-05, Corpora-

Investigation Shows Many Openings For Professionally Trained Women

Southern Women's Alliance Studies 2000 Professional and Business Women; Good Health, Emotional Balance, High Standard of Work, and Training Important in Depression.

In spite of an overcrowded condition and an accompanying drop in salaries in the various vocational fields open to women, there are still unlimited opportunities for those with advanced professional and technical training, according to reports presented by experts of national status at a recent meeting of the Southern Woman's Alliance in New York.

In the opinion of this discussion group, resulting from a study of the employment and unemployment of 2,000 New York business and professional women, the factors that make for success during the time of a business depression are: understanding and appreciation of the importance of good health, desire and capacity for hard work, emotional balance, appreciation of high standards of workmanship, courses, responsibility for dependents, education and vocational choice. The results of these findings show that commercial subjects, home economics, and physical education are wanted more by employment bureaus than academic subjects.

Fields of Vocation
The definite vocations for women which were investigated were: home economics, library work, nursing, office work, medicine, journalism, engineering, health education, dentistry, religious work, art, museum work, and radio broadcasting.

Although from a general point of view, there is an oversupply of home economists, there are increasing opportunities in health education, advertising and sales promotion, in food and equipment manufacturing, extension work in rural areas, institutional work, work in retail stores, and steady positions in the teaching field. In the present emergency, home economists are giving volunteer service in food selection, preparation and family budgeting.

OXFORD TEACHER WILL COME HERE FOR DISCUSSIONS

English Economist Will Conduct Informal Discussions in Chapel Hill.

During his stay in Chapel Hill Lipson will be unable to deliver any public addresses since he has recently been in ill health, but he will hold informal discussions with small groups of students and faculty members. He comes here from Duke University where he has been for the past few days and will be in Chapel Hill until Tuesday.

SPONSORS PLAN FORUM BUSINESS

Volunteers Selling Tickets Will Be Remunerated by Personal
Tickets and Commissions.

Plans for underwriting the series of eight lectures to be presented here this winter on the Open Forum Discussions series through faculty and student contributions were laid yesterday by the executive committee of the five organizations sponsoring the forum. In this manner it is planned to obtain sufficient funds to make the series within the reach of every element on the campus. A plan has also been devised for the sale of season tickets, whereby student volunteers will distribute season tickets on a commission basis.

Volunteers to Meet
A number of these volunteers will meet with the executive committee in the Y. M. C. A. Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Students desiring to help in this work and be sufficiently remunerated for their services may apply at that time.

According to Vernon Ward, chairman of the committee, the sale of tickets is progressing rapidly. Since only a limited number are available, it is urged that those interested in the series procure their season tickets as soon as possible. A ticket desk for the convenience of this group will be established in the Y. M. C. A. lobby Monday morning and will remain open during chapel hour and other periods of the day.

CABINETS TO DISCUSS CONFERENCE RESULTS

Discussion of the importance and results of the recent Student-Faculty conference in Atlanta will be in order for the first weekly meetings of the winter quarter for the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets tomorrow night at 7:00 o'clock. Further plans for an extended deputation program will be arranged, and dates settled for future trips.

The sophomore and junior-senior cabinets will meet in the Y. M. C. A. building, and the freshman friendship council will meet as usual in Gerrard hall.

Prejudice Weakens

The far-flung advances made by the Southern Student-Faculty Conference in Atlanta this December last along the lines of race harmony in the south may never penetrate our sectional society further than the limits of Y. M. C. A. cabinets and student discussion groups, yet a resume of the projects undertaken by the conference should be disclosed to every conscientious citizen of the state. The taboo which has long pervaded our social system is in the process of being swept away through the advancement of industrial and economic socialization, our sociologists tell us. This we have failed to realize, garbing our sentiments in the veil of taboos which have aggravated the whole situation.

It is fitting that such advancement of this question comes through a Christian agency of such proportions as a Faculty-Student conference. The question of race harmony must be met; it can best be met on the grounds prepared for it in such a conference as the one in Atlanta. The advancement along this line is most aptly characterized in the address to the recent conference made by Dr. W. A. Smart of Emory University, who says in part: "The Southern part of our country is decidedly the most sectionally minded—possibly because we all love the south so dearly . . . at any rate we spend time in eulogizing about past conditions. We still think of southern culture in terms of civilization before the Civil War. We are still too inclined to think of any divergence from our grand parents' ways as a colossal crime. . . ."

Thus Dr. Smart lays the groundwork for future discussion on such a pertinent topic. The restraining bars of prejudice must be stricken down if the present generation is to see a final settlement of this trying question. Eminating initially from such a group, a large portion of this prejudice has fallen.—D.C.S.

Snip, Snip

As had been long expected, the employees of the University have just been the recipient of a further reduction in salary, which was, to say the least, not a very cheerful reception at the hands of the new year. In a period of less than two years, the income of the average instructor here at the University has been clipped by approximately forty-five per cent.

Viewing the situation in a casual way, nothing very desperate is apparent. Wage earners, some would say, have suffered far greater reductions in their earning power. Returns from dividends on investments have dwindled to a mere pittance of their former selves, while the products of the farms are bringing prices which represent but a small fraction of what they were worth before the days of depression.

Many people are wondering if members of the University's staff are some sort of superhumans, that their salaries should remain unscathed, while all the rest of the state must carry the burdens which result from such a chaotic state of things. We would not throw the screen of protection around the instructors of the University and disregard the taxpayer and the hordes of fellow sufferers, but the question of economizing at the expense of education is a serious one, and should be studied very carefully before being acted upon.

A University professor requires a somewhat higher income than the average man. He must keep himself posted in the most recent developments in his field; he must have money to buy books; he often finds it necessary to continue his research, which requires large sums of money; then a great deal of travel is very essential to the development of a college instructor. Finally, he must live and support his family according to the highest standards, which he cannot do if the legislature pursues its present course much further.—W.A.S.

Now Is the Time for All—

The present economic disorder occasioned by a return to order has brought many attendant evils and hardships felt no less keenly in the seclusion of Chapel Hill than in the whirl of the rest of the world. The past year has seen the University's income shrink and dwindle to a shadow and professors' salaries cut to a mere nothing. A plan of forced economy has been made necessary in every phase of the University's activities. The University, so we are informed, is fighting for its existence, and the year and a half to come will be more crucial than the period just passed.

Yet nowhere in the University is the situation more to be deplored than the handicap it has placed upon our library. The present library is the result of a long and gradual growth, the work of a few patient men who realized that books are the treasures of knowledge. From the scanty supply of books in the original library it has grown until it now contains several hundred thousand volumes. During the recent years of prosperity the University saw fit to build a magnificent building to house its treasures.

The library building since its erection has been the pride of the campus, the sight most proudly displayed to visitors. Now this library of which we are so proud is financially at the end of its rope. Few books were bought last year and the prospects for the new year are not bright.

Last spring a few far-seeing persons organized a group which they called the Friends of the Library. The purpose of the Friends is to bring together in an informal group a number of friends of the library who are willing to give their time, money and materials for its enrichment.

The project is one which should be given the utmost encouragement. Membership is open to anyone who sincerely has the interests of the library at heart. Although the Friends is not a student organization many students have displayed their interest in its plan. Here is an opportunity for University students to show that Chapel Hill is indeed a seat of the New Learning and Culture in the South.—V.C.R.

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

What is a poor columnist to do, when he runs out of anything to write about? Does he sit idly and twiddle his thumbs, while some editorial from one of our contemporaries fills the space this week? Does he feign a headache, and stay away from the office? Not on your sweet life. He goes ahead and writes a column, anyway.

About half the stuff we hear on the streets, in the classroom, on the campus, at public gatherings, in the legislatures—everywhere, is entirely unrelated to facts, ideas, or coherent thought. Probably the same percentage of publishable matter is no better. So, why should the poor harassed writer of newspaper columns bother himself unduly with matters of rhyme and reason? The chances are a thousand to one against him that anyone will read his stuff, anyway—good or bad.

So, here we go, tra la. And, if by any possible chance there should be spectators of this mad event, adjust your binoculars, hold tight to your seats, get a firm grip on your chewing gum, and watch old Twenty Grand go. Hurrah! He's off. Now, he's on. On again; off again . . . and the seat of his trousers already resembling a gigantic mirror . . . Tsk . . . Tsk . . . Time out to wipe sweat and adjust suspenders . . .

Now, he descends upon the typewriter with the feline celerity of old Tab pouncing upon the well known mouse. Again, he recedes, and approaches the machine lovingly, as a priceless possession. Fondly, he caresses it, letting his hands slip over the keys softly, as a Paderewski translating from the depths of his soul a soft, timid thing of moonlight, roses, and delicate perfumes.

Then, becoming suddenly infuriated, he beats upon the defenseless mechanism with both fists, demolishing fifteen keys, tearing a new ribbon to shreds, and knocking the bottom out of the chair on the rebound. Thus might a Caesar fly into tantrums at news that his Cleopatra had been seen at a movie with some Mark Anthony. Et Tu, Brute? (There is a Latin phrase for you, as any female conductor of college newspaper columns will tell you.)

But, we digress. Quick, Captain, a new mount! What is this huge lumbering thing that you bring me, with steel trappings and a clatter of fifty million plate glass windows falling upon the concrete? Ah, the limotype. How many men has he ridden to death! Strong, willful, soulless brute. Kings, Presidents, Senators, have tried to tame him. He carries no bit and has never been saddled.

Come, Don. You on the telephone booth (what a mount for a modern Quixote) and I on the limotype. A-Maying we shall go. Is it a daisy that you crave? I shall print you a page of them.

The Bull's Head will hold "open-house" Tuesday afternoon at the usual hour of 4:30. Professor Woodhouse will speak on "Technocracy as applied to Government." All those interested in this much talked of and written about topic are invited to come to this informal lecture and to participate in the discussion which will follow.

Several books about "technocracy" have already been announced by the publishers. The most informative study to date is to be found in The New Republic for December the 28th. Stuart Chase (The New Deal) is writing an article on this subject for February's Cosmopolitan.

THE ODYSSEY OF HOMER translated by T. E. Shaw (Oxford) $3.50. Reviewed by Ronathis.

The remarkable Mr. Shaw, airplane mechanic, and lately Lawrence of Arabia, has contrived, after four years of work, a remarkable translation of the Odyssey of those wonderful poets, Homer. The really unusual feature of the work is the humanization which the translator works into what, as he explains in his preface, is really a very literal translation. In spite of the fact that it might at times justifiably be termed "smart-aleck" this feature of the recent book relieves most decidedly from their weight of former translations, and puts it again on the footing of amusing literature where it began in the first place. It may be startling to hear Telemachus berate the suitors in every modern English, but it is none the less welcome after the grandiose passages of the conferences of the Gods. Shaw has given us a readable Odyssey for the first time in all the history of book-worms.

THE BLOODY YEARS by Francis Yeats-Brown (Viking Press) $2.75. Reviewed by Don Shoemaker.

Mr. Francis Yeats-Brown has just enough of the glibly humorous in his Anglo-Saxon make-up to unfold amusingly the sun-guineous rise of new Turkey in his latest opus The Bloody Years (which follows the highly successful Lives of a Bengal Lancer). One may judge from the rapid tale of war in its fledgling state in Asia Minor that F. Yeats-Brown confronted his task with a measure of unadulterated pleasure, or such is the impression.

Beginning chronologically in the year 1326—of the Hejira—which is 1908 to you, our erstwhile lancer sets well about his task in contrasting the old estate in Turkey with the rising new through a frequent whimsical reflection to a current seraglio incumbent of Abdul Hamid II (the Damned, the Red Sultan, the Great Assassin—a la European press) whose arduous efforts to interest his politically perturbed majesty avail naught.

Then is unfolded the Young Turk movement of 1908, the counter revolution of 1909, the bloody days before and including Sarajevo, and the plight of two airmen stranded in the desert after cutting the Turkish telegraph lines west and north of Bagdad. Which lets us down with a plunk as the Turks capture the author and his companion to provide meat for some excellent material on the horrors of war. The remainder of the book involves the woefully unsuccessful and similarly uninteresting account of Yeats-Brown's attempts at escape from Constantinople and environs. No, "Aircraftsman Shaw," herein is Yeats-Brown unrestrained.

The next meeting of the American Institute of electrical engineers is scheduled for Tuesday night, January 10, in Phillips hall. The program will consist of three addresses to be made by members of the A. I. E. E. T. L. Caudle will speak on "The Facilities and Work of Radio Station WBT"; J. R. Marvin will discuss "Wattmeters." The third speaker, W. J. O'Brien, has not made definite announcement of his topic.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Student Body:

While college students are as apathetic as a Mississippi backwoodsman when it comes to objecting to political mistreatment, I had never hoped to see them become so dead above the neck that they would allow some campus oligarch to donate the senior class fund to the student loan fund.

Not that I object to the loan fund being substantiated by any sum however large, for I have used the same fund. Nor do I object to the senior class making a donation for I don't pay senior fees. Why should I raise a howl about there being a $500 surplus for one quarter since I am certain that all campus politicians make a very thorough going budget of class expenses and make student assessments according to need? That might be enough to howl about but that isn't what rankles a democratic being.

By what act of God has any campus official been endowed with the power of disposing of a senior class fund without the consent or even the comment of the class? Campus officials practically wield that power, for it is an easy matter to get THE DAILY TAR HEEL interested in anything political, and doesn't everyone know that the college student can be persuaded to vote for "Bull Montana" as queen of the May if the idea is sprung suddenly enough, or if THE DAILY TAR HEEL be allowed to hold a straw vote. But really isn't it a wee bit 'crassy' to do such a thing without even the democratic gesture? Perhaps some of you amoebas that call yourselves seniors will resent the donation when you start paying interest on the five spot you borrow to pay for a sheep skin.

Even if you don't feel that way about it, a being that upholds the democratic ideal would feel greatly relieved to find that all seniors weren't dead from the neck up although their brave comment might be in favor of the act. —B. C. PROCTOR.

Southern Conference To Meet To Consider Many Applicants

Davidson, Wake Forest, Furman, William and Mary, and Richmond University Apply.

STIFF FIGHT IS EXPECTED

Tennessee and Kentucky Will Probably Return to Conference at Later Date.

The first meeting of the ten athletic gentlemen of the south is scheduled for January 12 at Richmond when the Southern Conference officials convene for their first meeting since the recent secession at Knoxville.

Though there are several matters of vital importance to be considered, probably the major interest will center around the question of taking in new members. Five schools in North and South Carolina, and Virginia are seeking entrance into the family affair. Wake Forest and Davidson in North Carolina; Furman in South Carolina; and William and Mary and Richmond University in Virginia, are the five applicants for admission.

To admit one of these as members would make it difficult to prevent any or all of the others from coming in. Consequently, there is expected to be a staunch fight to keep the number of members to ten. Probably the biggest reason for this fight against enlargement is the fact that the present Southern Conference officials feel quite strongly that it is only a matter of time before Kentucky and Tennessee make application to rejoin.

Both these latter schools would be closer to the center of things, "geographically speaking" in the Southern Conference and they may try to rejoin. Besides, it was rumored at the secession meeting that the Vols were neither particularly anxious to join the Southeastern group, nor was that group over-anxious to have Tennessee among its members. Their "geographic conscience" compelled them to extend the Vols an invitation.

A large and unwieldy conference is something to be avoided as has been sufficiently proven in this section recently. Therefore, with the possibility of Tennessee and Kentucky rejoining, it is a far-fetched dream that any of the five applicants will be admitted at the meeting in Richmond. However, each school will be given a fair chance to present its case at the meeting before an entrance committee.

Dean A. W. Hobbs, who was elected vice-president of the Southern Conference at Knoxville, will be the official representative from Carolina. Coach Bob Fetzter will also attend the meeting, but in an unofficial capacity. Dean Hobbs could not be reached yesterday to say what Carolina's stand would be in regard to expansion, but it is thought that the University official will vote against taking in any of the five mentioned schools above.

RELEASE GIVEN PITCHER BY CHICAGO BALL CLUB

Jakie May, veteran Tar Heel southpaw, wound up sixteen years of service in major league bullpens yesterday. The Cubs gave him an unconditional release.

Jakie, who was christened Frank Spruill May by the home-folks back in Wendell some thirty-five years ago, spent most of his fourteen years on National League staffs.

Last season in Chicago he became familiar with Windy City fans by strolling out to the bullpen and chucking the ball down over the plate with his ancient arm. Every now and then, when the managerial arm waved in his direction, Jakie would wan-

We see by the papers that Marvin Ritch, Charlotte lawyer and former Carolina football star, has released his annual blast against the Carolina coaching staff. As Ritch infers, he has been doing that very thing for the past five years with poor results; most of the coaching staff is intact. Last year he deplored the poor record made by the Tar Heel football team; this year he has taken a page out of Yale tradition and is clamoring for a general housecleaning with the supplanting coaches former Carolina undergrads.

Now for the practical side of Mr. Ritch's proposal. Bo Shepard, coach of basketball; Bunn Hearn, baseball mentor; Crayton Rowe, boxing coach; and Dale Ranson, cross-country, all attended the University. Now where can we get from among the alumni, get teachers of the caliber of Messrs. Kenfield, Collins, Quinlan, Cerney, and Howard? It's quite impossible. Carolina is indeed fortunate in having as fine a set of coaches as could be found in any state university. ... Why drop them?

With the appointment of Sleepy Jim Crowley as head coach of football at Fordham University succeeding Major Frank Cavanaugh, New York City will finally have a chance to cheer for the Notre Dame system instead of against it. Crowley, fresh from Michigan State where he set an enviable record, will be the lone mentor in New York using the Notre Dame system. Cavanaugh based his entire attack on power. Crowley will depend mainly on speed. At any rate it will be interesting to watch this comparatively youthful mentor. These Notre Dame men have a habit of going places after a break like this.

Here and There

The old group of the Southern Conference would do well to lift its ban on radio broadcasting of football games. ... At this point it appears as if Pennsylvania will not be on Carolina's tennis schedule despite the efforts of the University to land the match. The Quakers will have a cracker-jack squad too and should go undefeated. ... Ice hockey is becoming more and more popular in New York. So far this season the average attendance at these contests has been around 20,000 a game or 60,000 per week. ... Statistics show that the linesmen captains-elect outnumber by far the backfield men honored. ... The site for the conference basketball tourney in Raleigh will be the city auditorium instead of the Frank Thompson gym. The purpose in mind being that the officials do not want to select a floor upon which one club has continually played. ... A post season charity game between the winners of the southern and southeastern titles might be developed into an annual affair.

der to the slab like he was smoking a Murad.

Jakie, the Tar Heel, was the only Bruin hurler in the 1932 World's Series who could whiff Babe Ruth. The Bambino swung at other six times for North Carolina's own.

A necessity is something you can't get along without, but do. A luxury is something you ought to get along without, but don't.—Dunbar's Weekly (Phoenix).

The Nuclei Of These White Phantoms

This trio of players are enough to wipe a few of the worries from the brow of any mentor. The twinkle in the eye of Coach Shepard up there is a proof of this. The youthful coach has one all-southern forward in Weather's, and a second-team all-southern forward in Captain Hines, and one of the flashiest and steadiest guards ever to play in North Carolina in Dave McCachren. Hines led the Phantom scorers against Guilford when the Tar Heels scored more than a point a minute, counting on 27 of 56 cracks at the basket, almost a .500 batting average.

SARAZEN FAVORED IN PACIFIC MEET

Dutra, Smith, Wood, and Other Famous Golfers to Participate in Los Angeles Meet.

Gene Sarazen, holder of the British and American open crowns, remained a heavy favorite to carry off the $5,000.00 purse in the Los Angeles open which gets under way this afternoon.

However, the famous golfer may experience some difficulty in capping the fine purse at the hands of a large number of tried veterans and potential youngsters. This field includes more than 128 men of fine golfing past which may change materially the outcome of the tourney.

Among the vets are Olin Dutra, national P. G. A. champ; MacDonald Smith, fine old Scot, who is the defending champion of the tournament; and Craig Wood, New Jersey pro, who has carried off the golfing laurels in this tournament two out of three times.

DON CONKLIN TO END EXCELLENT VARSITY CAREER

This Year Wrestler Will Compete in 155 Class After Two Undefeated Seasons in Lesser Weight.

Don Conklin, varsity wrestler in the 155 pound division, has distinguished himself as one of Carolina's most outstanding mat men, being undefeated for two years in the 145 pound class, and losing in his only match last year.

Conklin is one of the fans' favorites, a very spectacular grappler who never fails to give the fans their share of the thrills. His style is unusual, bordering on the unorthodox; but it is still good enough to be dangerous and something to be watched by any of his opponents.

Speaking of his only fight which was against Washington and Lee, Conklin was sorely handicapped by his lack of conditioning; and this proved to be the deciding factor in the match when it was forced to go an extra period. However, this year,

FORMER PUPIL TO SUCCEED WARNER

Thornhill as Stanford Assistant and All-American at Pitt Is Well-Acquainted With Job.

"Tiny" Thornhill has been named head football coach at Stanford University.

Football fans of a decade and a half back will remember when Thornhill was an all-American tackle in 1916 for "Pop" Warner at Pittsburgh. For eleven years Thornhill has assisted Warner, who recently accepted a call from Temple, in the capacity of line coach at Stanford.

The new Stanford coach is a brilliant strategist. When Warner resigned from his old post, the Stanford board of athletic control selected Thornhill on account of his intimate and minute knowledge of the famous "Warner System."

Another all-American gridder will be Thornhill's first assistant. Ernie Nevers, who was burning up the Coast back in 1925, will be first lieutenant to Stanford's professor of gridiron strategy. Thornhill announced that the remainder of the present coaching staff would remain intact.

Thornhill is now thirty-nine years old. One of his teammates back at Pitt was Dr. Jock Sutherland, who is now head coach at the Smoky City College.

Conklin should go far with all his matches, since already he has showed marked signs of efficiency in the training bouts staged so far in the daily workouts.

His best matches that he wrestled in during his varsity competition were against the strong Navy and Princeton mat stars. In both these meets, Conklin came out on the long end of the match, carrying Tar Heel colors to victory.

Conklin is a senior, and is considered a good student.

Co-eds Play High School

The freshman co-eds will play the Chapel Hill high school's basketball team Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the high school gymnasium.

Thirty Entrants In Campaign Face Competition During Week

Carolina Wins 56-18

The White Phantoms defeated Davidson last night in Charlotte by the score of 56-18. Details of the game were unobtainable at the time The Daily Tar Heel went to press last night.

SCRIMMAGE ENDS WEEK'S PRACTICE

Game With Deacon Freshmen Thursday Will Open State First-Year Quint Race.

Carolina's freshman basketball team finished a hard week of practice Friday night with a lengthy scrimmage.

Coach Dameron is giving his men as much work as possible in order to have them well seasoned to open the year next Thursday night. The Tar Babies meet Wake Forest's yearlings in their first encounter, and the contest will also have a bearing on the race for the Big Five freshman quint title.

The Tar Babies have a great number of good players reporting for practice, but the first five does not seem to be quite up to the standard of last year's freshman team. At present the first club is made up of Nelson and Moore at forwards, Kannor at center, and Phelps and McCachren at guards. All these boys are good floor-men and with a few games behind them should be good material for the varsity.

McKeithan and Snyder, forwards; Rankin, center; and Guarino and Glasgow, guards, make up the second team with many others ready to jump into either first or second string berths if any of these have a let-down in their play.

Friday night the freshmen closed the week with most of the squad seeing action in fast scrimmages. "Snooks" Aitkens refereed the hard fought battles and did almost as good a job of it as he does playing.

SPORTS PROGRAM HEAVY THIS WEEK

With Activity by Both Basketball and Boxing Teams Competition Starts Second Week.

With the varsity and freshman boxers swinging into action this week and the Tar Baby quint seeing its first action, the winter sports program at Carolina enters its second week of competition.

Three basketball games are scheduled for the week in the Tin Can and the boxers will leave Friday for Blacksburg where they open the mit season with V. P. I. Saturday night.

Thursday night the Tar Heels and the Tar Babies entertain the varsity and frosh fives from Wake Forest in a double-header in the Tin Can.

Six Games Will Be Played Each Afternoon in Campus Intramural Race.

RUFFIN TO DEFEND TITLE

Each Week's Schedule Will Be Announced in Paper and Will Not Be Mailed Out.

Thirty games are listed for the first week of the 1933 intramural basketball campaign with six games scheduled each afternoon from Monday through Friday of this week. Twelve of the contests involve dormitory or independent outfits while fraternity teams will take part in eighteen games.

Ruffin, which won the campus championship last season, will swing into action in defense of its title when it lines up against Carr at 3:45 Wednesday.

T. E. P. and S. A. E. will each see action a second time this week meeting respectively Delta Psi at 4:45 o'clock Thursday and Phi Kappa Sigma at 4:45 o'clock Friday.

The complete schedule for the first week of the campaign is printed below. Hereafter no schedules will be mailed to managers, but the complete schedule for the coming week will appear in the TAR HEEL every Sunday and the schedule for the next day will be run in each day's paper.

Yackety Yack Staff Will Gather Monday

Work on the Yackety Yack will be resumed tomorrow afternoon. All members of the staff are asked to report at the office between 2:00 and 4:00 o'clock. Assignments will be made at that time and work scheduled for the quarter. A preliminary meeting for division heads will be held tonight at 7:00 in Graham Memorial. The following men are asked to be present at this meeting: Andrews, Pitt, Drane, Steinreich, Woerner, Long, Manning, Pool, Alexander.

Much of the work on the publication was completed during last quarter. It is further hoped that the material will be practically complete by the end of the present quarter in order to assure prompt delivery of the annuals in the spring.

Many Openings Found For Trained Women

Academic training for the girl who is going to enter business should include as the most important courses: economics, finance and accounting, psychology, statistics, and commercial law. The practice prevailing in large corporations of transferring workers within the organization rather than employing new workers has resulted in a curtailment of the demand. Consequently, such openings as develop come from small organizations which make versatility and flexibility necessary qualifications.

Wide Field of Activities

Women with a medical education find a wide range of activities open, including: general medical practice with accompanying specializations, research in the medical sciences, laboratory work, public health work, teaching and salaried positions in industrial organizations, state hospitals and other institutions.

Individuals trained in the different fields of health education are required in educational institutions, in editorial rooms, and as state and city supervisors of health education in national and local organizations. The average salary for this type work is estimated at $3,000 and the demand for workers has decreased proportionately less during the present economic depression than in other fields.

The field for women in the profession of dentistry is found largely in the pre-school and school group, oral hygiene and preventive work for adults. For success in this profession, training, mechanical aptitude, and psychological balance are essential.

Religious Field

The religious field normally furnishes employment for thousands of women in over thirty types of vocation, few of which are definitely professionalized. The extent of unemployment among women religious workers is unknown. The demand is increasing due to the tendency to have fewer churches but larger ones. This means more staffs of workers in secretarial, pastoral, educational, and institutional activities.

There are innumerable opportunities for women in the uses of design. Among these are interior decoration, mural decoration, landscape architecture, illustration for books, magazine and fashion, costume design, advertising, textile design, styling, and theatre arts.

Openings in museum work include secretarial positions, curators, librarians, technicians, and journalists. For curators, a college degree, special technical training, and a broad cultural background are essential.

The number of jobs open to women in radio broadcasting is limited since there is little opportunity for women as announcers. However, a large number are employed to write and edit scripts, direct performances, arrange programs, produce sound effects, and hold auditions in addition to those employed as musicians and dramatic artists.

H. W. CHASE GIVES ACADEMIC SPEECH ON TECHNOCRACY

Former President Here Says
Shorter Hours, Not Changed
Philosophy Needed.

President H. W. Chase, former president of the University, now president of the University of Illinois, recently expressed his views on technocracy in one of a series of articles written for the Chicago Daily Times by prominent men throughout the country.

President Chase is of the opinion that every relation of the individual to the economic order is to be a matter of perspective. He thinks that this is in opposition to philosophy that has characterized American thought about such matters.

Chase is unwilling to believe that our situation at present is so desperate as to call for a reversal of our entire philosophy of thought.

To enable all those that are at present unemployed to obtain work even if the peak of production were reached, Chase says that the hours of labor would have to be reduced. As a plan to keep from further complications in unemployment Chase suggests that the period of education be lengthened.

"The greatest need of the moment," says Chase, "is an increased sense of personal responsibility on the part of those in industry and finance beyond the question of immediate profits, and responsibility on the part of us all in the operation of the government."

CAROLINA OFFERS VARIED NUMBERS FOR WEEK'S BILL

Program Headed by "Flesh," With Beery, and "No Man of Her Own," With Gable.

The Carolina this week offers a well-balanced program headed by such hits as "Flesh," "No Man of Her Own," "The Match King." The other attractions are all excellent productions with fine casts.

The week opens with the feature play "Flesh," starring Wallace Beery, supported by Jean Hersholt and Karen Morley. Beery plays the part of a German wrestler, who rises to heights through his efforts, only to be deserted by the girl, Karen Morley.

Tuesday the Carolina offers "Fast Life," with William Haines in the role of a mechanical-inventor who develops a new engine. Cliff Edwards supports Haines in the comedy role as the assistant mechanic who is always bawling things up. Madge Evans is cast as the daughter of the boat builder who ruins himself financially trying to build craft for international races. "The Half-Naked Truth" comes to the Carolina Wednesday with an all-star cast headed by Lupe Velez and Lee Tracy, and supported by Eugene Pallette and Frank Morgan.

Match King Thursday

Thursday the Carolina theatre offers Warren William in a strong supporting cast containing Lili Damita in the famous screen play, "The Match King" based on the recent life of Kreuger, the match heir. Warren William is portrayed in another fine role which will substantiate his claim to a fixture among Hollywood's select colony although he rose to fame like "one climbing the back stairs while news hounds slept" (to use the phrase of one dramatic writer).

The featured star in Friday's presentation is Clark Gable, who is admired by every feminine cinemadict, in "No Man of Her Own." The plot is based on the career of a big-time gambler who operates among Wall St. millionaires. Gable is torn between two loves, his wife, Carole Lombard, and another dame, Dorothy Mackail, all causing much exciting drama.

"The Cabin in the Cotton" returns to the Carolina theatre for another run Saturday, featuring Richard Barthelmess, Bette Davis, and Dorothy Jordan. The screen play is based on the scenario work of Paul Green, member of the University faculty.

Magazine Deadline

The deadline for articles and stories for the first Carolina Magazine of the new year has been set for Tuesday afternoon, according to an announcement by Editor Robert Barneff, yesterday. The editor is desirous of obtaining a number of feature articles for this issue and urges that all members of the staff confer with him before the deadline.

LEGISLATURE MAY RECEIVE BILLS TO ABOLISH MERGER

No Local Statement Can Be Obtained on Possible Fight
On Consolidation.

Prospects that the consolidation of the three state institutions of higher learning, the University, North Carolina
State, and the Woman's College at Greensboro, will be fought in the present general assembly were revealed Sunday by the Charlotte Observer.

According to reports from several State College alumni in Charlotte who have opposed the merger since its inception by the assembly in 1931, three bills to repeal the action are understood to be ready for presentation in the assembly during the next week or two.

No Local Opinion

No expression of local opinion could be obtained by the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday and no reports from Raleigh indicated that the presentation of such bills was in the offing.

At the same time the board of trustees and various administrative officers of the Greater University are setting the machinery in order for a consolidated school to be in smooth working order by next September. The board has scheduled a meeting for January 15 to consider, among other things, the selection of the third vice-president of the Greater University and the choice of a head comptroller.

The bills which may go to the legislature, the state alumni pointed out, will be based on the opinion that the merger, proposed to save money, will not only fail to do that but will necessitate a greater expenditure than the operation of separate institutions. The necessity for three vice-presidents to head the different branches, the plan of consolidation was cited as an example of additional expenditure.

Should the fight on the consoli-

HOUSE SPEAKS TO FROSH IN CHAPEL

Executive Secretary Discusses
Every Man as His Own Atlas
In Apotheosis of Hooley.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, yesterday delivered in assembly a lecture entitled "Every Man His Own Atlas," or, "The Apotheosis of Hooley."

House started off with the idea that winter is the time to get down to study. He stated that he agreed with Dean Bradshaw that intestinal fortitude is important in life, but he also wishes to extol intellectual perspiration. In college, according to House, students will get a general knowledge which will be broadened by future experience after graduation. He claimed that too many people use their education only to read the headlines. They form a desire to leave college to help make those headlines, he asserted.

Atlas was the only man who could hold up the world, according to House. Too many college students are concerning themselves with trying to hold up the world, not paying enough attention to holding themselves up and tending to their personal development.

Woodhouse To Speak On Technocracy Today

Professor E. J. Woodhouse, of the history and government department, will speak at the weekly gathering at the Bull's Head in the Y. M. C. A. today at 4:30 o'clock. Woodhouse's subject will be "Technocracy As Applied to Government."

The address is especially appropriate at this time as the subject is one of the most discussed topics in current literary and social circles. Technocracy is a theory of the organization of society and industry based on the analyses of engineers of the increase of available energy through the rapid increase in effective machinery and applicable power. The discussion that will follow Professor Wood-house's address will include favorable and unfavorable comments on the new theory.

The student body and townsfolk are invited.

APPLICATIONS FOR FELLOWSHIPS NOW BEING SUBMITTED

Large Number File Applications
For Fellowships to Be Awarded April 1.

Applications are being received by Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school, for fellowships and other appointments given yearly through the University through the various funds. Applications, properly filled out, must be filed with the dean not later than March 15.
Approximately 250 such applications have been made, according to Dean Pierson. This is an exceptional number as the formal announcement of the open fellowships and offices has just been released.

Twenty-six University fellowships are available in the graduate school. These are open only to men, and each fellow is expected to give a limited portion of his time to instruction or such other work as may be prescribed. The stipend is $500 with free tuition.

Tuition Scholarships

Twenty University scholarships are now open to men and women graduate students whose stipends are free tuition.

Two Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy are available to men and women, and provide a stipend of $700 in addition to free tuition. The Ledoux fellowship in chemistry is open to men and women and provides a stipend of $300 and tuition.

A limited number of appointments to the service of assistants are open to application.
Holders of these appointments devote half their time to the department to which they are assigned. The stipend is from $450 to $800.

Social Science Fellowship

There are also a limited number of appointments available in the institute for research in social science. At least one year of approved graduate work is prerequisite and holders of these appointments are expected to devote their full time to investigation of problems in social research. Application blanks may be secured from the director of the institute. These are open to men and women.

Awards for all fellowships, scholarships, and appointments are made on a competitive basis and are not announced earlier than April 1.

Shankar Dancers Will Reveal Mysterious Hindu Intricacies

World Famous Company of Hindu Dancers Will Portray Strange
And Exotic Movements in Interpretive Dances of the Orient in Memorial Hall Tomorrow Night.

Out of the mystic East comes Shankar and his dancing troupe to regale our senses with the strangest, most exotic, most stirring spectacles in the experience of western art and music.

With this company of dancers and musicians which comes to Memorial hall, Wednesday night as a presentation of the Entertainment Committee, Shankar will reveal the dances of India which contain the core of the cosmos as the Hindus have perceived it for thousands of years.

Portray Love

All the Shankar dances portray love. Dealing with love, they play its whole octave of emotions, ranging from enchantment, melancholy and opulence to erotic ecstasy, rising finally to their fine culmination in the rarified air of divinity. These dances deal with the gods—the wizard gods of India whose drama are those of human beings elaborately symbolized and touched with nobility. The dances overwhelm the Occidental senses with the primitive splendor which has made Shankar a popular artist throughout Europe.

At Colonial Exposition

Coming to America, fresh after his glorified appearances with the Colonial Exposition in Paris, Shankar and his troupe will display for the first time on the North American continent, the Hindu art, its lavish costumes, strangely thrilling native orchestra music, all profound satisfactions for the soul.

One of the strange features of the series of dances will be the method in which the dancers will respond to applause. Instead of bowing in Occidental fashion, Shankar and his troupe will place the palms of their hands together under their noses, then bending forward reverently as if addressing some deity, will accept the audience's appreciative applause.

Shankar studied dance under the late Maharaja Jhalawa; then took work in the Royal College of Arts in London; climaxed his studies by learning under Anna Pavlowa, famed European dancer. He later forsook his work and began a research of the ancient dances and old music of Hindustan.

The first performance made a large hit in Manhattan last week. Time, the weekly news magazine, describes its first appearance as: "The curtain went up on the troupe which has eight brightly-turbaned musicians, sitting cross-legged on the floor, there are more than fifty-six different instruments, drums like vases, stringed instruments with necks almost as flat as their little bodies, gongs bright as gold

CLUBS WILL HEAR COFFMAN SPEAK

Philological Club Meets for First Time This Quarter in Lounge
Of Smith Building.

The Philological club will convene in its first meeting of the year tomorrow night in the lounge of the graduate club,
Smith building at 7:30 o'clock.

The speaker of the evening will be Dr. George R. Coffman, who will speak on "Old Age from Horace to Chaucer: Some Literary Affinities and Adventures of an Idea." A portion of this paper was delivered at the meeting of the Modern Language Association of America at New Haven during the Christmas holidays.

Fuller Account to Be Given

The paper which members of the club will hear read tomorrow night contains a great deal more information, and presents a great many more details than the brief survey delivered at Yale University.

It concerns the experiences of a passage from Horace in its changes at the hands of the writers in the middle ages, bringing in Chaucer's use of the passage in the Canterbury Tales.

Societies' Heads To Be Inducted Tonight

The Phi assembly and the Di-senate will conduct their first regular meetings of the winter quarter in their respective halls tonight at 7:15 o'clock. L. Jackson Greer, president-elect of the Phi and Bill McKee, speaker-elect of the Di, will deliver their inaugural speeches and plans for the winter quarter will be made.
All members are urged to attend as important bills will be discussed.

UNKNOWN NEGRO WOUNDS JANITOR

Unidentified Assailant Shoots
Local Colored Man Who Befriended Him.

Fred Faro, colored janitor employed at the S. P. E. house, was shot in the kidney Sunday night a few minutes before 7:00 o'clock by an unidentified negro as a result of an argument the previous evening. The extent of his injuries could not be determined last night.

Faro who had been engaged to cook a midnight meal for a group of white people was accosted on his way to his work by a negro who demanded food, offering to sing and dance for the group in payment for the meal. According to the story told, after entertaining the whites and consuming a considerable quantity of corn whiskey he demanded the food, but Faro refused, promising him his dinner after the guests had finished theirs. The stranger drew a gun, however, which Faro wrested from him and emptied of ammunition after a brief struggle.

Attacks Next Evening

The next evening about nightfall the negro returned to find Faro in Shantytown, and coming upon him discharged the load into his abdomen. Particulars of the shooting could not be obtained from the excited spectators, other than the fact that Faro fled from his assailant, saving himself further injuries.
Faro was taken shortly after the shooting to the Lincoln hospital in Durham, where the bullet will be removed from his side.

The police of Chapel Hill are conducting an investigation as to the identity of Faro's assailant who supposedly lives in the neighborhood of Roxboro.

Dr. Odum To Speak On South And Citizenship

Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the institute for research in social science at the University, is to deliver a series of lectures at Louisiana State University February 11 and 12. Dr.
Odum has for the subject of these lectures "The South and Citizenship." His three lectures will deal with "The qualities of the Good Citizen," "The Problems of Citizenship," and "The Challenge of the South."

Dr. Odum is to deliver the initial series of lectures for the lecture foundation of the University, lately established in the honor of Judge Edward Douglas White of Louisiana, chief justice of the United States supreme court from 1910 to 1921. The lecture foundation invites each year a distinguished scholar to give a series of lectures dealing with the problems of citizenship and government.

CAROLINA ARTIST OFFERS LECTURES FOR PLAYMAKERS

James A. McLean Will Deliver
Illustrated Discussion of Art in Life Friday.

The Carolina Playmakers will present James A. McLean, portrait and landscape painter and director of the Southern School of Creative Arts, in an illustrated lecture "Art in Life," Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre.

McLean, a native of North Carolina, studied art at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Later, as winner of the Cresson travelling scholarship, he studied in European galleries and schools.

Received Awards

Exhibiting in leading art exhibits throughout the country,
McLean has received prizes from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Mississippi Art Association and state fair, and the North Carolina state fair, besides numerous school awards.
He is a member of the Southern States Art League, the North Carolina Professional Artists Club, holds a fellowship at the Pennsylvania Academy, and is director in the North Carolina State Art Society. He is also founder and director of the Southern School of Creative Arts, established four years ago at Raleigh.

In addition to the lecture, there will be an exhibit of Mc-
Lean's paintings in the Green Room of the Playmakers theatre, to which the public is invited.

High Point Counsel Fights Damage Suit

The controversy between the city of High Point and the University over damages to property in High Point claimed by the University has progressed a step with the filing of an answer by the city. Civic authorities deny any liability.

The University seeks to recover $2,500 as damages to three and a half acres covered by waters of the High Point municipal lake on Deep river. Suit for possession of the land and for damages was filed in September, 1931. Counsel for the city contends that the land in question was a swamp and was not worth more than $200.00. Counsel also contends that the Jamestown church is owner in fee or has an interest in the land.

E. A. ABERNETHY LEAVES POSITION WITH INFIRMARY

Poor Health Causes University
Physician to Resign After Thirteen Years' Service.

Dr. Eric Alonzo Abernethy, University physician for the last thirteen years, yesterday tendered his resignation to President Frank Graham. The President has announced that Dr. Foy Roberson temporarily has been appointed director of the infirmary.

Dr. Graham at the same time announced the appointment of a permanent infirmiry committee, composed of Dr. L. H. Manning, dean of the medical school, chairman; Dr. Charles S. Man-gum, and Dr. W. deB. MacNider.
The committee will make recommendations as to a successor to Dr. Abernethy. All three members of this committee have served as University physician at the infirmiry at one time or another.

To Practice Here

Dr. Abernethy, who has been in poor health for the past several years as the result of a war wound, announced that he and his son, Dr. W. B. Abernethy, would immediately form a partnership and engage in private practice in Chapel Hill.

Since Dr. Abernethy was appointed University physician in 1919, on his return from service overseas, only two students have died in the infirmiry. This is considered a high record of service as a physician in view of the fact that during his term the University has passed through several influenza epidemics and other diseases. President Graham paid tribute to Abernethy's record today.

As a specialist in the treatment of pneumonia and typhoid fever Dr. Abernethy is regarded as having few equals among the doctors in this section. Not only Dr. Abernethy's standing as a physician, but his genial personality and friendliness have endeared him to the people of

SCHOOL JOURNAL RELEASED HERE

High School Journal Issued Yesterday With Articles by Leading Educators.

The first issue of the High School Journal for this year was released yesterday. This number of the paper commences the sixteenth volume.

Dr. Edgar W. Knight, of the school of education who spent several months of last year in Iraq studying conditions there has written an article on the country, the newest state in the world. The article presents a short history of the country, its problems of government, people, and resources.

The first of a series of articles on the relation of the high school principal to the teachers in service, written by L. R. Johnson, principal of the High Point high school, appears in this number. Johnson offers several suggestions for better cooperation of the faculty through reading and activity assignments.

Articles from the Wrangell Institute in Alaska concern pupils in that territory. Louise Smaw contributes to this issue an article dealing with the success of algebra.

Educational Economy In High Places

Of interest to the enthusiasts of the formation of the Greater University should be the agitation on foot in the Legislature to stop the final move to bring about the proposed consolidation of the three institutions. Certain State College alumni residing in Charlotte have started this agitation, and from all signs there will be a hard fight over the issue before the Legislature finally takes its vote.

It is the contention of these State College alumni that the proposed consolidation was made for no other purpose than that it would ultimately result in reduction in the combined expenses of the three institutions to the state. It was first thought that this change would be brought about by making physical changes in the equipment of the present schools. By this arrangement the majority of the engineering materials at State College would be combined with those at Chapel Hill, the school of education would be centered at Greensboro, the school of commerce was to head up at Chapel Hill, and the plant at Raleigh would be reduced to one of junior standing. This was the proposal as made by the committee secured to investigate the situation, and offer suggestions on the basis of the survey.

Because of the fight that the alumni of State College made to this plan, however, the board of trustees of the Greater University was compelled to abandon hopes of effecting such a change. And as a consequence the only thing that has been done that the committee suggested was to consolidate the three boards of trustees, select three vice-presidents to have charge of the present three institutions, and to choose a president who would be known as head of the Greater University, so-called.

According to this plan there will be one more salaried position than before, with no combination of equipment. Under such an arrangement it is hardly possible that the expenses can be reduced.

The DAILY TAR HEEL has thus far been heartily in accord with the plan of consolidation, so long as it would be no more expensive than the present system, and so long as there would be a combination of the educational forces of the state. But now that the original plan has evolved into one which seems incapable of bringing about any sort of combination of the educational forces, and one whereby the expense to the state will be increased rather than reduced, it is folly even to consider putting it into effect.

For this reason, therefore, it is only logical that in times such as these, if the proposed consolidation as presented by the investigation committee — which would certainly reduce educational expenses of the state, and likewise combine the educational forces into one united front — is not carried out to its fullest extent, the idea had best be given up entirely until the sentiment of the public as well as the state's financial condition is more satisfactory to the realization of the proposal.

If, however, there is still a determined effort to make a change of some sort, under the present conditions there is nothing else that can be done but to select a head of the Greater University, as has already been done, and to authorize him to serve also as vice-president of the University branch at Chapel Hill.

Heretofore this publication has opposed such an arrangement, hoping that the entire plan as first suggested could be realized. But seeing that such would be impossible in times such as these, this combination-of-offices idea is the only feasible arrangement left.

The alumni of the two other institutions will, no doubt, oppose such a plan. But now that they are crying to cut expenses themselves, they could hardly oppose an idea such as this which would undoubtedly be much more economical than the one now about to be followed.

A Famous Technocrat has just announced that he will soon have ready for market a new short cut route to a full and complete education, covering any field. It is in form of a liquid, can be carried in handy pocket flask, and may be had in any flavor.

For the Open Eye Policy

To break the monotony of diplomatic considerations, which have so long been concerned almost exclusively with international conferences for world peace and for debt reparations, those in charge might well turn their thoughts for a moment to another problem, a child of the late war, which, as time passes, is becoming more pretentious — whether or not our government should formally recognize the sovereignty of the Soviet republic of Russia.

This question has been before the American people since the treaty of Versailles, but in the name of honor and decency and good government, its settlement has been waived and stifled.

Ten years ago, the Bolshevik experiment was looked upon as a maniacal and diabolical reaction to the new imaginary freedom which burst upon a long oppressed populace, and the nations winked at each other in mingled amusement and wonder, anticipating the early date at which rationalism and common sense would subscribe its verdict of "failed" to the attempt.

Now, the outlook is very different. When all the rest of the world is steeped in economic chaos, Russia pursues her solitary course apparently unperturbed. Her millions, theoretically, sing at their work, unconscious of the delusion of unemployment which haunts the outside world. It would be a platitude to say that Russia presents her most radiant aspect to the peoples of other nations; there, all can not be rose-lined pathways, but neither could failure or prolonged pretention hold high such a smiling face.

It is not a question of whether we, as a nation, shall set our stamp of approval on Bolshevism, but whether we might not, by giving formal recognition, augment our own economic well being, without, at the same time, making any appreciable contribution towards the furtherance of a system might have for its purpose the undermining of our social and economic strata.

Our deferred recognition has, apparently, not restrained Soviet development; we can not be sure that by doing so we would aid it. We are glad to recognize her as a customer for our products; why not as a nation? We can no longer refrain on the ground that she has not a stable government; nor because she has renounced her just debts, for in that, she is not alone.

Russia has ambassadors in every important center of population in this country, who are working subtly, if not silently, with an element which is not trained in the arts of diplomacy, and which may prove to be volatile in the course of time.

Despite the protests and denunciations of our clergymen, statesmen, capitalists and sages, Russia, right or wrong, constitutes a powerful factor in world politics, and, whether we choose or not, we can not much longer disregard her. — W.A.S.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Firstlur

It has been suggested, and we have reciprocated with equanimity, that this column return to its original name "Our Times." The reason, we believe, was that such a title is appropriate since we "youths who will someday guide the destiny of our great nation" are seeing this world in pretty much of a mess. Therefore these times are our times, etc. We might let it go at that.

Stardust

We are interested in knowing what you think about the galactic nebulae, or to put it in simple terms, the clouds of luminous atoms lighted up by the stars in the vicinity of the Milky Way (not an adv.). Some of these nebulae are so far away that it took 140,000,000 years for their light to reach the earth, and that gives you something to think about when people bother you about how long it will take the foreign debtors to come across. Also (and we should tell you that all this comes from Sir James Jeans on the occasion of his recent Henry Sedgwick Memorial Lecture in London) the world is doubling its dimensions every 1,000,000,000 years. Yet, of course, in 1,000,001,933 it'll be a small world after all.

Open Road

While Congress squabbles over the location of a decimal point in the beer bill, one solon who seems to be oblivious to other than the items of humdrum legislation comes forward with a plan to care for the vast army of wandering boys who roam these vast United States. Michigan's Senator Couzens, who states that there are between 300,000 and 400,000 transient boys in the nation, proposes that the army posts care for these youths and employ officers to keep them occupied at some sort of supervised diversion.

Over the railway lines of the nation and along the principal motor arteries pass hundreds of wandering youths in an unending stream, knowing neither where they are going nor what future awaits them. They camp out in barns and take refuge in deserted freight cars. Some pick up odd bits of work here and there, but many do not take the pains to work for the slight living they are able to acquire.

Here are breeding places of crime and social corruption. If such a group is permitted to remain at large for any length of time it may become sufficiently organized to disrupt the normal process of government. Russia, who calls her homeless waifs the "bezprizorni," has been endeavoring to corral them and trains a number for the stage and similar artful pursuits. England is seeking to give her thousands of roaming youngsters free education. Perhaps Congress and the President may make a mistake and lend an ear to something constructive of this sort.

Weeklynewsmagazine

A friend of ours who reads a great deal tells us of an amusing incident in connection with "The March of Time," a Friday evening radio feature of Time magazine. At the end of every program, it seems, the announcer tells of a system whereby potential subscribers may telephone the nearest Western Union office and place a telephonic-telegraphic subscription for Time.

Dubious to the last ditch, our friend thought he would try it out. He called the telegraph office in his town (this was over the holidays) and asked for Time.

There was a formidable interlude and then a sweet voice responded, "It is exactly 5:54, courtesy Western Union."

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

Lo, the Poor Co-ed

Since it was my misfortune to receive my early education at a so-called "female seminary" all I knew about co-eds when I came to Chapel Hill was what I had read in the Buccaneer back in the days when it was the Tar Baby. For the past year and a half I have looked down on the co-eds as they passed in review beneath my second-story window en route to or from the shack, perhaps envying them their gay dresses and the gayer abandon with which they strolled about the campus. And I have never ceased to wonder how anyone so beautiful and so supposedly intelligent could ask such dumb questions.

For exactly a week now I have been a co-ed. To think that I should come to this! Who stoops to folly and learns too late... I have discovered that co-eds do sit on the front row, that co-eds... It was a current wisecracker who said that you never can tell about a co-ed — and if you can tell, don't. So I won't tell. But even a casual observer in a class where the co-eds are outnumbered four to one could tell that if the mistakes of all the lassies are combined they will just about equal the combined mistakes of all the lads in the same class. So if you don't mind, when anyone inquires which class I am a member of (junior or senior?), if you don't mind, I'm still a member of the working class.

I could not escape noticing, however, that the typewriter of a prominent (oh, so very prominent!) co-ed was decorated with a black and white sticker bearing the legend: IT'S TOUGH TO BE FAMOUS. And that reminds me of a short, short story. Back in those other years (sometimes called the good old days) when THE DAILY TAR HEEL was being published daily for the first time in history — it was at the time David Clark was characterizing students here (particularly those who held responsible positions on the University publications) as "baby radicals with plastic minds" — I was introduced to the editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. "So you're the famous G— H—," said I. "Perhaps you mean infamous," said he.

These Columnists

Like the co-eds and the poor the columnists are with us always. One such necessary evil who styles himself the only member of the fourth estate so lacking in conceit as to escape a by-line whenever possible criticized me for leaving in my typewriter a sheet of paper on which I had repeatedly typed that good old stenographic stand-by — Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party. By glancing at other typewriters I discovered how grievously I had erred. Some of the choice gems I found were: Let's turn out the lights and go to bed, You'll get by with a twinkle in your eye, and it is not the policy of THE DAILY TAR HEEL to print such facts.

Tickets For Discussion Thursday Are Selling

A brisk sale of tickets for the Open Forum Discussion series was reported by committee members last night as plans for the first lecture, scheduled for Thursday of this week, nears completion. Fifty large posters with the challenging heading "Can You Afford to Think?" and an outline of the proposed series were distributed over the campus and town yesterday afternoon and numerous students were making efforts to dispense with the remainder of the season tickets remaining on sale. The first program is set for 8:30 o'clock Thursday night in pieces, and serpentine horns. "The music is delicate, refined, mingled with a thread of melody which almost resembles monotony..." such was the elaborate dissertation that Time took space to give.

Shankar is a perfectly proportioned man with a visage bearing some feminine qualities. He is considered a very flirtatious lover who coquettishly throws his neck out of joint to impress his dance partner, Mlle. Smikie, the only Occidental in the entire troupe. She in turn throws her neck out of joint.

Featuring the group of dancers is Shankar's younger brother, Robindia, only twelve years old, who gives a striking performance as a marked dancer interpreting the role of a king of monkeys.

The Hindus were scheduled for tours in the south and west, but their fine performances in New York has forced them to consider a run on Broadway with short trips to Boston and Philadelphia.

Shankar is scheduled to begin his program here, at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night in Memorial hall. All students who do not have Student entertainment tickets can purchase them for one dollar.

Bo Shepard, Not Satisfied With Offense, Gives Intensive Practice

Shooting Against Davidson Was Erratic; Week's Workouts To Be Offensive Play.

V. P. I. FIRST LOOP GAME

Wake Forest Moved to Saturday Offers Freshman Affair as Well as Varsity.

Dissatisfied with the Tar Heel offense in general, Coach Bo Shepard put his squad through an intensive work-out yesterday in an effort to get them clicking right for V. P. I. Friday night and Wake Forest the following evening.

Although the White Phantoms piled up fifty-six points against Davidson last Saturday, entirely too many shots were missed to ease up work for the games this week-end. The Tar Heels should have scored about twenty more points against the Wildcats, and the remaining work-outs this week will be devoted almost entirely to offensive play in an effort to get the squad's eyes on the iron hoops.

The V. P. I. Gobblers will be entertained here Friday night in Carolina's first Southern Conference game. The Gobblers played Maryland last week and took a 40-20 drubbing at the hands of the Old Liners. The University of Maryland, incidentally, is represented by one of the strongest quintets in this sector.

Game Moved to Saturday

Carolina engages Wake Forest Saturday night in the Tin Can in an effort to bag its second Big Five victory. The game originally scheduled for Thursday, has been moved up at the request of the Deacon officials. The freshman game has also been advanced and will be the opener Saturday. Wake Forest will undoubtedly be the strongest five the White Phantoms have met to date.

CO-EDS' ATHLETIC TOURNAMENT TO START THURSDAY

University Co-eds Plan Full Program of Sports for Winter Quarter.

With definite plans made for a bowling tournament Thursday night and with tentative plans formed for basketball and fencing tournaments, a full program of athletics for the co-eds will be presented during the winter quarter.

The bowling tourney in Graham Memorial Thursday night is open not only to co-eds but also to the women in the offices, the library, and the graduate school. Julia Bates Brown, head of the athletic association, and Margaret Baughman will have charge of the contest.

Teams 1 and 2 meet at 7:00 o'clock Thursday night, teams 3 and 4 at 8:00 o'clock, and teams 5 and 6 at 9:00 o'clock.

The teams selected are as follows: team 1: Frances Brennecke, Jean Rose, Clyde Wright, and Margaret Baughman; team 2, Letitia Currie, Jacqueline Johnson, Sarah Turlington, and Julia Bates Brown; team 3, Vivian Grisette, Martha Daniels, Jayne Smoot, and Polly Jacobson; team 4, Jacqueline Small, Louise Helms, June Hogan, and Frances Wood; team 5, Martha Royster, Rebecca Jordan, Mabel Holland, and Margaret Bullitt; team 6, Mrs. James Grimes, Dewey Mitchell, Alice Gattis, and Mary Frances Parker.

All girls desiring to enter the basketball, tennis, or archery tournaments or the next bowling event are requested to sign their names on the bulletin board at Spencer hall.

The Can Opener

by

CLAIBORN M. CARR

THESE PHANTOMS OF OURS are about to get themselves into a lot of trouble. Starting the season as somewhat of a mystery five, these babies swished 122 points through the nets in two games last week. With two twenty-minute quarters in each game, the team has played eighty minutes in all. The answer then is an average of exactly a point and a half a minute for Carolina. The opposition has been able to count 27 points, which means that the Tar Heels have been allowing their opponents to score less than one and one-third points every four minutes of play. This record is not bad and to live up to it throughout the ensuing campaign would be phenomenal.

"FOOTSIE" KNIGHT, who referees most of the big basketball games in North Carolina, was very well impressed at the showing the Tar Heels made against Guilford last Thursday. "Those babies can ring the bell and pass that ball something beautiful," said Knight during the halves. "This is the first time in a good number of years that I have never seen a tall man-mountain jumping center for Carolina, but that Brandt and Glace look pretty good in there. This must have been the

CAROLINA ADOPTS EIGHT MAN TEAM FOR BOXING MEETS

New 155 Pound Class for Fighters Now Used on Carolina's Conference Team.

The new Southern Conference eight man boxing team will be used by Carolina for the first time Saturday night against V. P. I., when the Tar Heels have a 155 pounder in addition to the seven other usual weights, doing battle at Blacksburg.

Last year there were but seven weights in existence: the 115, 125, 135, 145, 160, 175, and unlimited, with four pounds overweight allowed each division. This year, the 160 pound division will be replaced by the 165 pound, and the 155 pound class will be inaugurated.

New Weight

The new 155 pound division breaches the 15 pound weight difference between the welter and middleweight class. In previous years, a boxer weighing 155 pounds was at a distinct disadvantage, having either to take off six pounds and get down to the welter limit, put on five to be a middleweight, or fight 155 pounds as a middleweight, spotting his opponents anywhere from five to nine pounds each time.

The difference this year is a distinct 155 pound class and a 165 pound instead of the old 160 pound division. Instead of four pounds being allowed for overweight in each group, three

MARYLAND WHIPS GOBBLEERS 40-20

Five Teams Play in Conference Last Week as Intersectional Games Occupy Others.

Maryland's Old Line basketball team came through in fine style against their first conference test last week when they turned back the V. P. I. Gobblers, doubling their opponents' score, 40-20.

The Terrapins, leading the loop by their win, showed great strength against the Techmen despite the fact that the Gobblers, doped a pre-season winner, had lost their most sterling men by a series of misfortunes.

Intersectional Contests

During the interim, South Carolina's Southern Conference club played an intersectional contest with Vanderbilt. The two quintets knotted the count throughout the thrill-packed game, forcing the contest to go two extra periods before the Commodores won victory by virtue of a two point margin, 31-29.

Another Southern conference team, Clemson, journeyed to Atlanta, where they played the Georgia Tech Engineers, finally losing 29-28 in the only other "intersectional contest" between Dixie's two conferences.

Other Scores

Other games involving Southern conference teams: Virginia turned back Randolph-Macon 41-17; V. M. I. whipped St. Johns 26-24; State beat Furman 34-14, while Carolina beat Davidson 56-18.

Kappa Sigs, Delta Psi, and Phi Alpha Also Register Wins In Intramural Openers.

Four of the six games scheduled for yesterday afternoon's opening intramural basketball card were played as planned, the other two listed contests resulting in forfeits. In the games which were run off, T. E. P., Kappa Sigma, Delta Psi, and Phi Alpha came out on top to register their initial victories of the season.

Kappa Sig Wins

Kappa Sigma won its game over Phi Sigma Kappa, 29-25, in a hotly contested setto. The game went overtime into a five-minute extra period during which May and Finch, of Kappa Sigma, sank field goals to break the 25-25 tie in which the game had ended.

The runners-up for the 1932 fraternity league leadership went into the new season in fine style, when Tau Epsilon Phi gained a clear-cut 29-16 win at the expense of Alpha Tau Omega. T. E. P. started slowly, but soon took control of the game and was never headed throughout the contest. Hirsch and Eisner led the attack for the winners with eight and six points respectively, while Jones Pollard tallied eight markers to show the way to his teammates on the defeated quintet.

Co-eds Barely Miss Defeat From Highs

The freshman co-ed basketball team barely defeated the girls' squad of the Chapel Hill high school yesterday afternoon, 16-17. The score at the half was 7-10, favoring the high school players, but the brilliant scoring of Rawlings, co-ed forward, lifted the count for the University girls. Rawlings accounted for five of the co-ed tallies in the first half.

Schools To Resume Athletic Relations

Dartmouth and Princeton will meet on the gridiron this year for the first time since before War—1916.

Princeton will be the scene of this resumption of relations on Armistice day of this year, and, instead of the home-and-home agreement, the two outfits will meet once more at the New Jersey school November 24, 1934.

With these two schools back in the fold, it is highly probable that the old "Big Four" of the East, composed of Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, and Princeton, will function once more. All that is lacking now is an annual game between Princeton and Harvard, relations between these two schools being broken.

Hi Team Works Out

The Chapel Hill high school basketball team is preparing for its next game with Stem high school which will take place at Stem Friday, January 13. Chapel Hill high won its first victory last Friday when it beat Norlina 34-9.

pounds will be the limit this year.

The new division is favorable to Coach Crayton Rowe who has several good boys weighing around 155 pounds. Ordinarily, he would have been at a loss as to which division he should place them in, but with the new system, he can place them without trouble.

The team, with time growing short before the V. P. I. meet, worked out on a Saturday for the first time last week. The usual bag-punching, shadow-boxing, and sparring was done, and from the seriousness with which the leather-pushers went about their chores, it appears that they will all be in good condition when the gong sends them out for business Saturday night. Luckily, there are no bad injuries to hinder Coach Rowe's fighters.

Archie Allen's frosh wallpapers went through their paces Saturday, too. A good team appears to be assembling despite the gloomy outlook last week. Coach Allen requests that all freshman boxers who are no longer coming out for the team return their equipment at once.

Chapel Hill who will be glad to learn that he will resume his private practice here.

Entered University

Dr. Abernethy entered the University with the class of 1899 and later attended the medical college of Virginia and the Columbia University medical school. He came to Chapel Hill in 1904 after practicing in Washington for one year. He was appointed physician to the summer school in 1912 and physician for the entire University in 1919. He is at this time in his fifty-sixth year.

He entered active service in May, 1917, as first lieutenant as he was a member of the old Medical Reserve Corps. By successive promotions attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He went overseas with the 78th Division, was wounded in Belgium in July, 1918, was assigned as commanding officer of the 303d Sanitary Train of the 78th Division in September, 1918, and was in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne drives. As a result of his war wound he has been forced to undergo a number of major operations which have impaired his health.

Trustee in 1906

Dr. Abernethy was a member of the University Board of Trustees from 1906 to 1919, and has served as a steward of the Methodist church, as first president of the Chapel Hill Rotary Club, as master of the Masonic Lodge, as president of the Sixth District Medical Society, and as a member of the Chapel Hill school board. He has been a surgeon of the Southern Railway staff for eighteen years. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner, and a member of the Elks and Pythians.

In 1899 he was married to Miss Emmette Mace of Beaufort. He has two children.

Dillard and Blunt, with nine points each, and Hammer, with eight, were the players who accounted for the Sigma Chi defeat. Barney, of the losers, led his team in scoring with eight.

Phi Alpha Triumphs

After running up a decisive margin in the first half, Phi Alpha was hard-pressed to retain its advantage as it downed Delta Tau Delta, 21-16. Giddens and Friedman, with six and five points respectively, led the winners, while Roullier, leader of the losers, accounted for six of his team's points.

Two Forfeits Occur

Both the forfeits which occurred were in the dormitory league, in which no actual contests took place yesterday. Everett scored over the Independents and Manly won from Old West by the forfeit route.

first game for Glace, he seemed to have butter-fingers, he ought to improve right along now." Knight had not seen the Blue Devils in action but was to work the Duke-Furman game Friday.

DAVE McCACHREN, GEORGE Brandt, and Jack Glace played the best all-around game against Davidson in Charlotte Saturday.

These three men were steady throughout the fray with McCachren turning in the best performance according to Coach Shepard. Coach Bo said the team was good in spots and bad in spots, but that the bad spots were by far the most prominent. The Phantoms were clicking in the first half but seemed to lapse the final period and the passing and shooting were both off. Some little gal was hitting it up with Stuart Chandler in Charlotte and Stuart said something to the frail that roused her. She said she was going to give Chandler a bloody nose, or something.

MARVIN RITCH, WHO HAS begun his annual publicity campaign, will have to hold fire for another week as the meeting of the athletic council set for last night was postponed until January 16. That will be fine because Coach Chuck will be here by that time and the lawyer can talk things over before the meeting with Coach Collins, maybe he might be able to persuade Coach Chuck to resign, or else? Coach Bill Cerney has already returned and expects Collins in a day or so. Won't be long now before winter football begins. While we are on football let's put down Andy Kerr's concluding words at the Colgate team's banquet. The witty mentor concluded by saying, "We had an excellent year at Colgate this year, unbeaten, untied, unscored on, and—uninvited."

THE SOUTHERN CONFERENCE is to meet in Richmond Thursday and Dean Hobbs, Mr. Wollen, and Coach Bob are going up. The Virginia capital was named because there is a branch of the Associated Press located there and the meeting would receive more publicity. The fact that the new Southern Conference has no big newspaper centers like Atlanta, Nashville, Knoxville, New Orleans, and Birmingham is one of its biggest weaknesses. Richmond was selected because of its press connections and it is the only real prominent news center in our conference. It is a wonderful opportunity for Charlotte, or Durham to take the lead as North Carolina, with three prominent members of the conference, will be the center of action. There is no reason either why Chapel Hill could not be made the focal point of the new conference that Atlanta was for the old league.

TWO SOLOISTS TO PLAY ON SALON'S PROGRAM SUNDAY

Dan Field, Cellist, and David Bennett, Flutist, Will Augment Ensemble Concert.

According to an announcement by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Carolina Salon Ensemble, the program to be presented by the ensemble Sunday afternoon, January 15, in Graham Memorial will have in addition to its scheduled orchestral selections several instrumental solos by two student musicians.

Dan Field, cellist, will offer the solo La Cinquantine by Gabriel-Marie, and David Bennett, flutist, will interpret the Idylle (opus 116) of Benjamin Godard.

Field, a freshman in the school of engineering, received his musical training in the Greensboro schools, from which he was graduated last spring. He has made numerous appearances in instrumental combinations in contests and in concerts and played in the symphony orchestra of Columbia University in New York City. He also appeared as soloist with the salon ensemble in its presentation at the Grainger high school, Kingston, last quarter.

Trained Musician

Bennett, a student in the music school, received his early training under Emil Medicus, of Asheville, and in the Asheville high school orchestra. He is now studying flute under Lamar Stringfield. Bennett was winner of the contest for flute solo held in connection with the annual state music contest for high schools at Greensboro several years ago.

The remainder of Sunday's program will consist of numbers by the entire ensemble taken from the literature of modern French, Russian, and American music.

DATE IS CHANGED FOR PITT DEBATE

Other Contests Scheduled; Six Trips Planned for Carolina Debating Team.

It was announced yesterday by Professor W. A. Olsen of the English department that the debate with the University of Pittsburgh on "The Cancellation of War Debts" had been changed from February 9 to January 31.

Professor Olsen received a communication from the University of Pittsburgh requesting that the date be changed; this necessitated the tryouts being changed from January 30 to January 23.

At the debate group meeting Monday night, Professor Olsen announced that there would be a debate with Tulane here, February 27, on "American versus Russian Civilization," that there would be a radio debate with the University of Virginia at Richmond in February, and that there would probably be a debating trip to Winthrop College.

In addition to these short trips, there will be three long trips: one ending in New Orleans at Tulane, one western trip, and one trip to New York and Boston. On the northern trip there will also be a debate with George Washington University on "The British System of Radio Control."

Med Association Will Entertain With Dance

At a meeting of the Medical Association of the University yesterday, plans were laid for a dance to be given February 11. It has not yet been decided where the dance will take place. A committee has been appointed to select an orchestra. A limited number of bids will be given to students who are not members of the association. The members of the committee are C. Carr, C. Powell, Glen Dixon, Paul Rhodes, and Jack Shufford.

TICKET SALE FOR FORUM SERIES TO STOP TOMORROW

Dr. Broadus Mitchell, First Speaker, to Lecture on "The American Scene—1932."

Sale of tickets for the Open Forum Discussion series will be concluded tomorrow afternoon as members of the forum executive committee make a final drive for contributions prior to the opening of the series tomorrow night. Dr. Broadus Mitchell, professor of political economy at Johns Hopkins University, and Dr. Justin Miller, dean of the Duke University Law School will appear on the platform in the first discussion, speaking on the subject "The American Scene—1932."

Mitchell is scheduled to speak on the same subject in Greensboro tonight on a straight L. I. D. program sponsored by the Greensboro Civic Forum. Since it is the purpose of presenting both sides of the eight questions planned for the series, the forum group here will balance the program with able speakers representing the contrary side of each discussion.

Dr. Mitchell replaces Powers Hapgood of Columbia Conserve, Inc., who was seriously wounded during a shooting match recently. After graduating from the University of South Carolina Mitchell entered newspaper work. Later he became interested in politics and obtained his doctorate from Johns Hopkins. His writings include The Rise of Cotton Mills in the South, Frederick Law Olmstead, A Critic of the Old South, The Industrial Revolution in the South, A Preface to Economics and William Gregg, Factory Master of the Old South.

UNIVERSITY NEEDS VOLUNTARY AID FROM PEOPLE OF NORTH CAROLINA

Favorable Comment From Some of World's Greatest Thinkers and Statesmen Proves Worth of Institution, and Press Bewails Short-Sightedness of Legislature Towards Budget.

Whether the University, "the eldest child of the state," is to be allowed to sink slowly into the rank of mediocre institutions because of lack of sufficient state appropriations to keep in motion that "vibrant wave of light and healing" or whether the people of the state will voluntarily come to its aid by the realization that the University is the "central ganglia of educational system" and on it "hangs decent efficiency and progress" is a problem which has taken a front place among the important legislative questions confronting the citizens of the state today.

The intelligent, far-seeing leaders in the state's political and educational life agree that the University deserves support from the people of the state in this time of great need. At the alumni meeting which met in Chapel Hill the early part of December, support was pledged to President Graham in his attempt to convey to the people of the state the background of the budget request of the University. To the University alumni the most important factor to be discussed at their meeting was how to meet the financial requirements of the University during the coming year.

Alumni Heard Budget Plan To this group President Graham presented in a speech the budget plan for the coming year and showed how the expenses of the University had been cut so

The dates of the two subsequent dances have been tentatively set for January 28 and February 18, and will be respectively the sixth and seventh of the group of nine dances which the Grail has scheduled for the academic year.

Saturday Nick Laney and his Blue Devils will furnish the music while Hamilton Hobgood will manage the committees arranging the decorations for the gymnasium. The price per person is set at $1.00, tax free. The affair will be closed to freshmen.

THEATRE TRY-OUTS FOR SHAW PLAY UNFINISHED

Try-outs for the final selection of characters for the Carolina Playmakers' next production, You Never Can Tell, were continued last night in the Playmaker theatre. Only very tentative selections of students for the cast were made at the try-outs Monday on account of a large number of people out for each part.

The presentation of this well known comedy by George Bernard Shaw will take place on February 2, 3, and 4. The play is a part of the Playmakers' Shaw-Henderson program. A feature of the presentation will be an address by Dr. Archibald Henderson.

WOODHOUSE PANS TECHNOCRACY AT WEEKLY LECTURE

Speaker for Bull's Head Program Declares New Theories Impractical and Inadvisable.

Professor E. J. Woodhouse addressed a large audience yesterday in Gerrard hall at the weekly lecture conducted by the Bull's Head. Professor Woodhouse' subject was "Technocracy as applied to Government," and the speech consisted of his ideas on this latest bugaboo of capitalism.

Woodhouse admitted his inadequacy as interpreting the true meaning of technocracy, but gave an illuminating discourse on the impracticability and inadvisability of the plan, which is being promulgated by a group of economists under Howard Scott, at Columbia University. An open discussion after the lecture was well participated in, and included varied views on Woodhouse' definition and the idea itself.

The talk was originally to have been presented in the Bull's Head room in the Y. M. C. A., but due to the excessive interest manifested by the large attendance, the meeting place was changed to Gerrard hall.

Dorm Managers Meet

Managers of dormitory service rooms met in Graham Memorial Monday night at their first monthly meeting of the winter quarter. P. L. Burch, of the buildings department, and Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary, conducted the program, which consisted of a discussion and plans for operation of the rooms during the coming quarter.

Coffman Will Address Philology Club Tonight

The philological club will convene for its first meeting of the new year tonight in the lounge of the Graduate club, Smith building, at 7:30 o'clock.

The speaker of the evening will be Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the University department of English, who will address the club on the experience of a passage from Horace at the hands of the writers of the middle ages, including Geoffrey Chaucer.

DEAN C. R. SKINNER TO LEAD SEMINAR ON RELIGION HERE

Boston Professor Will Conduct Discussion of Modern Problems at Carolina Inn.

A seminar in liberal religion is to be conducted in Chapel Hill January 16-20 at the Carolina Inn, with Professor Clarence R. Skinner, dean-elect of the Crane theological school of Tufts College, near Boston, Massachusetts delivering the lectures and leading the discussions. The seminar will be designed primarily for students and faculty members of the University, but townspeople are cordially invited to attend and to participate in the discussions. Meetings are scheduled for 8:00 o'clock each evening, except Saturday, and admission will be free.

Preceding the seminar, a special evening service will be held at the Carolina Inn Sunday evening, January 15, at 8:00 o'clock, Dean Skinner giving the address.

Part of State Project

The seminar is a part of a state-wide project for education in liberal religion planned by a newly organized Mission Brotherhood and the Unitarian Laymen's League, both of which have headquarters in Boston. Ten simultaneous series of meetings are to be conducted the week of January 15-22 by leading representatives of the Unitarian and Universalist fellowships. The meetings in the other nine communities will take the form of preaching missions, and will be held at Asheville, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Wilmington, Greensboro, Goldsboro, Durham, High Point and Rocky Mount.

Professor Raymond Adams of the department of English is chairman of the committee making plans for the seminar. Other members are Professor L. M. Brooks of the department of sociology, A. C. Howell of the department of English, Dr. J. F. Dashiell, of the department of psychology and Harry Comer, secretary of the University Y. M. C. A.

Touches Modern Life

"This seminar will consider religion in terms of modern thought and life," Professor Adams said yesterday. "It is planned particularly for men and women who are interested in what religion means today in the light of the findings of the physical and social sciences and in relation to the actual needs of present-day individual and social life. Everyone, however, is cordially invited to attend Dr. Skinner's lectures and to remain for the discussion, regardless of whether he wishes to participate and regardless of what his own religious convictions may be."

SHANKAR DANCERS PRESENT UNUSUAL PROGRAM TONIGHT

Hindu Artists to Reveal Strange Oriental Dances in Entertainment in Memorial Hall.

"When the Westerner approaches the dance of the East, it is useless for him to attempt to 'understand' it; to do so is merely to raise a barrier that cannot be penetrated." Thus writes John Martin, in the New York Times, after reviewing the Hindu program presented by Shankar and his dancers, who will appear in Memorial hall tonight at 8:30 o'clock, as the fifth in the series of student entertainments at the University throughout the year.

Shankar, an East Indian dancer who once collaborated with Anna Pavlowa, brings to Chapel Hill a company of sixteen Orientals, eight male and female dancers and eight musicians. Shankar himself is the featured artist, although the entire group are exceptionally outstanding in their respective positions. The dances deal with love and the gods, and the blending of their movements with the gorgeous Hindu music produces a sensational performance. Newspaper reports state that the dancers and musicians carry out their parts with an uncanny grace, something wholly different from anything which people of this world have ever seen.

Tickets for Shankar's program can be purchased for one dollar. Students holding entertainment booklets for the winter quarter will be admitted on presenting the first ticket.

The Student Entertainment Committee felt that a performance of such a distinctly eastern flavor would broaden the minds and concepts of the students and increase their understanding of foreign culture much more than any other program available.

DYER ELECTED TO NATIONAL OFFICE

Music Head Made Chairman of Choral Festivals for National Federation of Music Clubs.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, has been elected national chairman of choral festivals for the National Federation of Music Clubs. His term of office officially began December first.

As national chairman Professor Dyer's duties include organizing state choral festivals over the entire country. Organization of these and other festivals of counties and districts is already under way. Approximately one hundred such events will be held between the present date and June. The organization of these festivals will be based upon a festival directory just published at the direction of Dr. Dyer.

At the national convention of the Federation of Music clubs to take place in Minneapolis in May, Dyer will direct the presentation of a series of miniature festivals covering a five-day period. The demonstration will show the function of his department.

Professor Dyer directed the choral festival of the State Federation last spring in Charlotte, and will again act in the capacity of director at this year's Federation meet in Raleigh.

The Professor's Responsibility

Despite the fact that a professor may teach a course which is listed as an "elective," he, nevertheless, can not properly excuse himself from the responsibility he owes to his students of making the course interesting in its presentation as well as stimulating to personal research in the subject.

This belief that he is freed from the obligation to his students in an "elective" course usually comes as a result of considerable rationalizing on the part of the professor. He sees that his students are dissatisfied with his method of presenting the course. But rather than do anything about it, he tells himself, "These students came into this class of their own choice. They knew what they were doing, and consequently should be satisfied with what they have got themselves into."

This reasoning might well be expected of some professor who has no desire to develop himself further. It is characteristic of laziness. It bristles with narrow-mindedness. It is the position that any static mind would be expected to take. But in an educational institution, where the progressive view-point predominates, such an opinion has absolutely no place.

The professor who takes this attitude is not fair to his students. In most cases they have registered for his course hoping for something stimulating, something thought-provoking. But as soon as the course falls short of these expectations, it not only becomes a waste of the students' time to attend, but also it is likely to deaden completely their interest in that subject for the future.

Any professor who is guilty of this habit would profit by reconsidering his position, and changing his teaching tactics so that his course will at least justify its existence in the college curriculum.

The increasing popularity of football in South America should at least keep the boys' minds off their New Year's revolutions.

Charlatans, 1933 Model

Our legislators are tinkers. Our executives are jacks-of-all political trades. Ours is a government of quacks.

With an air of profundity that would be comic were it not tragic in its probable consequences, our quack-statesmen have diagnosed the condition of the nation. Charlatans that they are, they are impressed with their own pseudo-profundity in discovering symptoms of social disease which are eloquently evident in millions of shivering bodies, millions of hungry stomachs, millions of cramped purses. And foolishly, our quacks have set about to remove the symptoms rather than to cure the disease itself.

With cure-all remedies of one kind or another, they are trying to delude their patients by temporarily staving off starvation, by artificially stimulating business, by painless methods of extracting more taxes. They hope to obscure the symptoms of disease while Time effects a cure. Little thought is given to the cause of the symptoms, the disease itself. With supreme optimism—if not irresponsible fatalism—they believe that our social, political and economic order is naturally sound and efficaciously benevolent and that the belly-pains of today are merely a regrettable but inevitable consequence of yesterday's gluttony. Rub his tummy and give him a dose of paregoric to put him to sleep and tomorrow he will be all right again.

If all—or most—all—our statesmen are quacks, it is the fault of our political system, our tradition of office-seeking. Men, and many of them, seek the office, rather than the office seeking the man. Most of our elective offices are filled by men who have made office-seeking their vocation—or worse, still, their avocation. They devote their careers not to studying the problems of society and government but to the problems of getting and holding office. With them, kissing babies is a greater art than balancing budgets. They are politicians, not statesmen (if such a distinction may be permitted).

When one of these men suddenly, by a favorable turn in political fortunes, finds himself shouldered with governmental responsibility, he tries frantically to learn something about his job. Between election and accession, he hurriedly confers with experts, consults the records and drafts speeches. Before this time, his efforts have primarily been exerted in getting elected. Quite often, as the late President Coolidge wisely did, he may upon finding himself beyond his depth turn the job over to more competent hands and wiser heads. Evidently, President-elect F. Delano R. is going to "let George (Raymond et al.) do it."

Of course, there are good men in our government, many of the measures which they propose are equally good and necessary, and no matter how good a man may be he cannot function unless he is first elected, but a convincing editorial never gives the other side of the picture.—E.C.D.

Be it resolved that the University make the state legislature a present of six pocket knives, three pairs of sharp scissors, half a dozen razors, nine axes, and a sword, to facilitate its program of cutting appropriations.

"Budget, can you spare a dime?" sings Mayor William D. Jennings of Augusta, Georgia. Well, North Carolina's is spare about eight millions dollars, if that's any consolation.

So, Let's Put

Out the Light and—

When are we coming out of it? This interrogation—expressed verbally or otherwise—relating to the present economic maladjustment seems as yet destined to be answered correctly by no one.

A glance through some of the so-called authoritative business and industrial periodicals as well as the more popular journals will soon bring out the fact that not a month has passed during the last three years during which there has not been a confident prediction that an "upturn" was imminent. Rather than constituting sound economic analyses most of these forecasts have been mere "catchings at straws." Even the more reputable and highly esteemed men of note have been guilty of this sort of thing. Lack of realism and lack of sincerity have been only too apparent.

It seems that under our present order of things the business cycle—with its attendant evils of unemployment, duress and social deterioration—is inevitable. Likewise it appears that the more complex and interdependent our world structure becomes the greater are the chances for a severe, generalized disorganization during the depth portion of the cycle.

Prior to the period in man's history which embraces the advent and application of mechanical invention, there was undoubtedly widespread privation and suffering, but in most cases there was a real lack in goods to satisfy human needs. With the coming of the machine and the factory system an abundance of material goods gradually took the place of the former scarcity. Large-scale or mass production demanded more and more capital outlay and hence more long-time credit transactions. All this was a tremendous complication over the older handicraft methods, and was looked upon as an absolute advance in man's civilized status.

But it seems that there will be a joker in every pack to foil the "best laid plans . . ." In this case the joker turned out to be the basic precept of every man for himself. Naturally such a policy of universal self-interest led to many periods of maladjustment in supply and demand, contraction of credit, and money panics—with the end result being a lowered scale of living and much suffering.

Efforts to coordinate supply and demand under capitalistic organization have been numerous, but to date have born little fruit. The present interest in long-time economic planning represents the old effort to secure a balanced productive machinery. It is quite evident that the title New Economic Era which was applied to the 1922-29 period was a misnomer. We shall probably continue having depressions as long as our present system endures. When we arrive at the joyful day when capitalism has been patched up completely something else altogether.—V. J.L.

Technocracy claims to give us razor blades that will last for life, but we notice that it doesn't make any pretensions as to a solution of what to do with the old ones.

From London comes the prediction that men will soon be wearing shoes dyed to match their clothes. All that most of us need is a shine to match the old blue serge.

At a recent wedding in Florida, a bride served a cake weighing five hundred pounds. It's going to be tough on hubby to get used to her biscuits.

Said the Governor Of Georgia—

The current ado over the motion picture "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" and the struggle between New Jersey and Georgia over the custody of the author has brought down upon the South in general and Georgia in particular a wave of adverse public opinion. As the clatter of half cocked public sentiment subsides it becomes evident that the chain gang system and southern justice is not as bad as has been painted. Upon realization that the man around whom the controversy centers is not the noble hero of the screen but a cheap faker who later confessed that his story was false and exaggerated the resentment of the southern peoples becomes more acute.

The unwarranted action of New Jersey's governor in refusing to return Burns to Georgia has caused much bitter feeling. The demand of the governor of Georgia was legal and legitimate and our laws and safety depend upon the right of a state to gain extradition for persons it wants. Burns is wanted in Georgia as he has been in other states and the action of the governor of New Jersey besides being a disgusting example of demagogical pandering to the public taste establishes the dangerous possibility that each state may at the whim of its executive become a refuge for the criminals of other states.

We must confess that the chain gang and the southern penal system are inferior in many ways. Perhaps some brutality does exist that might be well done away with but it is not near so prevalent as some would have us believe. These critics in their zeal overlook one salient fact, that the southern penal system fulfills the first requirement—it works. In this part of the country one may go away leaving house and property unlocked and knowing that everything is safe. Crime is infrequent because the criminal knows that when he is caught his conviction is swift and sure. There are no crooked politicians or machine lawyers to get him off and the punishment is one that hardly encourages repetition of the offense. On the other hand in New York, Illinois, and other states with highly advanced and superior penal systems crime flourishes to an incredible degree. Bootleggers, gangsters, and other criminals terrorize entire cities carrying on brutal murders under the noses of ineffectual police and if caught are soon freed thru the machinations of some cheap politician. Occasionally some less fortunate malfactor without influence or having incurred the dislike of his captors is brutally tortured to death by third degree methods that shock the nation. Brutality and inhumanity are peculiar to no state or section. The people of the South have chosen between a severe system that works and an advanced and expensive one that does not—and they are satisfied with their decision.—J.F.A.

With Contemporaries

The Example Of Youth

At the University of Illinois more than 3,000 students, are working for part or all of their expenses, according to a report just made, and during the school year, in spite of the depression, these students make, it is estimated, more than $235,000.

Dean Dwight Brown, of that university, assumes that similar student work to secure an education is going on in other universities, and that the earnings of students in the 50 largest colleges and universities throughout the country amount to $5,000,000 for the school year. Other students in the hundreds of smaller institutions must greatly increase this sum.

These working students are making more than money. They are shaping enlightened lives for themselves. In times like these their difficulties in earning money are increased as they are for business men. Yet college enrollments remain high though the incomes of parents decrease. The ranks of the working students are swollen by those who in normal times could depend wholly upon their parents for their education.

Nothing could furnish stronger proof of the desire of youth for higher education than the fidelity of students all over America who seek to earn their way against the mounting difficulties of the depression. American youth has set an example to legislators. If young Americans show such determination in seeking an education, the state will fail them if it does not provide the best. Economies in all government expenditures are imperatively necessary, but the balancing of the budget today is no more imperative than the education of the men and women of tomorrow.—News and Observer.

Lady Puffers and Why They Puff

Never before have we seen so many ladies puffing on cigarettes. The tobacco habit seems firmly embedded as a feminine habit in these parts, along with most other parts of this country. Frankly, we view the change with no cheers, but there is no denying that the tobacco companies are profiting more from the fairer sex than ever before.

We hardly think lassies smoke because they enjoy it. A few might, but the girls who can handle the cubes with finesse are by far in the minority. Most of them do it because they think it looks pretty keen. We can already hear the shrieks of protest with which the skirt wearers will greet this accusation. But we have heard these before and they will not change our opinion.

We are not among those who deny the girls the privilege and right of smoking. Most certainly that is as much their prerogative as it is for the males. The funny part of it, though, is that most girls exercise that right just to show their equality and independence more than because they feel a desire for the nasty weed.

It is an inherent weakness of the frail sex to copy their brethren. The men voted, the women wanted to do the same. The men smoked cigarettes, and so the girls had the same desire. There are few fields left for the male species. He has taken recourse to the pipe, and so far his female imitators have been limited to the backwoods and hills, but the movement may spread to civilization any time. The men have tried cigars and not many of the femmes have followed suit, as yet, but even here the male monopoly is not secure. There is but one field left to the men alone, and that is the somewhat unattractive sport of chewing tobacco, but we are almost afraid to say that the women will leave this field to the opposite sex indefinitely.

And we have but little doubt that the next generation will be born with nicotine fingers.—Daily O'Collegian.

DR. BROWN CONCLUDES

HOLY GRAIL A MYTH

The Holy Grail is a myth. This is the conclusion of Dr. Arthur C. L. Brown, professor of English literature at Northwestern, who has recently completed a ten-year quest through France, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales for that legendary cup, the Holy Grail of so many knightly adventures.

The professor discovered that the original Holy Grail was an ancient Irish talisman adopted by the Welsh and passed with the story of King Arthur into French literature, and only in recent times has the cup been connected with the service of the church.

CAROLINA

Carolina Will Drop No Sports Despite Small Football Returns

University Shows Liberal Policies by Refusing to Follow Example of Others.

SCHEDULES PARED SOME

Some Intersectional Tilts Are Dropped and Traveling Expenses Cut to Minimum.

By M. R. Alexander

The widespread way in which southern colleges and universities have been curtailing athletic programs and lopping off minor sports in this year of depreciated football-gates calls attention to and serves to emphasize Carolina's liberal attitude in these matters.

The coaching staff has done without several student assistants to be sure. Likewise traveling budgets have been curtailed, equipment bills watched carefully, and schedules pared slightly.

But the University has not dropped any sport from its program, and from the liberality with which the stock room is still issuing equipment, reconditioned equipment though some of it may be, the athletic department is standing as steadfastly as ever by its ideal of the widest possible student participation in athletics.

Fall Sets New Record

Carolina's record in this respect in the fall was perhaps the best ever made here. Including intramural sports and the preliminary training and practice periods in other than autumn sports, Carolina's athletic program drew a participation of 1,500 in a student body of approximately 2,300 boys.

Two or three intersectional contests were dropped from this winter's schedules, but otherwise the cards have not been cut noticeably and the winter sports teams of 1933 will have the benefit of practically the same competition as Carolina teams have had for the past several years.

To a considerable degree, however, this has been made possible, despite the shrunken football revenues, by the cooperation of coaches and squads, in arranging their trips so as to travel, sleep and eat at the minimum expense.

Spring Plans Cut Slightly

As to prospects for the spring, Graduate Manager Charles T. Woollen has already said that schedules would be curtailed slightly but the University would still try to "maintain its contacts" while giving its teams good competition. It is not contemplated to drop any sports or any coaches, but the Athletic Association will, of course, go ahead in its practice of "sane economy."

Athletic Director R. A. Fetzner's only comment Tuesday was that he was intent on getting the best possible results from coaching staff and from equipment issued. Said he: "Heretofore I am glad to say we have not had to place any limit on the number of men on a squad, but we must require that every man having equipment practice regularly and train his honest best, and we are asking the cooperation of students in this matter."

Georgia Tech's Slash

One of the most classic announcements of athletic curtailments came this week from Coach Bill Alexander and Georgia Tech. On the dressing room wall Coach Bill posted his notice, as follows:

"Football starts February 20, equipment limited to 50 men.

"Baseball starts February 20, equipment limited to 40 men.

"Track starts February 20, equipment limited to 40 men.

Tin Can Tales

by MARLING SPIKE

They raise bright pugs at Carolina. Norm Quarles, who rooms with Frank McIntosh, took a crack at his roomie, as all good Carolina students do from time to time, missed Frank, and nailed the wall or some other immovable object with his fist. Result: one cracked hand. Ain't that nice with the season just about under way? Moral: don't swing on the roomie unless he happens to write a column for the Tar Heel.

Quarles' little stunt reminds us that Peyton Brown once pulled a similar bright one. The Wildcat was sparring gently and gracefully down in the Tin Can one day, and neglected to pay a great deal of attention to his surroundings. Peyton shot a right hand and smacked one of those lovely steel girders that keep the roof from falling in. The managerial staff all but swooned, but Peyton, bright lad that he is, merely grinned sheepishly and backed away.

By the way, they tell us that a certain card game down in one of the quadrangles lasted for several days and nights recently until some bright member of the Tar Heel staff lost all his money, screamed bloody murder, and broke up the session by waving a fruit jar over the winner's head. It's always a good idea to play cards with a member of the Tar Heel staff for they always lose, but be careful and don't let them get a fruit jar in hand.

The White Phantoms have done nobly against a couple of set-ups and the campus optimists are predicting great things of them, but what we're wondering is what the boys will do when they run up against such softies as State and Duke will present (State and Duke are always easy for the Tar Heels, if you remember) and the various and sundry teams that will be out to prove themselves entitled to the Southern Conference championship.

Say, let's have a little popular opinion. That's always a swell thing when the problem of filling up space pops up. (It's served to save other lousy columns also.)

Here's the idea: the only sport you've seen in action as yet is the basketball team, so take the cage animals and decide on the man you get the greatest amount of pleasure out of watching. Put his name and your reasons for selecting him on a piece of paper and send it in, addressed to this column. Since stamps are rather precious, just stick your missile under the door or give it to a member of the Tar Heel staff, and we'll print your opinion. In case you value your reputation greatly, just sign your initials. Old Marling Spike will take the blame, but kindly refrain from the use of profanity.

INDOOR GAMES TO TAKE PLACE HERE EARLY IN MARCH

Conference and Enlarged Non-Conference Division Will Compete in Tin Can.

The date for the fourth annual Southern Conference indoor games has been set for March 4, R. A. Fetzner, director of athletics at Carolina and chairman of the games committee, announced yesterday.

The non-conference division will be enlarged this year, Coach Fetzner stated. Every institution left in the conference has pledged its support, guaranteeing that the 1933 meet will live up to the high standards of those held in the three preceding years.

Invitations Sent Out

Invitations and preliminary announcements have already been sent to a representative group in all four divisions, and indications point to a large participation. The conference division is limited to member institutions, but the three divisions are open to all schools falling within the classes.

The high set of records which have been established for the conference division are:

60-yard dash: 6.4 seconds, Farmer (N.C.) 1930, Burnett (Miss.) 1932.

70-yard low hurdles: 8 seconds, Finkelstein (W. and L.) 1931, Brownlee (Duke) 1932.

440-yard run: 54.2 seconds, Weil (N.C.) 1931.

880-yard run: 2 minutes 2 seconds, Linzey (Md.) 1930.

One mile run: 4 minutes 29.8 seconds, Jensen (N.C.) 1931.

Two mile run: 9 minutes 57.4 seconds, Young (Ga.) 1930.

One mile relay: 3 minutes 38.6 seconds, (N.C.) Pensen, Marland, Weil, Drane, 1931.

Shot put: 46 feet one-half inch, Coleman (Auburn) 1931.

TRACK SQUAD CUT IN TWO PARTS FOR STRENUOUS WORK

Complex Scholastic Schedules And Need for Individual Attention Cause Change.

Carolina's varsity track teams have been divided into two squads holding separate workouts at two different periods daily on Emerson field. This move was formulated by the track mentors in order to accommodate candidates having complex schedules; and above all, to give the coaches an opportunity to get in much needed individual attention for the aspirants.

One group takes its work at 3:15 o'clock while the other part has its work-out at 4:15 o'clock. Every man on the varsity or freshman teams who was issued equipment must report and check in daily or else his equipment will be recalled. Dale Ranson, assistant coach of track, said yesterday, "All men are wanted out; we have enough equipment for every man who is going to take his work seriously; and we want these men to come out daily."

Prospects Look Bad

When asked about this year's prospects Ranson appeared pessimistic, and said, "If we must have a successful team, all the individual candidates out for the team must be better than they have ever been before. This will be absolutely compulsory in or-

ROWE FORCED TO CHANGE LINE-UP

Raymer's Cold Forces Boxing Coach to Move Quarles Into Lightweight Class.

With Furches Raymer in the infirmary yesterday suffering from a severe cold, Coach Crayton Rowe was forced to make a belated change in a line-up that had been definite until Furch got his unfortunate break.

The star of last year's freshman team, Norm Quarles, who fought as a featherweight, will step into the lightweight breach on Saturday night for Carolina against V. P. I. at Blacksburg.

Quarles went undefeated as a freshman. This will be, however, his first start as a lightweight and he will be on the spot for fair this time. Chances are Norm will come through for he has displayed all kinds of class during the training period, is in great condition, and, in his one year of boxing, he learned fast and is one of the smartest ringmen performing daily at the Tin Can.

Saturday's Bouts Important

Saturday night should be a tip-off for what is in store for Carolina's scrappers this season. V. P. I., always tough, is expected by Coach Rowe to furnish its usual stern opposition and the present question mark of condition and ability will be solved in front of the coach and the spectators. There will be no room left for doubt when the bouts are over.

Two other fighters, besides Quarles, will be making their first varsity starts Saturday. Lee Berke and Sam Gidiansky, both, like Quarles, undefeated last year as freshmen, will answer the gong as varsity men. Berke will be fighting in the newly born 155 pound division while Sam will sling leather as a middleweight.

Gidiansky received a rather bad cut yesterday in sparring, but Coach Rowe expects it to be healed by ring time. Berke is in good shape, has no injuries plaguing him, and appears ready to go right now.

Bantamweight Still a Question

The problem of the bantamweights still seems to be unsettled; but right now Cliff Glover seems to have it by an eyelash over Pete Ivey. Glover, in his one fight last year, stood the spectators on their heads. Going in against Dave Stoops, National Intercollegiate 115 pound champion, Glover was not conceded a chance; but Cliff, letting fly with a barrage of dynamite, draped him all over the ring floor, only to have Stoops, a much more experienced boxer, weather the storm and come up off the canvas to stop the two-fisted Glover in the third.

RUBLE AIDING COACHES IN TRAINING VAULTERS

Raymond Ruble, former star pole vaulter at Carolina and Southern conference indoor champion in 1931, is spending a two-week vacation at his home here and is utilizing his spare time to help the Carolina coaches with a new crop of vaulters.

Ruble was graduated from the engineering school after a fine scholastic record in 1931. He is a research chemist now with the Texaco Oil Company Laboratories in Beacon, N. Y., and will return to his position there after January 15.

Beauty Marries Ideal Man

Ruth Wenter, nineteen-year-old beauty contest winner and singer, will become the bride of Paul Cummings, law student who was voted the "ideal man" by co-eds at Northwestern University. Wayne King, orchestra leader, will be best man.

PIKA'S WIN OVER PHI KAPPA SIGMA IN EXTRA PERIOD

S. A. E. Triumphs Over D. K. E. In Hard Fought Tilt; Mangum Downs Steele.

S. A. E., Mangum, Phi Delta Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha, and the Crescent Cafeteria quintets emerged victorious in their first contests of the current intramural basketball season yesterday afternoon.

D. K. E. Bows to S. A. E.

Delta Kappa Epsilon dropped a fast and hard-fought game to S. A. E., last year's fraternity league champions, 28-20. The Deke outfit took an early lead, but S. A. E. jumped into a 13-9 advantage at half time and was never headed thereafter. The losers staged a rally near the end of the contest, but it was of no avail. McDonnell, with thirteen points, and Shuford, with six, led the winners' attack, while Alexander, Burnett, and Willis played best for the Dekes.

Pikas Score

Phi Kappa Sigma, after leading at half time, 13-11, dropped a close decision to Pi Kappa Alpha, 26-23, in a game which went into an overtime period. The regular game ended with the teams deadlocked at 21-21. In the extra period Spiers, who had gone through the regular game scoreless, dropped two field goals, and Fawcett sank a foul, to give their team its margin of victory. Reid, of the losers, sank a long goal at the final whistle, but it was not enough to give his team the victory.

New Dorms Lose

Crescent Cafeteria, which has taken the place of the Question Marks in the basketball race, got off to an auspicious start in its initial contest, crushing New Dorms by the score of 29-10. Hunter led the scoring for the winners, with ten points, while Dixon accounted for six of the losers' markers.

Phi Delta Chi Wins

Sigma Nu dropped a close game to Phi Delta Chi, 24-23. The pharmacists trailed throughout the first part of the game, but staged a strong comeback to come out on top at the final whistle. Braham scored twelve points for the winners and Dudley, his teammate, accounted for eight more. Allen led the Sigma Nu scorers with nine markers.

Steele Loses

Vick and McRae led Mangum to victory in its opening game of the season as Steele proved too weak for the Mangum outfit. DuPree and Rehm played best for the losers, who came out on the short end of a 29-13 score.

Today's Schedule

Today's intramural basketball schedule follows:

3:45 p. m.—(1) Carr vs. Rufin; (2) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon; (3) Kappa Alpha vs. Zeta Psi.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Phi Delta Theta vs. Theta Chi; (2) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Lambda Chi Alpha; (3) Aycock vs. Lewis.

Grid Star Catches Own Forward Pass

It comes from the Ohio State Lantern that Lonis (Pete) Butler, Colorado Teachers College, halfback caught his own pass for a winning touchdown with the Teachers on the short end of a 7-0 score against Colorado College.

With only five minutes left in the game, Butler sent a long pass down the field and went down to cover the throw. Fries, Colorado College end in a scramble to break up the play batted the ball up in the air. By this time Butler was in the play, caught the ball and ran for a touchdown.

SCHOOL TOURNEY WILL MEET HERE

Third Annual State Boxing and Wrestling Tournament Is Scheduled for February.

The third annual boxing and wrestling tournaments for North Carolina high schools will take place here February 16 and 17, according to announcement yesterday from E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state high school athletic association.

Durham high won the wrestling tournament in both 1931 1932. Raleigh won the boxing title in 1931, Wilson in 1932.

The tournaments are open to all members of the association, which awards trophy cups in each competition.

Weight Classes

The weight classes for both tournaments are 108, 115, 125, 135, 145, 155, 165, and 175 pounds. No student is to be allowed to enter both tourneys or more than one class. In boxing one point is to be awarded the boxer's school for winning a bout in any class, while in wrestling three points will be given for a decision and five for a fall.

The tournaments will be run off under the direction of Chuck Quinlan and Crayton Rowe, Carolina's wrestling and boxing coaches. The entries are supposed to report to them for weighing-in at 11:00 o'clock Thursday morning, February 16.

First preliminaries will take place at 3:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon, second preliminaries Friday morning at 10:00 o'clock and the finals Friday night at 8:00 o'clock. All rounds will be run off simultaneously, so that spectators can take in both tournaments.

COACH QUINLAN IS MENTOR OF FROSH WRESTLING SQUAD

Varsity Coach Will Also Direct Freshmen Because Appropriation Cuts Prohibit Additional Mentor.

Because of the forty-five per cent cuts on University appropriations, the freshman wrestling squad will not have a separate mentor to coach them, but will have, Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan, varsity wrestling coach, in charge of them.

Coach Quinlan when questioned about the first year men yesterday afternoon, reported that the Tar Baby wrestlers are rapidly showing form, and should give an excellent account of themselves in their opening meet with the N. C. State Wolflets. This meet is only one week off, scheduled for Monday, in Raleigh.

Leading Candidates

When asked who were the leading candidates on the freshman team, Coach Quinlan listed Tyree, in the 115-pound class; Miller, 145-pound division; Shipman, 155-pound; and Leonard in the 175-pound class. "These men are the leading ones, but the remaining events seem to be a toss-up among the aspirants," Quinlan said. "We are still looking for a formidable freshman heavyweight."

The men now out for the freshman team are: Binder, Block, Berman, Connor, Daddario, Holman, Holland, Leonard, Miller, Martin, Pennington, Rogers, Smally, Shipman, Snowden, Stein, Sumner, Tyree, and Walls.

The combined freshman and varsity teams went through their regular calisthenic drills yesterday in preparation for their four minute contests on the mat. This is the first of the timed bouts with candidates paired off, showing their wares. Most of the men looked good, but there were still some who showed the effects of poor conditioning.

SALARY CUT HERE NOT LARGER THAN AT OTHER PLACES

Largest Reduction, Thirty-Two And One-Half Per Cent, Lasted Only Three Months.

In a recent editorial appearing in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, it was stated that the official cut in the salaries of University instructors amounted to approximately forty-five per cent. A check-up with the business office yesterday, however, revealed that the above fact was an overstatement, and that the following actual reduction has been made:

As a result of the passage of a bill in the general assembly in July, 1931, University instructors salaries were reduced ten per cent. This did not go into effect, however, until the beginning of the scholastic year, September 1. Full salaries were paid teachers for the two intervening months of July and August.

The salaries remained in this state of ninety per cent fullness until April 1, 1932, a period of seven months. On the latter date, a further reduction was made amounting to an additional twenty-five per cent cut on the salaries at that time, which were, as stated, ninety per cent of the original wage. This new reduction was enforced, however, for only three months, until July 1, from which date the salaries resumed the ninety per cent standard.

This condition of a ten per cent reduction remained until December 1, 1932, at which time an additional cut of fifteen per cent on the above salary was effected. It is at these figures that University instructors are now employed.

The above financial program clearly shows that University professors have not received reductions amounting to more than thirty-two and one-half per cent at any time, and this cut was in effect for only three months. Salaries paid to them up to December 1, 1932, for a period beginning July 1, 1931, averaged a little more than eighty-four per cent of the original wage, and at present are more than seventy-six per cent of the former amount.

The severe state of economic conditions throughout the country has had an extremely deleterious effect on the institutions of higher learning. In some cases, salary reductions of thirty to forty per cent have been made in leading colleges. The University salary cuts have not been respectively of a greater amount than most reductions effected in colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Game Room Purchases New Jig-Saw Puzzles

The game room of Graham Memorial has added to its various forms of games, five jig-saw puzzles for the convenience of the followers of this revived pastime. Lately there have been calls for the one that has been in the game room for some time, so that the management has responded by purchasing four additional sets. The number of pieces in each puzzle ranges from 150 to 300.

These puzzle sets may be obtained at the counter in the game room.

Staff Will Meet Today

The staff members of THE DAILY TAR HEEL will meet today in the editorial offices in Graham Memorial. Members of the editorial board meet at 2:30 o'clock, city editors and desk men at 3:00 o'clock, and reporters at 3:30 o'clock.

World News Bulletins

Production Tax Urged

Important bills, many of a state-wide nature, were dropped into the mill in both houses of the general assembly in Raleigh at short sessions yesterday. Topping the list were measures to repeal the state prohibition act and to levy a "production tax" on all manufacturers and almost all companies operating in the state.

Presidential Speech Released In Booklet

The address made to the general alumni assembly here December 9 by President Frank P. Graham has been published in pamphlet form entitled "The Situation at the University" and is being distributed over the state. Fifteen hundred of these pamphlets have been sent to the North Carolina Education Association to be distributed through its mailing list. Others are being sent out through local alumni clubs. The address is also published in the January issue of The Alumni Review.

PRESS BALLYHOO FILM SHOWING HERE TODAY

The late Harry Reichenbach typified the modern press agent, and in turn is characterized by Lee Tracy in RKO Radio Pictures' "The Half-Naked Truth," showing at the Carolina theatre today. The producers of "The Virgin of Stamboul" hired Reichenbach to promulgate its name via high-pressure ballyhoo. A mysterious, beautiful Turkish princess, accompanied by her suite, was registered at the Hotel Plaza. When interviewed, she declared she was known as the Virgin of Stamboul escaped from a Turkish harem. Publicity was printed daily until a film titled "The Virgin of Stamboul" started a Broadway engagement.

Methods somewhat similar to those of Reichenbach are used by Tracy in "The Half-Naked Truth." Others in the cast are Lupe Velez, Eugene Pallette, and Frank Morgan.

Hard Luck Record

Chester Roberts, pre-med student at Texas University, claims the season's hard luck record. After spending his Christmas vacation with a twelve pound cast on his fractured knee-cap, Roberts attended a show. His crutches slipped on the theatre stairway. Now he is confined to his bed with both legs injured, his right knee-cap fractured and his left ankle badly sprained.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, delivered the Founders' Day address at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., yesterday.

SYMPHONY GIVES CONCERT FRIDAY

Local Division of State Symphony to Co-operate With Carolina Playmakers.

The Carolina Playmakers, in cooperation with the institute of folk music, will present the little symphony of the North Carolina symphony society with Lamar Stringfield, its musical director, in the Playmaker theatre Friday evening, January 20 at 8:30 o'clock.

This group is composed of twenty members of the state symphony, which appeared here in December under the sponsorship of the Student Entertainment committee.

The program will consist of the Don Juan overture by Mozart, the andante movement from the fifth symphony of Beethoven, Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 5, Prelude Au Bal by Nathaniel Burt, The Humming Birds by Quinto Maganini, Soliloquy by Bernard Rogers, Shepherd's Hey by Percy Grainger, and a new composition by Herbert Hazelman.

University Needs Aid From North Carolina

student Christian movement said, "No educational institution in the world is illustrating more sincerely the wholesome life of intellectual freedom, courageous idealism, and spiritual strength than the University of North Carolina."

Supporting President Graham's request for state help are most of the leading state newspapers. In editorial comment they have heartily endorsed his appropriation request and have showed their antipathy toward any movement to restrict the University's advancing place in the world of education.

Some of the comments made are interesting in the light of the liberal trend of thought which has slowly permeated the state, led by the University.

Press Endorsement

The Raleigh Times says, "Before applying a financial yardstick to the University, it were well to examine it as what it is, a state hope for culture and learning and research in the spirit of truth. To cut such an institution to the bone might well result in a fatal hemorrhage." Seeing far into a desperate situation the Asheville Times states that "if the process is continued of appropriating a bare minimum sum and trimming it down in the budget office, the University is undergoing not necessary deflation but slow destruction."

Although the professors of the University have, for the most part, remained loyal to the institution during this period of financial distress, some of them in the face of higher wage offers, the Winston-Salem Journal believes that "the state can not expect to retain scholars and teachers of exceptional ability at salaries that seriously interfere with their work."

The Wilmington Star-News presents another side of the question by asserting that "the real question that confronts the state in dealing with this problem is whether the next generation is to be penalized culturally and intellectually for the financial depression. . . . Basically, the prime idea of society and of government is to build for the future. . . . The economic depression is something that in course of time will depart. . . . but a depression in thought, culture, and development will leave its imprint on the state for years to come."

WORK SHOWN IN LIBRARY DISPLAY

Competing Publishers Offer Their Best in Design, Press Work, And General Perfection.

The library now has on display in the entrance lobby the fifty books exhibition of the American institute of graphic arts. These books are selected from the viewpoint of typographical design, press work, binding, and in general the degree of perfection attained by the publishers. The price and content of the works are not considered. The books on exhibition were selected from the 650 books submitted by 140 competing publishers, printers, and designers in the United States.

The purpose of selecting and showing these books is not only to stimulate interest and typographical effectiveness among publishers but also to acquaint the public with the best in printing.

The standards of printing in this tenth annual exhibition show what beauty and effectiveness typography can express by discrimination in type-faces, arrangement, illustrations, paper, and presswork.

The library has a large supply of pamphlets containing full descriptions and illustrations of each of these books.

ARTICLE PRINTED IN DUKE ARCHIVE

Henderson, in Magazine Dedicated to Him, Defends Shaw From Attacks of Terry.

The January issue of The Archive, monthly literary publication of Duke University, was dedicated to Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department of the University. The issue has as a frontispiece a photograph of Shaw and Henderson, taken from Henderson's private collection.

Dr. Henderson has contributed to the magazine a narrative essay entitled "A Mysterious Imbroglia." The paper is illustrated with photographs.

Essay on "Imbroglia"

Henderson's "Mysterious Imbroglia" deals with the relations of George Bernard Shaw with the late actress, Ellen Terry, and her son Gordon Craig. After the death of Ellen Terry, there appeared a volume of perhaps 250 letters between Shaw and Ellen Terry. The editor of the volume called it "a correspondence unique in the annals of the theatre."

A short time later another publication, bitterly attacking Shaw on failure of lacking the first principals of a gentleman in permitting personal letters of Ellen Terry to be published, appeared. The work was written by Gordon Craig, son of the actress.

It may be asked why the publication of the letters of Ellen Terry was permitted by Shaw. The answer, according to Dr. Henderson, who has made a study of the affair, is perfectly honorable to Shaw. Shaw consented to the publication only after obtaining the written permission of the son, Gordon Craig. The purpose of the publication of the correspondence was to raise funds for a memorial to the deceased actress. Almost immediately following the publication of these letters, Craig broke faith with Shaw by publishing his attack.

The correspondence between Bernard Shaw and Ellen Terry enriches the world's literature, according to Henderson. He asserts that the letters are destined to rank high in the foremost of the world's writing.

ALUMNI OFFICERS PLAN CONVENTION IN CHAPEL HILL

District Meeting of American Alumni Council to Take Place Here and in Durham.

Alumni secretaries and others interested in alumni organizations in colleges of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida will gather in Durham, February 24-25, for the annual meeting of the third district of the American Council. This is according to an announcement made yesterday by J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the University Alumni Association, and director of the district organizations of alumni secretaries.

More than 100 alumni secretaries and participants interested in alumni work in institutions of this district have been invited to attend the meeting.

Chapel Hill Program

A complete program for the meeting has not been announced, though sessions will center about a discussion of mutual problems and experience in organized alumni work. Beginning Friday afternoon, February 24, the conference delegates will be dinner guests of Duke University. Concerts on the Duke chimes and organs will follow. Business sessions will take place Saturday morning and the conference will adjourn following a luncheon meeting. The group will come to Chapel Hill Saturday afternoon for an informal tea and inspection of the University campus and buildings.

The convention met last year at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida. Saunders and Felix A. Grisette, director of the alumni loyalty fund, were the delegates from the University at that time.

COMMITTEE WILL OFFER PERSONAL
AID TO STUDENTSUniversity Composition Condition Group Announces Service
For Removal of Conditions.

The University composition condition committee, of which Dr. H. R. Totten is chairman, and Dr. Raymond Adams secretary, has announced a new service, to be extended to all undergraduates, for the removal of composition conditions.

A composition condition may be assigned to any student in the University who shows marked deficiencies in the use of English, either written or spoken, though, it is usually the former.

Individual Help Offered

The new system provides a means whereby students to whom the conditions have been assigned may avail themselves of individual conferences with Professors George McKie or W. A. Olsen, who are devoting a part of their time this quarter to this work.

This service is providing virtually private instruction, without cost to the student, by the English department in an attempt to improve the composition standard of college students.

Although they are usually assigned by members of the faculty for deficiencies in work in the English department, it is not widely known that composition conditions may be incurred in working under any department of the University.

Any student desiring to avail himself of the new service should confer with Professor George McKie before January 20 at his office, 210 Murphey, any morning but Saturday from 9:30 to 11:00 o'clock.

Produced in Connection With Shaw-Henderson Festival.

A tentative cast has been announced for the production of You Never Can Tell, a comedy by George Bernard Shaw, to be produced in connection with the Shaw-Henderson festival, scheduled for February 2, 3, and 4.

One of Shaw's First

You Never Can Tell is one of Shaw's first plays, and is a comedy of manners. It deals with a woman who had two charming children by a man, whom she later separated from. Never having known their father, the children, on meeting him by accident at an English hotel, are in a position to form an opinion of their father, unprejudiced by constant contact with him. Since their separation, the husband had devoted his time to accumulating a large amount of money. The wife has reared her children with money obtained from some-

PHI RESOLUTION

Officers of Literary Societies Deliver Inaugural Addresses To Members.

A recommendation for leniency and generosity in the general assembly's appropriation to state institutions of higher learning and the installation of new officers for the winter quarter headed the business of the Phi Assembly meeting Tuesday night.

The text of the resolution, introduced by Jack Poole, reads: "The Phi wishes to express its hope that the 1933 session will be just as lenient and generous as possible in their appropriations for the continuance of higher education in North Carolina." A motion was also passed that a copy of this bill be sent to the state legislature in the form of a petition.

Speaker L. Greer gave his inaugural address in which he emphasized the need of an active membership, the prestige of the Phi, and plans for a dance this quarter.

W. Durfee was elected as the Phi reporter for the winter quarter.

President Bill McKee made his inaugural address Tuesday night at the first meeting of the winter quarter for the Di Senate. A capacity attendance heard Senator McKee pledge himself to the improvement of the society and its purposes and make a plea for a revival of quarterly joint meetings with the assembly.

The senate accepted a report of Senator Eddleman regarding the sale of tickets to the lecture series that will begin here tonight. Further business was limited to a lengthy discussion on the legality of the last two meetings of the fall quarter. Due to the prolonged debate on this subject, no time remained for the discussion of the several bills that were on the senate calendar.

A. I. E. E. Conducts Meeting

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers convened for the first meeting of the quarter Tuesday night. Talks were made by T. L. Cordle, John Marvin, and Bill O'Brien.

An associate editor, W. E. Davis, was elected for the staff of the Carolina Engineer after the talks had been made.

WOUNDED JANITOR
NOW RECOVERING

Ira Hemple, Negro Assailant of Janitor, Is as Yet Unapprehended
By Police Forces.

The condition of Fred Farrow, negro janitor at the S. P. E. house, who was wounded by Ira Hemple, a negro from the vicinity of Roxboro, Sunday night, was reported improved yesterday.

Farrow, who was shot in the back in fleeing from his armed pursuer, was taken immediately after the shooting to the Liberty hospital in Durham.

The quarrel which resulted in the wound, thought not to be serious now, took place Saturday night, when Hemple, having consumed an undetermined quantity of whiskey, disagreed with Farrow, acting in the capacity of cook at a party given by some white residents of the community, and drew a gun on the latter, which Farrow, after a brief struggle, took away from him, and emptied.

Hemple, his gun having been returned, paid a visit to Shantytown the following evening, attempted the murder of Farrow, and vanished. Police have been unable to locate him since.

To Enter Law School, While Others Enter Graduate School; Few Graduates Obtain Positions in Business.

Nothing daunted by the unfavorable conditions in a world that has been buffeted around in a most disconcerting fashion since it entered school, the infant alumni class of 1932 has picked up the gauntlet; to be true, somewhat worn out and seamy; that a challenging society has thrown down.

Many have stepped out and taken a long stride toward the fulfillment of their positions in life. Others, hampered by economic conditions, have yet to be placed. These same conditions have influenced others to return to school to continue their education in the graduate schools of the University and elsewhere.

Many Study Law

By far the largest number of returned graduates are enrolled in the law school. Here one may daily note these members of the class: Harper Barnes, permanent president of the class; Haywood Weeks, president of the student body; Henry Anderson, James M. Bailey, Jr., Benjamin Gentry, Harry Gump, Lawrence T. Hammond, Wofford Humphries, Jule McMichael, F. Olmstead Warren, Robert Schnell, James R. Spell, Hubert T. Taylor, Lynn Wilder, Jr., James C. Goodwin, Harry Finch, Robert McBride Fleming-Jones, Hamil-

OLDEST ALUMNUS
PASSES AT HOME

Reverend John Huske Tillinghast Attended University in 1853, But Withdrew Due to Illness.

The Reverend John Huske Tillinghast died at his home in Eastover, S. C., Tuesday. He was ninety-seven and was at the time of his death the oldest living alumnus of the University. Reverend Tillinghast was a student at the University in 1853-54 but was forced to withdraw at the beginning of his sophomore year due to ill health. Later he entered Hampden-Sidney college in Virginia.

In addition to being the oldest living alumnus of the University, he was also the oldest living ex-chaplain of the Confederate Army, and the oldest living minister of the Episcopal church in the United States.

At the last University commencement a letter of greeting was received at the University from Reverend Tillinghast, it being the 75th anniversary of the graduation of his class.

William Gaston Candler, retired lawyer of Candler, is now the oldest living University alumnus, having attended law school in Chapel Hill in 1854-55.

Short-Circuit Causes Blaze In Fraternity

The Pi Kappa Alpha house was the scene of a fire Tuesday night when one of the lamps in an upstairs room developed a short-circuit. Quick action on the part of members of the fraternity prevented the necessity of calling the fire department. With waste baskets full of water they doused a curtain which was aflame.

The short-circuit caused a fuse to blow out. A penny used in place of the blown fuse permitted the current to spark at the circuit break, and kindle the curtain into a blaze.

Schwenning Returns
From European Trip

After having been on leave on the Kenan Foundation during the past quarter, Dr. G. T. Schwenning, professor of business administration has resumed his duties in the University. During the time of his leave Dr. Schwenning traveled in Europe and studied extensively in order to gather material for a book which is nearing completion.

Dr. Schwenning spent the three months in Europe studying in France, Switzerland and England. In this manner he gathered first hand material for his proposed book which is to be entitled The Dismissal Wage.

SYMPHONY GROUP
ANNOUNCES BILL FOR NEXT WEEK

Musical Students of University Will Present Several Original Compositions.

Lamar Stringfield, musical director of the North Carolina Symphony Society, has announced that the program to be presented by the little symphony of the society at 8:00 o'clock, January 20, at the Playmaker theatre will include the premier performance of a new composition by Herbert R. Hazelman, music student in the University.

Hazelman has heretofore received attention as the composer of Danse Moronique, which has been performed on numerous occasions in this state and was presented by the National Symphony orchestra of Washington, D. C., in November. Miss Ruth Howell, music critic of the Washington Daily News and Musical America, described this composition as charming, witty, musical, and elegantly styled.

Student Composition

Hazelman's latest effort is titled Logy March, and was originally written in full orchestral score. It is based upon several folk themes. The composer made a trip to Florida during the Christmas holidays in order to collect a particular folk tune which he had in mind and which he knew to be sung by the residents of a district in northern Florida.

Hazelman shares honors as youthful composer on the program of the little symphony with Nathaniel Burt, son of Struthers Burt, author and resident of Southern Pines, whose Prelude Aubal will be presented in the same group with the Logy March. Burt is a student at Princeton University and is the same age as Hazelman.

Tickets for this program are now on sale at Alfred Williams company. Members of the North Carolina Symphony Society or anyone holding a student entertainment coupon book may obtain tickets at a fifty percent discount.

Civil Engineers Meet Tonight

The student branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 319 Phillips hall. The principal speaker of the evening will be L. R. Ames, state highway engineer. Plans for the engineers' hall will also be discussed by the group.

The group picture of the society for the Yackety Yack will be taken tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in front of Phillips hall.

DR. MITCHELL AND DEAN MILLER TO LECTURE TONIGHT

Famous Authorities Open Forum Discussion on Topic, "The American Scene—1932."

"The American Scene—1932," the first of a series of discussions sponsored in an Open Forum, will bring two distinguished lecturers to Chapel Hill tonight in the persons of Dr. Broadus Mitchell, Johns Hopkins University, and Dean Justin Miller, Duke University law school.

Sponsored by five campus organizations, the discussion series will be presented in Gerrard hall every Thursday night during the winter quarter on subjects pertinent to labor, political economy, agriculture, international policy, and other questions of the day. The program, presented in conjunction with the League for Industrial Democracy, is balanced with speakers who will present different points of the questions under discussion.

Tonight's lecture is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock. Don Shoemaker will preside over the meeting.

Dr. Miller, prominent in legal and university circles, is a graduate of Stanford University. After serving as a professor of law at the University of Southern California he became dean of the law school there, leaving the West Coast to serve in the same capacity at Duke University. Dr. Miller is a member of the crime commission, editor of the American Judicature Journal, a publication of criminal law and criminology, and vice-president of the National Probation Association.

Dr. Mitchell is equally prominent. (Continued on page two)

BOARD WILL FILL BUSINESS OPENING ON YACKETY YACK

Resignation Creates Vacancy;
All Applications Must Be Filed by Tomorrow.

The Publications Union Board asks that all men who desire to apply for the position of business manager of the Yackety Yack file their applications with Professor J. M. Lear in 109 Bingham or Robert Woerner at the Pi Kappa Alpha house before tomorrow night.

Harold Staton, present business manager of the publication, finds that he is unable to carry his scholastic work and attend to Yackety Yack duties at the same time and has been forced to tender his resignation to the board.

Meeting Planned Saturday

The board regrets the short time allowed for applications to be filed, but the position must be filled at once in order that the advertising in the year book will not suffer. The selection will be made Saturday morning when the board convenes for this special purpose and all applicants will be asked to appear before the board at 11:00 o'clock for interviews.

The case is without precedent, and the board is endeavoring to handle the matter in the most expedient manner possible in order that the financial end of the yearly publication will not fall in arrears.

Do Your Worst, Mr. D.

The current depression cannot be said to be an unmitigated evil. It is one of those ill winds that is blowing a certain amount of good around, although the good thus blown spreads in subtle rather than in flashy ways. It has forced industry to contract, it has reduced lavish expenditure on superfluous machinery, it has, temporarily at least, called a halt to the vogue of chain stores, chain hotels, and chain railroads, all of which were stifling individual initiative and originality.

Not only in ordinary business and industry, however, has the economic lull brought a prosperity-frenzied world to its senses. But also in that great modern industry of education, it has pulled us up short and made us wonder whether the stock market of culture has ever known any real "high" at all in our country. At present we find college enrollments considerably reduced, and professors' salaries rather ruthlessly slashed, and even such essentials to our collegiana as fraternities and football pageants have had to revise their field of action so as to require an outlay of minimum expense.

It seems obvious that there is little or no justification for the salary-cutting game which the state legislature is now playing at the expense of the university faculty. It does seem, however, that all good men should rejoice in the termination of extravagance in fraternity expenditure and in the administration of athletics. It is difficult to believe that sports will in any way suffer from the athletic curtailments which various large universities are inaugurating. Coach Alexander of Georgia Tech is quite philosophical in his acceptance of a situation in which the worst losses will be the elimination of trophies, banquets, Pullman cars, and special tutoring for athletes.

But the very fact that college enrollments have been reduced is the brightest sign of all. During the time of prosperity, education became one of the great racketeers ever developed. Everyone was going to college. Men interested in social life, men interested in business, men interested in athletics, men interested in law and medicine until it became unusual, indeed, to find on a college campus a man who came to college to study the old-fashioned "humanities" and who did not think of a college degree in terms of what salaried job he could get for it. College, in short, became a winter playground where young people went who were not yet ready to assume the responsibilities of life. If economic disorder will reduce college undesirables and loafers, let Old Man Depression do his worst.—B.B.P.

Another Side Of The Depression

"All the best known colleges are represented in Sing Sing," says Anthony N. Petersen, chaplain of the prison for the past seventeen years, and he is inclined to think that the majority of college graduates doing time there attribute their crimes to economic conditions. Most of them are serving sentence for either larceny or forgery; crimes of violence, such as murder, or crimes which must necessarily be accompanied by violence, such as robbery, are carefully avoided by college graduates. And rarely do they cause any sort of trouble for prison officials, but accept the exigencies of the life there with resignation.

Chaplain Petersen believes that the usual crime committed by college men comes as a result of the temptation to take money in the easiest and safest possible way, which is, of course, larceny. But forgery is the favorite method—a fact which the Chaplain finds difficulty in explaining, as it is not only one of the easiest crimes to detect but one of the easiest on which to secure a conviction. And because of this, many of the sadder and wiser inmates wonder whether college gives an education at all.

The ultimate motive, however, is the result of a college graduate's inability to maintain his former standard of living. Most of them occupy white-collar jobs and consequently are the first to lose them in time of depression. Being used to a higher standard of living than that of the mechanic or laborer, they find it hard to adjust their mode of existence to their economic means. Hence the great number of larceny and forgery crimes and the absence of crimes of violence. Only one college man has been electrocuted in Sing Sing in the past seventeen years, says the Chaplain.

But in spite of the fact that "all the best known colleges are represented in Sing Sing," Chaplain Petersen redeems higher education by declaring that he has not yet observed any college professors among the inmates.—A.T.D.

Our Times

Turkey

The proprietors of a local cafeteria were startled to hear what seemed to be the cry of an irate wild turkey and the plaintive response of his mate in a remote booth of the establishment one day last week, and sent an attendant to investigate. It turned out (we were there and saw it all) that two gentlemen of sporting nature were innocently experimenting with hunting contrivances which we term turkey calls. After the mystery had been explained, we went over to look into the matter and found that the call consists of a sort of sound box, usually made out of cedar, with apertures in the side and a sounding board. This is scratched with a sharp piece of slate, and if you do it right, it sounds like the call of an agitated turkey. Our informant told us that it costs two dollars and a half and is made by a gentleman down in Columbia, S. C. Said he was given one for advertising purposes and could get us one made out of mahogany for twenty-five dollars.

Letter

We found this in our mail today and herewith present it on its merits alone:

Dear Sir,

I wish you'd please print this communication in your column, for I feel that my views are similar to those of some other people on this campus. I'd like to state that I admire art for art's sake, that I don't read Eddie Guest, and that I consider Amos and Andy a classic example of first rate tripe. Yet I have moments when my aesthetic self does not entirely dominate my personality. For this reason I should like to enter a vigorous objection against the Shankar dancers, whom, I believe, will appear several days from the writing of this letter. Such programs for the Student Entertainment Series possess their virtues, but it is my contention that art for art's sake is not the unanimous view of the campus.

I should like to suggest that the Student Entertainment Series import a first class burlesque show to Chapel Hill for at least two programs a year. There are many of us who feel that a bit of light comedy of the burlesque show variety would not go amiss on such a program. If necessary, we might import the old company of Billy Minsky, evicted most recently from New York.

The burlesque project, I believe, might stir up more interest in the Entertainment series. There are many bored individuals on the campus who would gladly sit through two symphonies and three Abbey Irish Players programs if the promise of a first rate burlesque review were carried out. We might charge townspeople a regular admission price, and, realizing thereby a sizeable revenue, might find it unnecessary to further cut the salaries of our desperate pedagogues.

Sincerely,
A PATRON OF THE ARTS.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To The Editor Of

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

I have before me THE DAILY TAR HEEL of January 11 and note on Page 4 the article "dressed up in Bold Type" "Salary Cut Here Not Larger Than At Other Places." I have, also, at hand letters from faculty members located at six different STATE INSTITUTIONS—three in the Far West, two in the Middle West, and one in the South. The content of these letters is a discussion of the faculty salary reductions at these institutions and in no case do these reductions amount to more than fifteen per cent even on a graduated basis. The salary reductions of this institution should be compared, at least, with those of other STATE INSTITUTIONS OF EQUAL standing as the University of North Carolina and more properly with those holding membership in the Association of American Universities. It seems rather absurd for the TAR HEEL to make a statement that some of the LEADING colleges have made salary reductions of thirty to forty per cent. This statement, I believe, to be unfounded and not based on the true facts in the case although, it may hold true for reductions in the SMALLER privately endowed educational institutions whose incomes from endowments have dropped appreciably since 1929. A little more tact and wisdom as well as a true presentation of facts on the part of THE DAILY TAR HEEL especially at a time as important as the present, should be displayed in discussing such pertinent questions.—H.M.B.

With Contemporaries

College Convicts

The college man has been the target of many startling accusations and criticisms in the past, but now appear revelations surpassing all in sensationalism; a survey of our brothers in prison. Incompetency in industry, disinterest in government, impotency in research, and cultural underdevelopment are among the charges of many self-appointed judges of the product of the world's universities. And now comes the disquieting information that no small number of collegians spent a good portion of their life in jail.

In an article in Redbook, no less an authority than the chaplain of Sing Sing declares that during his long term of service at Ossining he has come in contact with men representing all the important colleges in the country, most of the smaller ones, and not a few foreign institutions. Practically no school has escaped and recruits have come from Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Penn., Syracuse, Columbia, Williams, Vanderbilt, Michigan, Southern California, Cambridge, Berlin, Paris, and Cornell. The most popular crime among these alumni groups is forgery. From this fact, Chaplain Peterson concludes that their college education has not benefited them much because it is the easiest crime to detect.

Of course the incarcerated degree-holders do not perform the manual labor assigned to alien robbers, safe-crackers, and torch fiends because their talents may be put to use in other fields more advantageous. However, if the chaplain had his own way they would work, because he believes that the college convict is far below the average prisoner. The man who has failed to take advantage of his training, opportunities, and general background is more to be condemned than the fellow who has never had a chance in life, according to Dr. Peterson.

There seems to be no definite reason why the poor college boy goes wrong. Dr. Peterson holds that "drinking and sexual excesses" are partially accountable for many of his ex-campus inmates. Faulty pre-college training at home seems to bear some relation to the situation. If it accomplishes nothing else, the survey should jar the smugness and self-complacency of the college "untouchables." — Cornell Daily Sun.

6 o'clock means nothing to telephone service!

Bell System service must go on all the time. Day and night, Sundays and holidays, it must handle with speed and accuracy not only the usual traffic but also the unexpected rush of calls.

To meet this obligation, Bell System men tackle problems of many kinds. At Bell Telephone Laboratories, scientists develop new kinds of apparatus. At Western Electric, engineers find ways to make telephones, switchboards and cable more and more reliable. In the telephone companies, traffic engineers devise improved operating methods that make service faster, more accurate, more dependable.

Result: at noon or in the dead of night, the public reaches confidently for the telephone, knowing that Bell System service never stops.

White Phantoms Look Flat In Listless Workout Yesterday

First Team Must Show Vast Improvement to Take Gobblers and Deacons.

PLAY DEACONS SATURDAY

Wake Forest to Offer Real Threat With Seasoned Team of Sharp-Shooters.

Unless the White Phantoms show a marked improvement in today's practice they are set for a couple of disappointments tomorrow and especially Saturday night.

Yesterday the first team looked listless in the scrimmages and the second five, though flashing at times, also looked off. The passing was terrible and those passes that were accurate careered off the butter-finger hands of the receivers. The shooting of the varsity five was also off and many snowbirds and other flings floundered around the rim and fell back.

Gobblers Tomorrow Night

The Phantoms meet the V. P. I. Gobblers here tomorrow night and then tackle the strong Wake Forest Deacons in the Tin Can Saturday night. The Gobblers are not expected to be too much of a hurdle for the Tar Heels unless they continue their flat play of yesterday. Saturday night the Wake Forest club will give Carolina its first real test. The Deacons pushed Duke Tuesday night in Durham before losing 34-23.

TAR HEELS ARE HANDICAPPED BY MINOR INJURIES

Wrestling Squads Showing Form In Practices for Dual Meet With State Monday.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestling teams are beginning to round into shape as Coach Quinlan presses his charges for the opening meet with the combined first year and varsity clubs of the N. C. State Monday, in Raleigh.

There are still some minor injuries in the Tar Heel mat camp; however, some of the men being handicapped in their work by their injuries. Thad Hussey, varsity 115-pound division, is still on the injured list. Hiller, another letterman on the varsity squad, has some bad facial mat burns, which should be healed by Monday. Marty Olman, 145-pound class reserve on the varsity team, is suffering from a stiff shoulder, but some hard work should take care of his injury.

Trials Begin Tomorrow

Friday and Saturday are the days set by Coach Quinlan for the trials for the various weights. All men must be out to prove their worth, in order to give the coach his line-up for the meets Monday.

There are several men overweight in their divisions, but these should work down to their allotted weight allowances by the time of the meets. Mathewson and Hussey are the most outstanding men who will have to work down several pounds to make their weights.

In the past few days, P. P. Davis has been making a fine showing in the 135-pound division and has made a favorable impression on the mat mentor by his fine work. Auman, even though outweighed by Thompson, is favored to start in the unlimited class, Monday. Sumner, who has come out brilliantly during the last few days, looks good as a possible start among the 145-pound freshman candidates, and should make a good showing against Miller.

BABY FIVE MEETS DEACS SATURDAY

Carolina Freshman Team Ironing Out Rough Spots for Wake Forest Game.

Since their opening battle with Wake Forest has been shifted from Thursday night to Saturday night the Tar Baby basketball team still has time to iron out many faults.

The first string combination of Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson at forwards; Murry Kanner at center; and Red Phelps and Jim McCachren at guards has been clicking almost to perfection. However, the passing has generally been poor and the shooting even worse.

Although they have not been working against the first string, the second team of Ernest McKeithan and Strowd Tilley, forwards; Frank Orr, center; and Raymond Glasgow and Bob Guarino, guards, also have been given lots of work and should see much action in the opening contest.

Monday, the freshman squad received their first equipment and nearly the entire team was issued basketball shoes and uniforms. However when Sergeant Keller, in charge of equipment, thought he had everyone fixed up, it was found that Moore of the first team still wanted shoes. The forward wears a twelve and a half size, and the Sergeant has had to send in a special order.

BOXING TEAM TO LEAVE TOMORROW FOR V. P. I. MATCH

Last Workout for Mit Men, Prior To Meet, Scheduled for Today in Tin Can.

The boxing team will have its last workout today at the Tin Can before leaving tomorrow morning to meet V. P. I. in the first meet of the season at Blacksburg.

Coaches Rowe and Allen have not yet decided on their starting line-up or how many boys will make the trip. Some of the fighting posts are cinched beyond any possible doubt; but others may not be certain until just before the fights begin Saturday night.

McIntosh Shows Up Well

Each day another candidate looms impressive in the ring at the Tin Can. Yesterday it was Frank McIntosh who stole the thunder with several impressive performances against good opposition. Frank is a contender for ring honors in the new 155-pound class, and he looked particularly good against the flashy Lee Burke, who, up until yesterday, seemed to have an edge on the 155-pound spot. Right now it would be hard to say just who will start.

Sam Giddens' cut and Nat Lumpkin's swollen eye, the two sources of uncertainty for the last few days, seem to be rapidly healing and those boys are sure to be ready by Saturday.

The team will leave early to

Boxing Ring Has Rival Stage In Depiction Of Stirring Drama

Dempsey, Willard, Siki, Miske, and Others Take Parts in Sensational Enactments of Human Dramas; Fight Crowds Always Fickle in Affection for Champions.

The twenty-four foot boxing ring does not, by any stretch of the imagination, resemble a theatrical stage. There are no elaborate settings, no large casts, no gorgeous costumes, no brilliant bits of dialogue, no multi-colored footlights. The setting remains the same: the canvas floor, the three ropes, and, between rounds, the little stools and the water buckets. There is always the same number in the cast: the two contestants and the referee. Rippling muscles covered by browned flesh are the costumes; the dialogue is spoken by leather encased fists. The lighting effects, instead of coming from footlights, come from blinding calcium lights above the ring.

Drama Here

On this unornamented stage, drama is repeatedly enacted. Obscure performers, often entering the ring hungry, have come out covered with glorious victory and a million dollars ahead of them. Favorites tumble; prima donnas crash. Under the merciless glare of the lights, a still figure lying face downward on the canvas floor, his back muscles twitching, gives silent evidence of the passing of another actor; while the new favorite stands glaring at him from a corner a few feet away. "The king is dead; long live the king!" The ring, the stage! Action, drama!

On a hot July afternoon about fourteen years ago, the mighty Jess Willard stepped into the ring at Toledo to annihilate another upstart. Willard's world's heavyweight championship was at stake; but he was not greatly troubled with any fears of losing it. Oh, this fellow Dempsey was tough, no doubt that; but a good big man will always beat a good little man and Dempsey was too small.

Unexpected Happens

Across the ring sat a sun-blackened, snarling, cave man. He stared at Willard while Manager Kearns whispered last minute instructions to his tiger—a human, clawing tiger that rushed out to kill when the gong sounded a few minutes later. As Dempsey sent Willard crashing to the floor time and time again and finally battered his face into something resembling a liver, the crowd gasped as it realized that here was the unexpected being done. When Willard finally threw the towel into the ring at the end of the third round, ending a startling fight, the drama was complete. A world's championship passed with both contestants seated in their corners. Jess Willard had thrown the title to Jack Dempsey in a towel.

The new champion, during his long reign of seven years, figured in some of the most sensational

PHI DELTA THETA DOWNS THETA CHI BY SCORE OF 36-22

Intramural Basketball Games Marked by Heavy Scoring on Part of Winning Teams.

Yesterday's intramural basketball contests were marked by heavy scoring on the part of all the winning quintets. None of the victorious outfits scored less than thirty points and the lowest margin of a winner over a loser was nine points.

Phi Delta Theta Wins

Led by Chigger Moffitt, who scored ten points, Phi Delta Theta downed Theta Chi in the first game of the season for both teams. The score was 36-22. Bennett led the losers' attack, and gained individual scoring honors, with eleven points.

Champions Win

Ruffin, 1932 campus champion, started its campaign in defense of its title by crushing Carr, 54-2. The winners scored at will, scarcely ever losing possession of the ball. Ray Weathers led the scorers with seventeen points, while Freeman and Royster scored ten and fourteen respectively. James saved the lawyers from a shutout when he sank a field goal for his team's only points.

The Tobacco Crop may be Short this Year but that can't affect Chesterfield — why?

| Production of tobaccos usable for cigarettes or "roll your own." | |
|--|--------------------|
| U. S. crop (average, 5 years, 1927-31) | 1,091,265,750 lbs. |
| U. S. crop (Govt. estimate, 1932) | 751,601,000 lbs. |
| Estimated shortage, 1932 crop | 339,664,750 lbs. |

The manufacturer of good cigarettes does not depend on any one year's crop. He knows that to keep up the quality of his brand, he has to carry on hand at all times a large stock of the right kinds of tobacco from several years' crops.

The domestic tobaccos are kept in large hogsheads, each containing about 1000 pounds, and are allowed to age for two full years—in other words, nature's method of curing the tobaccos. Something like ageing wine.

Liggett & Myers has about four and a half miles of warehouses used for storing leaf tobacco, to make sure that its products are uniform and are as good as can be made.

To do this requires a great deal of money—for example, there is invested in the domestic and Turkish tobaccos for Chesterfield Cigarettes over $75,000,000.

Smokers can be assured, regardless of the crop conditions, that Chesterfield will be absolutely uniform—the same yesterday, today, at all times. The cigarette that's milder—the cigarette that tastes better!

Star Reporters Stack Up 6,429 Inches Of News

High Pressure Journalism Features Race for High Number Of Inches Written.

High pressure writing featured the combined reportorial boards of THE DAILY TAR HEEL during the winter quarter, since more than 6,429 column inches were turned in to the credit of the reporters while hundreds of inches escaped being posted on the reporters' bulletin board.

The most prolific writer on the entire staff was Lawrence Thompson, freshman, whose beat included both campus and sport doings. Thompson turned to his credit 1,269 inches. His nearest competitor was Phil Hammer, another first year man, news in the Y.M.C.A. and South goings on in the 'Y' and South building. Hammer had 806 inches to his credit. J. H. Morris, sophomore on the sports staff, was third among the writers with 570 inches on his score.

There were five other reporters on the staff securing more than 300 column inches. Cramp-ton Trainer followed Morris with 470; Nelson Lansdale had 463; Raymond Barron, 440; Robert Page, 401; and Bill Anderson, 322.

All these men have been honored at least once during the past quarter by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, who gave these men passes for their consistent work on the staff. Many others not listed in this group have been guests of Smith for their fine work.

The entire staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL will conduct a smoker sometime during the next three weeks. Following the smoker, the staff will again be guests of Smith's hospitality at a picture dealing with some phase of journalism.

TENTATIVE CAST ANNOUNCED FOR DRAMA BY SHAW

Love affairs of the children, and their unconventionality, and their readiness to make friends in a land whose customs are unknown to them offer Shaw an admirable opportunity to poke fun at the English types and customs.

You Never Can Tell is the second presentation of a play by Shaw on the campus this scholastic year, the first having been a production of Arms and the Man by the Jitney Players.

Boxing Ring Rivals Stage in Depiction Of Stirring Drama

tional ring dramas of all time. The wild affair at Shelby, Montana, where stern looking ring-siders dressed like cowboys out of wild west pictures, kept their hands threateningly on revolvers that bulged from their pockets, while a harassed Dempsey tried frantically to put away an ever retreating Tom Gibbons, had a typically theatrical touch.

The Firpo fight when Dempsey was knocked headlong from the ring left the spectators limp with excitement. But perhaps the most dramatic of all his fights came shortly after he won the title.

The gray afternoon in Benton Harbor, Michigan, when Billy Miske crawled, pale and thin, through the ropes to wrest the title from the mighty "man-auler," the sage newspaperman surveyed him casually and muttered, "trained a bit too fine: left his fight in the training camp." And when Dempsey battered him into oblivion, crushing three of Miske's ribs, no one knew that the gallant boxer was dying from Bright's disease—that he was fighting for money that was to pay for treatment. Billy Miske had fought his last fight; a few weeks later he was dead.

Savage Is Subdued

In a Paris ring, the brilliant Carpentier was about to show a set-up just how boxing is done—in one lesson. His opponent was a black man. A genuine cannibal from the jungles of Senegal. Fight promoters had brought him to Europe to give ring fans a new touch of color, even if the color was black. But the performance did not work out the way it had been rehearsed. The savage reverted to type; after a few punches from Georges, he went mad with rage. Letting out wild, blood-curdling shrieks, he tore into the hero and not only knocked him out, but put him into a hospital where the Orchid man remained for a few weeks. Battling Siki had thundered across the stage.

These performers have passed forever; but the stage is always

SECRETARY LAYS LOW GRADES TO POOR TEACHING

C. E. McIntosh Blames Failures in Education School on Lowered Teaching Efficiency.

Work passed by freshmen in the school of education has dropped considerably below the record set by the first year men of last year, C. E. McIntosh, secretary of the school announced yesterday. Causes for the lowering of grades are attributed by McIntosh to a lowered teaching efficiency of professors and instructors here in the University. Curtailment of state appropriations to the University is responsible for poorer teaching here, McIntosh stated.

Other Causes

Another probable cause for the drop in grades this past quarter is a poorer preparation of this year's freshman class for college. Over-crowded high schools, the secretary believes, might have lowered the teaching standard. Students have consequently found difficulty in the orientation from high school to college.

Work passed by the freshman class of the education school in the fall quarter amounted to seventy-two per cent of the total amount of work carried. Percentage of work passed by the freshman class of last year amounted to eighty-one per cent. It is to be noted, however, that the percentage number for work passed last year includes all three quarters. The total percentage by the end of the spring quarter of 1933, McIntosh predicted, will be much higher.

OLIVE RESIGNS TO ACCEPT NEW POST

Pastor of Local Baptist Church
To Assume New Pastorate in North Wilkesboro Sunday.

The pastor of the Baptist church of Chapel Hill, Rev. Eugene Olive, who tendered his resignation to the congregation at the morning service Sunday, January 8, has definitely decided to accept the call to the First Baptist church of North Wilkesboro. Olive's resignation came suddenly, but he gave as reasons for his action that he thought there was a better field for service in North Wilkesboro than here in Chapel Hill. He will leave for his new post immediately, holding his first service in his new pulpit Sunday.

Nine Years Here

Rev. Olive came to Chapel Hill from the First Baptist church of Mount Airy nine years ago, and since that time has been active in all phases of the church work here. Olive is a native North Carolinian having attended Wake Forest College, later going to Louisville Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. Immediately after coming here, he established himself in the hearts of the students and the townspeople.

The board of Deacons announced at their meeting Wednesday night that the resignation of Olive had been accepted. The usual services of the church will continue as heretofore, with H. F. Comer in charge of the service Sunday. A pulpit committee has been appointed, and this committee will have charge of arranging the services until a regular pastor can be secured.

Board Of Trustees To Meet January 24

The full board of trustees of the University of North Carolina will meet in the office of the governor in Raleigh, Tuesday, January 24, according to a statement by Secretary Henry M. London, Wednesday.

The executive committee of the board will meet the night before at the same place. Besides the routine matters to come before the board, action will be taken on the recommendation of the special committee that Dr. Louis Round Wilson be elected vice-president for the Chapel Hill unit to succeed Dr. Frank P. Graham, who was elected president of the Greater University. Dr. Graham, incidentally, will make his annual report at the meeting.

The name of the play to be used in the contest and the author's name should be sent in with the registration.

Membership dues in the organization are two dollars, which includes a subscription to The Carolina Play-Book. Only members of the association are eligible to enter the contests. The tournament fee for city senior and junior high schools, senior and junior colleges, and Little Theatre organizations is three dollars. For county high schools and junior community groups the fee is two dollars.

Original plays may be entered in the contests by individuals or schools for a fifty-cent fee. An additional fee, if the play is selected for production at the festival, of one dollar and a half will be charged when produced by a county high school or junior community group, and two dollars and a half when produced by a city high school, a college, or a Little Theatre organization.

A special contest fee of fifty cents will be made for schools or individuals who are not entered.

Juniors To Present Gift To Loan Fund

As part of an economy move, the junior class will conduct no smokers during the winter quarter, it was announced yesterday. Following the example set by the executive committee of the seniors, the class plans to contribute to the student loan fund as a parting gift, all surplus in the treasury at the end of the term. The discontinuance of the smokers will effect a substantial saving, which will be applied to the gift.

It was further announced that the junior leaders for the junior-senior dances would not be chosen until the beginning of the spring quarter. Bert Lown's orchestra will furnish the music for the dances, which will be staged, May 12 and 13.

MACLEAN SPEAKS ON ART TONIGHT

Exhibition of Work of North Carolina Artist on at Playmakers Theatre Today.

There will be an exhibition of the paintings, drawings and woodcuts of James Augustus Maclean, founder and director of the Southern School of Creative Arts today in the green room of the Playmakers theatre, while tonight at 8:30 the artist will speak on the subject "Art and Life" in the theatre. The exhibition and talk are designed to stimulate interest in creative arts on the campus.

Maclean is a native of North Carolina and was born in Lincoln in 1904. He studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, where he won the Toppan prize given to students in the field of fine arts. Several years ago he founded the Southern School of Creative Arts in Raleigh of which he is the director.

Work on Exhibit

Following is a list of his work which will be exhibited today in the theatre: paintings, "Seaboard Coaling Station," "A Back Yard," "The School Carpenter," "Negro Boy," "Southern Wash Women," "French Sailor," "Old Man," "Rainy Day," "The Monk," "German Peasant Girl," and "Negro Beggar"; drawings: "Carrie Ann," "A Dancer," "Anne," "Rural Mail Man," "Russian Student," "Tony-nude," "Katherine," "Miss Williams," "Nude Sketch," and "Polish Peasant Girl"; woodcuts: "Trees by the River," "Industry," "Nature and Industry," "Blind Negro Head," and "North Raleigh."

Shan-Kar Says Dance Interprets Religion For Unlearned In India

Noted Dancer Appearing Here Attributes Indian Dancing to Religion; Compares Its Origin to That of Early Drama of Western World, Which Had Its Beginnings in Churches.

Not even the change from the gorgeous vestments of India to startlingly conventional riding breeches could rob Shan-Kar of the ineffable dignity and grace manifested in his dancing. His expressive Hindu greeting, aesthetic features, and pervading reserve had the same charm in the wings of Memorial hall as before the admiring audience which had just dispersed.

It was when he spoke of the ruling passion of his life that his calm gave way to a kind of electrical excitement. With fascinating inflections in his voice, he explained that in India the dance and music serve to make intelligible to everyone the religion of the land. "Just as in this country all do not understand the Bible," said Shan-Kar, "it is necessary in India to artistically present graphic interpretations for the benefit of the unlearned."

Religions Origin

His dances, though religious and mythological in origin and character, are now not presented in the temples. In much the same way as the early drama of the Western world originated in the churches and was later secularized, the Hindu dance has been removed from the houses of worship to public places.

A festival is generally the occasion for the performance of these dances. Instead of being given in theatres they are presented before a fire, outside a temple, in an open field, or at a large public gathering spot.

GROUP TO WORK ON DANCE PLANS

Junior-Senior Committee to Receive Bids for Decoration of Tin Can at Meeting.

The junior-senior dance committee will receive bids, plans, and specifications for decorating the Tin Can for the annual Junior-Senior dances, May 12-13, at a meeting in Graham Memorial at 9:00 o'clock Tuesday night, February 1.

Firms or groups submitting bids should plan to decorate 13,000 square feet, almost 5,000 square feet more than used at last year's ball. The floor this year will extend from the side of the basketball courts entirely to the wall of the Tin Can on the other, including the nine supporting pillars. The organizations should also present full data as to the quality of material to be used, as well as the amount, and be able to sketch plans of the completed project for the committee.

Bids to Cover All Work

Bids should cover all trelis work, buildings department expense, electrical wiring, installation of amplifiers, a sound board for the orchestra, waxing of the floors, and all other expenses incidental to preparing and decorating the hall for dances. The bid should also include an estimate on the installation of a tea garden. The installation of a piano will be handled by the committee. The firms who plan to submit prices for this work must also bear in mind that the Tin Can shall be left in the same condition after the dances as they find it when they commence their work.

FAMOUS AUTHOR TO DELIVER WEIL LECTURE SERIES

Dr. Charles A. Beard Will Be Heard in Group of Speeches
On "National Interest."

Dr. Charles A. Beard, former professor of political science at Columbia University and author of The Rise of American Civilization and many historical works, has accepted the University's invitation to deliver the Weil lectures this year, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. Beard, who is also a prominent writer, are spending the winter at Chapel Hill, residing at the Carolina Inn.

The dates for the lectures, the general theme of which will be "What Is National Interest?", have not been decided upon as yet, but it is thought that they will be delivered in February or March.

Prominent Speakers

Lecturers under the Weil foundation since its inception in 1915 have been a distinguished line of men conspicuous in the public eye. William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, was the first lecturer under the foundation.

The last lecturer was Dr. Howard J. Laski, professor of political science in the London school of economics.

There was no Weil lecturer last year at the request of the Weil family, but the money was turned over to the student loan fund. The foundation, known as the "Weil Lectures On American Citizenship," was established.

DR. ALBRIGHT TO TALK TOMORROW

Will Present Illustrated Lecture
On Palestinian Archaeology
In Hill Music Hall.

Dr. William F. Albright, director of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem and also head of the Oriental Seminary at Johns Hopkins University, will present an illustrated lecture on Palestinian archaeology in Hill music auditorium tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock.

Ten Years in Palestine

Dr. Albright has spent ten years in Palestine in research and directing excavations. His work at Beth Zur, 'Ain Shems, and Tell Beit Mirsim has contributed to the knowledge of the history of Palestine during the Bronze and Iron ages. His last four campaigns at Tell Beit Mirsim, ancient Kiriath-Sepher, an important Canaanite and Israelite site in southern Palestine, will be emphasized in his lecture here. This site has been identified by the excavator with the town of Kiriath-Sepher, mentioned in the fifteenth chapter of the Book of Joshua. The town was occupied and destroyed at least ten different times, dating from a period as far back as the Bronze age, approximately 2300 B. C. Dye and wine factories, household utensils, children's toys, and even ladies compact boxes, are among the objects which the excavator has uncovered in this ancient southern city.

The lecture will be illustrated with stereopticon slides made from Dr. Albright's own photographs of his work.

Ready to Aid the Cause of the State

Those persons who, posing as friends of the University have recently been decrying the budget reductions which this institution has had to undergo, are not only profaning the name of the University they are supposedly supporting, but they are also showing an unappreciative attitude towards the present financial crisis this state is being forced to face.

The University of North Carolina is a child of the Legislature. It is the most important child of the entire family of state supported institutions, educational or otherwise. It receives its life sustenance to a large measure from this parent body. Yet, at the same time, it appreciates the struggle the whole family is having to fight. It realizes that the Legislature has practically exhausted all of its visible means of support. And as a consequence the University is only too glad to share the financial responsibility which has been imposed on the family.

To take any other viewpoint would be characteristic only of a selfish, spoiled child.

The contention, however, is being made that the University has had larger budget reductions than the majority of the members of the American Association of Universities. But the time has now come when this state's family of state institutions can no longer be compared to the Joneses on the basis of finances. This family has a problem of its own which must be faced sanely. And the University, as what might be considered the eldest child of the family, must be satisfied to shoulder a larger responsibility than the other members of the family.

By continually condemning the Legislature for its having cut the budget, the University is forgetting the fact that it must help to bear the troubles which are at this time weighing down on the state. It may be a hard lot for the University to bear at this time, but in all fairness to its parent, the Legislature, and to the other members of the state's family, this institution must and will accept its lot in silence.

As a big brother is always willing to do what he can for the weaker members of his family, so the University is willing to do extra duty, if the Legislature so decides, in order that the other institutions might survive. It may mean a stinting in the University's growth by several years. But when the whole family is having to undergo the same retardation in their development, the burden becomes mutual.

The majority of the members of the Legislature were once students in one or the other of the state educational institutions. Now that they are serving in the capacity of parent, they still remember the viewpoints they themselves held regarding the Legislature in their day when it tried to cut budgets. When they have to cut the University's budget now, they do so in no sense of discrimination, but rather with the interest of the entire family at heart. And it is in this light that the University willingly accepts what actions the Legislature might take with regard to the budgets.

Sportsmanship In Finance

In an effort to pare the nation's athletic budget to the bone, universities in every section of the country are announcing this week the suspension of various minor sports in an effort to meet expenses in the major elements of their programs.

Cornell and Dartmouth, in the East, are the first to fall in line. Northwestern, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Purdue, in the Middle-West announce similar curtailments. Oregon and Oregon State in the Northwest and Stanford and California in the Far West are added to the roll. Georgia Tech is the South's contribution to the ranks of the entrenchers. In a like manner Iowa announces that all sports which are not self-supporting will be dropped from her schedule. This amounts to the same declaration, since few, if any, minor sports can be termed as self-supporting.

Happily, this institution was one of the first to return a negative answer to the query of financial retrenchment. No sports will be dropped, each division of the athletic program will be followed as explicitly as possible; nothing will be given up, though cuts and equipment reductions will be effected when necessary.

It seems a credit to the athletic association and the various components of the University administration which have contributed to the operation of athletic ventures here that finances are so expertly handled as to insure the retention of the vital portions of our athletic program: golf, tennis, wrestling, boxing, baseball, track, cross-country, and others sports have been consigned to the knife elsewhere. University athletic officials thus signify that the worth of minor sports has not been undervalued. Minor sports receive the attention of a vast portion of the student body but not sufficiently equipped to partake in the major sports. Carolina has thus attained an enviable reputation in many minor sports departments.

It would have been a disastrous step to dispense with the minor sports program. Fortunately football and basketball receive no undue amount of over-emphasis. No vast sums are spent on pointless ballyho; no million dollar contracts are entered for games three thousand miles away from home; no fabulous sums are spent for fancy equipment. Apparently we are cognizant of such a thing as sportsmanship in athletic finance. —D.C.S.

Native Beauty and The Apathetic South

"I like the people of the South and the West—their friendliness and hospitality. But there is more appreciation of art in the East than in any other section of the country," said the manager of the Shan-Kar troupe of dancers, after their performance here Wednesday night.

Evidently the manager realized that the reception given his performers by the audience was apathetic. At the conclusion of the program, there was no extended applause like that which had been given to Shan-Kar in New York or in Paris. Before the final curtain struck the stage floor, most of the audience was on its feet, perfunctorily applauding. There was no spontaneous burst of enthusiastic hand-clapping.

A capacity audience came to Memorial hall, probably attracted by the extraordinary nature of the program, strange names, foreign faces and exotic dances: the fascination of the Orient. During the performance, the students reacted feebly to the less sensational numbers on the program. They were amused when Shan-Kar threw his neck out of joint and when 12-year-old Robindra cavorted in a monkey disguise. They were fascinated by the dancer's interpretation of a snake charmer and by his apparently dangerous display of sword play, when it looked as if Shan-Kar might at any moment behead his partner before their very eyes. And they openly guffawed at Debendra's wild interpretation of the Hunter's Dance, and especially at the tuneless blare of a Hindu horn that looked like a cross between a yellow squash, a Dutch pipe and an inverted saxophone.

For a while the audience listened attentively to the Hindu music so strange to Western ears, endeavoring to understand its peculiar tonal and rhythmic qualities. They were astonished at the chief-drummer's facility with his miniature kettle-drums. But, except for a few who were absorbed in the varying beat of the odd Oriental rhythm, most of the listeners lost interest early in the evening. For most, the program was too long.

As for the true significance of the performance of Shan-Kar and his Hindus, it is doubtful if any in the audience saw it, although many appreciated its native beauty. If there is a lack of art appreciation in the South, it is not to be so much deplored in this case, for Drama-Critic Martin of the erudite New York Times insists that we of the Western world can not expect to understand Hindu music and dancing.

Perhaps, if the Chapel Hill audience enjoyed its look at bright costumes, fantastic dance forms, and weird musical instruments, that is all that could be expected, with no reflection either on the intelligence of the audience or on the performance of the dancers. Most University students have at least found out that there is no connection whatsoever between the music and dances of Harlem and those of Bombay.—E.C.D.

"Co-eds at the University of Idaho, at Moscow, have been rehearsing Christmas carols on the college campus. Nights of caroling are designated and citizens as well as students come to hear the singing"—from a cut line in the Raleigh Times, Wednesday, January 11.

Only 339 shopping days 'till Christmas!

Someone sitting on our left at the Shan-Kar recital remarked that the first musical number went over his head. He thought the musicians were tuning up.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Editor THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

I must take exception to a statement in Wednesday morning's DAILY TAR HEEL relative to salary reductions at the University. The headline, "Salary Cut Here Not Larger Than At Other Places," and the entire final paragraph presents a picture which is not only unfair but quite untrue.

At the recent national convention of the American Association of University Professors, the Committee on the Economic Condition of the Profession presented the results of a nationwide study on the question of salary reductions, from which I quote certain figures showing the real condition. Information in the files of the committee covering 108 major institutions in the United States indicates that up to the close of the academic year 1931-1932:

81 institutions made no cuts
7 institutions cut 5%
15 institutions cut 6% to 10%
1 institution cut 11% to 15%
4 institutions cut over 15%

Returns on file in the Washington offices of the association for the current academic year indicate that even at present conditions are not nearly so severe in the majority of prominent universities as they are at the University of North Carolina. Of the reporting institutions, among which are many members of the Association of American Universities, to which the University of North Carolina belongs:

19 have received no cuts
4 have been cut 5%
20 have been cut 6% to 10%
7 have been cut 11% to 15%
4 have been cut 15% to 20%
1 graduated cut 17% to 30%
1 graduated cut 15% to 25%

It is clear, then, from these figures that THE DAILY TAR HEEL is not in possession of the facts when it states that "Salary reductions of thirty to forty per cent have been made in leading colleges." Quite the contrary, many "leading" colleges such as Harvard, Yale, California, and Columbia have made no cuts at all. The reports from which these figures are taken are on file in the office of the secretary of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, where they may be verified.—A. C. Howell.

Editor THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

I cannot allow to pass unchallenged the last paragraph of a news article in Wednesday's DAILY TAR HEEL to the effect that, "The University salary cuts have not been respectively of a greater amount than most reductions effected in colleges and universities throughout the United States."

Suppose this be settled on the basis of the data in Bulletin No. 28 of the U. S. Office of Education, "The Outlook in Higher Education for 1932-33," a circular that describes conditions as they were in September, 1932. Let us first examine publicly controlled colleges and universities.

Here, of 57 reporting, 14 have made no cuts at all, (6 such are southern institutions); 8 have reduced salaries only 1-5 per cent; 24 have kept it down to 6-10 per cent (less by the way than that effected by our one legislative fiat); 6 have lowered salaries 11-15 per cent; and only 5 have reduced over 15 per cent. Now since, considering our legislative cut as well as our budget board "short-changing," our present salary confiscation amounts to 25 per cent, in this group the University of North Carolina is actually more drastic than any other school in the report except The Citadel, (Thank God for South Carolina, as usual!), which has applied a cut of 17-32 per cent; the other four of the drastic group have cuts of 17-18, 10-20, 23-25, and 10-25 per cent, respectively, the severity of the reduction being somewhat lessened by the graduated scale.

Of 26 state universities reporting, 11 have made no cuts at all (6 of these being southern universities); 2 have reduced only 5 per cent; 7 have reduced 6-10 per cent; 4 have reduced 11-15 per cent; and only 2 have matched us with 25 per cent or better. Here we are in company with New Mexico, the top range of which only is equal to ours, since her reductions are graduated at 10-25 per cent, and with Mississippi, which flatly confiscates 25 per cent.

We do not even compare favorably with the group of privately controlled institutions, the bulk of them little obscure freshwater colleges, the very names of which have seldom seen the light. Their management, however, must have been possessed of some financial clairvoyance, since of 50 reporting, 17 have made no cuts at all; 5 have reduced 1-5 per cent; 13 have gone down 6-10 per cent; 8 have reduced 11-15 per cent; and 8 over 15 per cent. Here, for instance, the University of North Carolina is more severe than Phillips University (Oklahoma) with 16-19 per cent; Trinity (Texas) with 17-20 per cent; and the College of Idaho with 15-17 per cent. Birmingham Southern is, on the average, better off with 17-30 per cent; Doane (Nebraska) worse with 30 per cent and Eureka (Illinois) better off than we with 0-25 per cent.

It is evident, therefore, that far from the "Salary Cut Here Not Larger Than At Other Places," as the DAILY TAR HEEL headline put it, the State of North Carolina ranks with the highest half dozen in her inability, or refusal, to make good her contractual obligations.

With Contemporaries

Radicalism in The Colleges

The pre-election collegiate straw vote which showed a strong sentiment in favor of Mr. Hoover is conclusive evidence of collegiate insulation from social and political realities. The notion that any respectable number of American students are really solely interested in intellectual pursuits is too ridiculous to deserve further mention. Indeed, the strong vote for Mr. Hoover is an indication that our colleges are controlled by the rulers of the status quo and are shot through with the propaganda of the present order.

To be sure, a small, militant group in many colleges has been awakened by present conditions, but the majority still take no critical interest in the American scene, but stoddily accept the present order as divinely inspired and everlasting. If we do not believe that this is true, we must not commit the fallacy of substituting one set of beliefs for another and establishing a new propaganda—even if we think it a better one—for the old. But we must see to it that the old loses its static nature and that the new is given a chance at articulation. The forces making for international peace and industrial decency must be forcefully presented in the colleges—and more important, even, in the secondary schools—of the country.

The policy of repression of unpopular views which American college administrators have been guilty of does not give much hope that our school system will ever achieve such equity. What saves the hope from being entirely utopian is the beginning of strong student dissatisfaction and protest, although such stirrings at present are mostly confined to metropolitan colleges. What is needed as much as student protest is teacher's solidarity. The formation of a powerful teacher's union to guarantee academic tolerance and to insist on the presentation of unpopular views seems an absolute necessity, as long as our colleges remain in Bourbon hands and as long as our college administrators do their best to "prolong the infancy" of the students under their charge and prevent them from seeing things whole. Without such an organization it is difficult to see how education can play any part in remodeling and humanizing the social environment.—The New Viewpoint.

Phantoms Open Conference Play Here Tonight Against Gobblers

Game With V. P. I. Is Scheduled To Begin at 8:00 O'clock In Tin Can.

TAR HEELS LOOK BETTER

Show Improvement in Workout Yesterday; Coach Shepard Stresses Offense.

The White Phantoms snapped out of their temporary slump in yesterday's practice and again looked more like the dangerous five they have been at times this winter.

Coach Shepard worked his two teams long and hard yesterday in an offensive scrimmage, trying to perfect the passing and shooting. Though a little sloppy at first, the varsity combination tightened and flashed some snappy passing and shooting.

Zaiser May See Action

The first team composed of Captain Hines and Weathers, as forwards; Brandt as center; with Aitken and McCachren at the guard posts, will get the call to open tonight against the V. P. I. Gobblers. The second combination of Nalle and Markham, forwards; Glace, center; and Chandler and Henry, guards, will be used as soon as the game is tucked away. Gene Zaiser, sophomore guard, who has been showing an improvement in his play all along since Christmas, will probably get a chance to show his wares under the fire of varsity competition tonight.

The game tonight in the Tin Can is to begin at 8:00 o'clock while the double-header tomorrow with Wake Forest will begin at 7:30 o'clock. The Gobblers have lost their only other Southern conference tilt, that with Maryland which they dropped 40-20.

Coach Monk Younger's starting team tonight will probably show Captain Hall and Thomas as forwards; Seaman, center; with Groth and Holsclaw as guards.

FROSH TO ENGAGE BABY DEACONS ON COURT TOMORROW

Dameron's Yearlings Will Meet Strong Wake Forest Team in First Game of Season.

Carolina's Tar Baby quint team are going to find the going pretty tough when they meet the Wake Forest team in the Tin Can tomorrow night.

Wake Forest has one of the best frosh basketball teams in many a year. The Baby Deacons are fast and seem able to ring the basket from all corners of the court. Opening the season against the Duke frosh last Tuesday night, the Wake Forest yearlings came out on the long end of a 33 to 28 score. The two teams were tied at 16-all when the half whistle sounded, but in the third quarter the winners took a lead and were never headed.

Loftin, guard, led the Deacons in scoring with eleven points and played a beautiful floor game. Patton, center, starred for the winners with eight points. Pero and Brunt at forwards; Patton at center; and Loftin and Hatcher at guards look like the line-up which will face the Tar Babies in their opening game. Simpson, forward; and Wall and Holton, guards are other stars who will see action against the Tar Babies tomorrow.

Coach Dameron is still unsatisfied with the work of the freshman team and will run them hard in the last practice before the opening contest. The first team of Moore and Nelson, forwards; Kanner, center; and Phelps and McCachren, guards are showing up well.

SIDELINE SLANTS

BY HARRY MONTGOMERY

The fireworks will soon begin. Coaches Collins and Cerney have just arrived in town. The arrival of these two gentlemen can indicate but one thing—Winter Football. Within a week Carolina's grid warriors will begin their first practice in preparation for the 1933 campaign.

The dove of peace is winging over the college grid-irons. Gradually the old rivals are again renewing grid relations. Yale is to meet Pennsylvania in 1933. Princeton is renewing relations with Dartmouth in 1933 and Harvard in 1934. Apparently the old rivals are getting together in the interest of good business. The realignments and renewals in eastern football schedules offer the natural development of anything from a Big Four to a Big Five, starting with Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, then adding Cornell, Pennsylvania, Brown, Army, spicing this with Columbia, Syracuse, Navy, and Colgate. So who would say that the depression in eastern football has not produced some good?

The advance dope on the arrangement on 1933 football schedules seems to indicate that there will be more intersectional tilts this year than in any previous year. Georgia seems to occupy the front rank in this respect, playing Southern California (ouch), N. Y. U., and Yale. Carolina is one of the few teams in the south which is not playing an intersectional foe. Won't we all agree that an intersectional contest in 1934 would be quite appropriate?

Now that the basketball season is underway, we continually hear discussions concerning which college teams are the "cream of the crop." Only time will tell. However, reluctantly, yet rather boldly, I am making the following predictions—North Carolina to win the Southern conference—Kentucky the Southeastern—Princeton to repeat in the Eastern Intercollegiate league—Ohio State in the Big Ten, with Northwestern a good long shot since they dropped Purdue, the defending champs Wednesday night—and Pitt in the newly formed Eastern league. Now take your choices.

As long as the discussion is on football, you know that Andy Kerr, Colgate coach said the best college teams can beat the professionals—that I in turn would say only the best college teams, namely: the Trojans of U. S. C.—that Buster Mott, Georgia's flashy halfback, will sign a contract tendered by the New York Yankees—that increased use of the quick kick and lateral pass will feature football throughout the nation this coming season—that there should be a five year moratorium on football rule changes—that Chet Wynne may leave Auburn for Michigan State—that it would certainly be advisable to lift the ban on broadcasting Southern conference games—and finally, that the Columbia Spectator is one that does not believe its place is on the sidelines?

The Bible says that without vision the people perish. The international bankers seem to think that without revision they will also.—Wichita Eagle.

is still intact and looks like the best bet to start. However, there will probably be some changes in the second string as some of forwards; Kanner, center; and Phelps and McCachren, guards are showing up well.

NINETEEN MEN TO BE ON HAND FOR BOUTS AT V. P. I.

Coach Rowe Still Undecided on Starting Lineup as Team En-trains for Blacksburg.

The boxing teams, varsity and freshman, will leave this morning at 9:00 o'clock for Blacksburg where they will endeavor to impress V. P. I. Saturday night with the Tar Heel version of "Pugilists on Parade."

In addition to Coaches Allen and Rowe and Manager Ed Kerr, 19 men will make the trip. For the varsity, Glover and Ivey, bantamweights; Levinson, featherweight; Quarles, lightweight; Lumpkin and Langdon, welterweights; Berke and McIntosh in the new and, as yet, unnamed 155 pound class; Giddens, middleweight; Peyton Brown and Parsons, light heavyweights; and Landis, heavyweight, will go.

The freshmen are: Eustler, Frucht, Flaherty, Baxter Brown, Ellisberg, Henson, and Kanner.

Teams Work Hard

Yesterday afternoon, the two teams continued hard work right up until the last possible minute, as the coaches felt that the boys can afford to lose no time in whipping themselves into shape for the tough fights that they will have to engage in Saturday night. The boxers even carried their training into the ring itself, engaging in hard, last-minute sparring matches.

While the freshman line-up is certain, Coach Allen carrying just enough men to have one representative in each division, the varsity starters are not yet selected. Coach Rowe is faced with the hard problem of selecting one out of two good boys in about four or five of the fighting

MATMEN TRY FOR POSITIONS TODAY

Candidates for Wrestling Team Under Fire for First Time as They Battle for Places.

Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan, coach of the varsity and freshman wrestling teams, sent his mat proteges through light workouts yesterday afternoon in anticipation of the team trials to be staged this afternoon and the finals tomorrow.

The teams are in good shape physically, save for some minor injuries among the varsity men. These should not give them much trouble in their matches; however, the trials will be the first time the grappling candidates have had a chance to show their wares under fire. A large crowd of students should turn out to view the events.

These workouts are staged to prime the men for their double-header wrestling meet with the varsity and freshman teams of the N. C. State Wolfpack, Monday. The matches will come off in State's Frank Thompson gymnasium. State's two mat teams are coached by W. N. Hicks, professor on the State faculty; and his clubs are supposed to be the strongest in the history of wrestling at the West Raleigh school.

The complete line-ups of the wrestling teams, carrying the Tar Heels' colors will appear in THE DAILY TAR HEEL in its Sunday edition.

All the varsity lettermen were out yesterday, and looked good. Hussey still has several touchy boils on his arms while Hiller's facial mat burns are beginning to show signs of improvement. Both men will be in there this afternoon, defending their rights as logical starters in Monday's meet by virtue of their monograms.

Snooks Aitken Began Career In Basketball At Early Age

Bo Shepard's Latest Find Started at Forward on Charlotte "Y" 110-Pound Team; Has Played With Jim and Dave McCachren For Several Years, and Hopes to Do So Again Here.

Stuart Aitken, Coach Bo Shepard's latest guard find, who has filled ex-Captain Tom Alexander's shoes so well so far this season, started his court career at a very early age.

"Snooks," as Stuart is better known, was born and raised in Charlotte. He has played basketball from the time he was able to throw the ball as high as the basket. At the age of nine he got his first taste of playing on a team with four other players. He went out for the 110-pound class of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team, which has been famous for developing basketball stars.

Plays With Two McCachrens

A place at forward was given the young star, and on the same team were Jim McCachren, now a member of the Tar Baby quint team, and Dave McCachren, varsity guard and Jim's brother. Snooks played for the "Y" midget team for three years. Carl Link was directing the Y. M. C. A. team and probably taught Aitken more basketball than any other single person.

After finishing his play on the "Y" midget team, Snooks went out for and made the Charlotte junior high school team. He played for the junior high team two years. Lockenhour was coaching these teams and added a little more knowledge to the young boy who was fast becoming well known among basketball players and fans.

For the next two seasons, Snooks returned to the place of his first basketball experience, the Y. M. C. A. But this time he had advanced and he easily made the first "Y" team. The "Y" had some of the best teams in many a year and further notice was taken of the speedy little forward, Aitken.

The next year which was in 1930 Snooks was out for the Charlotte high school team and made it. Here again he played with Dave and Jim McCachren. In 1931 Snooks was on the Charlotte high team again, playing with Jim McCachren; Dave had entered Carolina earlier that year. That season the Charlotte team, under the direction of Coach Skidmore, swept the state and took the high school state championship. Snooks was named on the 1931 all-state high school team.

That spring Snooks graduated from high school and following fall entered the University. Last season he made the Carolina freshman basketball team at forward and was the outstanding man on the team. His speedy and shifty play often brought applause and hardwood followers have predicted a bright future for Snooks immediately.

Shifted to Guard

This year Snooks went out as an understudy to Captain Wilmer Hines and had hopes of filling his shoes next year. Coach Shepard had other ideas when he saw the speedy boy in action. After several others were tried at the guard position without complete success, the coach shifted Snooks to guard and he fitted with perfection.

Snooks has shown that he has the stuff in the White Phantoms' first two encounters this season. Although the only sophomore on the first team, he has carried himself like a seasoned veteran, playing a bang-up floor game in both contests and counting 21 points.

If Jim McCachren keeps up the play he has shown on the Tar Baby quint team so far, Snooks will have to be shifted back to forward next year. This will bring together the old combination which Snooks began playing with: Aitken at forward and Dave and Jim McCachren at guards.

FROSH TRACKMEN PLAN FOR MEET

Yearlings Have Fine Chance for Good Defense of Records Established Last Year.

Assistant track coach Dale Ranson is desirous of having all freshmen out for track if they are intending to make their numerals in this sport. The indoor meet, which is carded for March 4, will embrace freshmen teams of both conference and non-conference schools.

All men who have had either prep school or high school experience are asked to report daily at Emerson field for track workouts. Men with no past experience are eligible to qualify. Ranson is especially anxious to have all men with previous experience and background as material.

Equipment will be issued to those who have no track togs. Sergeant Keller will be authorized by Coach Dale Ranson to issue equipment. Men who have equipment and are not reporting regularly will have their track clothes recalled.

Excellent Chance

Carolina's yearling track men stand an excellent chance to successfully defend their indoor freshman track crown. The Tar Babies won laurels in this first year event last year, piling up 17.5 points while their nearest contender was the Richmond University entry, making 15 markers. William and Mary College frosh were runners-up, taking third place in the meet.

There are only five events in the freshman indoor track, the 60-yard dash; 70-yard high hurdles; three quarter mile run; mile relay; and the running high jump. The 60-yard dash title is held separately by both Carolina and William and Mary freshmen. The Tar Babies should consider themselves holding the inside to the title, however, since they set the record which the Williamsburg boys tied. Ashkenas, Carolina frosh, set the time of 6.6 seconds in the 1931 meet while Little, William and Mary first year man, tied the

SWAIN HALL AND BEST HOUSE WIN OVER OPPONENTS

Tau Epsilon Phi, Beta Theta Pi, Kappa Sigma, and Sigma Phi Sigma Also Get Victories.

Two contests between hitherto undefeated teams featured yesterday's intramural basketball program in the Tin Can. In the first of these T. E. P.'s fast quintet scored over Delta Psi while in the second, Kappa Sigma nosed out Phi Alpha by the narrow margin of one point.

The runners-up for last season's fraternity league leadership gained their second win of the week when T. E. P. came out on top of a fiercely contested battle with Delta Psi, 33-25. Eisner, Hirsch, and Jacobs were the big guns in the winning team's attack, scoring twelve, ten, and eight points respectively. Dillard kept pace with Eisner, accounting for twelve markers, while Hammer, center for the losers, scored eight.

Kappa Sigs Win

Led by White and Steele, who scored six and four points, Kappa Sigma gained its second victory of the week at the expense of Phi Alpha, which put up a great fight to keep itself in the undefeated class. The score was 15-14. Schulman and Friedman played best for Phi Alpha, scoring six points each.

Swain Hall, playing in its first game of the season, crushed Mitchell House, 37-6. Puckett scored thirteen points for the winners, and Rhodes, his teammate, added eight more to the winning outfit's total. Chambers, for Mitchell House, scored four points.

Betas Score

Anderson scored twelve points for the winners as Beta Theta Pi inaugurated its campaign with a clean-cut 30-15 victory over Theta Kappa Nu. The losers gained an early advantage, but good shooting by Anderson and Barnett, who got eight points, put the Betas ahead by half time and they were never headed again. Hunter and Berry scored best for Theta Kappa Nu, which went scoreless in the second and fourth periods.

Led by Snyder and Phelps, who scored eighteen and fifteen points respectively, Best House downed the Independents, 52-32, in the high-scoring contest of the afternoon. Roberts scored eleven points to lead his teammates on the losing outfit.

Sigma Phi Sigma defeated Pi Kappa Phi by the unusually low score of 8-6. The Froneberger brothers scored four points each to account for all the points of the victorious outfit.

Schedule for Today

Today's intramural program follows:

3:45 p. m.—(1) Phi Sigma Kappa vs. Pi Kappa Alpha; (2) Old East vs. Everett; (3) New Dorms vs. Grimes.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Alpha Tau Omega vs. Chi Psi; (2) Steele vs. Manly; (3) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

DR. EINSTEIN WILL DISCUSS ECONOMIC SITUATION IN TALK

Mathematical Genius Will Address California Group January 23 Over Radio Hook-up.

Dr. Albert Einstein will deliver a lecture on "The World Economic Situation" at a meeting of the Southern California student body presidents' association at Pasadena, California, January 23. This lecture will be broadcast over a national hook-up.

A similar meeting last year on "World Armaments" proved very successful. In addition to Dr. Einstein, Dr. Charles Beard, noted government and American history authority, and Dr. Robert A. Millikan, winner of the Nobel prize will deliver lectures. The purpose of these meetings is to "help the objective consideration of the basically important problems which are now confronting the civilized world." This meeting is an effort to present an intelligent basis for the formation of opinion on questions of world importance for the student.

Shan-Kar Says Dance Interprets Religion For Unlearned In India

According to Shan-Kar, the American conception of the word "nautch" in connection with Indian dancing is grossly erroneous. "Nautch" simply means a dance," he stated, "as you say, 'let us go to the movies,' so we say, 'let us go to a nautch.'" The word has particularly been associated with the vulgar street dancing which almost entirely displaced the classic form that Shan-Kar represents.

Classic Revival

It is for this reason that he observed, "The dance is looked down upon in India. Dancers, in general, are not considered respectable. However, the younger generation is at present deep in a rebirth of the purer forms of dancing, a movement which should restore the art to its former high station."

Shan-Kar exhibited only contempt for most of the members of the wealthy class in India. "They are not cultured, they have no education, and do nothing for the advancement of art. It is the folk people who have preserved the art of India and to them this classic revival is indebted."

This dancer, himself, has been hailed in India as the main-spring in the movement to once again give expression to the religious and mythological culture of his people through the dance. A recent tour of the country was nothing less than a triumphal procession for him and an inspiration to the true followers of the arts in his native country.

Startling Regulations Amuse And Trouble Modern College Student

Obsolete and Quaint Rules in Many American Schools Provoke Laughter and Disgust From Students Who Turn to Roller Skates and Bicycles When Autos Forbidden.

In this era of supposed collegiate independence, there are a startling number of quaint and curious regulations. A recent glance at "do" and "don't" in various colleges some strange rules which provide dandy laughs for the modern student, and not a few detentions and punishments.

Way out at Washington University, for instance, there are canoeing regulations for girls. The rule is that there shall be no canoeing before 7:30 o'clock in the morning or after 9:00 o'clock at night. Girls claim they wouldn't leave their quilts at 7:30 o'clock for anybody's canoe. The rule, which has stood several depressions, was made for the days when a canoe trip meant lunch and a real day of it.

At Stanford, they have a prize rule for women. Unchaperoned walking in the hills after dark in parties less than six is absolutely prohibited. The regulation stops short, however, before giving a definition of unchaperoned, in the hills, or six what.

At Oregon State last fall a student problem affected the whole town of Corvallis. College authorities said "No autos."

DRAMA FESTIVAL ENTRANCE RULES ARE ANNOUNCED

(Continued from first page) terying the production contests for entering each of the special contests, which will include the make-up, costume, and stage design divisions. Schools that pay the tournament fee may enter any or all the special contests without any additional fee.

Scenery will not be taken into account in judging any of the productions this year. Properties and furniture should be reduced to a minimum. The properties and sets of the Carolina Playmakers will be available for use by the contestants.

Comedies will be used by city senior and junior high schools, county high schools, and junior community groups, and tragedies will be presented by junior and senior colleges, Little Theatre organizations, and adult community groups.

Arrangements for preliminary contests will be made as usual. Due to the indication of a larger number of entries in the tournament than were first anticipated, a few preliminary contests will be run off here for groups widely separated and unable to have preliminary contests in their own localities. All preliminary contests, other than those here, should be over by March 1, if possible.

All churches interested in entering a religious play contest should notify the secretary of the association. This contest may take place Sunday, March 26, preceding the state dramatic festival.

Students with Composition Conditions May Receive Aid

Students who have received composition conditions in any course may secure aid toward removal of such conditions without charge by making appointments with Professor George McKie of the English department, whose office hours are from 9:30 to 11:00 o'clock daily except Saturday, in room 210 Murphey.

McIntosh Speaks

C. E. McIntosh of the school of education spoke Wednesday afternoon before the Parent-Teacher association of the Hayes-Barton School in Raleigh.

Most students hate walking, so out came pa's hoss and buggy—and little brother's roller skates. One enterprising student resurected a tandem bicycle.

Skates were most popular. "They require little oil and no hay," Oregon students explained. Occasional run-away horses kept the town excited until the order was repealed.

Bicycles at Duke

Over at the Duke co-ed college there exists an anti-auto regulation. Duke students by now are accustomed to seeing young ladies pedalling bicycles about the woman's campus.

St. Mary's in Raleigh is noted for its famous campus rule. Girl students are not allowed to cross an imaginary line placed about ten yards from the sidewalks which bind the grounds, but may, though endangering their liberty, approach boundary.

At the Woman's College of the University girls are denied the pleasure of keeping pet animals. As a result, puppies and kittens are said to abound in the dormitories. The Woman's College also has a rule denying girl students the privilege of dropping electric light bulbs from second and third story windows.

When Marty Levinson steps into the ring, it will mark the beginning of his last year of intercollegiate boxing. Marty has piled up one of the greatest records ever made at Carolina, losing but four fights in three years, three of them being to Bobby Goldstein of Virginia, the other to Dave Cooops of Penn State.

Norm Quarles, Sam Giddens, and Lee Berke, should he get the call over Frank McIntosh, are three sophomores on the varsity. All three went undefeated last year as freshmen and they will be watched closely in their first fights as varsity men.

Mead, Tar Baby, holds the record for the three quarter mile run in the 1931 meet with the time of 3 minutes and 16 seconds flat. The Richmond University freshmen, hold the record for the mile relay event with 3:41.2 as their time. West, another Richmond frosh, holds the high jump record, which is 5 feet 10 inches. Both these last two marks were set in the 1932 indoor meet.

BURT DISCOVERED BY STRINGFIELD

Composition of Young Musician To Be Presented Here January 20 by Symphony.

Nathaniel Burt, young composer whose orchestral composition Prelude Aubal is to be presented for the first time to Chapel Hill audiences in a concert by the North Carolina Little Symphony, January 20, was first discovered as a composer by Lamar Stringfield, research associate to the Institute of Folk Music, while on a trip to Southern Pines, Burt's home.

Burt, the son of the novelist Struthers Burt, was born in Wyoming in 1913.

On hearing an unusual composition being played while he was in Southern Pines, Stringfield made inquiries and discovered young Burt improvising on the piano. Stringfield declared: "I was greatly impressed with the positive talents of the boy, and immediately offered my aid in putting his composition into score form. It should prove a notable addition to the group of compositions by living American composers to be played, January 20."

Tickets for the concert may be obtained at Alfred Williams company for one dollar. Members of the symphony society and holders of student entertainment coupons will be admitted for fifty cents.

FORUM SPEAKERS DISCUSS METHOD OF GOVERNMENT

Lecturers State Salvation Lies In "Long Range Planning" And Partial Socialism.

At the first lecture of a series sponsored by the Open Forum Discussion Group, Dr. Broadus Mitchell of Johns Hopkins University stated that the salvation of the country lies in a partial acceptance of the principles of the Socialist party, while Dr. Justin Miller of the Duke University school of law pointed out the need for intelligent leadership. The subject for discussion was "The American Scene: 1932."

Dr. Mitchell, the first speaker, stated that we are confronted with "poverty in the midst of plenty." To meet this problem, we must take a definite program of social control. We must repeal the anti-trust acts and have government ownership of public utilities. Goods must be managed for use and not for profit.

Dr. Miller asserted that the solution for governmental problems lies not in long range planning but in intelligent handling of the problems confronting us. It is much easier to establish a long range idealistic theory than it is to work out the problems confronting us, he observed. In Miller's opinion, socialism is not practical because long range planning would probably be cut short at the next election. It is necessary to educate the people until their feeling toward future planning is almost a religious dogma. It is a noteworthy fact that every time a radical party comes into power, the government becomes conservative. Miller further stated that the spade work for successful government must originate in the university.

PRESS RELEASES NEW VOLUME OF SOCIAL PROBLEMS

J. M. Williams Asserts That Civilization Has Reached Chaos in Unemployment Conditions.

The University of North Carolina Press announces the publication of Human Aspects of Unemployment and Relief by J. M. Williams. The volume, which was released January 11, deals with contemporary sociological problems.

The author traces the currents of human wreckage to the hospital, the court, and the desolate life of the street and back room. He uses for examples true cases of the people today and several times uses a case which happened in Orange county. In the opening scene he pictures a home from which the father has been to jail for theft in his efforts to feed his family. The family was not notified.

Williams asserts in his book that our civilization is no longer drifting toward chaos, but has already arrived. Relations of lives of families affording only one meal a day substantiate Williams' statement.

Johns Hopkins Economist Demands Parts For Advisers In Government

Dr. Broadus Mitchell States That Expert Economists and Political Scientists Should Leave Classroom to Advise Office Holders, Politicians, and Voters for Better Government.

"If the professors have nothing to profess to the general public, then let them get out." This ringing challenge to economic and social academicians to take a more dynamic part in shaping public opinion came from Dr. Broadus Mitchell, professor of political economy at the Johns Hopkins University in an interview with a representative of the DAILY TAR HEEL Thursday evening.

Economists, statisticians, and engineers, according to Dr. Mitchell, should be as much concerned with the development of current affairs as with dispensing text-book material to college students. It is time, he believes, for them to come out of the classroom and play a vital role in forming sound opinion on important issues. The professor who overlooks his sociological duty is failing as an educator.

Wrote Roosevelt

Dr. Mitchell cited the recent open letter to President-elect Roosevelt from twenty leading economists as an example of what the scholars should be doing. The message, which was also signed by Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, of the University economics department, called for a reciprocal lowering of tariffs, prompt settlement of inter-allied debts and maintenance of the gold standard as a "minimum program for economic recovery."

"This is our chance," said the eminent economist, "to serve the public as never before. If the experts do not lead the way, to whom shall the rank and file turn for advice and counsel? In these times when people will listen to what anyone has to say regarding our economic system, it is the more important that the trained minds have the proper influence in affecting the voters and lawmakers."

To achieve what he demands of the professors, Dr. Mitchell would have them participate in lectures, such as he himself is now doing, make direct suggestions to legislators and executives, and use every possible means of reaching those whose shaped opinion results in the formation of the economic policy of the nation. Consolidated economic councils, similar to those now in existence in several European nations, do not meet with his approval.

Direct Methods Needed

"We do not want a mere advisory committee to a government which will submit plans that will never be acted upon," he explained. "It is rather the direct appeal, the molding of definite mass viewpoints on economic matters by diffusing expert information that will prove valuable."

Individual advice to government is considerably more acceptable to Dr. Mitchell. He pointed to the appearance of Professor Raymond Moley, of

Johnson, Student Leader Here, Has Risen From Diplomatic

Johnson, '16, of Charlotte, is now being prominently mentioned for appointment as minister to one of the Latin-American countries, according to the Alumni Review.

Johnson served as first lieutenant of infantry in the sixth division during the World War and won promotion to captain. While he was travelling in France, Italy, and England following the war, he decided upon a career of service for his country in foreign lands. Decided in his purpose, he returned to this country, pursued the necessary studies in law at Harvard for a year, and passed the examination the service prescribes with a group of twenty-five out of three hundred applicants in October, 1920.

RELATIONS CLUB MEETS TUESDAY

Armstrong to Lead Disarmament Discussion; Group Organized by Professor Fraser.

There will be a meeting of the International Relations club Tuesday evening at 7:00 o'clock in the lecture room on the third floor of Saunders hall. The meeting, which will be conducted by William E. Armstrong of Belmont, will be an open forum discussion on the subject of disarmament and is open to the public.

The International Relations club was organized last fall through the efforts of Professor K. C. Fraser who at present holds the position of faculty advisor to the club. Through an arrangement with the Carnegie Foundation the club receives books, pamphlets, and other printed matter published by the foundation. From time to time this organization sends various distinguished speakers to Chapel Hill to talk before the club. Dr. Carlos Davila former president of Chile was the most recent speaker which the club has heard through the benefits of this arrangement with the Carnegie Foundation.

RELIGION WILL BE DISCUSSION TOPIC OF SEMINAR BODY

C. R. Skinner of Tufts College
To Lead Next Week's Discussion on Liberal Religion.

Religion, in terms of modern thought and in terms of human needs, both individual and social, will be the subject of the seminar in liberal religion, to be conducted next week at the Carolina Inn by Professor Clarence R. Skinner of the Tufts College School of Religion, near Boston. Professor Skinner, who is dean-elect of the Tufts school, will give a series of five lectures, each to be followed by a period of general discussion. The meetings will be held at 8:00 o'clock p. m. from Monday, January 16, to Friday, January 20, inclusive. In addition, there will be a lecture by Dr. Skinner Sunday evening, January 22.

Although the seminar meetings will probably be of primary interest to students and faculty members of the University, everybody is cordially invited to attend. Admission will be free. No one attending will be required to participate in the discussion, but everyone is invited to do so. Professor Raymond Adams, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has announced.

Following will be Professor Skinner's topics: Monday, January 16, "Liberal Religion Faces a New World"; Tuesday, January 17, "Superstition, Belief and Faith"; Wednesday, January 18, "Science, Ethics, Philosophy and Religion"; Thursday, January 19, "What Liberal Religion Can Do for Men and Women"; Friday, January 20, "The Three Greatest Needs of the Modern World."

Among those who have taken an interest in the Seminar is the American Friends Society, more widely known as the Quakers, having contributed both financially and by sending literature to Chapel Hill for the seminar.

TWENTY-NINE ALL "A'S"

Seniors Alone Show Improvement in Record; Liberal Arts School Leads.

A marked decline was shown in the number of students making the honor roll for the fall quarter this year when compared with the same quarter last year, as indicated by the records released by the registrar's office yesterday.

Two hundred and ninety-six students averaged grades of "B" or above to place their names on the record of scholastic achievement and twenty-nine of these averaged "A," the highest grades given.

Last year's figures show that 324 made the honor roll for the same period during the last scholastic year, making a decline of twenty-eight for this quarter. There was one less student making all "A's" last fall than the preceding fall. Special students are not included in the figures released yesterday.

For the first time in several years, the freshman class failed to lead the other classes, the seniors taking first position with seventy-six. The freshman and junior classes tied for second with seventy-one representatives while sophomores trailed the list with seventy. Pharmacy student are not included in this classification.

Seniors Improve

The senior class was the only one to gain distinction in this classification by showing an increase of nine while other classes showed a decrease.

CHAPEL LECTURER BRANDS CRITICISM AS UNWARRANTED

Mitchell Says Criticism of Liberty At University by People With "an Unfortunate Social History."

Dr. Broadus Mitchell of the Johns Hopkins University, who lectured Thursday night in Gerard hall, remained at Chapel Hill in order to address the freshmen and sophomores at assembly yesterday.

Dr. Mitchell brought out the fact that while many large universities have no connections with the town or city in which they are situated, we at Chapel Hill have to cooperate in every way with our town. He showed that because the University is so liberal it brings upon itself criticism from all parts of the state by people who as Dr. Mitchell said, "have had an unfortunate social history." He thought that these people would not criticize so much if they knew the esteem with which the University is held elsewhere in the country.

The principle technique of this University, according to Dr. Mitchell, is to preserve the balance between scholarship, courage and tact. Education in North Carolina has a high standard in comparison with other states of the union.

Corruption At Home

There is in this country today a large group of intelligent men and women who view with justifiable alarm the fact that our governments have fallen into the hands of politicians and have become honeycombed with corruption and graft. In the quest for a remedy for this serious condition it is often suggested that the task of government be gradually taken over by college graduates, presumably able and well instructed in the art and science of government. To this large group of dissatisfied people the colleges of the nation represent the medium through which our plight may be remedied.

Theoretically they are correct; the country needs changes and improvements and upon the coming generation of educated young men and women devolves the duty of ably and honestly conducting the task of government. The colleges and collegians of today have an opportunity to play a heroic and important role in our history. If they could rise to the need and send from the halls of learning intelligent and expert men into the positions of trust and responsibility they might well achieve a second Declaration of Independence—Independence from the machine politicians and the cat-paw of the predatory interests.

This gorgeous vision, however, comes crashing sadly down as we examine the colleges from which are to spring our saviors. To be sure the technical preparation in theory is ample and the colleges themselves stand only for the finest and noblest of ideals. But what of the incipient statesmen? Search the entire nation and nowhere can be found a more perfect, a more disgusting or a more shameful example of rotten politics than on the campus of the American university. Every office, every position, and every honor within the bestowal of the student body is achieved or awarded by political intrigue. What takes place on the campuses of our universities makes the average politician appear as a haloed angel, and the student bodies enthusiastically participate or indifferently ignore the conditions.

This is an alarming situation. Too many are inclined to view college politics as something cute or amusing in our youngsters and dismiss it from their minds. They ignore a terrible truth. Youth today is doing what youth has always done—ape its elders. The rottenness of our systems has penetrated the colleges and youthful enthusiasts have improved upon the example set for them. The colleges to which so many look for salvation are not pure temples of learning ready to send forth shining knights to battle with political evil. They are training grounds where flourishes politics at its worst.—J.F.A.

Another Racket

One of the more recent rackets that has come into being since the depression has received the name of "twisting." As defined by a bulletin issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, twisting is the practice of "misrepresentation or incomplete comparison between two or more insurance policies," with the intention of persuading a policy-holder to change his life-insurance.

However desirable may seem such a change, it is decidedly not a good investment for several reasons. Any form of life-insurance represents the purchase of an estate by a series of installments, and any exchange of such a claim can hardly improve upon the original one. But there are definite reasons why, in almost every instance, such a transaction would be to the material disadvantage of a policy-holder. For the exchange of a partially paid-for policy for a new one means not only that the insured must begin all over again to pay the installments which were contributing to assure the realization of his estate, but also that he must run the risk of not being able to secure a new policy at the previous low rate due to his advance in age. If his original policy pays dividends, they would be higher than those of a new policy; and the latter would not represent the same value as collateral security that the old policy would with its value increasing every time a premium is paid. Every policy is subject to first and second year restrictions, and by exchanging his old policy, the insured would incur the disadvantage of being subject to new restrictions, if, of course, these have expired in the original one. Finally, exchange of old insurance for new must necessarily entail replacement cost which must be borne over again by the unwary policy-holder.

The Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company has issued warning against giving up old policies in favor of new ones to beneficiaries of its policies who are employees in the University, and they are requested, or their own advantage, to think twice before becoming the dupes of unscrupulous insurance agents. "Twisting" is a deception and a misrepresentation of values; in nine cases out of ten, it spells loss for the policyholder.—A.T.D.

The New Dealer And His Prospectus

Press accounts tell us that an important tete-a-tete has just taken place between President-elect Roosevelt and Secretary of State Stimson. What these two gentlemen talked about in their five-hour session was not divulged by either party, but it seems likely that their time was not consumed by idle gossip.

Certainly, if any in-coming president (other than perhaps Lincoln and Washington) faced such a welter of knotty problems as now confronts Roosevelt we cannot name the man. In the field of foreign affairs alone an almost unprecedented tangle of national interests and counter-interests presents itself.

The gravest and most pressing of these considerations is the question of war debts. It appears evident that France will not resume payments until Germany continues her reparations settlements. Germany's attitude on this score is of such a temper that a stalemate has now been reached. There are four paths open to the United States; namely: (1) Force France to pay, (2) Reduce the debt by an appreciable amount, (3) Grant an extension of the moratorium, or (4) Cancel the debts. This problem is one which seems destined to add at least a round dozen grey hairs to the locks of the president-elect.

The next most important question confronting America in the international sphere appears to be the Sino-Japanese affair, and, in connection with this situation, our relationship with the League of Nations. Japan's frank efforts to cut herself a large slice of Asia-proper is enough to tax the utmost diplomatic skill and political sagacity of our foreign service. An added difficulty in the picture is the clumsy and ineffectual intercommunication existing between America and the League.

A third many-headed Hydra confronting the administration will be the question of Russian recognition. Despite the urgent need for closer co-operation between the two countries at least for economic reasons, there is a strong and persistent undercurrent of anti-Russian sentiment in America. Although this feeling seems to be gradually waning in power, the organizations chiefly responsible for this peculiar mental state are extremely active in their efforts to prevent any move toward a closer, more friendly relationship.

Another sore spot in our foreign policy is the application of the Monroe doctrine. The growing resentment of some of our Latin-American neighbors to our pseudo-imperialist tactics is sufficient evidence that our paternalism is not always of a purely altruistic character. Relations with Nicaragua still remain a thorn in the side of our state department.

Thus we see the prospectus facing the in-coming president in the more important questions of foreign policy. There will undoubtedly be a rather marked change in America's attitude toward these problems. Despite the fact that Roosevelt, from his public utterances, has appeared very conservative in these matters, we must remember that he is a Democratic political heritage and Woodrow Wilson his beacon light.—V.J.L.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Nature

While scurrying through the snow to our office yesterday afternoon, feet incased in waterproof boots and body garbed in the necessary implements of clothing conducive to warmth, we came upon a tiny squirrel, one of our friends of the tree episode of several days ago, endeavoring to make his way from tree to tree across the snow covered ground. We thought his case was a perfect example of the triumph of man over nature, technology versus the elements, or something or other. We watched him as he bobbed across the frozen place between the two trees, sometimes encountering drifts twice his height, but conquering them with the indomitable will that must be to all squirrels. And then we thought of ourselves, free from the elements, enjoying all the comforts of this twentieth century, safe and secure in this hypocritical world. We wished our furry friend godspeed, and dropping two tears on the cold path, wended our way to work.

Pro

Technocracy, we are convinced, is going to be just about as successful as the 1931 Princeton football team and as popular as the Hawley-Smoot tariff in Alabama. "Technocracy Panned by Noted Speaker"; "Dr. Blank Ridicules Technocrats"—that's the way the newspapers look at it. We feel that someone ought to be thankful for Technocracy, particularly the press. Its blessings are manifold, for the new science has taken up space in our newspapers which would otherwise be given to Mahatma Ghandi, a bank stick-up in Arkansas, Radio City, Washington's current Congressional merry-go-round, Tom Mooney, the prattlings of New York's latest mayoral incumbent, and the love life of Rudy Valee.

Technocracy has come along just at the right time for the newspapers—in between the elections and the threat of another Floyd Gibbons trip to the Manchurian front.

Dancers

Wandered back stage after the Shan-Kar performance the other night and found the musicians and dancers scurrying around in Oxford bags and English accents preparing their equipment for embarkation to New York in a large six cylinder bus, linking, we suppose, the age-old mystery of India with mechanized efficiency of the Greyhound Bus Lines, Inc.

"In India," one young drummer (no student of Hindustani, we can't remember the Indian name for his instrument) told us "the Crown requires that all young men learn English at the universities." This satisfied our curiosity as to why the members of the troupe were such excellent linguists. Most of them speak German and French as well as English. India has more than a dozen large universities. There students amass an amazing amount of learning concerning countries other than their native land, our informant revealed. And after learning a little more concerning the religious influence of the dance, we left with little else to report than that the funny over-grown saxophone which emitted an embarrassed wail at frequent intervals was neatly wrapped in a bundle of Christian Science Monitors and stowed away in a trunk for shipping.

The best paying proposition we can think of now would be a good text-book factory.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

The article in this morning's TAR HEEL relative to the freshmen in this school for the current year is somewhat misleading. Please allow a word of correction.

I gave your reporter a statistical statement showing that for the past five years, previous to this year, the freshman groups handled by this school had shown gratifying improvement in their ability to do college work. The record shows that, whereas the class entering in the fall of 1927 succeeded in passing only sixty-two and four-tenths per cent of the work attempted, the class entering in the fall of 1931 passed eighty-one per cent of the work attempted. That advance of nearly twenty per cent in the effectiveness of freshman study had led us to hope that high schools had begun to function in something like satisfactory fashion. The freshmen who came to us from the same sort of high schools in the fall of 1932, however, passed only seventy-two per cent of the work for which they registered. This record was below that for the past several classes and seemed to call for some kind of explanation.

I gave it as my opinion that the cause could be found in the policy of retrenchment under which the high schools and the University had been forced to labor for some months past. This assumption seems fair, in view of the fact that this group of freshmen showed up on the psychology test taken last fall almost the same as had the past several freshman groups. In other words, this group has about the same native ability as other recent groups, but it has not succeeded as well in passing college work.

I attributed the falling off in effective work, not to poor teaching here or elsewhere, but to poor teaching CONDITIONS both in high schools and in the University. I hope this statement will clarify what I really tried to say.

C. E. McINTOSH.

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

Just to keep the record straight: I see by a news item in the TAR HEEL that Professor Woodhouse is reported to have referred in his Tuesday lecture to the Technocrats as "a group of Economists at Columbia University." Since I did not hear Professor Woodhouse, I hesitate to apportion blame between him and the TAR HEEL reporter; but there is no room for controversy in the statement that the Technocrats are a group of Engineers, and not Economists—they would so insist almost as strongly as economists. This mistake (I think on the part of the reporter) illustrates, I believe, the fundamental trouble with the Technocrats, namely, a group of experts venturing into a field in which they are amateurs. Have we not had experience with economists turned politicians, engineers (?) turned politicians, scientists turned moralists and philosophers, and preachers turned scientists, all getting themselves into hot water?

Goodness knows that the economists have enough to answer for themselves lately—please, don't blame us with Technocracy.

With Contemporaries

For

Mr. Ripley

One Professor Reuda who, incidentally, is a huge man with a black beard, has been giving a series of lectures on Gothic at the University of Chicago. He had scarcely started to speak one morning when a student raised his hand in the back of the room.

"Yes?" said Professor Reuda. "Is this French 2?" the student asked in a worried tone.

"No, this is Gothic," said the Professor, and resumed his lecture. A few moments later the student again raised his hand.

"Well?" said Prof. R.

"It says in this booklet," the student said, "that French 2 is given in this room at this hour."

"Can't help it," said Prof. R.

"This is Gothic."

About ten minutes later the student raised his hand again.

"What now?" said Prof. R. patiently.

"Are you Miss Simmons?" asked the student.

At this point, the Professor discontinued his lecture and marched the class over to the dean's office to bear him witness that it all actually had happened.—The New Yorker.

Tar Heels Serve Notice On Conference Foes With Decisive Win Over V. P. I.

Captain Hines Leads Carolina
To Victory With Score of Fourteen Points.

WHITE PHANTOMS SHINE

Passing, Shooting, and Floor
Work Improved; to Play
Deacons Tonight.

The White Phantoms ran rough shod over a weak Virginia Tech squad last night in the Tin Can to win 58-26 before an audience of about 1500 spectators. It was the third successive victory of the season.

Carolina was unbeatable last night. The offense clicked and the Gobblers' defense could do nothing against the Tar Heel sharpshooters.

Captain Wilmer Hines was the whole show the early part of the game, giving a spectacular exhibition of long shots. Wilmer started the evening off with a beautiful shot from behind the foul zone, sank two free throws, and again thrilled the crowd with a beauty from the sidelines that didn't even touch the rim. Dave McCachren then dribbled through the V. P. I. guards for a field goal, following this up with a successful free throw, making the score 9-0 before the spectators were comfortably seated.

The Tar Heel defense also showed to good advantage, holding the visitors to six field goals throughout the game. Five of these came from close to the

N. C. STATE PLANS TO OBTAIN LOAN FOR NEW STADIUM

State Professor Goes to Washington
To Seek Money From R. F. C.
For New Field.

Carolina may be entertained in a reconstructed Riddick field next year when the local gridiron warriors take the warpath down to the capital city.

State officials are attempting to negotiate a loan with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in order to erect concrete stands on the east side of the field and to hook them up with the concrete stand on half of the west side.

The loan would amount to some $30,000, and the stadium, whose seating would be increased to 15,000, would be considered a self-liquidating project. Officials at the Raleigh subdivision of the University are very optimistic, having sent Professor T. S. Johnson to Washington to attempt to obtain the loan.

Co-eds Participate In Bowling Tournament

Twenty-six co-eds took part in a bowling tournament on the Graham Memorial bowling alleys on Thursday night. Jacqueline Small was the winner with a score of 193. Mary Grissette was a close second with 192. Margaret Baughman was third with 160, E. Kelling fourth with 158, Clyde Wright fifth with 153 counts.

The bowling alleys were given to the co-eds for three hours. Each contestant in the tournament played two games.

Too much credit cannot be given the University's Athletic Association for their very liberal view on the value of athletics to the student, and their resultant action in not curtailing any specific sport as seems to be the rage right now among larger universities in the East, West, and South.

The University of California and Cornell furnished the greatest surprises in the "slasher's club." That great Olympic champion crew of the Golden Bears will not be seen in action this fall or probably in several falls to come. Cornell was still more drastic, the Red Athletic Association found itself too much in the red. Result: football and basketball are the two remaining sports. Nor are these the only cases of curtailment. Nearly every large school in the nation has cut some form of athletics with more likely to come.

In view of that and the rather weak financial situation at the University, Carolina's action is all the more outstanding. As Director Bob Fetzter said, great faith is placed in the student body to justify the non-curtailement, and it should be the duty of the student participant to justify that faith especially in the matter of practice and equipment.

Recent developments along the basketball front of the Southern Conference renew the pre-season predictions that the tournament will be a four-cornered race with the rest on the outside looking in and hoping for the breaks. The fur is bound to fly when teams like North Carolina, Duke, State, and Maryland get together. The Tar Heels will be the favorite to carry off the championship but Maryland's rookie team has been going great and this writer still thinks the Old Liners are the boys to beat.

After surviving twenty odd years the Poughkeepsie Regatta will not be scheduled this year. The rowing classic will be resumed in 1934. "Red" Espey, State's great football player, left the ranks of the boxers to keep himself physically fit for a possible appointment to West Point. Shades of "Light Horse Harry" Wilson. Leo Sexton, Olympic shotput champion, provided 1933's first major upset when he failed to qualify in a small indoor meet in New York City.

George Earnshaw, Connie Mack's ace righthander, expects the Yankees to win the pennant by July 4. And Earnshaw rarely makes mistakes. Here's a tip to you boxing fans. Don't miss the State-Carolina fights. Every bout will be packed with dynamite with emphasis on the Garner-Lumpkin and Burke-Dunnaway scraps. A columnist in the New York Sun says

CAROLINA BOXERS TO OPEN SEASON AT V. P. I. TONIGHT

Boxer, Track Man, and Basketball Captain Are Nucleus Of Gobbler Team.

When Carolina's varsity boxers meet V. P. I. tonight at Blacksburg, they will find a team that has for its nucleus a football man, a track man, and the captain of last year's basketball team.

Joe Yaggi, the Gobblers' 135-pounder, began his ring career last year under rather unusual circumstances. Dick Esleek, the coach, who fought as heavy-weight about the same time that Add Warren fought here, lacked a lightweight on the night of an important meet, and he faced dismal prospect of having to forfeit that bout. Yaggi, who was basketball captain, volunteered to defend the post although he had never been in a ring before. He then proceeded to belt his opponent out of the ring.

Kerns Fought Here Last Year

Bill Kerns, light-heavyweight, was a track man last year, and Red Negri, heavyweight, came all the way from Danbury, Conn., to be a football player and a star fighter. Negri fought here last year as a freshman, beating Marvin Ray in four rounds.

Tony Menard or Stumpy Stroud, both crack bantams, will oppose either Cliff Glover or Pete Ivey; while Jimmy Woodward, a classy southpaw, will face Marty Levinson in the feather-weight test.

Another sophomore holds down the welterweight spot. Buck Tyler, who took a close decision from Tom McDonald in a freshman argument last year, being the boy to answer the gong against either Nat Lumpkin or Bruce Langdon.

Coaches Uncertain in 155

Coach Esleek is still undecided as to whether he will send Captain Paul Rose or Rip Bussey to work this evening in the 155 pound division. In his decision, he is no worse off than Carolina's Coach Rowe, who is still unable to choose between Lee Berke and Frank McIntosh, two boys who look about even.

Sam Giddens will collide with Johnny Yorke in the middle-weight fray. Yorke is a junior who lost to Guthrie as a frosh and to Wadsworth last year.

With the new 155 pound class being inaugurated tonight, the two teams will have to win an extra fight to win the meet and avoid a draw. With the old seven-man teams, four wins out of seven were enough; but four victories this year will merely assure the team of a draw. The score this year must be at least five to three.

The advantages and disadvantages of the new weight will be displayed for the first time before Carolina fans when State College comes here next Saturday night to engage the Tar Heel pugs in the opening home meet of the season.

that N. C. State will be "hot" next fall with the Tar Heels also due for a good season. While on football, State's grid candidates will be called for winter practice next week. And if this weather keeps up, they'll be making snow men instead of throwing blocks.

State and Duke previously had a game on the same date to be played in Frank Thompson gym, but Dr. R. R. Sermon, director of athletics at State, arranged for the switch. State and Duke will clash the night before.

"Doc" Sermon also announced that the Terrors' second game with Wake Forest would be played February 15 in Frank Thompson gym.

COACH DISCOVERS WARM RECEPTION IN SNOW STORM

Grid Mentor Expected Cool Reception by Ritch Forces on Return to Hill.

True to predictions Coach Chuck Collins arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday along with the snowstorm. He had expected our friend Marvin Ritch to have prepared a rather cool reception but nothing like a snowstorm.

Coach Collins said yesterday that he would call all candidates out for the regular winter practice session next Tuesday. This call will include all members of the varsity squad who have another year, all members of the freshman squad, and any other student in the University who is interested in football.

If the weather continues as it is, the Carolina coach plans to hold daily lectures anyhow. These lectures will be devoted to stressing the fundamentals of defensive and offensive play.

A definite announcement as to when any equipment will be issued and the exact time of the first meeting will be made in tomorrow's DAILY TAR HEEL.

Clash in Raleigh.

Carolina baseball warriors will clash with State a couple of times this year—May 2, here, and May 20, in Raleigh.

The State nine will play thirteen other games. The slate lists seven home games and a four-game trip into the Old Dominion.

The complete schedule follows:
March 29, W. and L., at Raleigh.

April 10, V. P. I. at Blacksburg; April 11, W. and L., at Lexington; 12, V. M. I., at Lexington; 13, Virginia, at Charlottesville; 15, V. P. I., at Raleigh; 20, V. M. I., at Raleigh; 22, Duke, at Durham; 26, Davidson, at Raleigh; 29, Duke, at Raleigh.

ESPEY DECIDES TO GIVE UP BOXING

William "Red" Espey has withdrawn from the N. C. State boxing team.

The red-headed youth from Hickory who captained the Tech pugs last year announced that he was taking this action at the urging of friends, who hope to secure an appointment to the United States Military Academy for him. It was feared that, should anything happen to Espey's teeth, he would be ineligible for entrance.

"Red" was an all-state center this year, and he also captained the State gridiron outfit. He held one more captaincy: one on the regimental staff of the R. O. T. C. at N. C. State.

TAR BABIES SET FOR OPENING GO WITH BABY DEACS

Coach Dameron Has Sudden Scarcity of Centers With Kanner and Rankin Out.

Carolina's Tar Baby basketball team will open its 1933 season tonight at 7:30 in the Tin Can when they take on the strong yearling team from Wake Forest. The contest between the two varsities is scheduled to begin directly after the freshman tilt.

The starting five has worked hard all week and has shown a great amount of improvement since the holidays. However, they will be without the services of Kanner, tall center. Kanner has been out for both basketball and boxing and is making the trip to V. P. I. with the freshman ringmen. Rankin, who has been working with the second string at center, will also be missing as he has been in the infirmary with flu for the past few days.

Orr to Start at Center

Frank Orr will probably get the call at center while the rest of the team will be the same that has worked together since the holidays. Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson, two speedy boys and sure shots at close range, will hold down the forwards, and Jim McCachren and Red Phelps will be at the guard positions. Many more will probably see action before the game closes as Coach Dameron wants to see how all his men act under fire.

Wake Forest will bring a strong yearling team which already has the experience of a hard fought battle. The Baby Deacons opened their season last Tuesday night, downing the Duke Blue Imps 33 to 28. Pero and Brunt, forwards; Patton, center; and Loftin and Hatcher, guards, will probably be the starting Wake Forest lineup.

CHI PSI DEFEATS A. T. O. IN CLOSING WEEK'S SCHEDULE

S. A. E., Old East, Pikas, Manly,
And Grimes Win in Last Set of First Half.

Only one team which had not seen action previously during the campaign took part in yesterday's intramural basketball program. The games brought to a close the first of the six weeks during which the current race is to be conducted.

Chi Psi, the only one of the twelve teams listed to play yesterday which had not already played a game, got off to a flying start in its campaign for fraternity league honors when it handed A. T. O. its second defeat of the campaign, 33-14. Baukney and Lawrence, freshmen stars of the Chi Psi outfit, accounted for eleven and nine points respectively to lead the scoring of their team. Menge, with eight points, scored high for the vanquished outfit.

S. A. E. Wins Again

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 1932 winner of the fraternity league, gained its second victory of the week when it downed Phi Kappa Sigma, 26-12. The losing team ran even with the S. A. E. quintet until the last period. When Nutt Parsley entered the game became a runaway for the champs. Connor, of the winning team, gained individual scoring honors with fourteen points.

Old East gained its second consecutive high-scoring game when it crushed Everett under a barrage of baskets to win, 58-6. The winners' total was the highest run-up during the current week, and two of Old East's players put in bids for the leadership in individual point-making when Fox scored twenty-one points and Henson tallied sixteen.

Pi Kappa Alpha retained its place among the undefeated leaders of the fraternity circuit when it gained its second triumph of the campaign at the expense of Phi Sigma Kappa, 29-12. Spiers, with twelve points and Jackson with nine, led the attack for the winners.

Oliverio and Page led Manly to another victory when they accounted for nineteen points between them as Steele dropped its second successive game.

Grimes, which lost to Old East in its first game early in the week, entered the winning column when the New Dorms quintet failed to appear for the scheduled contest.

The Citadel has made a formal application for membership in the Southern Conference.

The half ended with Carolina leading, 25-10.

The second half started off in very much the same manner as the first. Captain Hall sank a free throw, which seemed to start the White Phantoms off on a point scoring rampage, the home team making twelve points in two minutes. Virgil Weathers, held scoreless the first half, ran wild and scored three field goals and three free throws in rapid order. Nor was the scoring spotlight held solely by the forwards. Aitken, McCachren, and Brandt dazzled the Tech team with their passing, floorwork, and deadly accurate shooting.

Midway in this period Coach Bo Shepard removed his first team in order to save them for the Wake Forest clash this evening. And the second stringers, not to be outdone, rang up point after point on the fading Gobblers.

Briefs

Wilmer Hines again led the scorers with fourteen points, including five field goals. The visitors' captain, Bus Hall was runner-up with eleven. Weathers and McCachren were close behind the leaders with nine each. The game was as rough a contest as has been seen in the Tin Can for a long time. Thirty-four fouls were committed with eighteen of them being chalked up against Carolina.

The shooting on the free throws was remarkable. Fourteen out of sixteen were successfully made by the Phantoms while the Gobblers converted the same number.

REQUESTS CAUSE SECOND SHOWING

"The Cabin in the Cotton," to Return To Carolina Theatre After Successful Engagement.

Returning for a second engagement because of many requests from townspeople and students, the First National Picture, "The Cabin in the Cotton," is showing at the Carolina theatre today, starring Richard Barthelmess, who is supported by Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan.

The original story was written by Harry Harrison Kroll and was adapted to the screen by Paul Green, native North Carolinian and University professor whose In Abraham's Bosom was a Pulitzer prize play. It was his intimate knowledge of the swamp and cotton country of the deep south, the locale of The Cabin in the Cotton, that led First National to assign him to write the adaptation.

Of the plays Green has written, In Abraham's Bosom, The Field God, and The House of Connelly have reached Broadway. Several of his others are favorites with Little Theatre groups throughout the country. Tread the Green Grass has been several times announced for New York production by various managements, but as yet has not reached the rehearsal stage.

While serving at this post, he was visited by President-elect Hoover and Colonel Lindbergh. On the occasion of the Hoover visit, Mr. Summerlin, the American minister, was absent, and Johnson served as the official host for the American legation. After his promotion to a first secretaryship in May, 1928, Johnson was assigned to the American embassy in Mexico City in July. During the Naval Disarmament Conference in London which kept Mr. Morrow, the ambassador, out of the country for several months, he was made charge d'affaires and left in charge of American affairs in this city without even the presence of a counsellor.

Mentioned for Ambassadorship
Johnson was prominently mentioned to succeed Ambassador Morrow when the latter resigned his post, but the State Department called him back to Washington to serve in another capacity. On June 8, 1930, Johnson was appointed Chief of the Division of Mexican Affairs and is now serving at that post.

Johnson is the grandson of the late Herschel V. Johnson, twice governor of Georgia. He was born in Atlanta, but his family removed to Charlotte where he grew up. He was a student at Carolina for four years, winning his A. B. degree in 1916, after a college career in which he was prominent in dramatic club, literary society, and fraternity circles.

Delegates to Meeting

Here are the delegates from Tar Heel institutions to the first annual Southern Conference confab, being conducted in Richmond. Dr. Arthur J. Wilson, chairman of the faculty athletic committee, and Dr. Ray R. Sermon, athletic director, are representing State; Dean A. W. Hobbs, Coach Bob Fetzer, and Charles Woollen, Sr., are Carolina's delegates; Dean W. H. Wannamaker and Coach Wallace Wade, and Coach Carl Voyles are Duke's representatives.

Operatic Character

Pictured above is one of the characters in the opera "Pagliacci," which has been made in sound pictures, and will appear at the local Carolina theatre, January 30.

COMPLETE OPERA TO APPEAR HERE IN SINGING MOVIE

First Grand Opera Ever Filmed to Will Be Presented at Carolina January 20.

For the first time in the history of the moving pictures a complete grand opera has been produced for the entertainment of cinema patrons. This grand opera, Pagliacci, is to be presented at the Carolina theatre Monday, January 30.

This picture inaugurating grand opera in the motion picture field was produced by Fortune Gallo, outstanding operatic director. Critics regard his choice of Pagliacci, the familiar story of the broken-hearted clown for filming as wise. Gallo declares in explaining his choice that he believes it is better known and liked than most grand operas.

Producer Gallo also selected the cast for the opera. Stars from Gallo's San Carlo Grand Opera Company and the Metropolitan Grand Opera Companies have the more important places in the cast. There is a chorus of one hundred and an orchestra of sixty-four players selected from the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and the San Carlo Grand Opera Company orchestras.

Lear graduated from the University in 1930 and will receive his master's degree in Physics from the University of Florida in June, where he is now a graduate instructor.

Snowy Blanket Covers Campus

Students Plod Through Snow to Classes as King Winter Returns to Reign.

A soft blanket of snow covered the town and University campus yesterday, as truant springtime yielded to the ravages of Old Man Winter, and transformed the erstwhile summery Chapel Hill into a winter garden. Beginning with slight flurries at 6:00 o'clock yesterday morning the snowstorm rapidly developed into a miniature blizzard. By noon more than five inches of snow had fallen.

Paths and familiar walks were quite obliterated about the campus. Automobiles, caught in the storm during the morning's early hours when parked in front of fraternity houses labored about the streets capped with thick coverings of snow. Many were so transformed that they resembled the stream-lined vehicles of a future age.

Students picked their way gingerly to morning classes, many plowing through deep drifts that had not yet felt the bite of the plow or broom. Trees and building were burdened under white blankets as the drifting flakes became larger and thicker.

Someone plodding past the TAR HEEL office windows whistled the bars of a recent song "It's Winter Again."

Scores Released

The results of various high school basketball games were released yesterday at the office of E. R. Rankin in the extension department. Dates of games and scores follow: December 20, Broadway 19, Sanford 18; December 23, Pittsboro 19, Broadway 14; January 6, Chapel Hill 39, Norlina 8; January 10, Cary 30, Green Hope 22; and January 9, Holly Springs 29, Durham 6. Pittsboro defeated Sanford January 4.

HILL MUSIC HALL

VOLUME XLI

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 1933

NUMBER 79

FRATERNITY WILL SPONSOR CONCERT HERE BY KREISLER

Noted Violinist to Play in Memorial Hall Monday Evening, February 27.

Official announcement has just been made by the local chapter of the Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity of the appearance of Fritz Kreisler, violinist, in Memorial hall at 8:30 Monday evening, February 27.

Kreisler began his career as a child prodigy in Vienna. He appeared in concert in his native city at the age of seven, and entertained the Vienna Conservatory of Music the same year. Three years later he was awarded a gold medal by the conservatory and left for Paris to continue his studies. Here he was awarded the Grand Prix de Rome in competition with forty violinists.

At the completion of his musical training he undertook his first tour in the United States. Since then he has toured almost every country in the world and has played in every important city.

Kreisler a Composer

Kreisler is not only a performer but is also a composer of note. Among his own compositions which are favorites among violinists are Caprice Viennois, Tambourin Chinois, and String Quartet in A Minor.

During his annual vacation of five months during which he never touches the violin, Kreisler often seeks new literature for the violin in old forgotten compositions of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Among the compositions he has thus discovered is the famous Humoresque of Dvorak. His program here February 27 will include several of these favorites.

Tickets or information regarding the concert may now be obtained through the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia or by addressing inquiry to Box 609, Chapel Hill.

ASSOCIATION WILL GATHER TUESDAY

Members of Council for Town Girls to Be Elected at Winter Quarter Meeting.

The Woman's Association will conduct its winter quarter meeting Tuesday afternoon, January 17, at 4:30 o'clock.

An extensive program has been planned for the meeting. No outside speaker has been engaged, and the women students themselves will have entire charge of the meeting.

Julia B. Brown, president of the Woman's Athletic Association, will outline the work done in athletics and future plans. Josephine Orendorff, chairman of the dramatic committee, will give a report. This committee is composed of all co-eds majoring in dramatics.

Mary Frances Parker will report on the meeting of the National Student Federation of America, conducted in New Orleans during the Christmas holidays.

All co-eds are urged to attend, especially those living outside Spencer hall. A representative of the town girls must be elected to the council, and only those who are not residents of the dormitory or of sorority houses may vote for this officer.

Deputation Postponed

Influenza Epidemic in Fayetteville Causes Postponement of Trip To Unannounced Date.

An epidemic of influenza in Fayetteville will cause the postponement of the Y.M.C.A. deputation trip, January 18, according to a report yesterday by H. F. Comer, secretary. A letter stated that several cases of the disease in the homes of local boys who would board the delegates during their stay would necessitate tentative alteration in the plans.

The deputation team composed of Claiborn Carr, L. L. Hutchison, Jack Pool, Bill McKee, and Lee Rinehardt, speakers, and Charles Templeton, Jesse Parker, Raymond Breit, and John Briggs, musical quartet will make the journey at a date to be decided later.

LOCAL WRITERS HAVE ESSAYS IN LATEST RELEASE

Philology Magazine Is Edited by Dr. George R. Coffman, Head Of English Department.

The January issue of Studies in Philology, a literary quarterly of which Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the University English department, is editor, contains three articles by persons connected with the University. Editorial offices for this publication are in Chapel Hill.

Dr. Robert B. Sharpe, of the English department, has written an article on "The Sources of Richard Brome's The Novella." Dr. Meno Spann, of the department of Germanic languages, is the author of a discussion of "Exoticism and Heinrich Heine," and Mathilde Parlett, a graduate student in English, has in the quarterly an article on "The Influence of Contemporary Criticism on George Eliot."

Source of Brome Traced

Dr. Sharpe traces the sources from which Richard Brome, a pupil of Ben Jonson's, whose plays exceeded the latter's in popularity, drew his material for a play on Italy, The Novella. Translated, Novella means a novice courtesan. The play is written about a lady who posed in Venice as a lady whose favors are purchasable in order that she might draw her lover's attention to herself. She preserved her innocence by putting too high a price on her charms, and in drawing the attention of all Venice to herself succeeded in her purposes. Dr. Sharpe traces the sources of this to stories and accounts of Venice at the time in Fynes Moryson's Itinerary and Thomas Coryat's Cruities. The article also brings in contemporary references to show the vast number, great wealth, and high position of Venice's ladies of the evening at the time.

Gives New Opinion

In Exoticism and Heinrich Heine Dr. Spann, treating exoticism as an attitude of mind in which the commonplace is a

Dr. Heer to Speak

Dr. Beard Says Technocracy Is Too Highly Idealistic To Be Practical

Noted Historian Declares That New Economic Theory Shows How Country Was Plunged Into Present Difficulties, but Offers No Practical Means of Relief From Conditions.

Technocracy states clearly how this country was plunged into its present muddle but offers no practical means of extricating it from its difficulty. This is the opinion voiced by Dr. Charles A. Beard, renowned historian and political science expert, in an interview with a representative of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Dr. and Mrs. Beard are spending the winter in Chapel Hill, during the course of which he will deliver the Weil lectures.

At the outset, Dr. Beard was somewhat hampered by the nature of his subject, owing to the lack of official treatment of Technocracy. Because of this lack of authoritative pronouncement, all who discuss it are obliged to rely largely upon the statements concerning Technocracy which have been, for the most part, set forth by men who are not too well acquainted with the aim and work of the group of some three hundred men who are rising into prominence in the public eye.

He began his comments by stating that the American people are highly subject to fads. As such, Technocracy is taking its place along with Freudianism, Cuiemism, and a hundred other intellectual rages which have swept the country.

Basis of Technocracy

As Dr. Beard sees it, Technocracy is based on three principles: 1. The steady reduction of the amount of labor needed to produce each commodity. 2. Enormous increase in the out-put of commodities in proportion to the number of people employed. This was explained by the contrast of the number of persons employed in hand and machine labor. That is, when commodities are produced by hand, there is a limit to the number of people who are indispensable in the production of the given commodity. With the machine, such a limit is not fixed, since new inventions are constantly reducing the number of men it is necessary to employ for this production.

3. As a result of this enormous output of economic goods under our wage system (called by Howard Scott the "price system") it is impossible for the people who produce the material to buy it back. In explanation of this, Dr. Beard showed how, in 1929, and preceding years, our output exceeded our purchasing power until inflated industry, no longer able to sell what it was producing in the great quantity to which it had expanded, tottered from its eminence.

Buying Power Question

Technocracy looks forward to the day when machines will produce commodities practically without human supervision. Viewed in this light, the system of putting man on a four-hour-a-day, four day week is only a temporary relief, and will not solve the question of the source of man's buying power is to come.

In the opinion of Dr. Beard, the changing of a means of exchange from money, with a reserve of gold, to notes drawn on

University Men Compose Entire New State Welfare Department

Morrison Heads Organization to Supervise and Administer the Expenditure of $9,000,000 in Local and Federal Funds Throughout North Carolina During Winter.

A new department of the state government, the Governor's Office of Relief, has been created within the last few weeks and the entire central administration is manned by University alumni, according to the January issue of The Alumni Review. This organization is supervising and administering the expenditures of approximately $9,000,000 in relief, including both local and federal funds, throughout North Carolina during the winter.

Prior to the expiration of his term of office, Governor O. Max Gardner, '06, was responsible for seeing that all federal funds were properly expended and accounted for. Since his inauguration, Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, '01, has assumed this responsibility. When the office first came into existence, Governor Gardner appointed Dr. Fred W. Morrison, '13, to direct the work actively. Dr. Morrison served as principal of the Chapel Hill high school from 1914 to 1924.

Once Educator

After being awarded a doctorate at Columbia in the field of educational finance, Dr. Morrison joined the faculty of N. C. C. W. in Greensboro, where he remained until 1927. In that year he was appointed executive secretary of the tax commission by Governor A. W. McLean.

Heads Fix Matters

Radio to Be Installed in Graham Memorial Will Play Only Selected Programs.

The board of directors of Graham Memorial met last night and decided to install radios in the building. There will be a master radio in the office and a speaker in the main lounge and banquet hall. The radio will not be on except for certain programs and the director urges all students to turn in at the office programs which he would like to hear.

The board also decided to maintain the policy of not charging for the use of rooms, to change the title of manager to director of Graham Memorial, to renew the present contract with the barbershop, and to continue its membership in the association of college unions.

SKINNER TO OPEN RELIGIOUS SERIES TOMORROW NIGHT

"Liberal Religion Faces a New World" Will Be Topic of First Lecture at Inn.

"Liberal Religion Faces a New World" will be the topic of the first lecture of a series in the seminar in liberal religion to be conducted by Professor Clarence R. Skinner of the Tufts College school of religion. Professor Skinner will deliver the first address tomorrow night at 8:00 o'clock at the Carolina Inn. The lecture will be followed by a period of general discussion in which everyone is invited, but not required, to participate.

Professor Skinner lectures extensively on social, economic, and international topics, and is widely known as a contributing editor to Unity, a liberal weekly, and as the author of Social Implications on Universalism and A Free Pulpit. He is an ordained Universalist clergyman, and has been social service secretary for the Universalist church and president of the Massachusetts Universalist convention.

Sponsored by Brotherhood

The Mission Brotherhood, an Universalist and Unitarian organization, is sponsoring an educational week in liberal religion in ten cities and towns in North Carolina, and has included the University with Professor Skinner's seminar.

Admission to the seminar will be free, and the committee on arrangements, headed by Professor Raymond Adams, has issued a cordial invitation to students and townsfolk. The second of the series will be presented Tuesday night on the subject "Superstition, Belief, and Faith." The series will end Friday, January 20.

In addition to the consecutive lectures, Dr. Skinner will give an address Sunday evening, January 22.

LOCAL ENGINEERS COMPLETE TUNNEL

N. P. Bailey and E. L. Midgett Add to Engineering Equipment Through Labors.

A wind tunnel in Phillips hall which has been in the process of construction during the fall quarter and over the holidays has been completed and thoroughly tested by the builders, Professor N. P. Bailey and E. L. Midgett. This tunnel is a six inch open throat return type, and is capable of 100 miles per hour wind velocity at the working section. This return type is considered as the best type for small models as it is rarely affected by outside conditions. The source of power is an electric driven air blower.

The instruments used in connection with the tunnel were also constructed in the laboratory and consist of a three component wind tunnel balance for measuring forces and moments on models, a liquid type tachometer for indicating the blower speed, an inclined manometer for measuring pressure, and a Pitot tube for measuring the air velocity. These instruments if purchased would have cost over $400, but were constructed in the shop for practically nothing except labor and materials on hand.

The tunnel cost was less than

The Reactionaires At It Again

Having been chosen by members of the student body in a campus vote last spring to have complete charge of the editorial policies of the Buccaneer, the editor of that humor publication is about to have some of this authority wrenched from his hands by a move now on foot to set up a board of censors. A similar agitation was started last year as a result of a threat by certain members of the faculty, and the present move is being instigated by this same group.

It is true that the board will possibly consist of certain student leaders. But the mere existence of a board of censors of any sort will not only rob the editor of powers rightfully his, but will also place an indelible stain on the reputation of freedom in student publications that the University of North Carolina has long enjoyed. Once the germ of censorship receives the least bit of nourishment in any quarter of publications here, it will soon grow to such a size as to control completely every publication on the campus.

If the student body allows this proposed board to go into effect, they will not only automatically give up their present claim to a nation-wide reputation of freedom of student expression in the publications, but, what is more important, they will allow the more conservative faculty members to get such a hold on the publications that it will require several years to throw it off.

A twenty-two-year-old youth was recently removed from a Cincinnati cellar where he claimed he kept himself in voluntary confinement for three years. Which may have been enjoyable, according to the contents of the cellar.

The recent proposal of the state legislature to outlaw burning should seriously effect student movements.

Technocratic Pedagogics

Several years ago Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler startled the educational world in a frank statement that there were no more than eight or a dozen "universities" in the United States. His statement would be less startling were it issued today, for many have come to doubt that there are more than a half score educational institutions in the country today, which may claim the appellation "university."

The University of Wisconsin, long hailed as a liberal center and a seat of culture reveals that 1,143 courses are offered to those seeking diplomas from its halls of learning. Since 1900 the increase in courses at Wisconsin has been 161 per cent. The Daily Cardinal estimates that 1,100 of these will "develop (the student's) personality, his skill or workmanship, or his chest . . . The other forty-three are ostensibly devoted to developing his mind."

Unrivaled in this field only by the University of Chicago, Wisconsin offers courses in locksmithery, business letter writing, and hotel management. No doubt there are courses in ball room manners, soda jerking and ditch digging. The latter is perhaps the most useful of all.

Thus technology has entered the university field. Latin professors are tucked away in back rooms with an armful of dusty library tomes and a handful of students; archaeologists are hastily dispatched to foreign fields with the command to stay until something "bigger and better is discovered." The university then proceeds to cash in on the publicity. The modern university classics are Blank's Forty Minute Lessons in Letter Writing, Jones' Plato's Influence on Modern Theories of Dairy Farming, and Smith's Tennyson in Three Snappy Lessons.

Fortunately or unfortunately, this University is yet to feel the ravages of high powered specialization. We still entertain the medieval educational theory that a university is a center for the development of the mind. We still cling tenaciously to the classics, history, economics and other subjects which serve the useless purpose of improving the mind.

How foolish, when we might be turning out first rate mechanics to linger about the doors of our already overcrowded factories and workshops.—D.C.S.

Dr. Crittenden is responsible for the passing along of this interesting sidelight which he ran across in his readings in American history.

It seems that the conductor on the first American railway train had considerable difficulty in letting the engineer know when it was time to stop the train to let off passengers. First, he tried shouting and waving signals but, in the great noise and confusion incident to the new method of locomotion, his efforts were often in vain. Then, this enterprising pioneer hit upon the idea of carrying a pocket full of pebbles. When a passenger wished to alight, the conductor stood on top of the coach and threw at the engineer, who knew that it was time to stop whenever he felt that stinging sensation at the back of the neck.

Some wag has suggested that bees, flies, and other insects might, even then, have caused some confusion in the signals. Perhaps, the engineer wore mosquito netting wrapped around his head and neck.

So, it seems that Salary Cuts Here Are Larger Than At Other Places. This city desk man and sometimes columnist who was responsible for editing the copy and writing the head for the story, frankly admits his unfamiliarity with the question of teachers' salaries here and abroad and wishes to thank the Messrs. Should these gentlemen wish to cultivate the habit of reading this column regularly, (adv't.), they are promised many more mistakes per square inch than can ever be found in the news content of the paper. In fact, as has been pointed out before, the whole column, in the first place, is a mistake. Why should anyone read the news items for errors, with a column lying around?

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

With all necessary apologies to those who have written, sung, and parodied Broadway's "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime," and in keeping with the times, I suggest this

Ode to the Budget-Makers
Once we were quite famous,
Our name had spread,
'Twas known in every clime.
Now we're known for being
In the red,
Budget, can you spare a dime?
First you cut the payroll
Ten per cent,
It was "just for a time,"
Then you took another twenty
The rest is spent.
Budget, can you spare a dime?

Now we don't ask a lot
Of what you haven't got
But give us a few dollars back.
We can't go on you know
Unless we get some dough
So don't give us only the sack.

Please think up some new tax,
Be a little rash
The way we need funds is a crime.
Don't give us just blue facts
We need cash.
Budget, can you spare a dime?

The debate squad always entertains royally its foreign opponents after its annual international conflict. Songs, stories, poems, dances, are the order of the night. This year, ladies being present for the first time, the stories had to be modified somewhat, and after Mr. Olsen's parlor tricks, Dr. Spann's dance, and Little Eva's recitation, the party in desperation turned to limericks. Each took his turn, the limericks got worse and worse and no end was in sight, until Mr. Gill, the Irish debater who had been very quiet, took the floor:

"There was a young man from St. Ives,
Who was stung in the arm by a wasp.

When asked if it hurt,
He said 'not very much,'
'I'm glad it wasn't a hornet.'"

Somebody immediately suggested that we dance.

The booby-prize in memory work this year goes to Jack Whitehead, who in a dress rehearsal of a Playmaker skit forgot his lines, which were, if I may quote them all here, as follows: "Yeah, Man!"

RIVERHEAD by Robert Hill- yer (Alfred A. Knopf) $2.50. Reviewed by Bernard B. Perry.

Riverhead, the first novel of an author already renowned for the depth and excellence of his poetry, makes fascinating reading. The style is of the imaginative rhythmical sort which is closely related to poetry. Yet in form and construction, the novel is a perfectly unified whole, full of the beautiful imagery and intense dialogue essential to the well-balanced story.

It is a neat novel in plan and execution, from the early unfolding of the character of Paul, young man of New England stock, imaginative, sensitive, thoughtful, and immature, to his later development as a man of action. Riverhead is divided into three books, each book being a separate unit in space, time, and mental growth of the chief character. Paul paddles his canoe "Upstream" to visit his wealthy relative, Mr. Fiat, has an amazing interview with him at "Riverhead," and paddles "Downstream" not without considerable adventure. But the Paul who returns from "Riverhead" is another man again from the timid, passive youth who went up not so long before.

The effect of this novel, which contains both romantic and realistic elements, is distinctly romantic. Although a story of our present day, it retains an almost medieval glamor of romantic distance. The action is timeless and true, the scene hauntingly attractive in its lack of explicit location, the character clearly defined. The whole book is an example of the heights of effect which may be obtained when a simple subject is skillfully handled.

The coveted label "most popular" goes this week, not to a book but to the fire-place in the book shop. According to a noted authority, a ten-minute basking before a cheery blaze is the best possible prologue to an unwanted quizz.

Battle of The Cliques

Statements from the heads of managerial competition that nothing is "fixed" about the five open sports positions and that the elections will be "on the level" are welcome bits of assurance. But although this comforting knowledge will cause us to await a little more calmly the announcement of new assistant managerships in the Spring, it doesn't restore our equilibrium with regard to fraternity meddling.

The various alignments and house jockeyings for Campus honors are distasteful to any unprejudiced observer of Campus affairs. But we are optimistic enough to believe that ways to keep fraternities from interfering in the field of extra-curricular activities can be found if student opinion interests itself in finding them. Perhaps the solvent for dissatisfaction on the specific question of managerial elections lies in a greater interest in the competition itself on the part of those who possess the ultimate balloting power.—Columbia Spectator.

thing to be scorned, in which the personality of man is put ahead of many other considerations, and in which a contempt for morality as such is implied, shows how the great German Jew, made highly sensitive by his nationality, was strongly influenced by the reaction of his artistic nature to the pressure of a highly developed personality. This is a new angle upon Heine's writings, for he has been considered as a furious, vengeful Jew who poured out his personal quarrel with the civilization in which he found himself in a constant stream of vituperation against humanity, and particularly against human customs and morals.

Affects on Eliot's Work

Most critics have agreed that there is a marked division into two parts of the work of George Eliot. In the article, The Influence of Contemporary Criticism on George Eliot, Miss Parlett shows how the fact that it became known that a woman, living "in sin" to the eyes of the world, was the author of the books then so widely discussed, affected her writing. She was unable to deal with any romantic affairs for fear that the critics would read into her treatment of them something of the autobiographical, and attack the books as representing the ideas of a loose woman on love. Miss Parlett concludes her discussion with these words: "In the light of the data examined in this study, the conclusion is drawn that the surrender of George Eliot's anonymity gave the initial impulse to the change in her art after the publication of The Mill On The Floss; and that the exigencies arising from that surrender gave direction to the change itself."

The government seemed to get along about as well as usual the six or eight weeks the President, the cabinet members, and trainloads of assistant secretaries were out in the sticks telling old Josh Taxpayer how indispensable they were, and maybe there's the germ of a thought in that.—Macon Telegraph.

Tar Heels Rally In Final Minutes To Take Exciting Tilt From Deacons, 36-33

White Phantoms Keep Record Clean With Third Victory of Season.

GAME FURNISHES THRILLS
Malloy and Weathers Score Thirteen and Twelve Points Respectively.

Overcoming a three point lead in the last three minutes of play, Carolina's White Phantoms repulsed a powerful Wake Forest challenge last night in the Tin Can, 36-33, to keep the season's record clean.

Not since the Carolina-Maryland game of last year have Tar Heel followers been treated to such an exciting exhibition of basketball. The two teams were evenly matched, so even in fact, that the final tabulation showed both had registered thirteen field goals. The Deacons counted on seven of thirteen free throws and the Tar Heels came through on ten of sixteen tries.

Deacons Lead at Half

Led by the flashy forward, Hank Malloy, who threatened continually with his one-handed heaves, the Demon Deacons held a two-point advantage at the half, 19-17. Malloy was high scorer for the night with thirteen points, followed closely by Weathers of Carolina with twelve. The Deacons forced the play throughout and most of the action was under the Wake Forest basket. Lefty Barnes, and Earp, who teased the goal time and again with their single-handed tosses from the side were constant threats. Barnes counted three field goals and Earp rang up two goals and a foul shot.

The Deacons used the famous Kokimo system with two men in front of the goal and Malloy counted with heaves under the basket. Coach Shepard began with Weathers guarding the star guard, shifted McCachren on him as the first half closed, and then assigned George Brandt the task during the last half with telling results.

Deacs Start Early

From the first tip, when the Deacons announced their victory intentions with a goal, the crowd of three thousand knew the game was to be a thriller. The score was tied four times in the first half and the lead changed hands seven times during the last period.

Second Half

Carolina started the same lineup for the second half and Wake Forest had Mulhearn at one of the forwards. After Hines had made a foul shot McCachren fouled Barnes and was removed with four personal fouls. Tar Heel hopes sank as Dave left the floor but Captain Hines sank a long one and Carolina shot ahead 20-19.

The play was furious and when things settled down Carolina held a two point lead, 25-23 as a result of a goal and a foul by Brandt and two foul shots by Weathers. Wake Forest rallied and led 33-30 with four minutes left.

Here Weathers registered "old faithful" from the side and then repeated the shot that upset Kentucky last year in Atlanta, a beauty from deep court, and the Tar Heels led 34-33. The crowd went wild and had just quieted down when Snooks Aitken rubbed it in with another beautiful shot from the side. Wake Forest tried in vain to knot the count but the whistle blew ending the game and the White Phantoms had registered their second Big Five victory of the year.

Late Bulletin

According to late reports last night, Carolina's varsity boxers defeated V. P. I. 6-2. The Tar Heel frosh were beaten by the Gobblers 6-2. Duke opened its season at Virginia, losing 5-3.

TRY-OUTS SETTLE WRESTLING TEAM FOR STATE MEET

Captain Idol, Unchallenged in Selecting Line-up, Will Lead Team in Initial Contest.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestling teams staged their team trials Friday and yesterday finished up the finals. This was the final gesture of Coach P. H. Quinlan in prepping his men for the opening meet with the N. C. State Wolfpack, in West Raleigh, Monday.

The freshmen had three divisions to go with only one man claiming the right to wrestle in his class; all but two of the varsity weights were challenged. These weights were the 135 and unlimited divisions.

Carolina's first year candidates, all gave a good account of themselves; but probably the most outstanding exhibition among the freshmen was between Shipman and Cornell in the 165 pound class. Shipman showed fine form in throwing Cornell in 2:40 minutes after having a fast bout.

Three Varsity Matches Fast

The varsity had three spectacular matches on Friday afternoon and had another brilliant match yesterday. In the 118 pound division, Thad Hussey, experienced letter-man, was pressed in taking a time advantage of 4:50 over Lowder. This was an interesting match although slow, both men "setting through on the same side." The 165 pound class found two big bohemoth, Spell, monogram man, and Pickett, staging a battle-royal. Spell showed better conditioning form than in any of the previous mat tiffs that he had participated in this year. He beat Pickett via virtue of a time advantage of 2:30 minutes. In the 175, Auman gained a time advantage of 1:24 minutes over Thompson. This match was thoroughly enjoyed by the crowd of spectators that turned out for the trials on Friday afternoon. Both men wrestled over every inch of the mat several times, and on two different occasions catapulated themselves from the mat into the crowd.

The best match of the final round yesterday afternoon was in the 118 pound division. Hussey found a tartar in Kellenberger, his challenger; but Hussey came through in fine style although pressed to the limit. He won a time decision of 0:40 seconds over Kellenberger.

Both Squads Announced

Coach Quinlan announced last night the names of the boys going to Sate for the double meet. Freshmen: 118 lb. class, Tyree; 126 lb. class, Snowden; 135, Holman; 145, Miller; 155, Holland; 165, Shipman; 175, Ranson; and unlimited, Leonard. Although the first year men have not named a captain, the wrestling mentor plans to hold an election in the locker room prior to the meet. There will be eight lettermen making the varsity trip: 118, Hussey; 126, Mathewson; 135, Davis; 145, Hiller; 155, Conklin; 165, Spell; 175, Auman and Thompson, (alternate); unlimited, Captain Percy Idol.

TAR BABIES, WITH 40-26 WIN, OPEN FRESHMAN RACE

First Year Basketball Team Starts Slowly But Finishes In Improved Style.

Coach Sandy Dameron's "football" five opened their 1933 campaign last night, turning in a mediocre win over the frosh basketball team from Wake Forest, 40-26. Starting slowly, the Tar Baby five, composed of five promising football men, steadily gained momentum and looked impressive in the closing minutes.

Led by Melvin Nelson, forward, who rang up sixteen points for the night's high scoring honors, the Tar Babies were never headed, leading at half time 15-10. Pero, Wake Forest forward, led the Deacon scorers with ten points to take second honors for the night.

McCachren Leads Attack With Jim McCachren leading the attack, both offensively and defensively, and being ably assisted by "Red" Phelps at the other guard, the Carolina frosh flashed at times and seemed set for a successful season.

The play during the first half of both teams was very erratic. Passes were wild and shots either missed the backboard entirely or careened off the hoop.

After the half, the Tar Babies came out strong and inaugurated a whirlwind attack which netted eighteen points. The passing was better and the team play showed improvement. Phelps was removed from the game with four personal fouls and Glasgow replaced him at guard. The last fifteen minutes of play saw the Tar Babies put up their best exhibition. Moore, Nelson, McCachren, and Willis connected for fourteen points in rapid succession and the game ended after Wake Forest scored a foul.

Hatcher, acting captain of the Wake Forest frosh, was the outstanding Deacon floorman, showing speed and deception throughout. Patton, Deacon center, also displayed ability at handling the ball.

TEAMS TO MEET TEN OPPONENTS IN WEEK'S PLAY

Seven Contests to Take Place In Tin Can, While Three Will Be in Raleigh.

Carolina sport teams start their third week of the winter sports season tomorrow with ten contests on the schedule for the week. Seven of the contests are to take place in the Tin Can while the other three are at Raleigh.

The varsity and freshman wrestling teams open their season Monday and start the week off, journeying to Raleigh to meet the State varsity and freshman matmen. Carolina's White Phantoms continue their play against Big Five teams by meeting the State basketball team in the Tin Can Wednesday. The Tar Baby team meets State's yearling team in a preliminary to the varsity the same night. Mt. Pleasant meets the freshman basketball team in the Tin Can in the only contest on the schedule for Friday.

Big Day Saturday

Carolina's biggest day comes Saturday with five contests on the card, four of them in the Tin Can. The varsity and freshman wrestling teams take on their second matches of the week, pitted opposite V. P. I.'s varsity and first year teams in the afternoon. Saturday night in the Tin

SOUTHERN HEADS REJECT ADDITION TO MEMBERSHIP

Officials Transact Business Rapidly and Harmoniously at Richmond Meeting.

Southern Conference officialdom yesterday took Richmond, former capital of the Confederacy, with more fire works than did Grant and his famous veterans of the Army of the Potomac. The Divie athletic officials immediately got down to their pile of business and transacted it with harmonious rapidity.

Among the biggest bit of business which took the center of attention in the eyes of southern athletics was the seven schools petitioning entrance into the Southern Conference. This was quickly discarded when the body moved unanimously to limit the Southern Conference to its present ten colleges. The schools desiring admission were Richmond University, William and Mary College, Davidson, Wake Forest, Furman, Citadel, and Centre.

In connection with this move the seminar voted that the booking office for the conference should be established with its headquarters in Raleigh.

Tournament Location

With the final decision of the assemblage last night, North Carolina will be the scene of five conference tournaments during the current season. The basketball tournament had already been awarded to Raleigh; while the outdoor track meet will take place at Duke; the indoor track meet was decided to take place for the fourth time at Chapel Hill under the auspices of the University of North Carolina. The golf tournament was decided to be held at the Sedgfield country club, Greensboro; this event should come off May 13. The Sedgfield club has been the scene of many major tourneys which have attracted state and southern attention in the sports world. The tennis tournament will be run off during the middle of May here, Chapel Hill; this, too, will be sponsored by Carolina. The 1934 tournament will come off on the Lady Astor courts, Charlottesville, under the auspices of Virginia.

The swimming tournament is to come off at Virginia, date pending until a study of the colleges' schedule. The wrestling tournament will be conducted at V. M. I., Lexington, over the interim of March 3-4.

Coach G. K. "Gus" Tebell, Virginia's cage mentor, recommended that the 1934 basketball tournament should come off a week prior to the boxing tournament in order that there would be no conflicting in dates which now exists.

May Add Baseball

"Dick" Smith, athletic director at Washington and Lee University, proposed that the conference form a basketball and baseball league in order that it might increase interest. There was evident dissatisfaction among the some thirty odd officials concerning the outdoor track meet which is carded to be run off May 19-20 at Duke, because of the necessary preparations for coming examinations. All the schools had some representatives at the gathering, and it was notably harmonious as compared with the sessions in the late Southern Conference family.

Can the varsity and freshman boxing teams make their first home appearances, meeting the State mitmen. The varsity basketball team journeys to Raleigh to meet Wake Forest in the auditorium for their second Big Five contest of the week.

Candidates To Report

All candidates for the managership of the varsity football team please report Monday at 3:00 o'clock on Emerson field. Only freshmen are eligible for this competition, and at the end of winter practice all but six men are eliminated. These six men compete during the fall and winter of their sophomore year when the three men placing highest are selected to compete for the actual managership, during the fall of their junior year. The positions then awarded are financial manager, equipment manager, and manager of freshman football.

LOCAL PLAYERS FIGURE IN TENNIS RANKING FOR 1932

Grant, Harris, and Friedman Are Placed While Hines and Lott Are Mentioned.

Three Tar Heel tennis stars figured in the United States Lawn Tennis Association's rankings for 1932 announced recently. Bryan Grant, captain of this year's varsity team, Harvey Harris, promising sophomore star, and Bernard Friedman, luminary, were the Carolina men recommended by the association. The association announced that Wilmer Hines, in men's singles, and Hunter Lott, in junior play, were not ranked due to lack of data.

Captain Bitsy Grant was placed thirteenth in the men's singles, and second in the intercollegiate rankings behind Clifford Sutter of Tulane.

Bernard Friedman, who won the fall tournament staged here for non-lettermen and who was sent to the national indoor meet recently and went to the quarter-final round, was ranked ninth in the junior singles rankings. Harvey Harris, number one player for the freshman team last year, and a promising candidate for a place high up on this year's varsity team, was placed twenty-fifth in the junior singles class.

Vines and Jacobs Head List

The association's recommendations placed Ellsworth Vines as number one for the second straight year in the men's singles. Helen Jacobs was named queen of women players for the first time as Mrs. Helen Wills Moody was not ranked. George Lott, veteran Davis Cup player and long a top-notch, was dropped from second position which he held last year to eleventh. Wilmer Allison, semi-finalist against Henri Cochet in the national tournament at Forest Hills last September, was moved from ninth to second in the rankings.

These recommendations are to be passed on at the national convention of the U. S. L. T. A. which is scheduled to be held some time next month.

FORMER CHAMPS TAKE LOOP LEAD FOR FIRST WEEK

S. A. E. and T. E. P. Have Two Victories and Ruffin Has One With Old East Leading.

The same teams which showed the way in intramural basketball competition last season took the lead last week in this year's race. S. A. E. and T. E. P., winner and runner-up respectively for 1932 fraternity honors, won two games each, while Ruffin, the holder of the campus championship crushed Carr in its opening game, 54-2.

T. E. P.'s wins were registered over Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Psi, while S. A. E. advanced at the expense of D.K.E. and Phi Kappa Sigma. Pi Kappa Alpha kept pace with the leaders in the fraternity circuit, scoring over Phi Kappa Sigma and Phi Sigma Kappa.

Scoring honors for the week went to Old East, which gained two victories in the dormitory circuit. After conquering Grimes, 41-19, Old East went on to set the high mark for scoring of the week by crushing Everett, 58-6.

Fox Heads Scorers

Individual honors in scoring went to Fox, of Old East, and Henson, of the same outfit, with forty-one and thirty points respectively.

In the fraternity league, personal scoring honors went to Dillard, of Delta Psi, who made twenty-one points. Spiers, of Pi Kappa Alpha, and Hirsch and Eisner, of T. E. P. tied for second with eighteen points each.

The schedule for the coming week offers thirty more games for the intramural cagers, with the game between Manly, which gained two wins last week, and Ruffin shaping up as the feature game of the week. This contest is scheduled for the first flight of games Friday afternoon.

Eating Place Championship

Monday afternoon will see a battle between Swain Hall and Crescent Cafeteria for the mythical championship of the eating places. Both teams came out on top in their games last week, and a good battle is in line.

HELEN HAYES AND GARY COOPER TO STAR TOMORROW

"A Farewell to Arms" Will Open Bill for Week at Carolina; Karloff Plays Friday.

Helen Hayes, Broadway favorite who has duplicated her stage success in two films, "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Arrowsmith," is now with Gary Cooper and Adolphe Menjou in "A Farewell to Arms," a Frank Borzage screen production of the novel by Ernest Hemingway, which is playing tomorrow at the Carolina theatre.

Tuesday's feature is "The Billion Dollar Scandal," the story of a giant swindle which has a cast headed by Robert Armstrong, Olga Baclanova, Frank Morgan, James Gleason, Irving Pichel, Warren Hymer and Frank Albertson. Based on a play called "The Truth Racket," the story follows the adventures of "Fingers" Parton (Robert Armstrong), whose clever fingers in the art of massage have made him a trusty friend of the warden during a prison term, and carry him into the inner councils of Masterson, a millionaire banker, and his associates, when the prison term is ended.

Zasu Pitts comes to the Carolina Wednesday in "They Just Had to Get Married," the Universal comedy in which she is co-starred with the equally mournful Slim Summerville.

Frederic March Thursday. Frederic March, who recently won the most distinguished honor the motion picture industry can bestow, the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best performance of the year, co-stars with Claudette Colbert, French-born screen beauty, in "Tonight Is Ours," screen adaptation of a play by Noel Coward, showing Thursday.

Boris Karloff, creator of sinister screen roles, has achieved a new masterpiece of the make-up art with the mummy countenance which he uses in his latest picture, "The Mummy," Friday.

Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Lupe Velez, and El Brendel have starring roles in "Hot Pepper," Saturday.

McLEAN SPEAKS ON ART IN LIFE

Lecturer Discusses Problems of Artist and Traces Beginnings of Art.

J. A. McLean, a modern artist, gave an illustrative lecture on art in life in the Playmakers theatre Friday night. McLean was introduced by Professor F. H. Koch, who said that the Playmakers were interested in the promotion of all the fine arts and he felt the need of an opportunity for the students to get a practical art training.

McLean discussed some of the problems of the artist, and showed lantern slides illustrating the beginnings of art, the significance of line and color, and demonstrated this by sketching on an easel before the audience. He demonstrated the relation of colors by a color chart and by painting in oils a North Carolina sunset. He concluded his lecture by showing lantern slides illustrating the differences between traditional and modern art, in which he emphasized the need of the modern artist, to change from tradition in order to express his own individual thought.

McLean has a collection of twenty-six paintings in oil, crayon, and charcoal on exhibition in the Green room of the Playmakers theatre. This exhibition is open to the public through Tuesday.

AMONG UNIVERSITY ALUMNI
by
J. MARYON SAUNDERS
Secretary, General Alumni Association

HEADS ALUMNI GROUP

John J. Parker, the new president of the General Alumni Association, is an example of the alumnus whose college career foreshadowed a later public career.

President of his freshman and senior classes, the Dialectic Society, the Athletic Association; intercollegiate debater; self-help man; campus political leader; winner of the Mangum Medal, the Eben Alexander prize in Greek, the William J. Bryan prize in political science; Phi Beta Kappa—so runs an impartial list of Judge Parker's college activities.

An A.B. graduate of '07, he won also a law degree in 1908, while in 1927 the University conferred upon him its honorary LL.D. degree.

Judge Parker practiced law in Greensboro, Monroe (his native town) and Charlotte. He was the Republican candidate for governor in 1920. In 1926 President Coolidge appointed him to the federal court of appeals. President Hoover nominated him in 1930 to sit on the United States Supreme Court, but an hostile Senate failed by the narrowest margin to confirm the appointment.

Always Judge Parker has remained close to the University. He has been a trustee since 1921. A daughter, Miss Sara Parker, is a member of the senior class now, and two younger sons look forward to attending their father's Alma Mater.

Beard Says Technocracy Is Too Highly Idealistic

man's energy, made out in ergs of energy, does not alter the question of the employment of man. If his notes in ergs are made out from the amount of energy expended in the execution of his labor, he first has to work before he can be paid, whether in the currency now in use or in notes of energy.

"The picture," said the former Columbia professor, "of a world in which nobody does any work is fantastic. Certainly, I would not like to live in it." As a statement of present day conditions the picture outlined by the Technocrats is essentially correct. But as a conception of the future the Technocratic ideal ranks with the vision of Thomas Paine of a world revolutionized by democracy, and other dreams of the ideal state which history and literature record.

Not Dangerous Idea

To the question, "Is the idea of Technocracy dangerous?" Dr. Beard replied that no ideas are dangerous. He explained his answer thus: If they fit the circumstances of life, they are useful; if not, they are merely ideas. The historian believes, however, that there is something good in Technocracy, that there has been something good in most of the ideas which have swept through the country.

Dr. Beard continued his exposition of the abstract idea in connection with Technocracy. "All history," he explained, is the inter-relation of interests and ideas. Interests affect ideas and, correspondingly, ideas affect interests. There is an everlasting inter-play between the two. History records a competition of ideas, dealing with their influence of one another, and on our conduct."

When asked if he thinks that America will ever return to the era of frenzied prosperity experienced from 1925-29, Dr. Beard pointed out that during three great wars in history—the Napoleonic, the Civil War in America, and the World War—there was a great rise in prosperity, followed by financial collapse, which in its turn was followed by a return to the normal condition of the country before the grave dislocations of conditions caused by these long wars had taken place. The conclusion is evident—that if there are no more wars, there will be no more periods of such great "over-inflation."

Dr. Beard pointed out that Technocracy is not a new idea. He recalled having read, in earlier years, a book in which an idea similar to that propounded by the Technocrats is presented. The book is Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Although not an intimate of Howard Scott, Dr. Beard was a friend of Dr. Veblen, author of "The Engineer and the Price System." Many of Scott's ideas, it is asserted, may be traced to the work of the older man.

At this point the Patterson-Morehead chimed announced that the supper hour was impending. Accordingly, Dr. Beard briefly summarized the importance of Technocracy. "Our age," he stated, "is a product of a number of conflicting ideas of fifty years ago. Is it not logical then," he asked, "that the world fifty years from now will be the product of the conflicting ideas of today?" According, then, to the realism of its position in modern thought, Technocracy will take its place among the ideas of tomorrow.

Experimental data from a tunnel of this size are not accurate enough for design purposes because the models used must be quite small. Midgett is writing his master thesis on the calibration of the tunnel and its instruments, and the determination of the scale effects.

of Saunders hall at 7:00 p. m. for an open forum discussion on the subject of world disarmam-cussing international affairs and ment with the Carnegie Founda-

Chapel Hill during the past term.

SKINNER STARTS LECTURE SERIES HERE LAST NIGHT

Tufts College Dean-Elect Offers Discussion of Liberal Religion at Carolina Inn.

"Revolutionary change must come in religion, if it is to meet the needs of the individual and social life today," declared Professor Clarence R. Skinner, dean-elect of the Tufts College School of Religion, last night, in his first lecture of a seminar in liberal religion being conducted this week at the Carolina Inn.
Nightly meetings take place at 8:00 o'clock, and a discussion period follows each lecture.

"There are few people, if any, who would deny the critical character of our times," went on Dr. Skinner. "In one sense, every age represents a crisis.
Whenever one era of civilization is transformed, there must be grave dangers of readjustment."

"The fact that makes our age so critical is that there is transformation or readjustment in practically every sphere of human life, both individual and social."

Professor Skinner continued by saying that a new science of psychology is revealing itself as a result of the profound changes effected throughout every country in the world during the present crisis. The old Victorian view is being rapidly outgrown.
In view of the facts regarding the changing social and economic order, Professor Skinner stated that equivalent changes in the structure and function of our religious life is also vital.

"In the very nature of the term, liberal means free from the clutch of past ages, free from the chains of dogma, free from the old views of the cosmos and of human personality," Skinner explained. "Likewise, in the nature of the word, 'conservative' religion keeps and conserves these old and somewhat worn points of view. The ques-

BRADSHAW URGES SCHOOL ECONOMY IN THRIFT MOVE

Dean Recommends Savings Accounts for Education in Assembly Talk Yesterday.

Dean Bradshaw yesterday addressed the freshmen and sophomores on National Thrift week.
Before he began his talk he ascertained that in the assembly hall yesterday only one-half of those who formerly had savings accounts retained them now. He then told of the National Thrift committee's ten tested rules for a happy and successful life. They are as follows: work and earn,
Study and learn, make and use a budget, have a bank account, carry life insurance, own your own home, make a will, invest in safe securities, pay your bills promptly, and share with others.

The week of January 17 to 23 inclusive has been designated as National Thrift week. This week has been set aside for special emphasis on diligence, prudence, foresight, comfort, responsibility, sympathy, and duty. More than forty of the greatest organizations in this country are participating in the observance of National Thrift week.

Thrift Education

Thrift week, according to Dean Bradshaw, was discussed in assembly because it has a specially important bearing on the North Carolina situation.
There is a movement on foot before the present state legislature to pass a bill to provide for a system of thrift education in North Carolina. An illustration of the need of such a system in this state is shown by a statement several years ago made by

One Way Out

The plan of introducing a system of thrift education in North Carolina as presented by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw yesterday morning in chapel in connection with his talk on National Thrift week, is one worthy of serious consideration, and one which the present Legislature would make no mistake in adopting.

According to Dean Bradshaw's proposal every school child in the state will be encouraged to start a savings account either with a local bank or with the state (these details have not yet been worked out), which account will be guaranteed by the State of North Carolina, thus relieving any risk which might accompany deposits in small local banks. The French have followed a plan somewhat similar to this for years, and largely as a result of this thrift education among its youth, this nation today finds itself in a fairly comfortable position financially, authorities say.

The mere fact that the school children of this state will be given a thorough grounding in the principles of opening and carrying on banking accounts of their own, which in turn will encourage savings, is important. And were there no other advantage to be gained by this thrift education program but this one, the whole plan would be entirely worthwhile.

But when one considers the matter further and realizes what savings accounts in all of the towns of the state would mean in the way of contributing possible capital for new projects and business enterprises, the idea takes on an even more beneficial appearance.

A resolution is now about to be presented to the Legislature proposing the adoption of such a plan in this state. If the Assembly adopts this plan it will be a decided advancement in the educational program of this state, and its effects on business conditions will be even more favorable.

Let There Be Thought

"I think, therefore I am," said Descartes many centuries ago. Since then, it has been practically proven that he was right. It would be well if more people could, meaningfully, make that statement, but unfortunately, very few seem to realize the importance of thinking.

Training students to think should be the main goal towards which a university strives, and to be able to think implies far more than the mere acquisition and retention of facts. Unless there go along with the gaining of factual information the ability to properly associate, analyze, and select pertinent facts, then problems will go unsolved, or poorly solved, and practically speaking, no great advantage will have been derived from four years spent in college.

Anticipating the demand for men and women who can and will face the problems of life four-square, the several benevolent organizations within the university have made possible a course, the specific purpose of which is the development in the mind of the student a broad and liberal attitude towards the problems effecting the political and economic welfare of, not only our country, but the whole world. This course does not aim at converting the student to any particular political faith but, rather, presents the opportunity of hearing vital questions discussed from all points of view, after which, more rational conclusions concerning these questions may be arrived at.

Considering the importance of the problems discussed and the universal fame of those leading the discussions, it is not far amiss to say that this course, entitled "Open Forum Discussions," offers more for the expense entailed than any other on the campus.—W.A.S.

Co-eds

The University's defeat by Guilford the other night was rather disheartening, but our boys will stick at it and work hard for the next game with Elon. This is not a news item but a bit of news conveyed to us from Greensboro. It is we feel, the general sentiment on the campus of the Greensboro division of the Greater University of North Carolina, nee N. C. C. W. It's like this. Greensboro's co-eds, of whom there are seventy-five, felt the athletic urge after classes. A basketball team was organized, and several conquests were made. The Guilford victory was rather one sided, 37 or 38 to 10 or 12, we think, but the boys don't mind it a bit. Co-eds must fight for their rights; equality must be given to all; co-eds think of something more serious than dates and... ah... women.

Libation

To The Tech Talk (a bi-weekly published by the journalism students of the Dallas, Texas, Technical High School) we owe a professional debt that can never be repaid. On opening the aforesaid journal we (and the exchange editor) came upon a shining twenty-five cent piece enclosed between several pages. This frank effort to bribe us may have been a libation or perhaps a bit of graft to induce us to place the Tech Talk on our mailing list, for a message was found within pleading "Please Exchange!"

And the quarter? Cigarettes have come down to two packs for twenty-five cents.

Art

The announcement of a class in painting, etc. to meet for the first time in the Green room of the Playmaker theatre this afternoon may be construed as the first step in the direction of a fine arts college at the University. As we see it, there is little difference in writing an essay, painting a picture, or writing a song. Most experts in such fields are endowed with some hereditary art before entering upon such a venture. It is no more difficult to apply one's self to the task of drawing a picture than to draft a poem or compose a fantasy.

This distinction, of course, does not apply to column writing and Buccaneer art work.

With Contemporaries

Get Your Man

The semi-annual fog of registration complexities is about to descend on the campus. Resident students will start groping Monday, and will have until Saturday noon to get their application blanks to college deans' offices.

In the course of the groping, there is no reason to assume that history will not repeat itself, and we may expect to witness animated discussion on the relative merits of courses, professors, advisability of morning classes, probable book expenditures, etc., ad nauseam.

Discussion before taking the plunge, if it be thoughtful discussion, is highly desirable, and anything that such consideration can do to decrease the lamentable number of post registration changes is very commendable. But the wisest student is not the one who accepts the bull session verdict and makes his schedule accordingly.

Registration wisdom is rather a careful weighing of all the factors involved, and chief among these factors is the character of the men who will for a semester help shape your thinking. It is a common thing for the undergraduate to overlook this consideration in an attempt to "get by" with the least work possible. Hence the effort expended in thumbing thru the schedule of classes in search for rumored "pipe courses."

Far wiser is the choice of courses which hinges on the quality of the men involved. Successful teaching is largely a matter of human contact, and to enhance the meaning of a college education courses should be chosen with an eye to the men who teach them. If this be the method of choice, it is true that the luxury of laziness may have to be forewarned, but the stimulation of meeting human richness will more than recompense any sacrifice to convenience.

Register then, with full realization of the value of men. Choose men, not courses.—Daily Nebraskan.

Harry F. Comer, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. Even when times were prosperous, from eighty to ninety per cent of the students admitted to the University were financially unprepared. Comer recommended at that time educational savings accounts for high school students planning college training. Dean Bradshaw stated that, so far as he knew, Comer was the first to present the idea of thrift education for North Carolina.

Founded in Germany

Upon looking into a short history of thrift education as it is given in the proposals made by the North Carolina plan, it was shown that the first school savings bank was established in Germany in 1820. The French nation recently astounded the world by unexpected financial strength which is no doubt due to the thrift habits of the French farmers. The French government helped build this trait in its people by thrift education in its schools. Between 1874 and 1886 France established 24,000 school banks.

In the years 1929-30 in the United States, 4,597,781 children in 16,610 schools deposited $29,113,063.40 in weekly savings deposits. In North Carolina, only 13,719 children in 66 schools located in six cities had school-savings accounts. While in Massachusetts thrift education has been compulsory in all schools since 1910, in North Carolina there is not the least semblance of a state provision for it.

North Carolina is forty-second among the states in the number of savings accounts per capita. It is last among the states in the use of the postal savings system.

tution, and this is only the second time since the birth of the state.

Some of the changes suggested pertained to the organization and government of counties, cities, and towns by statutory instead of organic law; strengthening the power of the governor by giving him the privilege to veto and writing the executive budget into the Constitution; broadening the authority of the General Assembly, and writing into organic law provisions for limiting the incurring of public debt, replacing the old constitutional limitations on income and ad valorem taxes.

Gardner declared that the report followed "the best line of modern thought with respect to state constitutions," and said that it appeared to him that the commission had done a "thorough piece of work."

the same award was won by Stringfield.

Maganini is an American by birth and is now the conductor of the New York Sinfonietta. He began his career as flutist with the San Francisco Symphony and later played with the New York Symphony under Walter Damrosch. Returning from two years' study in France made possible by a Guggenheim Foundation award, he organized his little symphony ensemble, now known as the New York Sinfonietta.

Regarding contemporary composition Maganini states, "If a person digs into it he will find there is such a thing as American music. Not Indian music nor negro music, but American music, a white man's music, which is as indigenous to this country as the golden rod." He explains further, "The real American musical idiom is that preserved by natives of the North Carolina mountains. This is the original music which the negro heard and adapted to his uses in his 'spirituals' and these are the themes which appeared in the music of our first great composer, Stephen Foster. His is music of the real American genre, as is the work of Lamar Stringfield, who is devoting his career to gathering this type of music before it is lost forever."

tion therefore clearly presents itself for our personal choice and decision. Shall we have a religion which is liberal, that is to say, free; or shall we follow that religion which is anchored in the past?"

The question, according to Skinner, cannot be dodged and presents an immense problem. His answer is: "Liberalism offers to the creative, forward looking person the only possible religion that can be a constructive, positive force in the crises of modern society."

Immediately preceding Professor Skinner's talk, a musical ensemble of several campus musicians, led by Thor Johnson, gave a short program of classical selections. Professor L. M. Brooks is in charge of the musical arrangements for the week's seminar.

Theatre Shows Story Of High Priced Theft

"The Billion Dollar Scandal," featuring Robert Armstrong, Constance Cummings, Olga Bacanova, Frank Morgan, James Gleason, Irving Pichel, Warren Hymer, and Frank Albertson, is showing today at the Carolina theatre.

The story deals with the expose of a gigantic swindle, brought about by an ex-convict, as an act of vengeance against a powerful financier.

Being particularly skillful as a masseur, the ex-convict had been hired to work for the financier. Overhearing several stock tips, he suddenly finds himself rich enough to realize his ambition for his brother to mingle with the "best people." The brother becomes infatuated with the financier's daughter, and to halt their marriage, the financier "breaks" the ex-convict.

A newspaper editor induces the ex-convict to tell all he knows of an immense swindle, headed by the financier, as a means of revenge upon his former employer.

The role of the ex-convict is played by Robert Armstrong; the financier is Frank Morgan; his daughter is Constance Cummings; Albertson is the brother of the ex-convict; Pichel is the newspaper editor, and Gleason, Hymer and Bacanova are pals of the ex-convict.

Dean Hobbs Declares Conference Progressively Simplified Rules

Meeting in Richmond Achieves Standardization in Entrance And Class Requirements.

LOOPHOLES ELIMINATED
Entrance Units Can Be Changed Only by Examination, Not By Local Magic.

"The conference made a long stride toward simplicity of regulations in the interest of honesty and friendly competition," Dean A. W. Hobbs, vice-president of the Southern Conference and chairman of the athletic council at the University, asserted yesterday when asked his opinion of the effect of the new rules adopted at the Richmond meeting Friday and Saturday.

Dean Hobbs and R. A. Fetzner, director of athletics at the University had just returned from the meeting and were optimistic as to the results accomplished.

Standard Entrance Rules
Dr. Hobbs said "there have long been some loopholes in regard to entrance requirements." He felt that in the new regulations the conference had made an effective effort to remedy these conditions.

Illustrating the point, he said that in the past it has often happened that one institution, which may be referred to as A, would claim that a certain player, then playing at B, had once tried to enter A, but could not show more than 12 of the required 15 units. A wanted to know how the 12 units became 15.

"Under the new by-laws the conference now says that any such change in the number of units must come, if at all, by examinations taken in accordance with regulations of some recognized accrediting agency of examining board and not by local magic performed more or less in the dark," Dean Hobbs explained.

"Again," he said, "it has been a source of much discontent that institution A had much higher scholastic requirements for athletic participation than had institution B. To remedy this, to some extent, the conference has ruled that a student must earn passing grades for 24 semester hours of his academic work his preceding year to be eligible for athletics. This amounts to about 80 percent of the normal amount of work carried by the student."

"The only declaration in regard to the sore question of recruiting and subsidizing of athletes remaining is the simple statement that athletes are eligible only for those scholarships and loans which are open to all other students," he said.

High School League Offers Fast Games

Charlotte high school started auspiciously in defense of the state class "A" high school title Saturday night by trouncing Greensboro's quintet, 38-8. Durham, winner of the eastern crown last year, also turned in a brilliant victory in its season's first game when Rocky Mount went down, 50-10.

This week-end will witness some fast encounters in the high school league. In the east, Durham will take on Wilmington on the latter's court, and Rocky Mount will engage Raleigh at home. Wilmington and Fayetteville will meet tonight at Fayetteville, and Saturday will find Fayetteville entertaining Durham.

In the western section, Greensboro will play at Winston-Salem tonight, and Friday Salisbury will play at Greensboro. Gastonia and High Point will mix it up over the week-end. Charlotte's next game will be at Gastonia, January 27.

The Can Opener

by
CLAIBORN M. CARR

"A TECHNICAL FOUL ON the captain of the North Carolina team for unsportsmanship conduct on the part of the Carolina supporters. The man has two more shots," Referee Knight announced during the closing minutes of the Carolina-V. P. I. game last Friday. A Gobbler player had been fouled previously and was shooting. This individual was long and lanky and a section of the Carolina stands took occasion to razz the player on his personal appearance. This group, I am sorry to say, was led by two men wearing N. C. sweaters, and their letters stood out in the crowd like the headlights of an automobile on a dark road. The joshing was all in fun, but it had gone too far and "Footsie" was absolutely right in calling the foul. Many people were unable to hear the announcement and left the game with the impression that Hines had been called down for questionable playing. The Phantom captain always plays a clean game and this impression of him was absolutely unjust and the Chi Psi set a new high-scoring mark for the current season and four undefeated quintets kept their records clear as the intramural basketball campaign went into its second week yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can.

Lambda Chi Alpha, which had triumphed in its first game of the season last week, provided little opposition for the fast Chi Psi outfit which scored at will, to win, 60-8. Rogers, Baukney, Manley, and Lawrence led the scorers on the winning team with twenty, twelve, ten, and eight points respectively, while Sparks Griffin accounted for all the losing team's points with four field goals.

Swain Downs Crescent
The battle of the eating places was fought out in a bitterly contested game which Swain Hall won from Crescent Cafeteria by the narrow margin of one point, 19-18. Hunter, of Crescent, was the highest individual point scorer, while Wilson, with eight, and Marlowe and Kennerly, with four each, led the attack for the winners.

TAR HEEL BOXERS SECURE WIN OVER V. P. I. GOBBLEERS

Marty Levinson Chosen to Captain 1933 Ring Team Following Fight Saturday.

The question of whether Carolina does or does not have a good boxing team was answered loudly in the affirmative Saturday night at Blacksburg when the Tar Heels cooked the V. P. I. Gobblers 6-2.

Stroud of V. P. I. started the show by taking a hair-line decision from Cliff Glover. Cliff did nobly and the verdict could have gone either way; but the officials ruled that the laurels were Stroud's, so V. P. I. got one of its two victories of the evening.

Levinson Scores K.O.

Marty Levinson soon evened things up for Carolina by starting his last year of boxing with a spectacular victory. Turner of V. P. I. was his opponent and, after a few passes in the first round, Marty hit Mr. Turner and Mr. Turner hit the floor. It was all over in less than a minute. Marty, after the meet, was elected captain of the team.

Norm Quarles, in his first start on the varsity, fought as a lightweight and nearly stole the show. The platinum blonde fought a beautiful fight against

The Tar Heel varsity and freshman wrestlers were defeated by the grapplers from N. C. State last night in Raleigh. The Carolina varsity was beaten in an exciting meet 18-14, while the frosh succumbed 25-13.

Carolina held a one point advantage before the final bout of the evening between Auman, Carolina, and Clevenger of State began. The State grappler won by a fall in 3:20 making the final score 18-14.

The feature match of the varsity meet was that between Captain Idol, Carolina, and Captain Croom, State in the 175 pound class. Idol held a time advantage of 3:25 over Croom when the time was up. Hussey, Mathewson, and Conklin scored the other Tar Heel points, each scoring through time advantages. Spell was thrown by Barnhart of State in the 165 pound class.

The Carolina frosh were clearly outclassed. Captain Shipman of Carolina turned in the best performance, scoring a fall over Whitehead in 1:04, in the 165 pound class. Snowden in the 125 pound class, and Miller in the 145 pound class scored the other points, Miller by a fall and Snowden by a time advantage in an extra period.

WINTER FOOTBALL PRACTICE STARTS TODAY WITH TALK

Collins Will Lecture in 111 Murphey at 4:00 O'clock; Managerial Call Issued.

All members of the varsity and freshman football squads and any other students interested in going out for winter football practice which starts today, are asked to meet in room 111 Murphey this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Coach Collins announced yesterday that due to the recent bad weather, practice would be confined to lectures which would be given daily until the ground dries.

The squad will be divided into two groups and equipment will be issued accordingly, Wednesday and Thursday afternoon. Coach Collins urges everyone interested in coming out to attend the meeting this afternoon in Murphey.

All freshman or sophomores who wish to enter the competition for managerships, are asked to meet Stan Heist at Emerson field this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to get instructions.

ILLUSION:

One of Houdini's most spectacular escape feats was performed with a huge milk can filled with water. He invited persons of the audience to bring padlocks and lock him into the can. He got into the can, the lid was put on and fastened with several padlocks. A screen was placed in front of the can. Assistants stood by with stop watches and fire axes to save him from drowning after a certain time. About a minute later, the screen was removed, Houdini was seen panting and dripping...the padlocks remaining intact!

EXPLANATION:

The usual method of escaping from a milk can is as follows: The lid of the can is apparently securely padlocked to the lower portion, but actually the metal band to which the staples are attached is the top of a short inner lining. The performer, after being locked into the can, pushes the lid upward with his head and the short inner lining is forced out of place, permitting his escape. The screen is then removed.

...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW*

What exciting magic there is in cigarette advertising!

Let's look at one of its greatest illusions...that cigarettes can be mysteriously given superior "FLAVOR."

THE EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring...the blending of various tobaccos...and the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is the most important. Artificial flavoring can never wholly disguise the poor flavor of cheap tobaccos.

The blending of several cheap, raw tobaccos cannot improve the flavor of any of them. A fine cigarette is a cigarette blended from costly, ripe tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is why the Camel flavor has never been rivaled... why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

In more costly tobaccos lies the secret of Camels' delicate "bouquet"...of their rich, cool flavor...of their non-irritating mildness. It's the tobacco that counts.

All the natural goodness of Camel's tobacco is kept fresh and rich for you by the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack. Don't remove it. Its moisture-proof cellophane also protects your Camels from dust and germs. Put a pack in your pocket today.

Results of Federation Meet and Plans for Winter Dance Will Be Discussed.

Formation of plans for the winter quarter's dance and the report of Mary Frances Parker on the meeting of the National Students Federation in New Orleans are slated to be the principal points of interest in the quarterly meeting of the Woman's Association in Graham Memorial at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The dates of the co-ed dance will be announced at this time and other matters pertaining to it will be discussed.

Miss Parker, the association's delegate to the federation's meeting during the Christmas holidays, will report on the meeting.

Other business booked for the session will be a report on woman's athletics in the University, a report on dramatics by Josephine Orendorff, and the election of a town girl to the woman's council.

TAR HEEL BOXERS SECURE WIN OVER V. P. I. GOBBLERS

McIntosh Loses
Buck Tyler of the Gobblers and Frank McIntosh met head on and Frank suffered a severe cut over the eye. Had it not been for this mishap, he might have taken the decision which Tyler got at the end of the third. McIntosh, in a last minute change in the line-up due to the absence of Nat Lumpkin, regular 145-pounder, was shifted to Nat's place from the 155-pound class in which he usually fights. He turned in a great performance, and his unfortunate accident probably cost him a win.

Lee Berke, in his first varsity fight, kept his slate clean, defeating Rip Bussey by decision in the 155-pound contest. Berke was undefeated as a freshman last year.

Sam Giddens, another boy making his first varsity attempt after an undefeated season last year as a frosh, made good. He trimmed Yorke in the middle-weight fray and looked impressive, finishing the third with plenty to spare.

Brown Wins
Peyton Brown, freshman knock-out artist of two years ago, met a tough one in the person of Bill Kerns. Bill put up a stiff argument and it took Brown an extra round to convince Kerns that he was boss of all the 175-pounders in Blacksburg.

Platt Landis also had a hard evening's work with Red Negri, and they were declared to be in a dead heat at the end of the third. In the extra round, Landis pounded his opponent enough to take the duke. Negri was reported to be a five to one favorite, so Platt's victory is all the more impressive.

Freshmen Victorious
Archie Allen's frosh looked good in a 6-2 win over the V. P. I. yearlings.

Eustler won by a forfeit in the bantam class, while Frucht took a four rounder in the featherweight fight. Flaherty and Sutton both dropped three round decisions; but Baxter Brown put the Tar Heels back in the lead by putting the slug on his man in the second.

Ellisberg, Henson, and Kaner then came through with three round decisions to take the meet in a walk.

Mangum won its second consecutive game, handing Lewis its second straight defeat, 28-26, in a fast, rough game. Jooby and Vick, of the winners, and Ginsberg, of the losers, scored eight points each, while scoring honors went to Willis, of Lewis, who got twelve points.

Alpha Tau Omega finally entered the winning column, after dropping two games last week, when it downed Phi Alpha, 33-24. Alan Smith, of the winners, got thirteen points, while Pollard, his teammate, garnered seven. Bernie Friedman led the losers with ten.

Delta Psi won from Sigma Nu by forfeit when the latter team did not appear for the game.

result of our unsportsmanlike conduct.

IT IS USELESS FOR THE writer to try and alter such conditions. We are all intensely interested in winning and at times lose our temper and crab some decision or some action of the opponents. I can only point out what a miserable spectacle Referee Knight made us look Friday night through his announcement. We should always remember two things; one, that the opponents are our guests and should be treated as such, and then probably the most important, that the official, though he may not be the best referee in the world, is in far better position to judge the action on the floor than any one of us. It is not up to us who are sitting on the sidelines to protest decisions or ridicule opposing players who are on the floor doing their best. We can help those Phantoms most by applauding as a body their good moves and letting them know we are behind them when they make a mistake. We should not neglect to give credit where credit is due. Coach Bob Fetzter, who treasures Carolina's reputation for clean sportsmanship more than anyone else, has consented to write an article which will appear in tomorrow's TAR HEEL suggesting a code of conduct for both players and spectators in contests. Coach Bob or no one else can lay down any law we as the student body or players can follow. All he can do is lead the way. It is up to us to establish our own code and he is more than anxious to help in any possible way.

VIRGIL WEATHERS Certainly lived up to his all-Southern honor in the Wake Forest game Saturday. His four points in the closing minutes won the game for the Phantoms and showed that Virge has the ability deserving of his honor. He came over to the sideline just before he sank his shot that made the score 32-33 to get a swallow of water. Calm, dripping with perspiration, and with every muscle in his body and face strained, "Corn Cob" presented a real study. He came through a few seconds later, the same way he did in Atlanta against Kentucky when we needed two points. It is this ability to connect in the pinches that makes an all-star forward. This reference costs you nothing Virgil, but by George you better keep it up. After the V. P. I. game Weathers was commenting on that beautiful pass Snooks gave him under the basket. "I didn't know what to do when Snooks cut loose that pass to me, I just

ARCHAEOLOGIST TO SPEAK AT BULL'S HEAD GATHERING

Harland Will Lecture at Weekly Meeting This Afternoon on "The Odyssey."

Professor J. P. Harland, of the archaeology department, will speak this afternoon at the weekly "get-together" of the Bull's Head in the Y. M. C. A. at 4:30 o'clock. Dr. Harland's subject will be The Odyssey.

The lecture will not follow the cut paths ordinarily taken by speakers on the subject, but will, according to Mary Dirnberger, be an interesting sketch on the background of the subject and various incidents relative to the subject. The lecture will be guided in most part by T. E. Shaw's Translation of the Odyssey, the latest authentic work on the subject. Shaw presents a more modern view of the romantic and glorious deeds of the olden days.

PRESIDENT GIVES HISTORY OF CUTS IN APPROPRIATION

Students May Get Copies of Booklet by Graham at Tar Heel Office to Send Home.

Several copies of the recently published pamphlet "The Situation at the University" written by President Frank Graham are now on hand at the DAILY TAR HEEL office. Those students who would be interested in sending copies home may receive these at any time in the office of the publication.

This pamphlet contains a brief history of the recent budget cuts on the University together with a statement of what these cuts will mean to the University itself.

The praises given this institution by such men as Dr. Edwin Mims of Vanderbilt, President Baker of University of South Carolina, the American Council for Learned Societies, the New York Times, Harold J. Laski, and Fletcher Sims Brockman are also published in this pamphlet.

A summary of the entire history is given in a graph on the back of the pamphlet showing how the budget has been steadily decreased, with a similar increase in the enrollment.

SKINNER SPEAKS ON SUPERSTITION IN SEMINAR TALK

Professor Declares That Superstition in Religion Is Not Based on Reality.

Professor Clarence R. Skinner of Tufts College continued the seminar on liberal religion at the Carolina Inn last night with a lecture on the subject: "Superstition, Belief, and Faith." According to Professor Skinner, it is important to clear up certain misunderstandings regarding superstition and belief in order to think most clearly and logically. Superstition, from the derivative of the word, is that which is left over, or "an irrational acceptance of a statement which has been handed down through the generations." Superstition has never been tested or proved but rather taken for granted on the authority of someone or some group of a previous era. It exists in practically every walk of life and in various groups of individual types of people according to professions.

Superstition in Religion

In religion there is superstition which is not based on reality. According to Professor Skinner, "Belief differs from superstition in that it is based on a rational acceptance of fact or statement." The problem confronting religion is to make belief as rational as possible. After belief has been tested and proved by every possible means, then we can believe in religion and be assured that it is something dependable.

Faith Is Dynamic Power

Faith, the third of the group, is different from both superstition and belief in that it is a dynamic power which urges us to act upon our convictions. In other words it is the putting to test of beliefs in actual life. Faith is connected with every day life in a more concrete manner, in that we all use faith in our own projects, or in business or marriage. The man who acts only after he has accumulated all knowledge concerning a matter will never have a belief of any kind.

It is faith, then, which we should attempt to cultivate in our lives, for it "is the highest function of life." Faith also creates a new and positive outlook on life and helps us to find life itself.

Sessions Conducted Under Auspices of University and N. C. P. A., With Duke Sharing.

Those who believe that education is an eternal process find the North Carolina Press Institute in able support of their view. The meetings which it sponsors are for the purpose of continuing the journalistic education of the newspapermen of the state. When President Graham opens tonight's gathering, it will be the ninth time that the members of the Fourth Estate of North Carolina have gathered here to obtain advice and comment from authorities in their own and allied fields.

The North Carolina Press Institute, since its inception in 1916, has made itself felt throughout the state as a training school for participants in all branches of journalism. Since its first meeting, the University has played host to the gatherings. During the last two years Duke University has joined hands to entertain and instruct the convened newspapermen.

Although no definite information is available, it is generally believed that the late E. K. Graham, president of the University from 1914 to 1918, was the original sponsor of the Press Institute as part of the University extension program. Ever interested in bringing the citizens and activities of the state into closer contact with the University, he was extremely instrumental in founding this organization.

Y. M. C. A. GROUPS HEAR TUFTS DEAN

Professor Skinner Stresses Great Need for Individual Philosophy of Life.

The need of an individual philosophy of life, a philosophy that is in keeping with the modern economic, political, and social world, was stressed Monday night by Professor Clarence R. Skinner, dean-elect of the Tufts College school of religion, in an address before the joint cabinets of the Y. M. C. A., in Gerrard hall. Professor Skinner emphasized the fact that changing conditions necessarily effect a change in our ideas and that a sound philosophy based on a liberal interpretation is extremely desirable in the youth of the country.

A short business session was in order immediately following Professor Skinner's talk. A motion was passed providing that the Y. M. C. A. cabinets convey to retiring pastor Reverend Eugene Olive of the Baptist church a message of appreciation for his cooperation with the Y. M. C. A. ventures and a wish for his future success. President Bill McKee asked that any member of the cabinets who had suggestions for future joint cabinet programs would submit them to the respective presidents for consideration.

HENDERSON SELLS SHAW COLLECTION FOR HIGH PRICES

One Letter Brings High Mark Of $2,400; Sale Made on Advice of Shaw.

From the auction sale of his collection of George Bernard Shaw's letters, books, and manuscripts in New York Monday, Dr. Archibald Henderson of the mathematics department, realized a total of $7,887.

The fifty-four-page letter written by Shaw to Dr. Henderson in 1905 brought the top price of $2,400 from Gabriel Wells, professional rare book collector. This letter is virtually an autobiography of the Irish playwright and forms the basis of Henderson's first book about Shaw's life and works.

Bid Starts at $300

A bid of $300 started the sale of the 12,500-word letter, which Shaw spent thirteen days writing, but the bidding rapidly reached $2,400, for which it was sold to Wells.

When the auctioneer was heard to intone "Damn Bernard Shaw and his tedious doings and sayings" and a few non-professionals in the audience failed to realize that he was quoting one of Shaw's own letters, a ripple of laughter interrupted the regularity of the two-hour sale.

Collection of 204 Items

The collection consisted of 204 items and was described by the American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, where the sale was conducted, as the largest in America. These items sold from $3 to $950, the second highest price.

Shaw did not meet his biographer until the first volume was half completed. When he heard of Dr. Henderson's activities, he wrote to him and requested a photograph, which was sent. Shaw's reply was: "You seem to be the man for the job."

Henderson Visits Shaw

Later Shaw wrote Dr. Henderson and suggested that he come to England, as "it is not desirable that the only American now living who has not called on me should be my biographer."

Dr. Henderson said that he decided to take Shaw's advice to dispose of his collection now because of the present "high interest" in Shaw's work.

Budget Would Cut Actual Receipts From State $110,140 For Next Two Years.

GRAHAM'S REQUEST PARED

Heavy Cuts Are Recommended By Commission for All State-Supported Institutions.

A curtailment in the state appropriations for the University of North Carolina amounting to $330,430 has been suggested by the budget commission as presented by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus in his budget message read Monday night to each house of the General Assembly. The University's annual appropriations for the coming biennium beginning June 30, 1933, and ending June 30, 1935 will be $390,570, according to the suggested figures.

Allotments Made

Of the $721,000 appropriated by the state for the fiscal year, June 30, 1931, to June 30, 1932, only $525,387 or approximately seventy per cent, was actually received by the University, according to figures released by the University business office. The amount allotted the University for the year 1932-33, the present fiscal period, is $500,710. In other words, if the recommended budget is adopted, the University will be forced to operate through the coming fiscal year 1933-34 on an amount reduced $110,140 from the amount actually used during the present year.

These reductions followed the general scale of appropriations recommended for state supported schools by the budget commission. In his budget request last month President Graham asked for $691,924 as the state appropriation necessary for the maintenance of the University.

According to the report of the budget commission submitted to

PLANS TO SET UP LOAN FUND MADE BY CO-ED GROUP

Woman's Association Decides to Give Entertainment at Its Meeting Yesterday.

At the quarterly meeting of the Woman's Association yesterday afternoon, plans were initiated to further the establishment of a Woman's Association loan fund at the University.

For this purpose the group plans to sponsor an entertainment during the present school year. Details of the presentation will be worked out by a committee headed by Josephine Orendorff.

Athletic Report Given

Reports of the activities and future plans of the woman's athletic association were given by Julia Bates Brown, president of the athletic group, and Molly Lou Daniels was elected town representative on the woman's council.

Following this, Mary Frances Parker, president of the association, made a report on the meeting of the National Student Federation in New Orleans which she attended as a delegate of the group.

The definite date of the co-ed dance for the winter quarter has not been decided upon because of a conflict but will be announced later this week.

The Facts Speak For Themselves

The budget commission has turned the last shovelful of earth from the recently designated grave of higher education in North Carolina: it now sits by to see what the solons at Raleigh will do about it. The tired, battered body that once inflated its chest when termed Higher Education, has nearly given up the ghost. Its six pall bearers known as "1927," "1928," "1929," "1930," "1931," and "1932" have deposited their burden at the side of the grave.

For if the knives of the budget papers remain unsheathed in the legislature the infant Greater University will be soundly slashed to the tune of one million dollars.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham in his The Situation at the University, wet from the press, points out that though the student body of the University has risen by nearly 500 students since the school year 1928-29, the present request of the University is less than half the amount requested in the year 1929-30. At that time the request was $1,463,067. The present request is $691,924. We construe this latter figure as a minimum figure.

Thus, realizing that state revenue has decreased, that indebtedness has increased, and that the state must cut some of its expenditures, it seems logical that the amount asked for is entirely within reason. Yet the budget commission has, since it has followed other appropriations downward, recommended that this figure be lowered to $391,000, an added cut of three hundred thousand dollars!

The University of North Carolina is recognized as pre-eminent in the south by such authorities as the Macon Telegraph, Richmond Times-Dispatch, the New York Times, World's Work, and the Atlantic Monthly, journals qualified to make such an observation. Numerous educators and statesmen are equally avid in their praise of this institution which proudly claims membership in the restricted Association of American Universities, in which only twenty-nine have qualified for membership.

"Such (again in the words of President Graham) is the institution at stake in this budget."

With the paring of the budget recommendation for higher education must come a lowering of faculty salaries. The requested budget, which must embody a large cut of faculty salaries, already endangers the very focal point of University life. Reduce this by $300,000 and the result is undeniably chaotic.

This University has presented fifty-six sons to the present legislature of the Old North State. Its graduates are prominent in every walk of life and it is their ideals and efforts that have built the past of the University; they must preserve its future.

—D.C.S.

Brightening The Corner

More often than not, editorial writers glean their ideas after the harvest of greater minds. In this case, our idea comes from Mary Dirnberger, keeper of the Bull's Head book shop, writer of the TAR HEEL's weekly book column, designer of scenery, which she does after the manner of her master, Cleon Throckmorton, for the Playmakers, and erstwhile co-ed.

We place considerable faith in the value of Mary's ideas because, up until now, she has never pulled a dead bunny out of the hat. For example, witness the success of her weekly Bull's Head sessions (last week the crowd that came to hear about Technocracy overflowed the book shop into Gerrard hall.) and the sensation created by her corn-popping party during the last examination period.

Having observed that most of the student audience at the performance given last week by Shan-Kar and his Hindu dancers came away either mystified and unimpressed, Miss Dirnberger suggests that students be given some background of understanding, some fortification of knowledge before they attend entertainments of this kind. It is difficult for an experienced theatregoer or cultured critic to appreciate Hindu dancing, much less the average college student.

There is considerable background material and historical information, most of which could be gotten from a good encyclopedia, which would help to the untutored mind to understand a technical artistic performance. Miss Dirnberger's suggestion is that, on the day before each student entertainment, freshman and sophomore English classes be given a brief lecture on the nature of the program.

Besides the help which this practice would give students, consider how much it might improve some of our instructors.—E.C.D.

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

SMOKE, CO-ED, SMOKE!

Mary Clandon smoked her first cigarette at the age of fifteen and it made her a little bit sick. She never really enjoyed smoking since then.

Mrs. Clandon told Mary's sister, Grace, that she never wanted to hear of either of them doing such an outlandish thing as smoking a cigarette. That was back in the days when the nation's easily-shocked were being jolted into making condemnatory resolutions concerning billboard pictures of nice-looking young girls with lighted fags in their mouths. Mrs. Clandon wasn't an old fogey, but there is a point where a woman who doesn't let her girls run absolutely loose must draw the line. Mrs. Clandon made quite plain what her views were on this crazy new idea that it was proper for ladies to smoke.

Naturally enough, Mary and Grace could hardly wait to try the idea out. They swiped a half-empty pack of dad's Camels and locked themselves in their room. Grace was careful not to swallow any smoke, but Mary was not so successful. She decided not to eat any supper.

Before Mary came to the University, she made one or two more experiments in the smoking line. Since the Wednesday Evening Bridge Club had taken it up and Mrs. Clandon herself had become a devotee of the weed, it was all right with the folks if she smoked. Grace was quite an addict; she opened a new pack every day.

When she was in high school, Mary hadn't smoked, simply because she didn't enjoy smoking and she didn't believe in sham. At the woman's institution she attended two years it, of course, was forbidden. True enough, many of the young ladies there smoked behind locked doors or at stolen moments when the eyes of the flat-heeled and flat-breasted teachers were not upon them. The rules against smoking certainly offered good reasons for smoking, but Mary was wise enough to see that there is really no reason for doing a thing simply because it is forbidden by stern elders.

At the University, though, Mary was faced with a problem—which, like most of the problems of the girl of college age, was quite insignificant but at the same time dreadfully important. It concerned smoking.

Unlike high school, where a girl could take smoking or leave it, college put a definite stamp upon the girl who did not smoke. Unjustly, those co-eds who kept away from fags were put in the same division with those who disapproved of them. This complicated matters. Mary didn't enjoy it in the least but at the same time she didn't want her dormitory mates to think that she was funny or old-fashioned. And the few boys she met, she knew, thought it peculiar that she didn't smoke, although most of them made a joke of the matter, claiming that the cost of keeping a co-ed in cigarettes while on a date was enormous and that they were glad to find at least one girl who didn't put them to such an expense.

She knew it was a small matter, one that she should dismiss from her mind as not worthy of thought or consideration—yet she worried.

For two months she was honest, braving the open wonder of her friends and the concealed incredulity of her dates, fortified by the knowledge that it would be foolish to take up a custom one didn't care for simply because the majority thought it smart.

Then, one day she surrendered to the demands of college society and walked out of a drug store with a pack of Luckies. She smoked three in the privacy of her room that night and the remainder on the next two days. After she had attained a fair degree of proficiency in private in the handling of a cigarette, she smoked in public.

Strange, though, is her present attitude toward her non-smoking sisters: she bestows upon them the same kindly tolerance mixed with a faint trace of superiority that others once bestowed upon her!

Consolidation?

"The Consolidation Moves Apace" is the title of the lead article in the most recent issue of The Alumna News published by my dear Alma Mater still called by old-timers "round about Greensboro." "The Normal School," in my generation known as N. C. C. W., and now masquerading under the magnificent title "Woman's College of the University of North Carolina," I'm beginning to wonder if that pace isn't becoming slower and slower. To quote from the aforementioned article: "We have it upon the expressed word of the trustees that it is their intention to preserve the integrity of the three units involved—in other words, that the three institutions are to remain distinct entities, separate personalities, each with the right to develop to the utmost, and in Aycock's great phrase 'burgeon out the best that is within them.'" Then why consolidate? The average farmer (in case you had forgotten he is the backbone of the country) approved of the consolidated rural school because it gives to his children the opportunity to get the larnin' that he didn't have. And the state's legislators of a couple of years ago approved of the consolidation of the three leading state institutions of higher learning because they thought it was a move for greater economy in times of financial stress. There was much talk of a single purchasing agent for the three institutions, of a single school devoted primarily to teacher-training. Yet today, when the good old state of North Carolina ranks first among the 48 states of the Union in per capita indebtedness and if not last among those same 48 states in per capita wealth is thankful for one state bordering on the Gulf of Mexico just as educators of this state some years ago were thankful for South Carolina which ranked lowest in the nation in that field.

When the majority of the counties of the state are on the verge of bankruptcy, it seems that a lot of sentiment about preserving the entity of the dear old college is to inflict upon the taxpayers the latest trends and improvements in newspaper work.

To the meetings come editors, publishers, business managers, and many other types of journalists, representing publications from all over the state. Topics of discussion and comment include editorial policy, censorship, publicity, circulation, advertising, and features.

University and N.C.P.A. Sponsor
The Institute is jointly sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association and the University. Departments of this institution which arrange the program are the extension division, the school of journalism, and the University news bureau. Any newspaperman in the state is at liberty to attend the sessions.

This organization is somewhat unique. The only other state in this section which can boast of a similar body is Georgia, although in the west and north newspaper institutes are not uncommon.

Renowned figures in the world of journalism have been brought to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the institute. At the first meeting in 1916 Walter Williams, then head of the department of journalism at the University of Missouri, and now president of that school, and Talcott Williams, late head of the department of journalism at Columbia University, were the guest speakers.

War Halts Work

Due to the confusion of the post-war years the next gathering did not take place till 1925. Among the out-of-state figures that have addressed the institute since that time are Don C. Seitz, formerly business manager of the New York World, Ida Clyde Clark, editor of the Pictorial Review, Ralph H. Graves, connected with Doubleday, Doran, William C. Wood, assistant postmaster-general under the late Calvin Coolidge, Professor John H. Casey of the Missouri School of Journalism, David Lawrence, editor of the United States Daily, Mark Sullivan, columnist and contemporary of the state the salary of a chancellor and an extra vice-president and that the consolidation will take place (if at all) in word but not in deed. It might be a good time to follow Horace Greeley's advice and go west, though it is rumored that those consolidations around the Pacific Coast weren't so successful at that.

Alcohol and the Man

A sudden descent from the ridiculous to the sublime is this description of the six stages of drunkenness which I noticed on a leaflet advertising a recent book:

1. Dry and Decent.
2. Delighted and Devilish.
3. Delinquent and Disgusting.
4. Dizzy and Delirious.
5. Dazed and Dejected.
6. Dead Drunk.

the assembly, the recommendations on expenditures of the state fund are based on a reduction of thirty-two per cent in state salaries and wages of the 1929-31 biennium levels. This further reduction would approximately balance the appropriations and the expenses.

The University payroll, however, is supported less than one-half by state appropriations. For the fiscal year 1931-32, the total payroll here was $1,157,270, which includes the University Service Plants, and actual appropriations amounted to only $525,387. The latter amount, also covered, in addition to salaries, all supplies, wages, materials, postage, printing, telephone, heat, light, power, water, sewers, repairs, insurance, and upkeep of the grounds and buildings.

The University more than matched the state support it received for that period, turning in $770,963 of its own receipts. The appropriations from the general fund took care of the balance of the University's total expense of $1,296,350.

Action Problematical

Whether the legislature will accept or approximate the recommendation made by the commission is highly problematical at the present. Attempts will possibly be made to raise the figure and also to lower the amount in the actual appropriation.

Several proposals have already reached the legislature to raise revenue from new sources, such as a tax on tobacco levied in the state and sales or luxury taxes; and if the use of any new source of revenue is adopted, the appropriations may be increased.

Carolina Expects To Face Stiff Test In Tilt With State Tonight

White Phantoms Will Play Third Big Five Contest Against Red Terrors.

DOUBLE BILL IN TIN CAN

State Team Regarded as Impressive Despite Unsuccessful Northern Invasion.

The Carolina quintet encounters a third Big Five opponent and a second Southern Conference team tonight when it meets the Red Terrors from N. C. State in the Tin Can at 8:30 o'clock. The frosh teams meet at 7:30 in the opener of the double bill.

The White Phantoms have a record of two wins in the Big Five race and they have conquered their only conference foe, V. P. I. Their unbeaten string is up for another stiff test tonight as State will present a strong and speedy outfit.

The Red Terrors have not played any Big Five members but they looked equally as impressive as the Tar Heels against V. P. I. Though they were set back on their northern trip, the State boys reversed their form and against Furman and the Gobblers sounded a warning that has been heard and respected all over the state.

Team Works Hard

Coach Bo Shepard had his men working hard on their defense against the shifty State attack yesterday and are set to bid fair for their third Big Five victory and their fifth of the season. Coach Shepard was pleased with the work of Earle Beale at center against Wake Forest and has been using him with the second combination. He plans to start Captain Hines and Weathers at forwards, Brandt at center, and Aitken and McCachren at guards.

Coach Serrmon of State will have Johnson and Jay as forwards, Beaghen center, with Captain Clark and Nelms at guards. Jay and Beaghen are sophomores while the other three men are veterans. Jay is the flash who has been doing most of State's scoring this season.

TAR BABY QUINT WILL MEET STATE

Frosh Play Wolflets Here Tonight at 7:30; State Engages In First Big Five Game.

With a decisive victory over Wake Forest's yearling team in their opening contest, Carolina's Tar Baby basketball team is all set to meet the first year team from State in the Tin Can tonight at 7:30.

Both Bill Rankin and Murray Kanner, centers who were absent for the game with the Baby Deacons, are back out and ready to go. Rankin has been in the infirmary for the last week but is fully recovered and will probably start at center. Frank Orr and Kanner will be held in reserve in case Rankin is unable to go the full route.

The rest of the starting team will be the same that played most of the contest last Saturday. Melvin Nelson, who has fifteen points to his credit for the first game, and Bill Moore will hold down the two forwards. Jim McCachren and Red Phelps are slated to start at the guard positions.

In their only contest of the year so far, State's freshmen can wild over Jim Magner's Mt. Pleasant team. This will be the first start for State yearlings against Fig Five and they will be out to take it.

You can trust majorities as a rule. If they aren't right, they soon cease to be majorities.—Daily Trojan.

MARLING SPIKE

The election of Marty Levinson as captain of the Carolina boxing team last Saturday night comes as a well earned tribute to one of the most colorful fighters this institution has ever had. Levinson has done much to make the ring game popular here and wherever he fights there are sure to be at least a portion of the crowd on hand for no other purpose but to see him in action.

Marty lost one bout his freshman year, three as a sophomore, and one last year, and all of them were close. His record speaks for itself. Saturday night Marty started off his final year of intercollegiate competition with a knockout in exactly one minute. Not bad!

Levinson's captaincy will mean a great deal to the team and to Marty. Watch those boys go from now on. Their 6-2 win over V. P. I. was anything but displeasing and the team will improve as the season progresses.

A certain person tells us that Max Frucht, Tar Baby featherweight, won a four round decision over Campbell although somewhat out on his feet from the second round on. The same

MAT TEAMS TAKE LIGHT WORKOUTS

Varsity and Yearling Squads Will Meet in Gerrard Hall Tonight at 7:30 O'clock.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestling teams took light work-outs yesterday as Coach Quinlan offered his mat proteges a brief respite following their disastrous invasion of the State Wolfpack's lair, in Raleigh.

The Tar Heels' wrestling mentor was disappointed in his charges' showing against State, but is expecting his men will do better work against the V. P. I. Gobblers who come to Chapel Hill Saturday afternoon.

Although the Tar Heels did not do any hard work yesterday afternoon, the grappling candidates got a load of conditioning exercises in their opening calisthenic drills. These were followed by some light work on the mat.

May Change Line-up

The Carolina mat mentor may juggle his line-up in the meet Saturday with several new faces appearing on both his freshman and varsity teams, unless marked improvement in spirit and work is shown by some of the men now out.

Coach Quinlan has called a meeting of both varsity and yearling wrestling squads in Gerrard hall tonight, with the time of the gathering set for 7:30 o'clock.

It was definitely announced by the Tar Heel wrestling coach yesterday that Carolina will send a team representation to

Veteran Track Coach Voices Plea For True Carolina Sportsmanship

Bob Fetzter Points Out Duty of Students Towards Visiting Teams During Winter.

Coach Bob Fetzter, "grand old man of Carolina athletics" and veteran builder of winning track teams, yesterday made a plea for true Carolina sportsmanship at winter athletic events. His statement follows:

"Sportsmanship is the Golden Rule applied to athletics; it is that ideal practiced in athletic contests which insures fair play; it is that indefinable something which pervades athletics, lifting it from the plane of a sordid struggle for physical supremacy to a contest where fair play, respect of the rights of others and a spirit of gallant competition outweigh mere victory; it is an opportunity to cling to an ideal in an age when civilization is calling on the schools to help hold up its tottering ideals.

"Sportsmanship is not limited either to the contestants. Its development and practice are just as noticeable and essential among the student body and the general public who witness the contest. Because of their superior advantages and backgrounds, and the fact that the student body is really the host to all visiting teams, it is their responsibility and duty to crystallize this sentiment of real sportsmanship, to exemplify it in their own behavior, and so create an atmosphere that will pervade the whole audience.

"Again, the display or the lack of display of sportsmanship

VICTORY FAILS TO IMPRESS MENTOR

Boxing Coach Has Charges Hard at Work in Preparation for Meet With N. C. State.

Coach Rowe, not as much impressed with his boxing team's victory over V. P. I. Saturday as the spectators were, sent the boys right back to work Monday and he has had them at it ever since.

"State," he said, "has a strong team and will give us much tougher opposition than V. P. I. did. My boys will have to work hard right up until the gong rings to be in shape. And the meets with Duke, Virginia, and Penn State, which are not far off, will be even tougher."

Apparently the boys realize the truth of Coach Rowe's words, for they have been working doubly hard ever since Monday.

is more noticeable during the winter sports season than at any other time, on account of the smallness and compactness of the crowds and the proximity of spectators and contestants. The slightest indiscretion in conduct at an indoor contest is magnified and may easily be mistaken for gross rudeness. At the same time the indoor season offers us the best opportunity to exemplify and practice our high code of sportsmanship, and the University of North Carolina will have no better chance to show its hospitality and respect for the visiting teams who are its guests."

PHI KAPPA SIGMA LOSES FAST TILT TO PI KAPPA PHI

Cecil Longest Amasses Twenty-Two Points to Set New Intramural Record.

A new fraternity scoring mark for an individual intramural player was set yesterday as Cecil Longest, of Theta Kappa Nu, amassed twenty-two points in his team's victory over Phi Delta Chi.

In the most exciting contest of the intramural program yesterday, Pi Kappa Phi won a nip and tuck battle from Phi Kappa Sigma, 19-18. With thirty seconds to play the score was 16-15 in favor of Pi Kappa Phi. Reid, of Phi Kappa Sigma, sank a spectacular goal at this point to put his team in the lead, but Pendleton countered with a basket which passed through the ring with one second remaining, giving the victory to Pi Kappa Phi. Poole, of the winners, led the scorers with ten points, while Dossenbach with nine, and Reid with six, were the high men on the losing outfit.

T. E. P. Wins Again

Tau Epsilon Phi continued on its way undefeated by downing Theta Chi, 28-19, in a slow game. Kanner, T. E. P.'s center, accounted for thirteen of his team's points. Jacobs, his teammate, added five more, while Kelly stood out for Theta Chi with seven points.

Cecil Longest's scoring was the feature of the Theta Kappa

SALON ENSEMBLE TO PLAY TONIGHT

Group Appears at Carolina Inn Before North Carolina Press Association.

The Carolina Salon Ensemble will make its fourth campus appearance of the quarter tonight at the Carolina Inn before the convention of the North Carolina Press Association. Thor Johnson will conduct the group.

The purpose of the program is to present a group of musical selections by North Carolina composers and based on native North Carolina themes. The feature numbers will be Lamar Stringfield's Cripple Creek, which is based on an old banjo breakdown of Anglo-Saxon origin preserved by the people of western North Carolina, and his setting of the folk tune Pretty Polly which he has titled After Midnight. This last selection was originally written for violincello solo with piano but has been orchestrated by the composer especially for performance by the salon ensemble. Herbert Hazelman's popular Danse Moronique will also be played.

TIN CAN TALES

thing happened here last year when Dave Stoops, Penn State bantam, got off the floor to knock out Cliff Glover and failed to realize the fact until told about it after the fight. Another certain person told us that.

Vergil Weathers scored 12 points against Wake Forest, which in itself means nothing. But it adds proof to the claim that Verg is one of the best "pinch" players Carolina has. Last year he played his best basketball in the Southern Conference tournament where the stakes were high. Saturday he did the same thing. When a really strong opponent showed up, he came through not solely with high score honors but brilliant floor work, which was of greater importance.

A high scorer, especially one consciously so, is not always the most valuable man on a team. No one likes to see one of these birds who try to hog all the shots, who bang away at the basket from any old position rather than pass to someone else merely because he wants to be sure that his individual point score is higher than anyone else's.

There were indications that something of the sort was about to break out on the White Phantoms when the boys were rolling through their easy games, but now that the tough ones are coming along, that should disappear. It's a lot more pleasant to be a cog in a winning machine than high point man on a losing one.

Jack Glace's contortions Friday night brought plenty of laughs, but we like him. True, Jason doesn't look a great deal like a ballet dancer but he gets things done and that's what counts. In the past Carolina has had a lot of basketball players with too much form and not enough ability. Therefore, it's a bit refreshing to watch Glace untangle himself, fumble around slightly, and sink the ball for the same two points that would have been rung up had he performed the feat more gracefully. He is aggressive, a fighter, and he'll come along all right. Don't worry about that.

LOCAL STORE TO MAKE DONATIONS TO LOAN FUNDS

Stetson "D" Will Devote Five Per Cent of Gross Sales to Aid Needy Students.

Beginning January 16, five per cent of the gross sales of the local Stetson "D" store will be donated to the University to be used as an emergency relief fund, according to an announcement made yesterday by Maurice Robinson, president of the Stetson "D" Tailors, Inc.

On his recent visit to Chapel Hill, the need of an emergency relief fund for many of the students in the University was brought to Robinson's attention by L. V. Huggins, graduate of the class of 1925, who has returned here as district manager of Stetson "D" stores in North Carolina and Virginia. The announcement in THE DAILY TAR HEEL that the short-term loan funds were completely exhausted interested Robinson to the extent that he authorized Huggins to give five per cent of all sales of the Chapel Hill Stetson "D" from January 16, including the receipts from the sale now in progress, to the University loan funds to supplement the short-term emergency funds which are used to lend five to fifteen dollars for thirty to sixty days to students in temporary distress.

Each week President Robinson will mail to the University a check amounting to five per cent of all business done during the preceding week. Manager Huggins estimates that assistance from this source will amount to several hundred dollars by the end of the current year and that more than a score

Banking Question Will Be Subject of Discussion Led by Leaders in Banking.

Dr. John H. Gray, former president of the American Economics Association, and Wood H. Wood, president of the American Trust Company, Charlotte, will address the Open Forum Discussion meeting in Gerrard hall tonight at 8:30 o'clock on "The Banking Question." Both men are well known in the field of American banking. A discussion from the floor will follow the two addresses.

Dr. Gray, who comes by arrangement with the League for Industrial Democracy, is noted both here and abroad for his knowledge of American industrial mechanics. He graduated from Harvard and formerly taught at Northwestern University and the University of Minnesota. Recently he was examiner of valuation for the interstate commerce commission. DEAN CONTINUES LECTURE SERIES HERE LAST NIGHT

Skinner Talks of Science, Ethics, Philosophy and Religion at
Inn Last Night.

"One of the major problems of the wholesome and efficient life is the problem of integrating all interests and making a harmony out of what may seem to be conflicts," said Professor Clarence R. Skinner last night in his third lecture in the seminar of liberal religion being conducted at the Carolina Inn. His fourth lecture is scheduled for the Carolina Inn at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

"Many religious persons," he continued, "are not able to accept science, ethics, philosophy, and religion as cooperating parts of a vital whole. Their lives are departmentalized or their loyalties are made partial or weak."

Professor Skinner's address, "Science, Ethics, Philosophy, and Religion," continued by showing that liberal religion can help people integrate their lives and make a working unit of the four themes by freeing their minds and spirits and by seeking truth wherever it may be found. Professor Skinner defined science as "description and codification of facts," and added that "what is proved must be accepted, no matter how disturbing or revolutionary." Religion, in order to be lasting, must be founded on realities.

Good Life

In continuing the diagnosis of his subject, Skinner stated, "Ethics is a study and practice of the good life. The content of ethics varies from time to time, depending upon the situation. Our ethics must be constantly revised to be made harmonious with the changes in the world's life. Consider, for example, our attitude towards war and business."

"Philosophy is an attempt to find the meaning of life and to relate all parts to the whole."

STUDENTS START ORGANIZATION OF ART STUDY CLASS

Art Guild Is First Step Toward Establishing School of Fine Arts at University.

At a meeting in the green room of the Playmaker's theatre Tuesday afternoon sixteen students met with James A. McLean, the North Carolina artist and undertook the preliminary organization of an Art Students' Guild. Professor Koch appointed an executive committee of Rene Prud'Hommeaux, Anne Simmons, Harry Coble, and Mayne Albright.

McLean has agreed to come to Chapel Hill on Tuesday and Thursday of every week, and will conduct classes from 2:30 to 4:00 o'clock and from 7:00 to 9:00 o'clock. The place in which the classes are to be conducted has not yet been decided upon.

No Credit Given

Although no credit in this course will be given through the University, the establishment of these classes is the first step toward forming a school of fine arts at the University.

With the idea in mind of forming a school of fine arts at the University, President Frank P. Graham has reconstituted the University committee on fine arts. Members of the committee now are: Dr. George Howe, chairman, Dr. W. S. Bernard, Dr. J. P. Harland, Dr. J. M. Booker, and Frederick Koch.

CITY EDITOR FOR THIS ISSUE
J. D. WINSLOW

To Mr.
Average Citizen

In a recent issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL, Mr. C. E. McIntosh, secretary of the school of education, made the statement that the number of failures to pass freshman requirements during the past quarter has been due to the effect of the state's policy of retrenchment on high schools of North Carolina. Mr. McIntosh did not intimate, as the article seemed to, that the teaching staffs of our public schools have become incompetent due to lack of high salaried positions, or that the average college freshman is in any way dumber today than five years ago. His open forum letter correcting his statement should justify it in the light of public opinion.

For the rigid program of economy which the state has found it necessary to adopt has undoubtedly been felt in our public school system. Overcrowded high schools, too large classes, make careful teaching a human impossibility. In most cases, whether or not a senior in high school has covered the amount of work prescribed, he must be graduated to make room for those who will follow him, though of course certificates and diplomas are not as a rule given to those who expect to enter college. However, a few of these half-prepared students do enter college after some make-shift preparation to gain enough unit requirements for college work, and with inadequate training they can hardly hope to meet successfully the demands of higher education,—which is nobody's fault in particular.

But the general attitude toward diminishing state maintenance of schools is blame-worthy. One newspaper writer stated that economies should be effected in the schools of North Carolina, where there is plenty of room for cuts. And Mr. Average Citizen is under the impression that since the state went so deeply in debt over its public schools, they should be the first to go under the knife of economy. As a matter of fact, we owe but fourteen and five-tenths per cent of the total indebtedness because of schools; the rest is for "purposes other than schools."—A.T.D.

Faster Tempo for The Wedding March

The resolution before the present session of the North Carolina General Assembly to revise the present marriage and divorce laws and to repeal the clauses requiring medical examination and three days' notice prior to the marriage has again brought to light a distressing situation, namely, the need of uniform marriage and divorce laws. The North Carolina law as it stands at present requires that the marriage bans be made public three days prior to the ceremony, and that both sexes submit to a medical examination. To secure a divorce by separation and for mere incompatibility five years of living apart is required.

In both instances in North Carolina the laws have met with a lack of success amounting to failure. Even their most ardent supporters perforce admit defeat. In Virginia and South Carolina no such marriage laws exist, and North Carolina is only 160 miles in diameter. To run across the line and back takes but a few hours. In the present times when every dollar is needed by the state to boost its budget, the actual pecuniary loss from these laws is distressing. They hinder no one but the state treasury.

The laxity of divorce law in Nevada in contrast to many other states has made Reno the center of the social life of base divorcees. On the other hand we have our neighbor South Carolina, in which it is easy to get married but impossible to get a divorce.

The existence of such conditions in progressive America is an indictment against our system of state government. Certainly in regards to marriage and divorce, more than in any other instance, some attempts toward uniform regulations should be made. It is folly for one state to attempt sane and sensible laws on the subject when its neighbor persists in its inviolable prerogative to exercise its state's rights.—V.C.R.

This Hill Of Ours

There must be some force of attraction in the air which surrounds Chapel Hill that does not exist in the average American town, or, even in the average college community, for radiating from the campus in all directions may be found the pleasant cottages of eminent men, come to spend their declining years amidst the peaceful oaks that fleck the surrounding hillsides.

Whether it be due to the University's serene and cultural background, or to its venerableness and scholarly atmosphere, the fact remains that, as few other centers in the nation, of anything like the same size, this community has become a haven of rest for scholars, educators, scientists and writers who, having accomplished their aims; being worn out with the impetuous turbulence and din of larger cities, they seek rest and peace, where they may also find all the comforts and conveniences of the modern city without its accompanying evils.

It is not unusual for any great modern university to gather around it large numbers of students and would-be scholars, but when venerable men, wise from years and experience who have delved deeply into the rocky soil of knowledge, who have shaped the destiny of the world of tomorrow—when such men select this village as their homes,

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Almanac

Our library, we are pleased to announce, is now considerably embellished by a 1933 World Almanac, or perhaps we should say World-Telegram Almanac. Funny, that we've never connected the old World with the almanac business. Shows how you miss little things like that.

This year's Almanac is swell, if we may be permitted a cursory vulgarity. For instance, if you answer the ad on page 29a you can learn all about the original and uncensored story of Adam and Eve, whom we seem to recollect; page 31a has a free offer about getting 450 miles out of your car on one gallon of gas; and you can learn how to get rid of an inferiority complex on page 72a (The Harvard Classics, of course). But that's not all we know.

We know: that the M.E.Ch. of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals has one advisory board member in Kent, Ohio and four in Washington; that there is a capybara whose height at back is one foot and ten inches, in the Bronx zoo; that the wealth per capita for Utah is $3,505; that you can remove freckles with a solution of sweet almonds, 30 parts; bitter almonds, 15 parts; distilled water, 300 parts; mix and strain through a cheese cloth and add twenty-five parts of tincture of benzoin and fifteen parts lemon juice. (Not to be drunk).

We know: that Cambridge beat the Oxford crew April 14, 1841; that the boiling point of molybden is 3,620 degrees C.; that this is quite enough of that for today.

Letter

So seldom does this department get any mail that we were surprised and flattered, in the order named, to find an envelope bearing our name evolving from the "Women's College of the University of North Carolina."

Excluding the salutation, we quote in part: "As you probably know we have several dances during the year . . . the society dances for this year have been scheduled on February 4 and 11 and on March 11 and 25 . . . the junior-senior . . . will take place on April 22 . . . Since we have many girls who are here from distant cities and it is sometimes impossible for their friends to come to Greensboro, it has been the policy of the college to invite a group of young men for these dances. Our dances are card dances so there is no danger of getting 'stuck' . . . I am writing to ask if you will allow me to put your name on the college list . . . very sincerely yours . . ."

We had thought of framing a very legal reply to this pleasing and exceedingly flattering little document, but the dictates of social propriety might prohibit that. The only thing that bothers us is that phrase "there is no danger of getting 'stuck' . . ." Madame, we never get "stuck." We admit you have a pretty good point there, but we must insist that, despite your cautions, we never get "stuck" anyway.

And another thing. Do your dancers know anything about the rumba? Can they tango? What about Bali? You see, you have struck a particular client. And what about letting us have an advanced copy of our "card." You might also send us the pictures of our partners, just so there'll be "no danger."

then there must somewhere, either hidden or unhidden, lie a reason, and that reason may be its climate, its renown as a center of culture, or it may be that Chapel Hill is just an ideal University town.—W.A.S.

With Contemporaries

Higher Education In Danger

There have been many in North Carolina in recent days who have said that there was need of readjustment in the emphasis in North Carolina between roads and schools. They held the State far readier to help the motorist than the student and school child.

If there were need of proof of this statement the Budget Bureau Monday gave it when it recommended that the State Highway Patrol receive a large appropriation while the appropriations of all institutions of higher learning were drastically cut. North Carolina State College, and the North Carolina College for Women will receive, if the budget recommendations are adopted, only a few thousand more each than the Highway Patrol.

There are many who believe that the State in these difficult times could dispense with the State Highway Patrol yet there are few who would state publicly their willingness to injure the college for women or the college for technical and agricultural students.

Higher education generally suffered in the budget report. On the heels of the combination of the three institutions of higher learning into the so-called "Greater University," the Budget Bureau recommends that the three together receive scarcely more than was appropriated for the University alone for the biennium 1932-33.

Cut in the budget recommendations to approximately 50 per cent of the appropriations made for them two years ago, the three institutions which have so honored the State with their work will be in grave difficulty if the recommendations are adopted by the Legislature. It is right and just that they bear part of the economy burden. But there comes a point when the cutting that economizes becomes the slashing that kills. Higher learning in North Carolina would not be far from that point if the Legislature should follow the recommendations of the Budget Bureau.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Without it, we are more or less lost, and are the victims of chance or fate. With it, we become masters of life and destiny.

"Religion is man's highest achievement, the loftiest reach of man's aspirations. It tries to make us at home in the universe, not only intellectually, but emotionally and spiritually. Religion differs from science in that it is broader. It differs from ethics in that it goes back of conduct to sources. It is more profound than philosophy because it deals with the whole man.

"Religion in the liberal view consults science for its facts, inspires ethical life in the individual, utilizes philosophy for its meaning, and makes man a part in the creative life of the universe."

THEATRE HERE TO CONTINUE PLAYING FRENCH PICTURES

First Cinema of Quarter Will Be Chosen From Best of Foreign Movie Productions.

The Romance language department will continue its policy of showing French cinemas in cooperation with E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre.

The first picture, the title of which has not as yet been announced, will be shown at the theatre Sunday night, January 22, at 9:00 o'clock.

Although the title has not yet been announced, it was learned that the picture shown will probably be one of the following three: Le Million, Le Collier de la Reine, or La Clair de la Lune.

One of the outstanding pictures the department presented last quarter was Rene Clair's A Nous La Liberté, which was listed by the New York Times as one of the five best foreign cinemas of the year. In this category La Clair de la Lune and Le Million were also listed.

STUDENTS MAKE GEOLOGY STUDY

E. N. Kjellesvig and C. G. Peebles, Jr., Investigating Foraminiferae Samples.

E. N. Kjellesvig and C. G. Peebles, Jr., students in the geology department, have been conducting a foraminiferal study of material from a well drilled at Elizabeth City for the city government.

The material was furnished by Charles Ray of the department of conservation and development and includes thirteen samples taken from the surface to a depth of 525 feet. It is believed that the contact between the Tertiary and the Cretaceous systems was encountered at 200 to 250 when a change in the foraminiferal content was observed, representing events that took place approximately twenty million years ago.

Foraminiferae are microscopic, one-celled animals which protect themselves with a shell, usually of lime. This is often preserved in the sediments after the death of the organism.

It is hoped that this study will throw additional light on the subsurface geology of North Carolina.

Award Winner Stars In Carolina's Feature

Fredric March, young star who recently won the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best performance of the year, co-stars with Claudette Colbert in "Tonight Is Ours," which is showing at the Carolina theatre today. The picture is a screen adaptation of a play by Noel Coward.

Like "Private Lives," best known to the movie public of all Coward's works, "Tonight Is Ours" is a witty, romantic story of clever and intelligent people. It centers around a girl of position who waives her responsibilities and sets out to have an amusing time in Paris, and a wealthy young Parisian who insists on being the source of amusement.

March is cast as the Parisian, with Miss Colbert as the girl in the case. Alison Skipworth heads the supporting cast, which also includes Arthur Byron and Paul Cavanagh.

Phantoms Place Stinging Defeat On Red Terrors In Exciting Game, 32-23

Tar Heels Keep State and Conference Record Clean Displaying Good Form.

AITKEN, McCACHREN STAR

Two Guards Silence Terror Guns With Uncanny Play; Hines, Weathers Bag Five Each.

Those fast flying White Phantoms of the University of North Carolina were "hot" last night with the result that they garnered their fifth consecutive victory, defeating State, 32-23, in the Tin Can before a capacity crowd of three thousand persons.

Last night's contest was without a doubt the fastest and most fiercely played this season, and the Tar Heels had to play like champions to win. It wasn't until the closing minutes that the Tar Heels were able to stretch their slim lead into the margin of victory.

Both teams started festivities with a cautious brand of basketball, but the Phantoms showed their superiority with deadly passing and uncanny accuracy at the basket by Brandt, Weathers, and Hines. The score at half time was 13-11 in Carolina's favor.

Second Half Rough

The second half was more a continuation of last year's football game rather than a basketball game, but again the combination of Beale, Hines, Weathers, Aitken, and McCachren stood off all State threats successfully.

It would be hard to pick an outstanding Carolina player, for they all played top-notch ball. Aitken and McCachren dazzled the State players with their stellar floor play; the Tar Heels star forwards, Hines and Weathers, played havoc with State's goal, while Brandt and Beale outplayed Beaghen and Avera. GRIMES AND PHIGAM CONQUER TO FURNISH THRILLS

Barclay Leads in Victory Over Sigma Chi, While Watson For Grimes Is Best.

Two close games provided plenty of thrills for the intramural basketball fans yesterday as Phi Gamma Delta won its second victory in as many starts and Grimes came out on top for its second win in three games.

Phi Gam's win was at the expense of Sigma Chi's cagers, 23-22. The contest was close and hotly contested throughout, with Sigma Chi gaining a lead near the end of the game which lasted until Barclay tossed a goal with one minute to play, to give his team its margin of victory. Barclay scored thirteen of the winners' points, while Hodges accounted for five more. Rhem, of the losers, scored twelve.

Grimes Wins

Watson had his eye on the basket and sank several long baskets as Grimes downed Aycock, 31-29, in a furious battle. Watson accounted for eleven of his team's points, with Goldberg running close behind with eight. Effland, of Aycock, led his team's scoring with nine points.

Delta Kappa Epsilon won its first game in two tries, crushing Sigma Phi Epsilon under a barrage of baskets, 45-12. Alexander, with ten points, and Brooks, with half that number, stood out on the Deke outfit, while Fowler was the most efficient Sigma Phi Epsilon player, getting seven points.

SCHOOLS REMAIN IN TIE FOR LEAD

Winston-Salem and Charlotte Set Pace in West, While Fayetteville Leads Easterners.

Winston-Salem high school kept pace with Charlotte's championship quintet in the western class "A" high school basketball conference by trouncing Greensboro Tuesday night 19-12. The defeat was Greensboro's second in two starts.

Fayetteville's crack team, led by Swann, star forward, beat Wilmington in the only eastern division game, 23-19.

Several fast games are scheduled for this week-end. In the eastern section, Durham will take on Wilmington on the latter's court. Durham, last year's eastern winner, copped its first game last week with Rocky Mount, 50-10. Rocky Mount will meet Raleigh on the home court, and Fayetteville will entertain Durham in the other games.

In the western section, Salisbury will play Greensboro, and Gastonia and High Point will meet to complete the week's schedule.

MATMEN PREPARE FOR V. P. I. MEET

Quinlan Works Squad to Prime Them for Gobbler Meet in Tin Can Saturday.

Carolina's combined freshman and varsity wrestling teams took hard workouts yesterday afternoon in order to prime themselves for their coming meet with the V. P. I. Gobblers, Saturday afternoon.

The Tar Heels are still smarting under the lacing that the State matmen handed them last Monday night in Raleigh. This was the first major win that the State team had counted over a conference or state foe in many years. However, contrary to common supposition, the Wolf-pack has one of the crack wrestling teams in the Southern conference and should go far in the tournament, March 3-4.

Carolina's matmen took their hard work well. Besides putting the grapplers through the usual calisthenics, Coach Quinlan sent his proteges through some hard competition on the mat. The men were paired off into small groups, fighting among themselves while Coach Quinlan supervised the matches, personally.

FRESHMAN TEAM INDICATES TOUGH TIME FOR STATE

With Fight Characterizing Boxers State Will Hardly Find Easy Going Saturday.

When the State freshman boxing team visits Chapel Hill Saturday night, it will find Archie Allen's Tar Babies anything but perfect hosts.

Coach Allen has a scrappy bunch of boys down at the Tin Can who are ready to welcome the State frosh with a shower of stiff punches and all the pugs are rarin' to go.

Eugene Eutsler, 118-pounder, has never been in actual combat outside of the intramurals having gotten a forfeit in his scheduled match at V. P. I.; but Eutsler has been engaging in hard training bouts daily with varsity men, and he will be ready for anything State has to offer.

Max Frucht, winner of the intramural 125-pound title, fights in that division on the frosh outfit, and he came through last Saturday with a verdict.

Jim Flaherty dropped the duke in three rounds in his V. P. I. opponent, but Jim has plenty of class and he will bear watching. He, too, has been fighting varsity men in his training bouts and will probably get off on the right foot this week. With Flaherty in the 135-

COUNCIL MAY PURCHASE COVERING FOR FIELD

To avoid a muddy football field, the University athletic council is considering the purchase of a water-proof sectional cover for Kenan stadium for next year. The proposal was taken up at a recent meeting, Charles T. Woolen said today.

Holding down the 145-pound post is Charlie Sutton, winner of the intramural title. Sutton lost his fight at V. P. I., but it was by a narrow margin and he, too, is expected to produce the goods.

Scores Only Knockout Baxter Brown, 155-pounder, scored the only Tar Baby knockout last Saturday night, turning the trick in two rounds.

Morty Ellisberg, 165-pound intramural winner, is one of the brightest prospects of the lot. He came through with a neat victory against V. P. I. and it looks as if a great season is ahead for him. Should there be any change in the 165-pound class, Johnny Owlette, who has good possibilities, will get the call.

Robert Henson and Murray Kanner, the two big boys of the team, both scored in their first ring battle last week. Henson, big and shifty, fights as a light-heavy, while Kanner is in the unlimited class.

TAR BABIES LOSE TOUGH GAME TO STATE FROSH 38-32

Techlets Rally in Second Half to Break 18 to 18 Deadlock And Take Victory.

The Tar Baby basketball squad dropped a close game to the State frosh last night in the Tin Can, 38-32. The contest was the preliminary to the State-Carolina varsity game.

The fray was a very rough one with eighteen personal fouls being called on Coach Dameron's squad necessitating the removal of Moore, Nelson, and McCachren, three first stringers.

First Half Even

The first half was even, the score being 18-18 when play ended. However, in the second half the Tar Babies were unable to meet the swift pace of the Techlets and as a result were nosed out.

Aycock was the outstanding player for the victors, scoring eleven points with three field goals and five successful free throws. Womble also starred for the Raleigh club.

Jim McCachren, although he only tallied three points was the outstanding player on the Tar Baby machine. He gave a dazzling exhibition of floorwork and until he was removed from the game was indirectly responsible for several Tar Baby markers.

ETHERIZED GIRL
floats in air

ILLUSION:

This very old illusion was invented by Indian fakirs. The secret was unearthed in 1849 by the great magician, Robert-Houdin. At that time, ether had just been discovered, and little was known about it. Houdin claimed that he had discovered that this new anesthetic could make people light as air. To prove it, he caused the subject to rise into the air and float apparently suspended. He passed a hoop around the body to show there were no wires or supports.

EXPLANATION:

There are many, many explanations for this old trick. One is that the girl wears a concealed harness, which ends in a socket between her shoulder blades. This is attached to a piston below the stage. The piston is pushed up from below, causing her to rise in the air. The piston is invisible, because it is covered with mirrors which reflect surrounding draperies, similar to the background. The magician can pass the hoop over her body because it is cut in one place. It can be pulled apart for a second when it passes the piston.

TOBACCOS
IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

Another "magic show" is cigarette advertising.

One of its greatest tricks is the illusion that cigarettes can be made miraculously "MILD" through manufacturing methods.

THE EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobaccos require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobaccos.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is why Camels are so mild. This is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet" ...their cool flavor...their non-irritating mildness.

All the natural, ripe goodness of Camel's tobacco is kept fresh for you by the famous air-tight, welded Humidor Pack. Don't remove it.

Leading educators throughout the nation have commended the recitals of Max Montor, celebrated reader and dramatic impersonator, who is to appear here in a recital in the Carolina Playmakers theatre next Tuesday evening, January 24, at 8:45 o'clock. There will be no admission charge.

Montor, who is internationally known for his unusual interpretations of drama and poetry, is now on a tour of leading colleges and universities. He comes here from Davidson, where he will give a recital the previous night.

Among educators who have publicly praised Montor's work are President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University, Dr. R. A. Millikan of the California Institute of Technology, Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, and Dr. Robert Herndon Fife of Columbia University.

Montor is travelling under the auspices of the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation of Philadelphia. The foundation has as its aim the development of cultural relationships between the United States and the German-speaking countries.

Parker Announces New "Y" Programs

Plans are being made by Jesse Parker, president of the freshman friendship council, to have presented at the weekly meetings of the group an entirely new type of program. These new programs will include discussions led by members of the council and addressed by campus celebrities and faculty members.

In addition to the changes in programs, Parker announced yesterday that the meeting place of the council would probably be changed from Gerrard hall to a room in the Y. M. C. A. The change would afford a better chance for individual discussion and business transaction.

NEWSPAPER MEN HEAR J. H. FURAY AND A. S. KEISTER

United Press Official Says That Much of 1933 News Will Deal
With Search for Messiah.

A happy combination of work and entertainment featured yesterday's session of the ninth annual North Carolina Newspaper Institute, which got off to a flying start Wednesday night with Governor Ehringhaus' address.

Yesterday morning the editors and publishers listened to thoughtful and timely addresses by James H. Furay, vice-president of the United Press and general manager of foreign service, who outlined some of the high spots in the news in 1933, and by Dr. Albert S. Keister, professor of economics in the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, who suggested possible new sources of revenue by which the state budget may be balanced. John A. Park, president North Carolina Press Association, was presiding.

The morning session ended in a lively discussion of newspaper topics. In the afternoon there were separate meetings for the weekly and daily groups.

Presiding over the weekly group, R. E. Price, of Rutherfordton, vice-president of the North Carolina Press Association, conducted a round-table discussion. He urged more of the weeklies to join the Audit Bureau of Circulation, pointing out that an effort is being made to secure a representative in New York City to secure more foreign advertising for the weeklies.

With D. Hiden Ramsay of the Asheville Citizen-Times presiding, the daily group discussed the same problems as related to their particular field.

An impromptu feature of the morning session was a short address by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw of the University, who outlined the highlights of a movement just launched by the University with the view to putting thrift education in the public schools of North Carolina. He asked the editors to use their influence to help further such a movement.

At 4:30 o'clock came adjournment, and from then on until late last night the editors were guests of Duke University. Duke put on a program that for instruction and genuine hospitality could hardly have been excelled.

Geology Specimens Attract Attention

The case of quartz minerals, together with the reptile case and the collection dealing with early and fossil man, has been attracting the most attention in the new geological museum, according to Dr. W. F. Prouty, head of the geology department.

This collection of quartz exhibits includes over twenty-five varieties of mineral species and is about equally divided between the crystalline and the amorphous. The names of many gem stones are recognized in the list, such as, amethyst, bloodstone, citrine, chalcedony, agate, carnelian, chrysoprase, rose quartz, smoky quartz, opal, cat's eye, hyalite, and prase.

Twenty-four foreign countries and nearly every state in the union are represented by specimens in the collection.

DEAN DISCUSSES USES OF LIBERAL RELIGION TO MAN

Skinner Continues Lecture Series on New Religious Concepts at Inn Last Night.

"What can liberal religion do for men and women?" asked Professor Clarence R. Skinner in his lecture on liberal religion at the Carolina Inn last night. "The first great service which liberal religion can render is to make their religion harmonious with the rest of their lives. The second great service is progressiveness. Religion is crawling along behind our material life," Skinner asserted. "Finally, liberal religion covers all phases of life, rather than being confined to simply the narrow aspects of individualism."

In elaborating on these points, Professor Skinner said that liberal religion makes possible certain concepts of religion to the modern world which finds it impossible to accept the old literal interpretations. A liberal religion gives a "more rational method of religious thinking to those students who have rejected the older doctrines and interpretations and offers a program for problems of the world," he said.

FORUM ENDORSES NOMINATION FOR VICE-PRESIDENCY

Student Representative Organization Ratifies Nomination of Dr. Louis R. Wilson.

At the meeting of the Union Forum, Wednesday, a resolution to endorse Dr. Louis R. Wilson's nomination as vice-president of the University was unanimously passed.

Dr. Wilson was nominated for vice-presidency December 12, by a committee appointed by O. Max Gardner. If he accepts the nomination, he will take office July first of this year.

Discuss Entertainment Program

Student entertainment programs were discussed. E. C. Daniel, president of the forum, gave an account of the nature and expenditures of the programs this year and asked student advice for the programs of next year. Discussion of a varsity show was postponed.

The text of the resolution, a copy of which was sent to Dr. Wilson, is as follows:

"Be it resolved that the Union Forum, the most representative student organization on the campus, recognize the nomination of Dr. Louis Round Wilson as vice-president as a fitting resumption of his association with the University. It is the earnest hope of this organization that he will accept this highly deserved tribute from those who have known and prospered by his rare abilities as a builder, counsellor, and executive."

Bearing a Mutual Burden

The situation at the University:

The University of North Carolina is inseparably a part of the State of North Carolina. The fortunes of the University are bound to rise and fall with those of the State. Just now, the State is practically destitute.

In the East, farm tenants, and in the West, industrial workers are starved and shivering. Landlords, merchants and mill owners alike are caught between the deep blue sea of taxes and the devil of a mortgage holder. The people are on starvation rations and they demand, through the voice of the legislature, that the State take the same.

Our legislators are frantic. They are certain that there is little money to be had from the people of the State. Yet, they hesitate to undernourish our none-too-hardy institutions. They are torn between reality and fond hope, tortured on the rack of hard circumstance.

The budget bureau has presented its report, recommending drastic economies and salary cuts in every state institution. Unless additional revenue is found, there is no alternative but to slash expenses, the bureau reports. True to the promise of the Democratic party, the commission recommends the repeal of the 15 cents ad valorem tax on property for the support of the six months school. It recommends the refunding of some $2,800,000 in bonds now due, which Governor Ehringhaus insists must be paid. It proposes the diversion of $2,000,000 from the highway fund into the general fund. But it does not recommend a sales tax.

The removal of the 15 cents ad valorem tax will leave a hole of $3,000,000 in the State's purse. Yet, the Democratic legislature is pledged to remove the tax and it is certain of the inadvisability of further crippling farm landowners with more real estate levies. With an eye to the future, it seems wise to retire State bonds as they mature. The diversion of $2,000,000 into the general fund will further weaken the dwindling highway fund, but such help as this money will immediately give seems needed.

It appears then that the budget bureau's report offers the legislature no way out of its dilemma. Of course, they are left the perennial suggestions to "get the money where the money is" or to inaugurate a sales tax. Where the money seems to be in North Carolina is in the tobacco industry, the power companies, and with the millionaires. A direct tax on tobacco manufacturers is likely to drive many of them out of the State, causing us to lose the benefits of their establishment here. Any tax on the power industry would surely be passed on to the consumer, who wants equitable rates more than anything else. As for the millionaires, there are few of them left; an income tax to raise money would have to reach deep into the lower brackets where it would hurt the little man whose safety is the legislature's principal concern just now.

From Tennessee, Mississippi, and Canada come fairy tales of sales taxes that are as slick as pickpockets in extracting small change from the unsuspecting citizenry. The merchants of North Carolina, a powerful group, are opposed to the tax. After their experience with the federal luxury tax, no one can convince them that a sales tax would not be felt. They know the difficulty of collecting the federal levy and the effect it has on their sales.

However, there is a growing belief that the only means of getting additional revenue is to divert it from the only, though somewhat meagre, stream in which money is flowing: to the grocery stores and clothing shops. If state institutions are to be given subsistence above the starvation level, a sales tax will almost inevitably be the means to that end. There are good reasons, ethical as well as economic, for rejecting other proposals, unless North Carolina turns to Socialism or the single tax. How remote that probability is no metaphor can express.

We, the people, the State and the University, must put aside our passions and our prejudices. We must try to appreciate our mutual difficulties and our several needs. Here, at the University, inasmuch as we are selfish it is a selfishness not for ourselves alone but for the people of the whole State. We believe that the future integrity of the State, the quality of its tomorrow's leadership depends upon the proper education of its youth today.

Supported by the assurance of national standing, we claim to have the greatest university in the South, great in what it has done and what it can do if properly maintained. We believe that our legislators will see the wisdom of maintaining the University on a level that will not endanger its position in the nation and its effectiveness in the State.

We are sensible of the plight of the people and the State. Our sense of obligation to the State is fully realized. It cannot be blunted by selfishness. At the same time, we are sure that the justice of our cause is seen by the solons in Raleigh. As long as there is money in the state treasury, the University will receive its proportionate share.—E.C.D.

The editorial board of the DAILY TAR HEEL is pleased to learn that Princeton and Harvard will meet in a hockey game for the first time since 1926 and that an exceptionally close battle is predicted.

The Cinema Looks Up

With much hesitancy and backsliding,—as if fearful of the light of day—the motion picture seems to be emerging from its lowly beginnings to the position of a major art-form in our American civilization.

The passing of the silent film brought forward a new emphasis in the cinema world. A wild search for interesting "drawing room" stories with mass-appeal ensued. Naturally enough the result of these efforts was a mass of mediocre, badly directed sound films, with the novelty of the new technical device looked upon as a factor to compensate for the make-shift productions turned out.

In a short time, however, the movie-goer no longer considered sound a novelty; it was taken for granted. The producers were faced with the problem of providing good entertainment with little opportunity for blood and thunder sequences. At times they were unsuccessful at this, but with the improvement in technique their problem was solved. Signalized by such productions as "In Old Arizona" outdoor settings became possible and a much wider field was opened up. Both the novel and the stage could now be used.

All this time an influx of stage personalities was taking place in Hollywood. A new dramatic atmosphere—with its insistence upon art "for art's sake"—began to diffuse throughout the studios. A few guiding lights in the directorial field such as Lubitch, Borzage, and Mamoulin endeavored by means of striking camera effects and sound apparatus to create well-developed moods in the spectator. The influence of the German and Russian studios left a marked impression on American methods and treatments.

Thus we see a broadening out of the functions of the cinema which bodes well for the future. Even now, however, only the surface possibilities have been scratched. Perhaps the greatest potentialities of the motion picture lie in the field of education.

Today the chief function of the photoplay is to glorify the individual personality of the actor and his role; tomorrow it is likely that a higher conception of its social usefulness will have been achieved.—V.J.L.

An Educated Man?

Up to recently in our history it was rare that one found an educated man. Colleges were long regarded as for the professional man or the chosen few while high school represented the peak of the average man's attainment. The doctor, minister, lawyer, and teacher formed the backbone of the cultured class while business men boasted of being self made. Then came the craze for college education until the man of today confesses with reluctance that he is not the holder of a degree from one of our thousands of colleges.

The growing demand for a diploma has resulted in colleges filled by hordes of young people unfit for or uninterested in higher learning but anxious to postpone life's struggle and then enter upon it armed with some imaginary advantage hidden in the mystic letters B.A. or B.S.

Under America's utilitarian trend our college system has undergone a transformation that that would cause early educators to turn in their graves. The classics, literature, music, and art are given less and less attention while such cultural courses as Salesmanship and Purchase, Business French, and Principles of Marketing are permitted to form the major part of a man's education.

It is not wrong to prepare men and women for the struggle to survive. The economic structure becomes increasingly complex and more and more expert training is required. These new commercial occupations are worthy of the same preparation given to the professions, they should draw their men from graduates trained in graduate schools. Some of our leading colleges recognize that a cultural and a technical training cannot be combined if any value is to resolve from either. Many, it may be argued, cannot afford three years of graduate work, but what of the doctor and lawyer. Furthermore this fact will serve to cut down an oversupply of experts who all obviously cannot find jobs. If American culture is to advance we must divorce it from the business training of our undergraduate schools.

In the course of America's enslavement to the Almighty dollar we have seen what small culture we ever possessed dwindle away. America's future is not to be predicted. She may vanish in this decade or in some distant age. But when the man of some far future day looks back upon the Radio Age we will stand out as the Philistine nation, no great contributions to literature, music, philosophy, or art, but an animal-like adoration of the machine, big business, and the dollar.—J.F.A.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Proving That Knighthood's Still in Flower

The column by Mr. Berryman in Wednesday's DAILY TAR HEEL concerning smoking among coeds apparently arrived at a definite conclusion without sufficient reason for doing so. It stated that college puts a definite stamp on girls who don't smoke. We think this statement is highly exaggerated since such a very few on the campus know whether a co-ed smokes or not. If all knew they would not necessarily think very strongly about it either way.

The writer stated that most boys think it peculiar if a girl doesn't smoke. We disagree with this statement also. Most boys are neutral in the matter, and, too there are some boys who do not smoke.

If a girl doesn't enjoy smoking and doesn't believe in sham, why should she smoke?

We conclude that "Mary" in Mr. Berryman's column was a very unusual girl.

Don't worry co-eds; it may be "tough to be famous," but you don't have to smoke to be popular.

Another North Carolina First

When Butler College, at Indianapolis, announced a short time ago that a course in preparation for marriage would be offered, we innocently assumed that this was the first time such a course could be taken by eligibles. But we now learn that North Carolina has that honor. At least, the students at Chapel Hill had the opportunity a few years ago, and the Butlerites are not the first.

The professors in Indianapolis should be glad to learn that a text suitable for their classes in matrimonial training will soon be available. Professor E. R. Groves, of Chapel Hill, has his book ready. Perhaps it is out now. At any rate, it grew out of the North Carolina course, which has been given for the last eight years, and contains thirty-one chapters, with such stimulating titles as "Problems of Courtship" and "Early Marriage, Its Advantages and Disadvantages."

The course originated at the request of the senior men. So it is natural that in the new text, derived from their discussions as much as from the professor's instruction, there should be explanations of "The Strain of the Wedding." Etiquette and the cost of the wedding have their place, too, but they do not figure so largely. The prospective bride is not left out of the picture entirely. She comes in under "Woman's Ambitions and Marriage Adjustment."

PAMPHLETS BY GRAHAM MAY STILL BE OBTAINED

The pamphlets on "The Situation at the University" by President Frank Porter Graham may still be obtained at the office of the DAILY TAR HEEL on request. Dr. Graham has included in the pamphlet a survey of the expenditures of the University, and excerpts from various periodicals of the state commenting on the service the University is rendering to the state at large. He has written a resume of the situation as it concerns the budget of the University, with suggestions for a budget which will enable the University to carry on its work in keeping with its high standard of past years.

Without disputing Chapel Hill's claim to the first course in marriage preparation, we like to recall that Punch, years ago, conducted a "Department of Advice for Those About to Commit Matrimony." It consisted of the single word: "Don't."

Phantoms Polish Up Offense For Deacon Tilt Saturday Night

Coach Shepard Wants Better Passing and More Aggressive Play Under Baskets.

RESERVES IN SCRIMMAGE

Chandler Shows to Advantage in Lengthy Session Yesterday At Forward and Guard.

Having no complaint on the defense the White Phantoms displayed against State Wednesday night, Coach Bo Shepard made it clear that if the passing and following up of shots did not improve before the game with Wake Forest in the Raleigh auditorium Saturday night, the Deacons might turn their threat into a win.

Coach Shepard was proud of the defensive play of the whole team but deplored the bad passes and the failure to get the ball off the backboard.

Chandler Impressive

In the session yesterday he scrimmaged his second and third teams in a lengthy drill to get a look at his reserve material. Stuart Chandler turned in the best performance, scoring freely from the guard position and showing improved floor play. As a result of his flashy work, Coach Shepard gave Chandler a chance at forward on the second five. Stuart continued his play, bagging several beautiful crisp shots and showing speed on the floor.

The starting five of Weathers and Hines, forwards; Brandt, center; and McCachren and Aitken, guards; and Beale, who substituted for Brandt were given a rest yesterday from scrimmaging. The varsity worked on their offense at length though at the end of the session in a snappy drill and then the second combination featuring Chandler at both forward and guard went through their offensive attack.

Another light workout is set for today and the team will leave tomorrow for Raleigh to meet Wake Forest in the last of the two-game series. The Deacons dropped their game with Duke 34-16 earlier in the week, but "Footsie" Knight who refereed the fray said that Wake Forest was clearly off their stride then. They will be ready Saturday to avenge the heart-breaking three point defeat they suffered over here last Saturday.

TRACK MEN BEGIN WINTER TRAINING

Coaches Say Men Need Conditioning That Only Hard Work Can Give; Work on Field.

With the passing of inclement weather, the Carolina track team has returned to taking its regular outdoor workouts on the Emerson field track.

There is only a small number of men taking their regular workouts while a larger number of track candidates have not yet reported for the outdoor work since the resumption of outside work. Some of these men are still convalescing from bad colds or influenza, while there are still some men holding equipment who have not reported since the beginning of the winter quarter. The Tar Heels' track coaches are expecting all men to report daily, and are requesting better attendance for daily workouts.

Officials are rapidly getting the track back into good shape, filling in the bad holes with cinders and doing some much needed grading. The athletic field has been graded for the winter football workouts.

There were some time trials yesterday, but all the men showed lack of conditioning and form which will come only with more hard work.

The Ring Worm

By Morrie Long

North Carolina adherents of the fisticuff art will have opportunity galore to see several Southern Conference battlers in action this season. This Saturday when State clashes with Coach Rowe's mit slingers the Raleigh team will include the 145 southern champion, Garner. Another outstanding slugger from the same institution is Bill Donnaway, 155-pound sophomore, who has never lost a fight in college.

Number one man in the 115 pound class in the southern loop is Captain Lloyd of Duke who throws gloves from all directions. The Blue Devil leader went up a weight this year, and as a consequence will lock horns with Captain Levinson. Rip Scott who packs a wallop in either mit is another first class fighter.

The impending Virginia-Carolina bouts should be the best battles of the year what with two Southern Conference champions listed in the ranks of the Cavaliers. Bob Goldstein at the conclusion of the boxing year found himself recipient of two crowns in different weights, National Intercollegiate champ in the 135 class and southern holder in the 125 division. Goldstein made the Olympic team and ad-

STATE BOXERS TO FIGHT TAR HEELS WITH SOPHOMORES

Three Flashy New Men Will Invade Carolina Ring With State Team Tomorrow.

The State College boxing team will invade Chapel Hill tomorrow night with a team that has three star sophomores who bid fair to gain ring glory this winter.

Bill Dunaway, Jack Fabri, and Ken Stephens were undefeated last year as freshmen and Dunaway and Fabri both got off to flying starts a week ago last night by winning their bouts against Washington and Lee. Stephens did not see action.

Dunaway, who fights in the 155-pound class, prior to his fight at Lexington last week, had met no one who could last more than half a round against him. Pound of W. and L. made the hard hitting Bill travel at a furious clip to eke out a 3-round verdict.

Fabri, 165-pounder, had to go an extra round before he got the decision from Short of W. and L.

Ken Stephens, the third member of the soph triumvirate, lost his spot to J. O. Hall who was defeated by Martin of W. and L. Stephens, however, may work against the Tar Heel 175-pounder, Peyton Brown.

Turner Bilisoly, although he lost his W. and L. bout, is said to be a flashy bantam and he will face either Cliff Glover or Pete Ivey tomorrow night.

TAR BABIES MEET MT. PLEASANT IN TIN CAN TONIGHT

Freshman Cagers Should Offer Strong Opposition to Visitors; Phelps Ineligible.

With one win and one loss to its credit, the Tar Baby basketball team is scheduled to meet the Mt. Pleasant Falcons at 8:00 o'clock tonight in the Tin Can.

Carolina's freshman cagers easily won over Wake Forest's first year team in their opening game, but against the yearling team from State, the Tar Babies were not so successful. The freshmen started the contest without Red Phelps, star guard who is ineligible, and then had to play nearly half the game without three more regulars.

Phelps Still Ineligible

Phelps is still ineligible and will not see action tonight. Raymond Glasgow will probably start at Phelps' guard, having been promoted to the place in the State game. Glasgow was the only Tar Baby to play the whole contest Wednesday night. Murry Kanner and Bill Rankin have been staging a battle for the first string center position with Rankin probably getting the call tonight as a result of his play against State.

The rest of the team will be made up of starters of the first two games. Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson, two speed boys and dead shots, will be at the two forwards, while Jim McCachren, crack guard who gave the spectators plenty of thrills Wednes-

HEEL GRAPPLERS WILL MEET V. P. I.

Tech Meet in Tin Can Saturday; Tyree Lost to Frosh Team On Eligibility Rule.

Coach "Chuck" Quinlan sent his proteges through their last hard workout of the week, yesterday afternoon preparing his mat charges for their wrestling meet with the V. P. I. grapplers, Saturday.

Yesterday's bill of work was unusually hard. The wrestlers were sent through some hard calisthenic drills prior to their scrimmages on the mat. During these little matches, several candidates appeared. These men may be given a chance to show their abilities under fire in the Tech meet, Saturday afternoon.

The Virginia club is another strong opponent on Carolina's mat card, but if the dope bucket can predict after its startling upset last Saturday, the Tar Heels should easily take the Gobblers into camp. Last Monday, the Carolina varsity and freshman clubs, invaded the State lair, doped a heavy favorite; but the State teams provided a (Continued on last page) day night, will be at the other guard post.

Mt. Pleasant will bring a strong team to face the Tar Babies. They have already seen action twice this week, having lost to Wake Forest in a thriller, 26-24, and downing Louisburg easily, 34-18. Holt and Fleming, forwards; McCarn, center; and Taylor and Hine, guards is the probable starting line-up.

CHI PSI DEFEATS PHI DELTA THETA IN EXCITING TILT

Betas, Zeta Psi's, and Best House Also Score Wins to Remain In Undefeated Class.

Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, and Zeta Psi scored intramural basketball victories yesterday to take their third wins of the season and keep pace with T. E. P., which gained its third win earlier in the week. None of these teams have suffered a defeat as yet.

Phil Lawrence led Chi Psi's cage team to its third win of the season when he scored thirteen points as his team downed Phi Delta Theta, a hitherto undefeated outfit, 26-18, in an exciting game. Hershey, with ten points, was the leading scorer on the losing team.

Zeta Psi's Advance

Zeta Psi's win was at the expense of Kappa Sigma, which had won both its previous engagements. The score was 33-14, with the Zeta Psi quintet having little difficulty in gaining the decision. Bus Arthur, of the winners, and May, of the losers, tied for the individual scoring leadership with eight points, while Clark and Pratt, of Zeta Psi, scored seven each. White added four to the losing team's total with two field goals.

Phi Delta Chi proved stern opposition in Beta Theta Pi's path to its third win of the season, but when Billy Tenille went Coach Quinlan had to conscript a boxer in order to fill the 118-pound weight which Tyree had seemed to have clinched. Tyree has had some eligibility difficulties, however, and will not be able to wrestle Southern conference foes until next year. The new addition to the ranks is Harold Blalock, scrappy fighter, who is showing promise although lacking in wrestling experience. He is slated to start his first match in the freshman meet Saturday.

The other men announced by the mat coach in his tentative starting line-up are: Snowden, 125; Holman, 135; Miller, 145; Captain Shipman, 155; Holland, Summer, or Bender, 165; 175, Ranson; and Leonard, unlimited. The varsity line-up has several possible changes: 115, Hussey; 125, Mathewson; 135, Davis; 145, Hiller; 165, Grier, Pickett, or Spell; 175, Thompson or Auman; unlimited, Captain Percy Idol.

W. G. Shipman was elected to captain the first year men prior to their match with the State frosh. Shipman started off well as captain, showing the way for his teammates by gaining a fall over Whitehead in 1:04 minutes. Shipman was one of the best guards on the freshman team last fall.

His supporting cast in this story of the reincarnation of an Egyptian mummy includes Zita Johann, David Manners, Arthur Byron, Edward Van Sloan and Bramwell Fletcher.

Dean Clarence R. A local committee has arranged a special Sunday evening service. Dean Skinner's sermon will be on the subject "What's Coming in Religion."

The Sunday evening meeting is outside the series of talks in the seminar meetings since it is strictly a religious service.

Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock Dean Skinner will preach at the Chapel Hill Baptist church.

Best House went on another scoring spree as it smothered Mitchell House by the tremendous margin of 57-6. The winners have not scored lower than fifty points in either of their games to date. Crouch, with sixteen, and Leonard, with fifteen, were the leading point-getters for Best House, while Ross and Taylor made all the Mitchell House points.

These lectures, being sponsored by the council of the Baptist student union, are to be delivered by Mrs. T. B. White, one of the Southern Baptist leaders. The subject of Mrs. White's talk will be, "The Adventure of the Church."

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT

Ray Armstrong, the new second vice-president of the General Alumni Association, is superintendent of schools in Goldsboro. Before removing to Goldsboro in 1927 he had served with success as public school executive in Greensboro, Kinston, Monroe and Gastonia.

Like Judge Parker and Dr. Haywood, president and first vice-president of the Alumni Association, respectively, Armstrong is a member of Golden Fleece, senior honor order at the University. He managed the varsity football team of 1916, made Phi Beta Kappa, and partly worked his way through the University.

Armstrong entered military service in May, 1918, and was later commissioned a second lieutenant and stationed at Camp Funston, Kansas. Since the war he has been in public school work, and was promoted to be superintendent of the Goldsboro school after having served there as principal of the high school for several years. Also he is now president of the Kiwanis club of Goldsboro.

Captain Charlie Garner, who fights as a welter, is perhaps the most formidable man on the team. Last week, Garner stacked up against Mincher of W. and L. who had given him a stormy evening last year. The fight was once more a very close one, going into an extra round with Garner showing lots of class to take the decision.

Tearns, State's heavy, along with his mates, had a hard time of it at Lexington, finally losing a three-round verdict. He will face Platt Landis and the result of their meeting should provide plenty of fire-works.

With Coaches Rowe and Beatty using three sophomores apiece on their teams, freshman spectators had better not get too close to the ring.

Slocum is himself a flute player of long experience and has led his orchestra through three consecutive state music competitions as first prize winner.

Following Stringfield's solo rendition the orchestra is to offer the familiar Shepherd's Hey by Percy Grainger, who appeared here in December as soloist and guest conductor with the major organization of the symphony society.

Tickets for Friday evening's concert may be obtained at Alfred Williams company. The price of admission is one dollar, but student tickets are obtainable for fifty cents.

vanced to the semi-finals. With Reiss as conference winner of the light heavies, Virginia offers another genuine college gladiator who stands the crowd on its head.

Captain Marty Levinson, the Connecticut Clouter, is heading a team which should make quite a stir in Southern Conference arenas. Elected captain last week-end, Levinson has compiled an excellent record while on Carolina's ring team, his victories numbering twenty-one and his losses only five. All the setbacks were administered at the hands of southern or national intercollegiate veterans, Martin of Duke, Stoop of Penn State, each getting decisions, while Goldstein of Virginia has three wins over Marty.

For the first time in a long while Penn State doesn't seem to have the fighters she used to have. Loss of Lewis and Stoop, national intercollegiate champions in the 145 and 112 respectively will be hard to fill. Carolina mitmen will have a chance to even the score for the losses Penn State's battlers have handed them these last few years when they journey up to State College in February.

WORD WOOD AND J. H. GRAY SPEAK TO FORUM GROUP

Banker and Economist Point Out Need for Uniform and Stringent Bank Laws.

Word H. Wood, University alumnus and president of the American Trust Company, and Dr. John H. Gray, former president of the American Economic Association, lectured Thursday night in Gerrard hall on "Money and Banking." This lecture was the second of a series of eight sponsored by the Open Forum discussion group. Both speakers showed the need for federal control of banks through the Federal Reserve System.

The Charlotte banker, speaking first, stated that the last three years had been the most unusual that banking had ever seen, for "the bankers, both good and bad, have had their pride taken from them." He showed that our present banking troubles are not new by quoting from two English bankers of over a hundred years ago who were having the same troubles that the bankers of today are having. These English bankers attributed the failure of banks to maladministration, which, according to the speaker, is just as true today. This maladministration is due to poor executives who may be eliminated by examinations similar to those for physicians and lawyers.

"For a bank to be sound," said the speaker, "it must keep at least fifty per cent of the depositors' money in liquid reserves, for the prime purpose of the

COMMITTEE WILL HEAR PLEAS FOR APPROPRIATIONS

Representative of University Will Speak to Joint Committee of General Assembly.

Hearings will be granted the University of North Carolina and other state institutions of higher learning in the state next Tuesday by the joint legislative appropriations committee of the general assembly. A representative of the University will appear before this committee to present the University's case.

Numerous other state departments and bureaus have appeared before the committee already, in most cases arguing that the items in the budget appropriations bill are inadequate. The joint group will revise or authorize the various departmental appropriations and present them at a later date to the General Assembly for ratification.

In his budget request last month President Frank P. Graham, of the University, asked for $691,924 as the annual state appropriation necessary for the maintenance of the University. The budget commission, however, recommended that the University's annual appropriations for the biennium beginning June 30 amount to only $390,570.

Succeeding Dr. W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration, Dr. Howard W. At the meeting in Raleigh Thursday several papers were read before the commission, including the report of the retiring chairman in which Dr. Jackson reviewed the progress of the negro race during the last sixty-five years.

Dr. Jackson suggested that everything should be done to aid the negro, to see that every white child and negro child be given every opportunity to gain advancement. Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the Institute of Social Research mentioned in his paper the effects of the depression upon the negro. One interesting factor which Dr. Johnson brought up was the fact that the major-

Carolina Salon Ensemble Will Appear at Duke University Sunday Evening.

The Carolina salon ensemble will make its first out-of-town appearance of this quarter at the Duke Memorial church in Durham, Sunday evening, January 29, according to an announcement by Thor Johnson, conductor of the ensemble.

Dr. H. S. Dyer, head of the local music division and musical director of the Durham church, has arranged the concert as one of a series of special musical recitals which he plans to offer each month.

Johnson will present a program of classical and semi-classical compositions ranging in date of composition from the eighteenth century to the present.

Featured on the program will be a duet by David Bennett, flutist, and Paul Schalert, horn player, with accompaniment by the entire ensemble, and a composition of the American composer Clokey, Grandmother Knitting, which has been arranged for the ensemble by Herbert Hazelman.

COUNTRY PAPERS WILL TAKE NEW PLACE, SAYS BALL

Editor of Charleston Daily Deliver Final Address at Last Session of Institute.

A new type of civilization "in which the country weekly and the small town daily, in their totality, will outweigh the large town and city press as a factor in state and national affairs" was foreseen here yesterday by Colonel William Ball, editor of the Charleston News and Courier, who delivered the principal address at the final session of the ninth annual North Carolina Newspaper Institute.

Colonel Ball, who spoke from the experience of one in the newspaper game for forty-two years, as country editor, city editor, managing editor, journalism professor, and editorial writer, said the changed conditions which he foresaw would be the natural result of a "back to the land" movement which is already under way.

"Steam engines are not longer drawing the people together in a few cities," he declared. "A thousand horsepower is now distributed over a thousand square miles. Anybody's acre is a factory site, whether it be on the river bank or by the shoals or not.

Diffusion of Population

"If the republic is to last, it must be re-ordered, and the re-ordering processes are already going on," Colonel Ball asserted. "The upshot is that the re-ordering of the republic means in the

CITIZENS CALLED FOR DISCUSSION OF CRISIS ISSUES

Winston-Salem "Journal" Calls Meeting at Raleigh to Discuss Educational Problems.

Colonel Santford Martin, editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, issued an announcement of a citizen's mass meeting to be held in Raleigh January 31 for the purpose of considering the present crisis in public education before the Thursday night session of the newspaper institute which held its mid-winter meeting here during the past week.

The announcement reads: "A group of citizens called by the North Carolina Parent-Teachers association for the purpose of considering the present crisis in public education hereby issues a call to the people of North Carolina to attend a mass meeting to be held in Raleigh January 31, at 2:30 o'clock."

President Frank P. Graham appeared before the Press Institute meeting, giving information concerning the present situation at the University and the proposed cuts in the state budget as related to higher education.

Members of the state legislature will be invited to the meeting in order to gain a popular view of the situation confronting education in the state.

James H. Furay States Importance Of College Education Is Cultural

Vice-President of United Press Believes That Young Men Planning To Enter Journalism Will Be as Much Benefitted by Culture as by Practical Courses.

(By J. J. Sugarman)

All things being equal, the graduate of the journalism school would receive a position from James H. Furay, vice-president of the United Press, in preference to a candidate with a non-academic background. "He'd know the fundamentals at least," said Furay in an interview with the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday.

However, in his opinion these fundamentals of newspaper work are less important to the aspiring journalist than the acquisition of the broadest cultural background possible. For this reason, he advocates a thorough liberal arts training before entering a school of journalism.

Schools Improve Newspapers

Admitting the value of practical teaching by experienced professors, Furay believes that the schools of journalism, which are still in their infancy, are operating on principles which will deliver to the newspaper world a superior product. In addition to instruction in the routine work, they inculcate in their students a higher ethical standard.

"The business is becoming more gentlemanly," he commented. "Thirty years ago it was a common belief among newspapermen that they couldn't write unless they drank. To-day that has all changed. We dismiss men for drunkenness, because we demand accuracy and speed

BUCCANEER STAFF PROPOSES CHANGE IN ELECTION PLAN

Members of Publication Move To Place Power of Election of Editor in Hands of Staff.

At a meeting of the Carolina Buccaneer staff Thursday night, a motion was made and passed by a unanimous vote of the art and editorial departments of that publication that a change be made in the present plan of electing the editor of the humor magazine, so as to place the election in the hands of the staff. The proposal was formally drawn up and two copies made—one being sent to the president of the student body and student council, and the second appears elsewhere on this page.

According to the motion the present arrangement of selecting the editor of that publication is "both unfair and unsatisfactory." It further declared that "the staff members are in a better position to decide who should control this publication than the few individuals who boss the nomination of candidates."

According to Editor Bobbie Mason, the Carolina Buccaneer is the only humor publication of any size in the country which still elects its editor by popular vote, all of the others having long ago abolished that method of selection.

The practice of having the editor of publications other than the humor magazines elected by the staff is practiced quite extensively in many sections of the country and is a rather standard practice in the middle west.

Charleston Newspaper Man Says Nation Needs Competent Leaders

William Watts Ball, Editor of Charleston News and Courier, Is Strong Advocate of Provincialism; But Sees Need for Revamping Present Machinery.

(By Don Shoemaker)

William Watts Ball, LL.D., is a true Charlestonian. It is reflected in the editorial pages of his famed Charleston News and Courier. It shines forth in his masterly case for the democracy of South Carolina, The State That Forgot. As a man he is a living example of the spirit of old Charleston, or such it appeared in an interview with the DAILY TAR HEEL in a drawing room at the Carolina Inn yesterday morning.

An exponent of provincialism (in the geographic sense) in the south and defender of its intellectuality, Ball is nevertheless a patriotic American. He sees democracy with both the big and little "d" in a state of chaos due to lack of leadership and stringent adherence to the altruistic tenets of statesmanship.

South Needs Leaders

"The south," he said, after we had been courteously invited to draw up a chair and forewarned that this was his first interview, "is looking for a man to lead her out of discontent and despair. We suffer from a lack of political opinion. There are, of course, a few men in congress who are statesmen. The rest are worrying more about federal appointments than the condition of the country."

Dr. Ball or "the Colonel," as his colleagues term him, has no panacea for the cares of state. He points out no specific cure, as his editorial declaim, but he feels that the way to good government lies in the release of the office holder from the predatory voting public. "We mob our representatives," he stated, quoting specific incidents of massed interference of the citizenry in this and other states against legislature of which it was entirely ignorant. "One move toward individualism on the part of our solons brings the cries of the voting mob to the fore."

Journalistic Training

Questioned as to education for journalism, a moot question for all inveterate newspapermen, Ball reiterated the views of his colleagues of the Newspaper Institute in believing that a cultural background should eclipse the training of the journalism school. "Individualism in journalism," he stated, "is fearfully lacking. It can best be developed in a groundwork of the type of culture offered in liberal arts colleges."

Colonel Ball is a living example of all he professes. Gaining his start in the newspaper game in 1890 through the purchase of a small weekly newspaper, he turned less than three years later to the daily field and launched the background for his career which has culminated in the editorship of the Charleston News and Courier. He was at one time professor of journalism at the University of South Carolina, the institution from which he graduated.

THE BUCCANEER'S PROPOSAL

The art and editorial staffs of the Carolina Buccaneer, realizing that the present system of selecting an editor is both unfair and unsatisfactory, move that the staff members be allowed to determine their own editor. We feel that this method will guarantee the election of the proper editor, since the staff members are in a better position to decide who should control this publication than are the few individuals who boss the nomination of candidates and the student body at large which votes without knowing the merits of those running for office.

BOBBIE MASON.

A Challenge

To the Citizenry

The budget measure before the general assembly recommends an appropriation for the University of only $390,570 for 1933-34, a cut of $134,817 as compared to the last appropriation made. From all indications it appears that the brunt of the rigid economy policy which the state is trying to enforce will be borne at the expense of North Carolina education.

The general attitude toward retrenchment of school expenditures in this state has been one of indifference to its consequences. Mr. Jule Warren of Raleigh, secretary of the North Carolina Education association, has pointed out that in comparison with the years 1928-29, "we are now teaching 83,000 more children with 1,220 less teachers for 14½ more days, and we are spending $3,000 less money." These figures include all public schools in North Carolina, and they show the extent to which "economy" has been felt during the past few years. Of course, 1929 is a long way from 1932, when considered from the financial standpoint. But the steady diminishing of public school maintenance will have its effect.

And its effect, like economy in the budget measure, will be indirectly felt by the University. It has been stated recently that poor teaching conditions in high schools have been responsible for the decrease in the ability of the average freshman here to do college work.

Yet a news article in the News and Observer some time ago intimated that opposition to cutting teachers' salaries was based on reasons purely sentimental, that considering the 20,000 teachers in North Carolina, there was plenty of room for economy.

The policy of the University, or of any other educational organization in the state, has never been recalcitrant to legislative action on this subject. There is, however, a movement under way at present to organize discussion of what has been termed "the present crisis in public education." There will be a mass meeting at Raleigh on January 31 of citizens interested in this measure. It will be conducted by leaders of the Parent-Teachers' Association. And whatever may be its ultimate purpose, if it can arouse public opinion to a true consideration of the state of education in North Carolina, its work will have been well done.—A.T.D.

Giving Way to

The Inevitable

Within the last few years a decided change has crept gradually over Carolina. Slowly and imperceptibly it came, giving no warning and causing no comment. Finding a student body unaware and unprepared to resist, the transformation fastened itself firmly and an amazed group of two thousand young men are suddenly realizing that this is a co-ed school. Beguiled and enchanted by the beauty and charm of the van guard sent purposely to accomplish that fell mission, the innocent youths of Chapel Hill occupied in enraptured enjoyment of the new comers were totally unaware what was going on and fell ready and willing victims to the invasion.

Now it is too late to correct the evil foisted upon an unsuspecting student body. Girls are everywhere. In halls and corridors that once resounded only to the manly tread of Carolina men and stately professors reverberates now the dainty trip of female feet. In the time honored class rooms the squeak of girlish laughter violates the sanctity of learning and often alas does their presence impede the narration of some choice joke such as once warmed the hearts of the Carolina gentlemen in the midst of their arduous pursuit of knowledge. Nor is the arboretum safe! Where once a young man might go and study the night life of the Elodea albi-caulis his attention now is often diverted by some beauteous companion less interested in botany than in other natural sciences.

It is a dismal outlook, the young ladies have come determined to stay and it is a hopeless task to expel them. Many of them have ensnared susceptible swains and converted them to their iniquitous cause. Some revenge has been wreaked by the entrance of males into the enemy stronghold at Greensboro, but that does not help the situation here. There is no course left us but to shed a last tear to the dear dead days and extend to our fair conquerors a hearty welcome and best wishes for lots of luck at Chapel Hill.—J.F.A.

Learning To Live

Among the many accusations which have been heaped upon the theories and practice of modern education is that of overspecialization. Here, as elsewhere, it all depends upon the point of view. What an intellectual Christian will get from his four years' pilgrimage through a university depends upon whether he looks on a university as a training school whose sole function is to give him the tools whereby he may earn a living, or whether he sees in it a place where he may learn to live.

Living is a fine art which requires more study and training than the memorization of French verbs. No man can truly be said to be educated who knows merely his trade, whether it be law, medicine, or carpentry. He should learn something of the world in which he lives, and in so doing find a deeper understanding of his own life. Even an ant knows enough of the world to keep alive, and even enjoys at times a certain prosperity.

So the prime purpose of our University is to give us something more than just a knowledge of physics, chemistry or literature, to save us from the philosophy of the ant.

Not only the University but Chapel Hill as well has much to offer those who are willing to take it. Chapel Hill has long been known as the seat of culture and learning in the south, an enviable reputation. During the past week there have been many opportunities for Carolina students to broaden themselves, to dip, however lightly, into the fields of economics, philosophy, and music. On the menu there were the Open Forum discussions on banking, Professor Clarence Skinner's lectures on science, philosophy, and the concert of the North Carolina Little Symphony.

The student who never ventures beyond the classroom in his intellectual life is overlooking the fundamental purpose of his university career. We come here not to learn to make a living, but to learn to live.—V.C.R.

Something

To Toy With

Not many years hence tourists and globe-trotters will be crossing the Atlantic in "stratoplanes" with less risk to their limbs and peace of mind than is incurred in crossing a large modern city in an automobile, if we can turn our minds with any credulity to the prophecies of Professor Auguste Piccard, scientist and explorer of the stratosphere. It was indeed a golden picture which the professor painted when he spoke of the joys attendant to soaring above the atmosphere in his palatial stratoplane, but the world scarcely heard his voice. The general public, even in so progressive an intellectual center as Chapel Hill, smiled indulgently and passed it by with a shrug.

It was not so many years ago that Watt announced to the world that he could take a toy run by steam and make out of it an engine capable of accomplishing useful work. The steam engine had been known since the time of Hero, the Greek philosopher, but no one had thought of making anything useful out of it. The world laughed at Watt, but not for long. Today steam is a powerful factor in our lives.

Bell was pooh-poohed when he said that someday he would stand in New York and talk to his friends in Chicago. Edison was ridiculed when he dreamed of the electric light. The Wright brothers were probably laughed at more than any other inventors when they proposed to build a machine that would carry them through the air. Yet today these men sit in important niches in our Hall of Fame.

We do not mean to imply by these remarks that we predict fulfillment for Professor Piccard's promises, nor even that they seem within the bounds of reason. But is it not a thought to toy with? We of today are too apt to sit back and feel that man has reached the heights of scientific achievement, that there are no more worlds for him to conquer. Alexander, too, thought there were no more worlds to conquer. Man has just begun to explore the universe in which lie hidden many more worlds. Let us wonder and doubt, but never shrug and pass things by.—V.C.R.

Signs on the campus of Washington and Jefferson College read: "Please walk on the grass." The president, Ralph C. Hutchinson, explained that he himself enjoyed walking on the grass, and that he was more interested in the students than in the lawn.—Oklahoma Daily.

Testimony

There is, it seems, trouble out at the University of Kentucky. It began when the editor of the Kentucky Kernel accused a student council member of slipping some extra ballots into an election box. When the accuser and the accused met under official circumstances, a bystander reported the instance of the editor's statement to the council member, whereupon the culprit countered, "He didn't see me. He wasn't around at the time!" All of which is apropos of nothing at all, except that it smacks of a famous ruse employed recently by a prominent lawyer who was trying a man accused of following the ancient and now expeditious profession of bootlegging.

"Are you a bootlegger?" demanded the attorney.

"That's my business," responded the prisoner, sourly.

"And," rejoined the questioner, smilingly, "have you any other business?"

Crime

The efforts of Chicago's police to track down gunmen and baby slayers to make them pay income tax, the trials of London's bobbies with the Fu Manchu-like characters of Limehouse—all cannot hold a candle to the frequent bewildering cases which come before the Paris police. Some days ago, notes a news item, a nondescript Frenchman appeared before the Prefect of Police and desired to have his identity ascertained. All his papers seemed to be in order with the exception of an amazing document among his maze of passports and legal papers. It was a death certificate issued by the Hospital of St. Louis certifying that the holder was dead. Prefect Chiappe was perturbed, right perturbed, if we may be allowed to make it stronger. Nothing, it was decided, could be done about it. The dead man was liable to no debts, he could not be hailed into court for a crime, no matter the proportions.

We have nothing else to add other than that possibly this is a classic example of the old adage "He's dead on his feet."

Spirit

In our favorite "Little Examples That the Spirit of We'll Do or Die for Dear Old Rutgers is Not Dead Department," we must add this bit of collegialism. It comes from the University of California, out in the football country.

The Pan Hellenic Council, a group of representatives from campus sororities passed the following resolution: "WHEREAS, the men at this University have been criticised for timidity in ascertaining their rights, and have been accused of being dominated by the female influence, and

WHEREAS, the women of this University feel that the morale of the men will be strengthened if they isolate themselves from women's company for two weeks and grow beards as well as wear their oldest clothes, and

WHEREAS, the women are prompted by a growing curiosity to see the men as they actually are without any camouflage, and THEREFORE, we, the members of the Pan Hellenic council wish to go on record as endorsing, approving, and heartily anticipating this "Non-shaving, do as they please attitude of the men."

SPEAKING

the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor,

THE DAILY TAR HEEL: Last Thursday night I happened to be one of the delighted audience of Dr. Mitchell and Dr. Miller in Gerrard hall. I was so interested and enthused over both of the speakers that I took rather copious notes. However, realizing my human failings, I looked forward eagerly to the account of the talks in THE DAILY TAR HEEL in order to supplement my amateurish efforts. So on Saturday morning I was pleasingly gratified to see the awaited news item. But on closer examination I was very surprised to see in the sub-head in heavy type "Lectures State Salvation Lies in 'Long Range Planning'." This surprise was occasioned by heavy type in my note book such as "Salvation depends on more short range planning and less long range planning," says Dr. Miller. Obviously one of us was wrong. Realizing, as I have said, that I was a mere student and my disagreeing authority was that widely known student publication, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and further realizing that the disagreement centered around as important a part of a write-up as the headline, I easily persuaded myself that I must have been in error. But on questioning a few others who were present I found that their notes coincided with mine. So I am forced to state that I think the DAILY TAR HEEL made a slight error in their headlines. When I had read further in the article I found the writer himself to contradict his headline, so I felt more than ever sure that I must be right and the DAILY TAR HEEL must be wrong.

A headline, after all, is that part of a paper which is read mostly. And when a statement in it is quoted absolutely contradictory to what the statement actually meant, I think it merely fitting that it should be corrected, especially by one such an important topic as our present social condition.

—Ed. W. Martin.

(EDITOR'S NOTES The writer of the above letter has obviously overlooked the fact that two lecturers spoke—one speaking for "short range planning" and the other for "long range.")

With Contemporaries

Education—

A Social Asset

The Daily News of New York University recently conducted a survey among the co-eds there, asking them the rather unfair question of why they came to college. It is true that about half of those interviewed said they had come in search of education. Others naively admitted that they were looking for a good time. But the reply made by three deserves special consideration. They answered that their parents thought every girl should have a higher education as a social asset.

The social asset that is conventionally considered of most importance is the ability to be as much like one's fellow social participants as possible, and to be able to talk volubly, colloquially, continually and unthinkingly. There must be no obvious idiosyncrasies, no rough edges, no extreme inferiority or superiority—just a dull level of approximate equality.

It is evident that if many succumb to the idea that a higher education is a social asset, then many will accept a higher education for this purpose. As a consequence the educational level of society will be raised, and those who never intended to listen to lectures will be obliged to do so, or else face social ostracism for not having emulated their companions. A degree may become as necessary as a bank account.

This seems a waste of time that could otherwise be devoted to the enjoyment of social pleasures. Since the whole object is to be similar, it does not matter much at what educational or intellectual level this similarity is. Why not a mutual agreement, then, to confine education to those years when one is too young to do anything else—to young to flutter on one's social wings? Society would not be impaired, for all would be alike in their ignorance. And it is far simpler to have ignorance as a social asset—it is more innate in human nature; it need not be acquired by dint of labor.—McGill Daily.

Greeks Have The Word

The publicity given today to the machinations of fraternity cliques at Columbia is no news to those who know the campus. Politics and unwelcome meddling in extra-curricular activities is one of the evils growing out of the present fraternity system. Such unwholesome interference probably exists on every college campus which supports fraternities or their equivalents.

Cornell last year complained of the doings of a campus "Tweed Ring" dominated by a group of fraternities, which virtually controlled student organizations and activities. The editors of the Cornell Daily Sun assumed that this was one of those situations "distinctively Cornell." Although Morningside may not be able at present to match the Cayuga "Tweed Ring" in size and power, it possesses influences which threaten to be as all-powerful as the reported Cornell ring if they are permitted continued growth.

The situation which has risen from this year's managerial dealings is only one aspect of fraternity influence in college affairs. Fraternity politics played a great part in the last class elections and have always been important in determining the holders of executive positions in many college activities.

To a certain extent such political meddling is as inevitable as social grouping among undergraduates. But an intelligent student opinion can provide certain checks which will minimize fraternity power and alleviate conditions. Such a check was provided for student board posts when the new system of holding elections went into effect last year. Student board should carefully study the possibility of establishing such checks wherever else they appear to be needed. One of the first objects of reform should be the present system of selecting sports managers.—Columbia Spectator.

State Boxing Team To Exchange Punches With Tar Heels Tonight

Carolina Mitmen Will Make First Home Appearance in Tin Can at 8:30 O'clock.

FRESHMEN TO FIGHT ALSO

Pack Will Attempt to Break Carolina's Record of No Defeats in State Meets.

PROBABLE LINEUPS:

| Carolina | Wt. | State |
|----------|-----|-----------|
| Glover | 115 | Billisoly |
| Levinson | 125 | Saul |
| Quarles | 135 | Rhyne |
| McIntosh | 145 | Garner |
| Berke | 155 | Dunaway |
| Giddens | 165 | Fabri |
| Brown | 175 | Hall |
| Landis | H. | Tearns |

The State College boxing teams, varsity and freshman, come to Chapel Hill tonight to do battle with the Tar Heels in the first home meet of the season.

Baseball had its "Murder's Row"; conference boxing this year will have its "Rowe's Murderers." They will be unveiled before a huge crowd of fans desirous of seeing Coach Rowe's newest congregation of pugilists who already have one victory against V. P. I. under their belts.

The freshman bouts will begin at 7:15 o'clock at the Tin Can and the varsity teams will begin hostilities at 8:30. All contestants will weigh in this afternoon at Bynum gym at 3:15.

Pack After Record

Boxing teams under the guidance of Coach Rowe have never lost a dual meet in this state; but the Wolfpack will be over with several star fighters who are anxious to put an end to that record.

Captain Charlie Garner, conference welter champ, will put his wares on display against either Frank McIntosh or Bruce Langdon. Garner is primarily a slugger so the sparks ought to fly when he steps into the ring, no matter whom he opposes.

Lee Berke will meet Bill Dunaway, the highly touted 155-pounder who is undefeated in college boxing and who never had a man go more than a round against him until last week. Berke holds a spotless record himself and he may be just the man to stop Dunaway who is a slugger. Berke is clever and a past master at the art of genuine boxing. So when these boys tangle in the battle of the undefeated sophomores, the old question will again be temporarily solved tonight: can a slugger beat a boxer?

Captain Marty Levinson will be seen tonight in the first home bout of his senior year and his last ring campaign for Carolina. The great featherweight star got off to a dazzling start last week with a one-round knockout over his V. P. I. rival and it looks like another banner year for him.

Quarles to Fight

Fans have been hearing all about the new sensation, Norm Quarles, and they will get a peek at him for the first time tonight in a varsity bout. He will hold down the lightweight position this year, although he did his fighting as a featherweight last year when he went undefeated on the frosh team. Quarles has everything and he may be one of the sensations of the conference this year.

Sam Giddens, another undefeated freshman from last year, will be doing the middleweight fighting. Sam came through with a nice win last week and he will be watched closely. Either Cliff Glover or Pete Ivey, both good, fast bantams, will get the call tonight, while Peyton Brown or Tom Parsons will do the light heavy work. Platt Landis, Carolina's great heavy, will go in that division.

TEAM DISMISSED FROM TITLE RACE

New Hanover Protests Fayetteville Playing Tommy Swann, Cumberland Star.

Fayetteville's high school basketball warriors are out of the Eastern class "A" pennant chase.

The Cumberland team withdrew after Wilmington filed a protest against Tommy Swann, star forward, who has tallied 177 markers in nine tilts. New Hanover high school claimed that Swann, who entered Stedman high, near Fayetteville, at the beginning of the year, had not been in school sixty per cent of the days prior to the Wilmington-Fayetteville game. Fayetteville will round out its conference slate, but no games will count.

The Scotsmen are the third team to withdraw from the east circuit this year, Goldsboro and Wilson having previously deserted the big time of high school leagues for membership in the less important northwestern loop.

TAR HEELS MEET DEACONS TONIGHT IN SECOND GAME

Wake Forest Will Be Strengthened by Return of Mulhearn at Forward.

The White Phantoms will journey to Raleigh this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock in time to rest up for their game with Wake Forest which is scheduled to begin at 8:00 o'clock tonight in the Raleigh auditorium.

Coach Shepard is taking eleven men to do battle with the Demon Deacons in quest of Carolina's fourth Big Five win, center in Jack Glace are making the trip.

Though the Deacons looked bad in their game with Duke earlier in the week, those that saw the tilt said that Wake Forest was clearly off form that night and everything points to another close and exciting game between the two clubs tonight.

Yesterday the White Phantoms worked on the defense Coach Shepard has prescribed for the famous Kokimo system the Deacons use. The Kokimo attack was successfully employed against the Tar Heels in the game last Saturday until George Brandt was assigned the job of handling Hank Malloy who plays directly under the basket when Coach Emerson's boys began their attack. Brandt's arms were longer than either McCachren's or Weather's who tried guarding Malloy at the outset.

Beale May Start

The same team that has started all the games this season for Carolina will line up tonight at the opening whistle, although there is a bare possibility that Beale will be seen at center instead of Brandt. If he does not start, Coach Shepard is sure to give him plenty of time to show his stuff. Beale has shown wonderful improvement all season and has stepped into the breach at important moments in the last two games and delivered the goods. He will see plenty of action tonight.

Wake Forest will also have an altered lineup. Joe Mulhearn who limped through a few minutes of the last Deacon-Tar Heel tilt, will probably be seen at forward with Barnes.

It is plain that the Greeks bought no Insull securities.—Weston (Ore.) Leader.

Deacons Who Are Bent On Tripping The White Phantoms

Pictured above are the seven lettermen from Wake Forest who came near upsetting Carolina in their first game last Saturday. These same men are determined to make good their threat in the second meeting of the two teams tonight in Raleigh. Joe Mulhearn was the forward who saw only a few minutes' play in the first game. The flashy junior is expected to be back in the lineup tonight as his "charley horse" has about healed up.

HEEL GRAPPLERS WILL CLASH WITH TECH HERE TODAY

Coach Quinlan Says Varsity and Freshmen Are in Excellent Shape for Bout.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestling teams make their second mat start of the year this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in the Tin Can when they take on the V. P. I. varsity and first year clubs.

In the Tar Heels' first meet, they lost to the fast N. C. State aggregation, 18-14. Carolina's Tar Babies looked badly, taking a 25-13 drubbing. However, Coach "Chuck" Quinlan is confident that his mat proteges will come through in fine style this afternoon.

The Gobblers are coached by George Herrin, former wrestler on the University of Iowa team; and are supposed to have a club of no mean ability. If hard work means anything; however, Carolina's grapplers will come through, for Quinlan has certainly heaped the work on his charges in order to prepare them for their second Southern conference test.

Coach Quinlan ventured yesterday afternoon some predictions on the meet. "Although Spell (165) and Hiller (145) lost their matches against State last week, I'll be very sadly disappointed if they do not come through with wins today. They are looking better, and should make good showings. Jack Ranson, freshman 175, took a bad beating last week against State, losing in an extra round; but he has a fine future and is good for a win today."

Usually Carolina coaches are pretty close about predictions before an athletic contest, especially being optimistic; but Quinlan says that his boys will break through into the win column and, save for about two men, the team is in fine shape.

Harold Blalock, freshman 118, is making his debut in wrestling today; however, the Tech man who takes on Harold will have to fight all the way. This boy

BIG BILL TILDEN WILL PLAY HERE

Former Amateur Champion and Ranking Professional Player To Be Here January 26.

William T. "Big Bill" Tilden will play in Chapel Hill Thursday evening, January 26.

Tilden, formerly amateur singles champ of America and now American number one professional player, will have as his partners Hans Nusslein, German pro champ; Emmett Pare, formerly a prominent amateur player of this country; and Bruce Barnes, who captained the Texas University court outfit a couple of years ago.

All matches will be indoor affairs in the Tin Can. The slate is to commence at 8:00 o'clock. Admission will be seventy-five cents.

Big Bill was here last year, and drew a remarkably large crowd despite the fact that Norman Thomas performed for a University audience the same night.

PROFESSOR UNDERGOES OPERATION IN DURHAM

Professor William S. Bernard of the department of Greek was operated on yesterday for appendicitis at Watts hospital in Durham. A report yesterday stated that he was getting along nicely.

is small in size, but packs more fight than wildcats his weight. Mac Auman, letterman in the varsity 175-pound division, will not start in today's contest. Thompson has been looking fine in practices this week, and will get the starting call. Besides these changes the line-up is intact.

Both freshman and varsity teams are scheduled to weigh in at Bynum gymnasium at 10:00 o'clock. None of the men should have any trouble making their allotted weights.

Yesterday afternoon's workout was brief, the men being put through ten or fifteen minute drills on the mat with some exercises and then excused.

TAR BABIES WIN SECOND GAME OF SEASON BY 49-21

Nelson Heads Scorers With Eleven Points as Phantlets Turn in Careless Victory.

Playing loosely, with spectacular plays at times, the Carolina Tar Babies downed Mt. Pleasant's Falcons 49 to 21 last night.

Jim McCachren played his usual flashy game and led the way for the winners. Besides playing a fine floor game, the guard rang up nine points, one field goal coming after he had dribbled the length of the floor. Melvin Nelson led the scoring with eleven points, but he was off his usual form and missed many shots. Bill Rankin followed Nelson pretty close, getting ten points. The big center made his points by shooting from all angles of the court. Tilley also played a headsup game for the Tar Babies.

Holt and Fleming led the scoring for the Falcons, each with six points. Hine played the best game for the losers although he was hindered by having three fouls on him most of the game. The contest looked like a thriller at the start and was nip and tuck for the first ten minutes. After that the Tar Babies got going and soon pulled away from their opponents. The half ended 29 to 14.

The second half was fast and wild the ball traveling from goal to goal with neither team being able to score many of their frequent shots.

TWO CHAMPIONS TURN IN WINS BY DECISIVE SCORES

Ruffin, S. A. E., Old East, Mangum, Crescent, and Theta Kappa Nu Win Tilts.

Ruffin and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which met in the campus championship contest last season, turned in impressive wins yesterday as the second week of the current intramural basketball season came to a close.

Ruffin's win came at the expense of Manly, which had won both its previous games. The score was 47-14. The campus champions smothered the Manly attack and ran wild, scoring freely throughout the contest. Baird, Freeman, and Weathers, with twelve, nine, and eight points respectively, led the winners' attack, while Kesselman and Taylor scored four each for the losers. Taylor's guarding was the outstanding feature of the Manly team's play.

Old East set a new high-scoring mark for intramural teams to shoot at when it crushed Old West, 65-12. Hamlet scored nineteen points, while Hanson, Matthews, and Fox added fourteen each to the winning outfit's total. Crouch and Parker played best for Old West. The game marked Old East's third straight high-powered win of the season.

S. A. E. Scores

Kappa Alpha's cagers proved no match for last year's fraternity champions and S. A. E. gained its third win of the season by a 29-19 margin. Connor and Morgan led the winners with ten points each. Individual scoring honors, however, went to Skinner, of Kappa Alpha, who scored eleven points. Everette added six more to the K. A. count.

Mangum gained its third consecutive win when it ran roughshod over Carr to win, 49-12. The winners held the tremendous lead of 33-0 at half. Vick, with fourteen points, and Smith, Giobbi, and Thompson stood out for Mangum, while Andrews and James accounted for all the lawyers' points.

Crescent Team Wins

Crescent Cafeteria' downed Aycock in the only close contest of the day, 25-22. Hunter scored fifteen points to lead the winners, while Todd, Glenn, and Comer scored the rest of the Crescent outfit's points. Jones, with six points, stood out for Aycock.

Theta Kappa Nu, with Cecil Longest scoring fifteen points, downed Delta Tau Delta as the latter team suffered its third straight defeat, 26-13. Myers and Hunter also played well for the winning team, while Jackson was best for Delta Tau Delta.

Protest Upheld

Pi Kappa Alpha yesterday protested the use of Lambda Chi Alpha of Ben Blood, member of the varsity squad, in the game between the two teams Thursday afternoon. The intramural department has upheld the protest, awarding the game to Pi Kappa Alpha, 2-0, as a forfeit. Blood scored twenty-two points in the game in question, which was won by Lambda Chi Alpha, 26-15.

DEAN PRESENTS GREAT NEEDS OF MODERN WORLD

Professor Skinner Believes Faith And Ethical Goal Are Essential to Present-Day Life.

At the final meeting of the Seminar of Liberal Religion at the Carolina Inn last night, Dean Clarence R. Skinner of Tufts College spoke on "The Three Greatest Needs of the Modern World."

"I would draw your attention to what seems in my own thinking to be three basic needs," began Professor Skinner. "First: the scientific method applied to human life. As we look at science applied to matter we cannot help admiring the precision of method and the immediacy of results. The engineer draws up plans for an hundred-story building, scraping the sky, and immediately stone leaps upon stone, and the task is done."

Scientific Thinking Needed

In contrast to this precision and efficiency, went on Professor Skinner, one cannot help feel the inadequacy of people's understanding of human life, and the lack of even methods which results in universal distress. People need scientific method in solving the two fundamental aspects of human life: first, the personal; and secondly, the social.

"The science of psychology, which is barely beginning, is the hope for the first of these undertakings," continued the Tufts College dean. "It is only slowly and painfully that we can expect to evolve a dependable science of human behavior. But what a blessing for weak, stumbling humanity such a body of learning would be. Secondly, we need this method of scientific thinking on our social relations. The science of sociology is practically in its infancy, taking only its first steps, but we shall look to it finally to guide us and instruct us in our groping way as we struggle to find the key to human relations."

Advices Ethical Goal

"The second great need for the modern world is an ethical goal. Without it all our vaunted power and scientific discoveries may merely lead us to worse ruin."

Professor Skinner went on by asking what can account for our economic system and international relations and consummation of energy. He said that many men, for the want of a goal in life, cannot answer, because they have failed to realize that ethical purpose should dominate all human activity.

"Lastly, I believe that one of the greatest needs is faith," concluded Professor Skinner. "Faith is an intellectual conviction plus the dynamic courage to live for that conviction, to build a life on its foundations, and if necessary, to die in the adventure. Perhaps one of the growing diseases of our spiritual life today is cynicism, disillusion, and the fear of high idealism. What we need is the daring spirit which is given to man by faith: specifically, the faith that we can have a science of human life, that we can live for ethical purposes."

University Alumnus Married In New York

Announcement was made here this week of the marriage in New York City last Saturday at noon of Miss Eileen Barry, of Olean, N. Y., to George Tayloe Winston, 2nd, of Chapel Hill.

The ceremony, which was private, with only a few intimate friends in attendance, was performed in St. Paul's Cathedral, with Father Barry, cousin, of the bride, officiating.

Mrs. Winston has been for sometime assistant head nurse of the New York Medical Center. Winston, a University graduate of the class of 1930, has a position with the first district engineers of New York. He is a son of Professor and Mrs. P. H. Livelier Civilization

These changes, the Charleston editor predicted, will bring to North Carolina "a livelier, a better, a richer civilization. The changes are to be tremendous. How will your press adapt itself to them?"

Then he pictured a country weekly and small city press "incomparably higher in quality than any that the republic has ever known. 'I believe that is coming rapidly,' he said, 'coming with the dispersion of population, the better balanced prosperity of the early future.'"

Asserting that the editorials of daily newspapers seventy-five years ago had great influence, Colonel Ball said that "influence has declined and will continue to decline. The editorial page is swamped by the news and vaudeville pages. Horace Greeley's voice would be drowned in the clamor and clatter of the New York Herald-Tribune office now."

Old University Song To Be Played Over WBT

A musical composition entitled, Grand March of the University of North Carolina, composed expressly for the commencement of 1844 by Gustave Blessner, at that time a musician of some reputation and head of the department of music at St. Mary's school, Raleigh, has been presented to the library by Burton H. Smith of Charlotte.

This composition will go on the air over station WBT, Charlotte, during the Philco hour, 1:15 to 1:45 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, January 22. Other University of North Carolina songs will be heard on the same program.

TAU BETA PI TO MEET FOR LUNCHEON TODAY

The Tau Beta Pi honorary engineering scholastic fraternity will gather for a luncheon meeting in room 214 Graham Memorial at 1:00 o'clock today for the members and the faculty members. This is the first general meeting since the new members were taken into the organization last fall.

The announcement will be made of the winner of the award for the best essay turned in by a new man in the society. These papers were written at the time of the initiation.

ACTION TAKEN TO AID NEGROES WHO MAY LOSE HOMES

Chapel Hill Committee Procures Help Of Duke Legal Clinic to Investigate Assessments.

In an effort to aid the West Franklin street property owners, who are threatened with the loss of their homes because of excessive assessments, the Chapel Hill citizens' committee has procured the help of the Duke University legal clinic, which serves persons financially unable to employ counsel. Most of the residents on West Franklin street are negroes.

The board of aldermen has ordered a thorough search of the town records in order to secure complete information about the laying of assessments. From this information the legal experts will be able to decide whether or not an appeal to the courts will bring relief.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the Central Welfare Committee, appointed a committee several months ago to look into the matter. Mrs. Isaac Manning was made chairman of the committee consisting of Dr. George H. Lawrence, Professor Roy H. Brown, and Dean A. W. Hobbs. Later, Professors E. C. Branson, M. S. Breckenridge, and H. W. Odum were appointed on the committee, with Professor Branson commissioned to appear before the alderman to present the case.

banker should be to protect the deposits. In conclusion," he said, "I quote from George Ray: 'Be especially on your guard in sluggish times; it is then that a bank is drawn toward chancing it.'"

Bankers Are Speculators

"The trouble with our banking system is that the bankers have ceased to be bankers but have become speculators," said Dr. Gray, the second speaker. He said that since the bankers had become speculators, they had ceased to give honest advice. "In 1861," he said, "the banks stopped redeeming currency, and the country was flooded with worthless paper money. I predict that it will happen again and that very shortly. I think that Mr. Wood will agree with me."

Dr. Gray traced the history of banking showing the change from honest bankers to speculators willing to deceive the public.

State supervision of banks is amazingly lax. The best thing for the public would be to have national control of all banks, he said.

After the lectures, over which William R. Eddleman presided, Professor Woodhouse headed the open forum discussion.

SOPHOMORE EXECUTIVES SET DATE FOR SMOKER

At the meeting of the executive council of the sophomore class Thursday night, it was decided to schedule the class smoker for the evening of February 7 in Swain hall.

The speaker for the evening has not yet been chosen. The committee which is arranging this phase of the program is composed of W. H. Sadler and J. J. Binder. An arrangement with the Carolina theatre is being made whereby the entire group will see a moving picture after the smoker. The committee making these plans includes H. C. Bridgers and H. K. Bennett.

TWO SORORITIES PLAN CAGE TILT

Pi Phi's and Chi Omega's Complete Arrangements for Contest February 6.

The two sororities at the University, Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega, completed arrangements to play a basketball game, February 6, in the Tin Can. The proceeds of the contest will be used for charitable purposes.

The game which is little over two weeks off should find a capacity crowd out for the contest. Much interest was shown in the recent basketball games staged between the different floor teams of the woman's building.

The Chi Omegas do not have reluctant to give out for publication their starting line-up, but here's the tentative list of the classes who'll play. Virginia Yancey will captain the Pi Phi's; Julia Brown will be at one forward while Betsy Harding will start at the other. This outfit boasts the most popular basketball guards to have ever played in the Tin Can. They are Jane Smoot, freshman, and Gracie Bowes. The other guard has not been chosen.

The Chi Omega do not have any such guards as the Pi Phi's, but they do claim that they have a fast pair of forwards in Vivian Grissette and Laura Ross; Lott Bradley will jump center; Dot Norman, Jaqueline Small, and Elizabeth Coates are all fighting for positions at guard.

The admission charge to the contest will only be twenty-five cents.

Chinese Statesman To Conduct Seminar

The Honorable Chih Meng, noted Chinese statesman and author, and associate director of the China Institute of America, will visit the University for three days beginning Tuesday, February 21. Dr. Chih Meng will lecture in a series of seminars and programs to be presented on the Sino-Japanese question and other present problems of the Far East.

The China Institute of America, of which Dr. Paul Monroe of Columbia University, is president, is the organization under whose auspices Professor E. W. Knight, of the University, journeyed to China on a survey trip last year. The institution is backed by the Rockefellers as a research party.

Dr. Chih Meng is well known in this country as being the author of the book, China Speaks on the Conflict between China and Japan, published last April by the McMillan company, of New York.

"Hunk" Anderson to Coach At Notre Dame This Year

Heartily "Hunk" Anderson will coach at Notre Dame University in 1933.

President Charles E. O'Donnell, of the South Bend institution, corralled Anderson Thursday and spiked all rumors that the coach would leave by signing him up for the third straight year. Terms were not divulged.

No report has been made as yet concerning the renewal of the contract of Jesse Harper, athletic director.

UNIVERSITY'S CUT GIVEN OPPOSITION BY CHURCH PAPER

"Christian Advocate" Says Colleges' Value Must Be Measured in Terms of Soul.

Under the heading, "The University, A Chief Asset of the State" the January 19 issue of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, official organ of the North Carolina and Western North Carolina conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, devotes a page to a discussion of the University's situation as the institution faces a legislative year.

"The value of a college or university must be measured in terms of the soul," the article reads. "Mills and the institutions of the marts of trade can be reckoned up in statistical tables, but this is not true of those that send out lines of light and streams of life to sweeten and enrich the youth of the world."

Quotes Graham's Talk

The Advocate quotes from an address made recently by President Frank P. Graham, showing the purpose and wide reputation of the University.

Figures of University support from the state are cited, showing a decrease from $894,429 received by the institution from the state in 1928-29 to $504,700 which is allotted by the state for the current year. This decrease of 43.6 per cent in state funds has been made during a period when student enrollment at Chapel Hill has increased 22.9 per cent.

Dr. Jacocks Presents Indian Frescoes to University Library

Dr. W. P. Jacocks, of Colombo, Ceylon, recently presented the University library with a collection of reproductions of the Ajanta frescoes in Hyderabad State of India.

These frescoes, the earliest known in India, are on the walls of caves and date from 450 to 650 A.D. Although they are of a religious nature, they illustrate the court life and popular life of that time in India. These are now on exhibition in the library.

SHAW-HENDERSON DRAMA FESTIVAL WILL BE STAGED

Carolina Playmakers to Inaugurate Program January 29 as Tribute to Two Men.

In recognition of the completion of Dr. Archibald Henderson's widely-heralded Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, the result of twenty-nine years' labor on the part of the biographer, the Carolina Playmakers are planning a Shaw-Henderson festival in celebration of that event.

The festival will be inaugurated January 29, and is designed as a joint-tribute to Shaw and Henderson. It attempts to link the famous Irish wit of England to the village of Chapel Hill through his friend and only authorized biographer, Dr. Henderson.

Koch Will Preside

In this first meeting, Professor Frederick H. Koch, presiding, will read tributes to Dr. Henderson from distinguished men of letters. Following him, President Frank Graham will speak in behalf of the University. A distinguished writer connected with the theatre, whose name is yet to be announced, will speak on "The World and the Drama." Dr. Henderson will then deliver the principal lecture of the evening on "Shaw as a World Power." There will be an exhibit of Shaw posters, elaborate works of art in themselves, gathered from many countries.

As a feature of this week of celebration the Playmakers are

Former Ted Shawn Pupil Stresses High Value Of Cultural Dancing

Phoebe Barr Trained Chorus For Production of Euripides' "Alcestis" Last Summer.

For a number of years the Carolina Playmakers had aspired to produce a Greek play. They had the advantages of splendid musicians on the campus, their own excellent facilities for scenic production, experienced actors in their group, and the unusual background of the Kenan memorial stadium for such an undertaking. There remained the one fatal drawback that there was no one in Chapel Hill who could assume the task of training a Greek chorus, without which such a production would be entirely impossible.

Last spring, Phoebe Barr, who had been a student for four years at the Denishawn school of dancing in New York following her graduation from the North Carolina College for Women, and who for three of those years had danced in Ted Shawn's concert company, came to Chapel Hill to live and immediately, identified herself with the Playmakers.

Prepared Greek Chorus

The long thwarted ambition was realized during the last summer session when Euripides' Alcestis was given an elaborate production in the stadium. Mrs. Barr took a group of summer school students who had never had any dance training before and in three weeks created a chorus ensemble that would have done credit to any production of a Greek play.

At the request of the Playmaker staff and a number of students from the drama classes

COURSES OFFER PRACTICAL WORK BY NEW METHOD

New Instruments Assist Geologists in Finding Rock Structure Information Easily.

The geology department of the University is one of the very few in the country to offer courses in field practice in geophysical methods, according to Dr. W. F. Prouty, head of the geology department.

Until recently the geologist sought out earth structures and mineral deposits largely through keen observation and reasoning, aided by only a few simple instruments. In the last decade geophysical instruments of many types have been perfected to aid man in looking still further into the solid rock. Chief among these methods are those based upon differences in earth gravity, magnetism, and conductivity.

Works in This Area

During the fall quarter, J. A. Alexander and B. G. Bissell, graduate students, assisted by P. P. Fox and C. E. Hunter of the undergraduate school, and under the direction of Dr. G. R. MacCarthy, have mapped an extensive area about the Country club by use of the magnetometer. This instrument is so sensitive to slight magnetic differences that it is possible to map various types of rocks concealed by a thick soil covering or trace the concealed outcrop of many types of minerals.

During the spring quarter, Dr. MacCarthy will have the students map an area near the foot of Strowd's hill by the electrical resistivity methods.

Skinner To Deliver Lecture And Sermon

Dr. Clarence Skinner, who has been, for the past week, holding a religious seminar at the Carolina Inn, will deliver a sermon at the Baptist church this morning at 11:00 o'clock and a lecture tonight at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall. These talks have no connection with his lectures for the past week, but, as he was stopping over in Chapel Hill, he agreed to deliver these talks for the benefit of the Baptist church and those students whose churches are not represented in Chapel Hill.

The church groups who are sponsoring the lectures are, among others, the Unitarians, the Quakers, and the Congregationalists. These groups invite the students, the faculty, and the townspeople to attend the lecture.

Chemical Engineers to Meet

The regular meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will take place Tuesday night, January 24, at 7:30 o'clock in 210 Graham Memorial. At this meeting, Professor W. J. Miller of the department of electrical engineering will speak on "The Principles of Public Utility Rate Making." Students, faculty, and the townspeople are invited to attend this lecture.

To Talk on Y. M. C. A.

L. L. Hutchison will speak in assembly tomorrow morning on the work being done by the Y. M. C. A., illustrating his talk with a detailed report of the Atlanta Student-Faculty conference December 28-31.

Deficiencies To Be Reported Next Month

Mid-term deficiencies will be posted on the board in the Registrar's office on February 1, according to a report issued yesterday from that office. All grades must be recorded by the professors at the office by January 31.

Fourteen hundred and sixty students in the University were reported with mid-term deficiencies in one or more subjects during the fall quarter, which was 291 less than that of the respective period of the year before.

PROMPT ACTION IN CONSOLIDATION OF COLLEGES URGED

Committee Recommends That Union of State Schools Proceed Immediately.

Demand that the consolidation of the three state supported institutions of higher learning be proceeded without further delay and that appropriations for duplicating functions be discontinued was made in the state legislature Friday.

This was included in the report of the joint committee on reorganization of government, offering what are considered the most sweeping recommendations for changing the governmental set-up ever made before the legislature. The recommendations would affect eighteen different branches of the state government by abolition, consolidation or curtailment at an estimated saving of $2,000,000. Nine bills, in addition to several already introduced recommending such changes, brought before the assembly.

Will Curtail Duplications

The committee recommended that the appropriations for duplicating functions of the Greater University be discontinued at an early date to the end that the purpose of consolidation of these institutions be accomplished.

This is the first stand made in the present legislature on the question of the consolidation of the University, North Carolina State College in Raleigh, and the Woman's College in Greensboro. Reports recently indicated that the advisability of the consolidation

Sophomore Tries to Imbue Tradition of Carolina Gentleman In Submissive Freshman.

There is one freshman, at least, who, at the end of the year, will be properly imbued with the traditional spirit of a Carolina gentleman. This freshman—affectionately referred to by the term, "Weasel"—has the extraordinary privilege of being the roommate of a conscientious sophomore who is exceptionally clever at devising novel methods to impress upon him the importance of the traditions of the University. Moreover, there are many kind souls cooperating with this sophomore in carrying out what he believes his duty.

A few nights ago, the freshman, upon returning to his room, found a note telling him to dial 5911 and to ask for Frank. With fond memories of similar successful experiences, the freshman called. A woman answered. "Whom do you wish to speak to?"

"Is there anyone there by the name of Frank?", asked the young man.

There followed an ominous pause. Then the woman's voice again. "The only Frank here is Mr. Graham. Do you wish to speak to him?"

Lamely, the freshman explained that someone must have done him dirt.

On the Rock Pile

This experience is the latest, and perhaps most edifying; many preceded it. During the first week of the quarter he was shown the traditional freshman rock pile and was made to deposit

W. E. DAVIS

A Much-Needed Change

The proposal of the Carolina Buccaneer to place the power of electing its editor in the hands of the staff members is the most progressive move that has been instigated on this campus in fully a decade. Such a plan has long been needed in the realms of student publications here, and it is gratifying to see how readily the student body is coming to realize the importance and necessity of the Buccaneer's proposal now that it has been presented. There is little doubt but what the other publications staffs will fall in line with the Buccaneer in advocating this change. At least, that would be the sane thing to do.

Not only is the Buccaneer the only humor magazine of any size in the country employing the popular election of its editor, but, likewise, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, the Yackety Yack, and the Carolina Magazine are the only publications of importance in their types in the United States still following the popular-vote method. All of the larger college dailies have long ago adopted the method of staff election, and a majority of the weeklies likewise.

The University of North Carolina enjoys a national reputation for its freedom in student publications, and it is indeed regrettable to see it continue a policy so conservatively antiquated as the popular election of student editors. It is quite evident that the students themselves have at last come to a realization of this fact, and will carry the Buccaneer's plan into effect in each of the four publications.

Light to the Starved North

In an obviously sincere, though slightly facetious manner, Dr. William Watts Ball, distinguished Charleston newspaperman, told members of the Newspaper Institute that in his opinion the South has been unmercifully starving the North by cornering the intellectual market below the Mason and Dixon line. To the more urbane literati, Dr. Ball's remark bore all the semblances of a jest, or at least of a typical South Carolina jab at the intellectual prowess of the states north of us.

Yet a glance at the recent "Living Authors" and Emily's Clark's Innocence Abroad, convinces us that the South can present an array of writers and literary figures second to no other section of the country. From Mississippi, for instance, we get William Faulkner and Stark Young.

Georgia offers Conrad Aiken and Anne Greene, sister of the equally renowned Julian Green.

From South Carolina come DuBose Heyward and Julia Peterkin, both immensely popular novelists.

North Carolina, of course, has its Paul Green and Thomas Wolf, as well as several young college graduates who are beginning to gain recognition in the field of letters.

From Tennessee come Marist Chapman, T. S. Stripling, Evelyn Scott and Roark Bradford.

Across the line is Kentucky, the state that gave Irvin S. Cobb and Elizabeth Maddox Roberts to the nation.

Virginia has perhaps the best crop of prominent writers. They include Willard Huntingdon Wright (S. S. Van Dine), Allen Tate, Willa Cather, Ellen Glasgow, and Branch Cabell.

Upton Sinclair, H. L. Mencken, and Lizette Woodworth Reese come from Maryland, all in fact from Baltimore county.

Strangely enough, the majority of these writers seem to be leading the country's best selling authors. The South may not be as stingy with its intellectual enlightenment to the North as Dr. Ball seems inclined to believe.—D.C.S.

The editorial board wishes to state that, if the beer advertisers will come around to the Wednesday meeting of the editorial board and bring some free samples, we'll look into the advertising matter.

We Retreat Forward

What will happen to the University if the legislature adopts the recommendations of the budget bureau, giving us only $391,000? With a mental shock like the sickening thrust of a rusty blade into one's vitals, the question horrifies us, terrifying our minds with thoughts of a million agonies.

Those of us who have seen the University's income cut fairly in half and again painfully slashed before the old wound had time to heal, we know what will happen to the University: It will still fight. Though crippled and crushed, it will still find the courage, if not the strength, to fight. Its body may be broken but its spirit never.

"The University is the steady light in this state," Dr. William Watts Ball told the North Carolina Press Institute Friday. "It will forever shed an unfaltering beam if it is maintained. What is the symbol and expression of the integrity and character of the state, but the University?"

With Dr. Ball, we believe that "there is no greater proof for the need of higher education than that it must fight for its existence." And fight we must and will—not against the legislature and the people, for, they are our comrades in arms.

It is against human ignorance and human suffering, against stupidity and poverty, against folly and waste, against cruelty and greed, against superstition and prejudice that we have fought and will continue to fight. There is no obstacle misbegotten of man that can halt the forward march of scientific knowledge.—E.C.D.

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

Let There Be Light

The sun brightly shineth... But the air nippeth... The frost is on the rare woodbine... Birds, long flown southward, no more twittereth amongst the oak leaves... But co-eds pitter-patter lightly across the greensward, and fill the air with giggling, gurgling music... Squirrels chippeth and search diligently for nuts... And how the girls escape is yet a mystery... Bored instructors smileth at the brightness of the chatter of the lovely creatures on the front row... And poor male students grindeth the teeth in agony... Dull courses and duller female companionship deaden the masculine spirit longing for the moonlight and romance of June nights and the girl back home... Scraggly lawns and ugly, barren trees fill one with a nauseating homesickness for the long, thrilling twilight walks of summer evenings long gone by... Carillon chimes grate on the raw nervous system... Work ceases to be a virtue... But, all is not lost... Intelligence is not dead... As insanity slowly but surely reaches out its dread tentacles to ensnare us all, the irresponsible campus comic magazine comes out with the only sensible suggestion of the year.

And, There Was Light

The following literary gem, done by a co-ed some years ago in the manner of the Carolina Magazine poets, was recently dug out from some old files by an enterprising cub reporter and slightly embellished to adequately, if not lucidly, describe the mental processes taking place during the reading of the erudite ebullitions of that selfsame august publication:

Phantasmagorically
The shadows flit
Like wraiths umbrageous
With their hidden sins,
Until there comes (Sound the tocsin!)
A sudden blinding ray
(Let there be light!)
And vacillating shades dispel (Come the dawn.)
And soothe a weary mind
With evanescent flight.

But, It Was Dim

Class Notes: Words... Simple words... And simple words... Meaningless... Why is a professor?... Why doesn't this one say something besides just words... Listen to that guy on the back row snore... Will old Prissy ever get an idea across to the class?... Evidently, not from the material in this course... Hope that fly alights on the bald spot... Arithmetic is the science of numbers... Learned that in high school in the dear, dead past... A girl once told me that she didn't want to be anybody's past... What has arithmetic to do with learning to teach history?... More words... History is the study of the character and significance of events... Webster beat him to that, years ago... Wonder what he thinks of math... Such a drowsy voice... Dogs running across the campus... What wouldn't I give to see a good dog-fight?... Reason must be applied to its legitimate objects... Now, we are getting into philosophy... Oh, Prissy was a rambler—a rambling man was he... He's going to illustrate something... What?... Something about the parts of speech... What is speech?... Something to conceal one's thoughts?... Most teachers succeed pretty well there... Why are so many students in this School of Education?... You have to 'take math in the College of Liberal Arts.

Dr. Henderson's contribution to the theatre and drama is one of life-long effort. Since his college days he has been a deep student of contemporary drama. During the past quarter century his essays on modern drama and dramatists have appeared in leading magazines of the world in half a dozen languages. He has written in the past twenty years eight books dealing, in whole or in part, with Shaw, his life and career in all its multifarious activities. And these eight books taken as a whole deal with all the important dramatists from Ibsen to the present day, and constitute an exhaustive history of the modern theatre and the modern drama.

The Musical University

By Vermont Royster

IN one of the most delightful presentations of the season, the North Carolina Little Symphony under the direction of Lamar Stringfield made its first appearance this year Friday night at the Playmaker theatre, offering a concert which included as its distinguishing feature the presentation of the works of two youthful North Carolina composers.

As is customary in concerts presented by the institute of folk music the first half of the program was devoted to the old masters, and the second part to compositions of living composers. From the opening overture of Mozart's Don Juan to the rustic bit of folk-melody from the pen of Percy Grainger which closed this program the orchestra displayed itself in its best mood. The smaller ensemble lent itself more readily to Mr. Stringfield's touch.

Fifth Symphony

The highlight of the first part was the orchestra's rendition of the Andante movement from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. It was this number with its familiar strain which probably found the orchestra at its best. The Andante was followed by Brahms' Hungarian Dance No. 5 which ended the first part.

The second half of the program opened with Prelude Aubal, a number by Nathaniel Burt of Southern Pines. Although Burt is only twenty years old, he has made long strides in the field of musical composition. His work has attracted much attention, and he has received national recognition. He is the son of Struthers Burt, well-known writer and lecturer, and is at present attending Princeton, where he is prominent in musical circles.

Hazelman's New-Work.

With the appearance of the second orchestral number from the pen of Herbert Hazelman of Asheville, University sophomore, Chapel Hill and the University bid well to add another outstanding artist to their list. Mr. Hazelman's first number, Danse Moronique, attracted much favorable comment when it made its debut to the national music world in Washington this fall. His second attempt, Logy March, probes deeper into musical expression and results in a work of more lasting quality. The charm of Danse Moronique lay in its light, catchy phrase and its ining artist to their list. Mr. Hazelman's new work, however, although it too is woven around a running theme, is based on a sounder, fuller pattern.

The composition is one of undeniable merit. It possesses a decided rhythm without a swing, and shows clearly the effect of the organ on the composer. The enthusiastic reception given Mr. Hazelman's efforts Friday night is the last vote needed to be cast in his favor.

Ornithological Suite

Following the works of the two North Carolina composers was a composition of Quinto Maganini, Humming Birds, from his Ornithological Suite. It was a decidedly modern number, faintly reminiscent perhaps of Rimsky-Korsakov's Bumble-Bee, though in no wise imitative. Maganini is an American by birth despite his Italian name, and has become widely known as the director of the Sinfonietta of New York. Although only thirty years of age, he is the holder of the Pulitzer prize for his Chinese Songs.

Another feature of the program was a flute solo by Mr. Stringfield of Bernard Rogers' Soliloquy, an arrangement for flute and strings. Earl A. Sloum directed the ensemble during this number.

Percy Grainger, English composer, contributed the concluding number, Shepherd's Hey. Mr. Grainger will be remembered from his personal appearance here last month with the North Carolina Symphony. Although Mr. Grainger is an Englishman born in Australia, much of his music has a distinctly American atmosphere, of which his Spoon River is the most notable example. His Shepherd's Hey was an appropriate selection to end a concert featuring compositions of native folk-lore.

Carolina And State Fight To Draw In Fast Matches

Carolina Wins Frosh Meet 5-3 But Are Held to 4-4 Tie By State's Varsity.

McINTOSH SHOWS UP WELL

Puts Up Good Battle Against Garner; Landis and Quarles Score Knockouts.

A crowd of 4,500 saw the Carolina boxing team get a 4-4 tie with State College last night in the opening home meet of the season.

To judge from the loud hissing and booing of the spectators at Referee Charlie Short's decision in the Giddens-Fabri 165-pound fight, Carolina should have won the meet 5-3. Short, much to the disgust of the fans, awarded the verdict to Fabri of State when it appeared that Giddens had earned an edge.

Giddens rushed out in the first round, caught Fabri against the ropes, hammering him unmercifully and nearly dropping him.

In the second and third, Sam's margin of superiority was nearly as great; but when the bell ended the third, Referee Short, to the amazement of everyone present, pointed to Fabri as the winner. The crowd booed the decision for many minutes.

Fabri, after the bout, had to be revived with smelling salts on the State bench, so badly had Giddens punished him.

In the first varsity bout of the evening, Turner Bilisoly had a shade on Cliff Glover, Carolina bantam. The first two rounds were fast and close, but Bilisoly came fast in the third to take the decision.

Levinson Wins

Captain Marty Levinson of Carolina was accorded a tremendous ovation when he climbed into the ring to face Neese of State in the featherweight contest. Levinson won by a tremendous margin and he would have gotten a knockout had Neese opened up.

Norm Quarles scored his second technical knockout in two starts by stopping Rhyne, State lightweight, in the third. Quarles lived up to all his advance notices by turning in a beautiful fight. He connected often with both hands throughout the fight, and he finally started Rhyne for the showers with a terrific left hook to the jaw. Referee Short called a halt after one minute and sixteen seconds of fighting in the third with Rhyne out on his feet.

McIntosh Fights Courageously

In the welterweight fight, Frank McIntosh drew a big hand from the crowd by giving a gallant exhibition against the conference champ of that division, Charlie Garner. Frank took everything Garner served up to him and kept right on coming, never pausing for an instant in his aggressive tactics. Garner got the duke but Mac got the hand.

Lee Berke bowed to the much heralded Dunaway in the second by a technical knockout; but not until he had given Dunaway something to remember him by in the first. Berke looked good in boxing smoothly against the slugging Dunaway for a whole round; but Dunaway caught up with him after forty-five seconds of the second.

After the Giddens-Fabri affair, Peyton Brown hooked up with Hull in what proved to be one of the most savage bouts of the night. Brown rushed Hull

MANY EVENTS ON BILL THIS WEEK

Frosh Quint Meets Deacons, Oak Ridge; Varsity, V.M.I.; Tilden Here; Boxers vs. V. M. I.

Six events are on the schedule for sport fans of the University this week. Five of these will take place in the Tin Can, while the others will be at Wake Forest.

The freshman basketball team will open the week by meeting the Deacon yearlings at Wake Forest Tuesday. This will be the second meeting of these two teams and each will be fighting to stay in the Big Five race for top honors.

Sport fans will have plenty of chances of getting their fill this week-end with contests scheduled Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night in the Tin Can. Bill Tilden and his gang of professional tennis players are here Thursday night and the University will have a chance to see one of the world's greatest tennis players in action when he steps out on the court.

Two basketball games are set for Friday night. The freshman quint meets the strong Oak Ridge team in an opener and the White Phantoms take on V. M. I. in what looks like another thriller. V. M. I. handed Maryland the first defeat of the season last week and was in a tie for first place in the Southern Conference until V. P. I. took a close game from the team last Friday night.

V. M. I. boxers also meet Carolina Saturday night in the Tin Can. They are scheduled to trade punches with the freshman and varsity boxing teams. This will be the boxing teams' third encounter of the season.

but Hull scored to Peyton's face and body with left and right in the first. After that, the show was all Brown's, for he took the play completely away from his murderous little playmate. Brown got the decision after he piled up a decisive lead in the third.

Landis Lands in First

Platt Landis, in the heavyweight fuss, stopped Stephens quicker than you could say "technocracy." Platt came out for business and promptly clipped State's star sophomore with a savage right to the face and down went Mr. Stephens. He got up just in time to keep a date with Landis' left and he sank to the floor again. He had scarcely risen when the towel came hurtling in from his corner ending the fray after one minute and nine seconds of fighting in the very first inning.

Tar Babies Win, 5-3

Archie Allen's freshman maulers came through with a neat 5-3 win over the State frosh in an event devoid of knockouts.

Eustler started with a smooth win in three rounds over White of State. Frucht, Flaherty, and Henson dropped three round decisions for the freshman team's only losses of the night.

Sutton, Brown, and Ellisberg turned in victories in the next three bouts, all of them looking like fine prospects for the future.

Kanner, giant frosh heavyweight, was awarded his bout on a forfeit.

Two Captains Score Impressive Wins

Marty Levinson and Charlie Garner, captains of Carolina and State boxing teams who won their fights last night. Levinson handed Neese a decisive trimming while Captain Garner, who is the Southern Conference champion in the 145 pound class, was extended to win from McIntosh in the most exciting bout of the night.

Former Carolina Players Make Headway In Big League Baseball

Burgess Whitehead, Lewis Riggs, and Louis Whitehead Fulfill Contracts With St. Louis and Are Farmed Out to Minors Where They Have Good Seasons.

Baseball players with educations are getting to be pretty numerous and as a result, a few of the players, rather important in the baseball world, have attended, or are at the University now. Burgess Whitehead, left the University after the spring of 1930 in order to play baseball; Lewis Riggs was here last year during the winter quarter but left to go to a spring training camp; and Louis Whitehead is still after an education, attending the University between baseball seasons.

Burgess Signed with Cardinals Burgess Whitehead signed with the St. Louis Cardinals after he had finished the 1930 season as a member of the University of North Carolina baseball team. Burgess played sensational ball on Carolina's team in 1930 and was elected captain for the following year. However with a big league contract, Burgess was ineligible for college competition.

The Carolina flash had starred at shortstop on the Tar Heels but was shifted to second base when he started playing professional ball. The Cardinals farmed him out to one of their numerous minor league teams, but Burgess was not content to stay put and made rapid advancements.

In 1931 Burgess finished the season with Columbus of the American Association, which is a class AA league, just one step back of the major leagues. Last year the young second baseman was back again with Columbus and turned in the best year of his career. Playing great ball in the field he was the main cog of the Columbus defense. At bat he hit .325 which is about as good as professional second basemen hit. He is a whirlwind on the bases and stole no less than forty-four for the season.

Frankie Frisch, who holds down second base for the Cardinals, is getting to be pretty old for a baseball player. Burgess is slated to fill in on the Cardinal team when Frisch's playing days are over. The Tar Heel second baseman is to report to the Cardinal training camp to train with the 1932 world's champions this spring and has an excellent chance of landing on their squad for the coming season.

Lewis Riggs signed with the Cardinals also and advanced as did Burgess to the Columbus team of the American Association. Last year he had a very successful season at third base for the Cardinal farm and is rated as one of the most steady hitters in baseball. Lewis hit .290 for the season which is not at all bad for third basemen. He also cracked out eighteen home runs to add to his hitting reputation. Lewis will probably be back with the Columbus team again next season but will not be overlooked when the Cardinals need recruit third basemen.

Louis Whitehead, just twenty years old and a younger brother of Burgess, is also going to the top fast. Louis signed at the start of the 1931 season. He was also signed up by the Cardinals. In 1931 Louis played with Elmira of the New York-Pennsylvania league and turned in a fairly good year. The first part of 1932 Louis, who plays centerfield, played with Danville, Ill. of the Three-I league which is class B. The Three-I league broke up and the younger Whitehead was sent to Greensboro of the Piedmont league, another class B league.

Louis was a chief factor in Greensboro's winning the title after a playoff with Charlotte. In forty-eight games on the Piedmont team Louis had a hitting average of .340 and nine home runs. Like his brother he is also very speedy. Once he out-ran the very famous Pepper Martin whose speed was the main reason for St. Louis winning the 1931 World Series. Last year Louis had twenty-seven stolen bases to his credit.

V. P. I. Wrestlers Defeat Carolina In Exciting Meet

White Phantoms Win

The White Phantoms defeated the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest in the Raleigh auditorium by 38-26, in a fast and exciting game. The score at the end of the half was: Carolina 21, Wake Forest 3. The Phantoms played a brilliant first half, but finished the second half with a more conservative game.

Captain Wilmer Hines was the star of the game, scoring 21 points, and shooting goals from every corner of the court. Hank Malloy was high scorer for the Deacons with 11 points.

NINE TEAMS TIE FOR LEADERSHIP

Six Fraternities and Three Dormitories Hold First Place With Three Victories.

Six fraternity and three dormitory quintets had come into a tie for leadership in the two intramural basketball races at the end of the second week of the campaign. Each of these nine outfits had won three games, while two more dormitory teams and one more fraternity aggregation had been undefeated in two games.

Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Zeta Psi had three wins each to their credits, while Phi Gamma Delta was close behind with two in the fraternity circuit. Mangum, Old East, and Swain Hall were setting the pace in the dormitory race with three victories each. Best House and Ruffin were the teams with two games already in the bag.

Individuals Score High

Fox, of Old East, continued to set the pace for the individual point-getters, running his impressive total to fifty-five in three games by scoring fourteen points in his team's 65-12 victory over Old West last week. Another Old East player, Hanson, who scored nineteen points in the Old West game, was second with forty-four points.

Third place in the race for scoring honors went to Longest, of Theta Kappa Nu, who amassed thirty-seven points in two games last week to bring his season's total to forty. Hunter, of the newly organized Crescent Cafeteria quintet, was fourth with thirty-seven, and Anderson, of Beta Theta Pi, and Hamlet, another of Old East's sharpshooters, were deadlocked for fifth position with thirty-six.

Good Games Listed

The schedule for the third week, starting tomorrow afternoon, promises at least three feature games. The best of these should be the Old East-Ruffin contest on court 1 at 4:45 Friday. Both teams are undefeated, and are high-powered offensive units. Old East has rolled up 164 points in three games, and boasts three of the top six individual scorers in the two leagues. Ruffin, present holder of the campus championship, has amassed 101 points in two games, and this set to bids fair to see several scoring records go by the boards.

The schedule for the week is as follows:

Tar Heels Lose to Gobblers by 16-14; Tar Babies Smothered By Gobbler Frosh, 21-16.

DOPE BUCKET IS UPSET

Shipman, Ranson, and Miller Pin Their Men to Gain Tar Baby Counters.

V. P. I.'s combined freshman and varsity wrestlers made good their Carolina invasion by kicking the ol' dope bucket far and wide as they upset the Tar Heels' varsity grapplers 16-14 and the Tar Baby aggregation 21-16. The meet was staged yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can.

The Virginia Tech club took advantage of two falls and as many time advantages to cop their victory while Carolina's varsity could only amass three time decisions and one fall. Carolina's fall came when Captain Percy Idol, crack Tar Heel unlimited, pinned Howard in 2:42 minutes.

Tar Babies Crushed

Virginia's Gobblers decisively licked the Tar Babies, gaining three falls and two time decisions while the Carolina yearling's counters came by virtue of three falls. Miller, Ranson, and Captain Shipman accounted for the first year men's points.

The best match of the entire afternoon was between Thompson, Carolina, and Waldrop, V. P. I., both 175 pounders. At the beginning of the match, the score stood 13-9 in favor of the Virginians; a time decision for Carolina would have put the Tar Heels trailing by one point—a fall would have placed Coach Quinlan's men into the fore by one point. The match started off quickly with Waldrop amassing over a four-minute advantage; but Thompson rallied and cut down the lead to only twenty seconds. Waldrop then started fighting back hammer and tongs style until by the conclusion of the bout he held a time decision of only 2:03 minutes. The match was very close, and had it not been for the early lead Thompson would have easily won the match.

Harold Blalock, Tar Baby 118 pound division, fighting his first wrestling match, looked good as a scrapper and showed fine promise; but lost to the more experienced Lugin. Miller, 145 pound Carolina yearling, pinned Anthony in 47 seconds. It all happened so quickly that few in the large crowd knew that the fight was terminated. Jack Ranson and Captain W. G. Shipman both showed good form in pinning their men.

Allison, captain of V. P. I. varsity, did not wrestle due to injuries.

The summary is as follows:

Varsity

118—Hall, V. P. I. won fall over Hussey. Time, 3:05.
125—Gibbs, V. P. I., won fall over Mathewson. Time, 8:10.
135—Davis, Carolina, won advantage over Whitmer. 3:50.

155—Conklin, Carolina, won time decision over Fisher. 7:00.
165—Spell, Carolina, won time decision over Oliver. 3:03.
175—Waldrop, V. P. I., won time decision over Thompson. 2:03.

They are separated when the farmer overtakes them, but meet again under unique circumstances in New York City.

"Goldie Gets Along," starring Lili Damita, is Friday's feature.

James Cagney makes his first appearance in months on the screen teamed up with Mary Brian as his leading lady in the Warner Bros. whimsical comedy, "Hard To Handle," showing Saturday.

All Good Students

All three of these boys stood well in their studies at Carolina. Burgess, although he left school after three years, had a good enough standing to make Phi Beta Kappa. Louis has been on the honor roll since entering the University and, although because of his baseball duties he can attend school only one or two quarters a year, he has a good chance of also making Phi Beta Kappa.

Shawn Pupil Stresses High Value Of Dancing and other departments, this fall she began a class for all those interested in dance training.

She feels that the modern German technique is the foundation for the most living form of contemporary dancing. It is this technique which she emphasizes in her classes, and includes only such parts of other systems (ballet, oriental, and Spanish) as she feels are necessary in the limbering, stretching, and development of the muscles for balance and control.

Classes Grow Larger

A small class of women and a special group of men and women were begun last quarter, meeting once a week. This quarter, the women's class has doubled and now meets twice a week in Graham Memorial, and a class of men convenes for two hours each week. For those who are interested in this new opportunity for training now available to University students, Mrs. Barr plans to present her group in a demonstration class in the Playmakers theatre some time this spring.

Dancing, according to Ruth St. Denis, founder of the Denishawn school of dancing, and teacher of Mrs. Barr, is the irradiation of the human personality in terms of geometric movement. Her methods of teaching are founded on this basic idea. She is of the opinion that dancing is an independent art and at present there is too much emphasis on music, external and audible rhythm and harmony, to give life and animation to the body. She believes in the cooperation of music, but also insists that emphasis be placed on the dancer's own ideas, volition, and expression and that the appeal should be primarily to the eye.

It was in the course of this same instruction that the sophomore, accompanied by another upperclassman, introduced the freshman to the woods surrounding the University.

This future perfect gentleman has submitted himself to the task of carrying with him constantly a leaf from the Davie Poplar as a reminder of the excellent qualities of the founder of the University. Besides thus honoring William Richardson Davie, he was required to put flowers on the grave of Kemp Plummer Battle and to memorize the names of the presidents of the University.

When questioned as to his reasons for these impressive tactics, the sophomore stated earnestly, "I believe in the tradition of a Carolina gentleman. I believe that a freshman could and should be initiated into the traditions of the University as to cause no injury to either his person or his pride."

During the World War he was a member of the naval reserve force and was stationed in Boston. After the war he studied at Harvard University law school, where he received his LL. B. degree.

Returning to his native city, Judge Patton began an active practice of law. He represented Durham county in the General Assembly one term and was elected in 1926 to be judge of the recorder's court in Durham. He has been president of the Durham branch of the Y. M. C.

VOLUME XLI CHAPEL HILL, N. C., TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1933 NUMBER 86

MAX MONTOR TO OFFER DRAMATIC READING TONIGHT

Distinguished German Reader
And Actor Will Appear at Playmakers Theatre.

Max Montor, the distinguished German actor, will render selections from the best of German and English literature in the Playmakers theatre tonight at 8:45 o'clock.

The program includes a selection from Goethe's Prometheus in German, dealing with the refusal of Prometheus to accept the sovereign power of Zeus, and Schiller's poem, Die Kraniche des Ibykus, also to be rendered in German. Die Kraniche des Ibykus is the story of a celebrated singer who was loved by a flock of cranes, who attended him on a journey. When the singer, Ibykus, was murdered the faithful cranes hovered above the guilty persons, who were mingling with the crowds, and caused the murderers to be discovered by the indignant populace.

English Readings

In English, Montor will give a selection from Hamlet, the drama which anticipated the modern psycho-analytical explanation of actions by more than three hundred years. Lessing's Minna von Barnhelm, the first German drama of permanent value produced in the eighteenth century will be read. The theme of Lessing's play centers around the conflict in an officer's mind between duty and honor. The structure of the play is described as admirable.

A selection from Schnitzler's Lieutenant Gustl, a novelette which presents a study of the

WOOFER LAUDED FOR CHAPTER ON RACIAL PROBLEMS

Sociology Professor Contributes To Report of Committee
On Social Trends.

Dr. Thomas J. Wofter, Jr., professor of sociology and statistician in the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University, has received recognition for his chapter on "The Status of Racial and Ethnic Groups" in the report of the President's research committee on social trends, just published.

"Under the quotas for 1924," Dr. Wofter states, "23,868 quota immigrants were admissible from countries of the so-called new immigration and 140,794 from the old. The net change provided by the national origins act was to increase the new countries' quotas from 24,000 to 29,000 and the decrease of the old from 141,000 to 112,000."

"The immigrants from the new sources," continues Dr. Wofter, "continued forty-five per cent of the European foreign born in this country in 1910. This proportion increased to fifty-four per cent in 1920 and remained at that point in 1930."

The report shows that the number of immigrants from Austria is on the decline, Italians are increasing, the Greeks declined slightly, the Portuguese remained virtually the same, the Rumanians increased considerably, the Russians showed a decline, and Spaniards increased.

Assembly To Discuss Technocracy Tonight

The much debated subject, "Technocracy," will be discussed at the meeting of the Phi assembly tonight at 7:15 o'clock in New East building.

The Phi will discuss the following bills: "Resolved: That the plan advocated by the Technocrats to reduce the number of hours in the work day and number of days in the work week be favored"; "Resolved: That the University continue the quarter system rather than install the semester system"; and "Resolved: That the Farm Relief act as proposed by Senator Jones be condemned."

Members are requested to return unsold Open Forum tickets.

DECORATORS WILL SUBMIT BIDS FOR GROUP OF DANCES

Committee for Junior-Senior Dances
Will Hear Bids for Decorating Job Tuesday.

Bids, plans, and specifications for decorating the Tin Can for the annual Junior-Senior dances, May 12-13, will be received next Tuesday night at a meeting of the dance committee in Graham Memorial. The meeting will convene at 9:00 o'clock. Bids for printing tickets and purchasing favors will be considered.

Firms or groups submitting bids for the Tin Can decoration project should plan to decorate a floor 160 feet by 85 feet that will extend from the pillars on the south side of the building to the wall on the north. The floor will be long enough to include eight pillars on the actual dancing space, and eight on the opposite boundary. The bids should also cover the construction of a tea garden forty feet by sixty feet. The organization should also present full data as to the quality of material to be used, as well as the amount, and be able to submit sketches of the completed project for the committee.

Bids should cover all trellis work, building department expenses, electrical wiring, installations of amplifiers, a sound board for the orchestra, waxing of the floors, and all other incidental expenses. The installation of a piano will be handled by the committee. The firms who plan to submit prices for this work are urged to bear in mind that the Tin Can shall be left in the same condition after the dances as when work is begun.

Dr. Heer Will Address Local Parent-Teachers

The Chapel Hill Parent-Teacher Association will conduct a meeting tonight at 7:45 o'clock in the high school auditorium.

The principal speaker of the evening will be Dr. Clarence Heer of the University faculty and a member of the state tax commission. He will address the group on the topic "The Financial Outlook for the Public Schools During the Next Biennial."

Plans will also be made for attendance at the state-wide Parent-Teacher meeting scheduled for Tuesday, January 31 in Raleigh.

Meeting Postponed

The meeting of Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club, originally scheduled for tonight at 8:15, has been changed to next Tuesday night at the same hour.

Playmakers' Offerings Reflect Folk Life Outside Of This State

Yet Fulfilling Purpose of Group to Present Plays for North Carolina, Out-of-State Authors Lay Background of Plays Among People With Whom They Are Familiar.

When the Carolina Playmakers make their twenty-ninth tour this week, the entire bill will be written by students other than North Carolinians. Yet, the program will be one which is essentially folk in its conception. This situation is the answer to Professor Koch's oft-repeated admonition to students to write about people and backgrounds with which they are familiar.

A constant influx of out-of-state students to the playwriting classes has produced for the Playmakers a sizable repertoire of original plays with scenes laid outside the Tar Heel state. The dramatic organization has extended the significance of the expression "native drama" from the North Carolina hills to a vast national expanse.

Drama of Crockett's Life

Opening the bill is Davy Crockett, by John Philip Milhous, a native of the Tennessee country in which the chief character of his play became famous. With a background of those hardy pioneers who pushed the early American frontier westward, the author is thoroughly qualified to treat one of the most romantic figures in American history.

Completely different in its origin is Foster Fitz-Simons' Four on a Heath. The writer, who comes from Atlanta, Georgia, has defended his work as a native folk play on the grounds that his most real experiences have been in the company of such glamorous figures as John Silver, Robin Hood, and Otto of the Silver Hand. These characters were partners in the shaping of his fantastic interlude.

Not North Carolinian, not even of the south, yet unquestionably native is George Brown's play about Tin Pan Alley. Born and raised in New York City, he wrote Stumbling in Dreams out of his own experiences with his homefolks, who, in this case, happen to be songwriters.

Actors From Many States

The cosmopolitan motif is maintained in the casts of the plays which will resume the Playmaker custom of touring. Students from many different states will comprise the acting group for these native productions. In addition to North Carolina there are represented Florida, Georgia, New Jersey, New York, and Porto Rico.

The present three-day tour is the first that the Playmakers have made in two years. Trips had been abandoned because the organization felt itself financially unable to give the state its customary standard of entertainment. Expense of transporting the usual technical equipment and the general uncertainty of the period restrained the society from the activity which had brought it national recognition.

However, at the annual meeting of the board of incorporators of the Playmakers last spring, faculty members, University officials, and the president of the University, emphatically urged the directors of the dramatic group to "go on tour again, even

PHYSICS SECTIONS WILL MEET HERE

Departments From Duke, Davidson, State, and Other Colleges Will Conduct Colloquium.

The physics department of the University in connection with the departments of Duke, Davidson, State College, and other colleges of the state will conduct a colloquium at 5:00 o'clock in Phillips hall this afternoon.

The program which has been arranged by the University physics department includes brief talks by five members of the faculty. W. D. Williams will discuss the co-efficient of friction; C. J. Craven will talk on infrared absorption; Scott Barr on spectrum photography; and Sherwood Githens on high frequency magnetic fields. The main address of the afternoon will be made by W. H. Baskerville of the chemistry department. He will report on his work with Professor Allison of the University of Alabama on the discovery of isotopes of elements.

FIRE BURNS CELLAR OF MURCHISON HOME

A spontaneous combustion explosion of gasoline in the basement of Professor C. T. Murchison's home yesterday afternoon set fire to clothes and wood in the basement of the building. Mrs. Murchison was cleaning clothes with gasoline at the time. She immediately called the fire department which soon had the fire under control. No one was injured, but Mrs. Murchison lost a number of dresses.

DR. BOND'S BOOK RECEIVES PRAISE

Herald Tribune Says Professor's Work On English Burlesque Poetry Is
"Scholarly Investigation."

English Burlesque Poetry; 1700-1750, the newly released book by Richmond P. Bond, professor of English, was reviewed by the New York Herald Tribune as a "scholarly and exhaustive investigation into this poetic form during the period when it especially flourished."

A few samples of burlesque poetry were pointed out as being of special interest to the general reader, among which is "The Rape of the Lock," "that exquisite production which can be enjoyed by readers who knew nothing of the social 'set' portrayed in the poem," and "the piece de resistance of Mr. Bond's banquet."

Other poems praised were "The Dunciad," Philip's "Splendid Shilling," and Henry Carey's "Nabby Pamby." Bond's careful discriminations also received praise in the review.

ART STUDENTS' GUILD WILL CONVEENE TODAY

The art students' guild will meet with James A. McLean, North Carolina artist, at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon in room 10 Hill music hall, in one of a series of recently established art classes.

The guild, established by McLean and Professor Koch, conducts these classes under McLean twice a week as the first step in forming a school of fine arts in the University.

Di Senate Will Meet To Discuss War Debts

They are: Resolved: That the inter-ally war debts be cancelled.

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record in favor of renting Graham dormitory to self-help students at cost until such a time when the University shall need it for students who are willing to rent it at the present rental rates.

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the establishment of a cooperative book market to replace the present book exchange.

LEADERS PREPARE FOR LARGE CROWD TO HEAR SPEAKER

Forum Heads Expect Large Gathering to Be Beyond Gerrard Hall Capacity.

Members of the Open Forum discussion group stated yesterday that preparations are being made to accommodate a capacity crowd for the third lecture of the Forum series which will feature Dr. Harry W. Laidler Thursday night. Though Gerrard hall has been designated as the permanent meeting place for the series, it is probable that a larger hall may be obtained to accommodate the large group expected.

Scholar, master economist, and author, Laidler is perhaps one of the best authorities in the economic field today. He is the author of several dozen volumes, notably Unemployment and Its Remedies, How America Lives, Public Ownership Here and Abroad, Roads to Freedom, and he is co-author with Norman Thomas of Prosperity.

A thorough student of the economic question, Laidler was recently designated as one of seven Americans who foresaw the crash of 1928 and made his prophecies public prior to that time. Aside from his duties as chairman of the board of the National Bureau of Economic Research and executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, Laidler has found time to study law and win admittance to the New York Bar. He was awarded the degree of Ph. D. in the department of political economy at Columbia University.

Graduate Club Dance Plans Now Announced

A formal dinner dance for members of the Shirley Graves graduate club was announced today by Max Campbell, chairman of the social committee. The dance is set for Saturday, January 28, at 7:30 o'clock, and is limited to the men living in Smith building.

Following the dinner dance will be an informal dance from 9:00 to 12:00, to which all graduate students are invited. Jack Wardlaw and his varsity six orchestra will play for both dances.

New Dorms to Have Smoker

Residents of New Dorms will meet for their smoker Wednesday night in Graham Memorial. Following the smoker they will be the guests of E. Carrington Smith at the Carolina theatre. This is the third in the series of dormitory smokers, the men of Lewis and Old West having already been entertained.

TRUSTEES WILL MAKE EXECUTIVE SELECTION TODAY

Heads of University Branches
To Appear Before Postponed Appropriations Meeting.

The full board of trustees of the University will meet this morning in the office of the governor in Raleigh. A meeting of the executive committee of the trustees took place last night preliminary to this morning's convention. Because of the conflict with this trustee meeting, the legislative hearing on the Greater University's budget request before the joint appropriations committee of the general assembly, also set for today, has been postponed at the request of authorities acting for the University and the trustees.

Besides the routine matters to come before the board this morning, action will be taken on the recommendation of the special committee that Dr. Louis Round Wilson be elected vice-president for the Chapel Hill unit of the Greater University to succeed Dr. Frank P. Graham, who was elected president of the consolidated university. Dr. Graham will make his annual report at this meeting.

No definite date has been set for the hearing of the University before the appropriations committee, but it is expected to come up this week. Appearing with President Frank P. Graham before the body will be Dr. J. I. Foust and Dr. E. C. Brooks, heads respectively of the Greensboro and Raleigh units of the Greater University. They will speak for the divisions they represent while President Graham will speak for the Chapel Hill division.

Bugaboo

Inability of the various forces throughout the state to agree on the matter of taxation and its consequent influence upon the state governing body like nothing else will obstruct all state supported institutions and departments in their struggle for sufficient appropriations.

In the state legislature and in the minds of state citizens there is no encouraging, concerted action indicative of ultimate solution of our economic problem. Agriculturalists of the east will advocate a luxury tax. Their cities standing on the Virginia border will deplore such a tax. So on through the state interest of section, industry, and agriculture form a melange of public opinion precluding any possibility of a satisfactory tax act. Then the stand of the legislators sways between demands of the county courthouse group and lobbies besieging them in Raleigh. The party platform of these same legislators has made its promises. Accordingly, legislative committees have suggested the discontinuance of the ad valorem tax, a sales tax, and diversion of highway funds. But the governor favors economy.

In all this hodge-podge of opinion plainly the legislators stand between "the devil and the deep blue sea." Economy which means elimination of useful enterprise by state institutions is only positive retrogression. But in the east only a tax on industrialists would be more pleasing to constituents than sweeping economies. And of course henchmen of industrialism will prevent an added tax upon their interests. There will remain the simple method of legislators escaping the piper by withdrawing adequate support from social institutions.

And certain economies will not change conditions; taxation will no do it. The solution is more fundamental than any of these. Inevitably though all state affiliated departments and institutions, however, beneficial their position might be to North Carolina, will have to carry on, impeded by economy.—J.D.W.

No Paternal Hand

Those who heard the Open Forum Discussions on banking could not but have been impressed with the pressing need for a national system of bank regulations in this country.

The average layman has no idea of the vast numbers of tricks resorted to by banks in order to escape the censure and punishment which would otherwise fall to the lot of their executives. Bankers, being only humans, naturally take advantage of every opportunity to increase the profits to be realized from their deposits and other resources, and, as a result, often engage in wild orgies of speculation, with the expectation of making personal fortunes and, at the same time, being able to offer large returns for money deposited with their bank. With such thoughts in mind, and a wide diversity of banking laws in operation, effecting state banks, private banks and special financial institutions, it is an easy matter for any group of banks or bankers, working together, to evade the restrictions and penalties of existing laws.

By pooling their resources in a common holding company, or by establishing branch banks, the divisions being located in different states, and under different laws, any member bank may invest a large part of its capital and resources in highly speculative ventures and be fairly sure of never being detected. Just before time for the state or federal bank examiner's visit, all doubtful paper may be exchanged, at some bank operating under another law, for perfectly sound, legal security, and thus around the whole chain, each bank getting an "A" rating. There can be no doubt but that such tactics have been and still are widely used, to the detriment of the depositing and investing public, and there can be no remedy, it seems, until all banks, of whatever nature, be brought under one unified control.—W.A.S.

Down to Earth

A symposium of nation-wide student opinion in a recent issue of College Humor seems to confirm the belief that the undergraduate of today no longer has the same interest in religion as did his predecessor of twenty years ago. In comparison with earlier times, students do not go to church with the same regularity; they evince little interest in church activities; and in some cases, actual or professed skepticism is the order of the day. Putting it mildly, this generation of college undergraduates has unfortunately grown apart from the influence of the church.

It is quite a problem with religious educators throughout the country, and some have expressed the belief that such a situation has come about because the church has failed to keep step with modern needs. Whatever may be the cause, the problem is real and demands solution.

Dean Clarence R. Skinner of Tufts College, in his final address here before the Seminar of Liberal Religion, pointed out the way to a readjustment between religion and present day life. Instead of depicting man's knowledge in conflict with religion, Dean Skinner advocates the application of the sciences—especially psychology and sociology—to a better understanding of human life. We need, science, he says, to give us knowledge of individual and group behavior, and in this respect Dean Skinner's concept of liberal religion is essentially humanistic. One of the most significant points of

Plan

No economic planner, we hesitate somewhat to present a solution to the perplexing problem of what to do with our faculty in the advent of further cuts. We had a down-draft, non-skid, superheterodyne straight eight plan, but since the poor reception given to our pro-Technocrat propaganda we hesitate to offer but two portions of the plan:

1. Let all faculty members borrow from the student loan fund.
2. Borrow $500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and pay instructors and assistant professors fifty cents an hour from this fund to rake up the leaves in Battle Park.

Story

To our "Best Story of the Week" column we nominate the following news excerpt:

"A Student Life reporter was informed at the B-T-P house that the account of that fraternity stood at 11 cents when the doors of its bank were shut. A member of the fraternity explained, 'We left that much in to show our confidence in the bank.'—Washington University (St. Louis) Student Life."

Poster

Whoever is responsible for the extensive and mirth-provoking posters utilized as publicity for the debate squad is, we feel, guilty of a first rate subtlety. Perhaps it was a mere accident, but the posters distributed announcing the debates with Trinity College of the University of Dublin, were printed on orange cards. The decision, we are sure, should have been awarded to the lads from Erin on the assumption that an Irishman can't talk to an Orangeman.

Bernie

If you are interested in radio programs, which we confess have a certain fascination for us, may we recommend that you hear Semour Simmons and his orchestra from radio station WLW after midnight on week nights and over an NBC hook-up on Sundays at the same hour. Simmons appears to be another Ben Bernie, though his gags are original and not as trite as those of the professor of Blue Ribbon Malt.

his talk was his declaration that one of the greatest needs of the modern world was an ethical goal. He believes that ethics should dominate all human activity, that it should be present as a driving-force in every man's life.

A religion that embodies both humanism and ethics, it seems, will come closer to satisfying the religious yearnings of college undergraduates than any theological tenets that are hold-overs from the Victorian era. Dean Skinner's talk has pointed out that religion must be brought down to earth if ever it is to regain the importance that it once enjoyed. When this is universally recognized by our churches, then perhaps the college undergraduate will show some interest in their activities.—A.T.D.

Life and Letters

EXPANSION OF THE EGO

I was immeasurably shocked recently to learn that 99 44-100 per cent of my reading public considers the author of this column to be a mere myth and that the remaining 66-100 per cent is positive that I am the chairman of the editorial board of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. I am immensely flattered: firstly, because I have always wanted to be a blonde instead of the non-descript brunette that I am; and secondly, because the comparison so nearly approximates the purity of Ivory soap.

In all fairness to the editorial board chairman, for whose journalistic ability I have only the highest esteem, I consider it necessary to explain that I am not a pen name. I am a living, breathing person with all the frailties of the human race, and the greatest of these is writing columns. I will go even further and add that I am a stenographer by trade and that I play around with journalistic pursuits for the sheer fun of it.

I have lived continuously in Chapel Hill for the past year and a half, but I have not yet gone native. I am not collegiate, never have been (more's the pity). I will reverse the usual phraseology and say that from necessity rather than choice I live quietly. In common parlance, I don't get around much.

I will admit to 23 years which isn't at all aged for one who (having refused to meet the ridiculous certification requirements in the School of Education) has acquired a practically worthless A. B. degree (diploma no longer look nice when framed and hung upon the wall) and has worked the greater part of the time for the past five years. Perhaps that explains why I'm not particularly interested in 20-year-old college boys, though I much prefer their companionship to that of women whose chief interest in life is talking about other women. As for the co-eds, I know them not since I am not now and never have been a member of that group. I really couldn't qualify as a co-ed since I don't slam the door when I enter a classroom late the better to attract attention.

I am beginning to realize the danger incurred by a person of serious mien who dares to utter facetious remarks in her usual tone of voice and with no change in facial expression. She runs the risk of being placed forever with that vast group of "misunderstood" individuals who encumber the face of the earth. Schopenhauer, I understand, theorized on this particular problem, but I've never got around to reading his opinions. Particularly in Chapel Hill one seems to be more often misquoted than quoted. What price quotations?

Last fall I was introduced in the office of the Carolina Magazine to the sometimes "main" columnist in THE DAILY TAR HEEL. The next week he came forth with the brilliant statement that he'd never seen me. That's the kind of impression I generally make.

No, I couldn't possibly be the chairman of the editorial board. I can explain neither technocracy nor Einstein's theory of relativity. I do not approve of mass production, and the only time I can remember agreeing with the author of Our Times was shortly before Christmas when he remarked that the issue of the Buccaneer then current did have a nice cover. And I can prove my identity by a collection of collegiate columns which I have lovingly dedicated to my colossal conceit with this literary epitaph: I once thought I could write.

if you can't afford to take scenery or lighting equipment and have to do one night stands."

The advice was readily taken. Not, however, without considerable alteration from the style of past tours. Actors work as stage hands; stage hands play minor parts; and new scenery has been constructed by associate director Sam Selden. This new scenery, though less expensive than the regular size and easier to transport, is thoroughly adequate.

In many ways it is a different Carolina Playmakers which goes on tour this year. The complexion of the plays has become less sectional, and the company itself more widely cosmopolitan than ever before. Despite these changes and the enforced economies the tour fulfills the most important part of the Playmaker work—to present plays for North Carolina.

PHANTOMS HOLD LEADERSHIP WITH WEEK'S VICTORIES

South Carolina Also Has Perfect Conference Record; Duke Is Undeclared in State.

Carolina's White Phantoms glided through another week of undefeated play, tripping one conference and one Big Five foe, to retain their position on top of the conference and state heap. Though they held an advantage of one more game played in conference competition over South Carolina, the Tar Heels were tied with Duke in the Big Five race.

The state race will remain unchanged this week as no Big Five quintet faces another. Carolina meets Duke in Durham next Tuesday night in what will probably be the most important game of the season for each club. At present the Blue Devils and White Phantoms each have a spotless record of four wins. State and Davidson have each been beaten once by both Carolina and Duke, while Wake Forest has sustained two defeats at the expense of each of the leaders.

Conference Race

In the Southern Conference chase, the Tar Heels have met and defeated two conference foes, V. P. I. and N. C. State. South Carolina has a clean record in its only start. The Gamecocks stopped Clemson last Friday, 47-26.

V. M. I. sounded a warning when the Cadets tripped Maryland and Virginia, two favorites, but the lowly V. P. I. Gobblers showed a reversal of form and handed them a 38-34 lacing Friday night. Maryland started strong with three wins including the first defeat administered to the Duke Blue Devils, but then the Old Liners dropped tilts to V. M. I. and Washington and Lee. The Terrapins are coming back though as their 37-21 victory over V. P. I. indicates. The Gobblers seemed to lag after their upset win over V. M. I. and Maryland was too much for them.

TAR BABIES MEET DEACONS TONIGHT

Second Game Between Teams Should Be Closely Contested; Both Quints Improved.

With one win and one loss in the Big Five race for freshman basketball honors, Carolina's Baby Tar Heels meet the Wake Forest freshmen tonight at Wake Forest.

At the first meeting of these two teams the Tar Babies came out on top with a wide margin. However, Wake Forest's yearlings are reported to be a much improved team and a good game is expected. The contest will mean much to both teams as Carolina has lost one and Wake Forest two Big Five games. Another setback will put either one at a decided disadvantage in the championship race.

Tar Babies Show Improvement
The Tar Babies seemed also to be a little improved over the play of their opening game. Red Phelps is still lost to the team, but Raymond Glasgow has filled his position surprisingly well and will probably start tonight. Murry Kanner has definitely given up basketball for "boxing" leaving the center post clinched for Bill Rankin.

The rest of the starting lineup will be made up of Bill Moore, and Melvin Nelson, speedy forwards, and Jim McCachren, star guard. Strowd Tilley, forward, and Bob Guarino, guard, showed up well in the yearlings' victory over Mt. Pleasant and will probably see much action tonight.

Tin Can Tales

by MARLING SPIKE

Oh, those Carolina gentlemen! When we registered in this great and noble institution made greater and nobler by traditions and the personalities of men bigger than we can ever hope to be, we had heard a lot about Carolina gentlemen, about ideals, about sportsmanship. All of us have. We had heard that Carolina gentlemen could take bad breaks and defeat gracefully, maybe they could "way back when," and maybe they could now, if they felt the urge; but they don't, and please don't be hypocrite enough to tell some prospective scholar here that they do.

If you think old Marling Spike is merely on the sour and figures he'll take it out by squawking through this column, just refer your mind back to Saturday night, an eventful evening, to be sure. You know darn well what we're talking about, and if you don't and are willing to keep on reading, we'll tell you.

TEAMS MAINTAIN UNDISPUTED LEAD IN TITLE CONTEST

Durham and Salisbury, in High School Race, Have Perfect Records to Date.

Durham high school, eastern winner last year, and Salisbury high school, in the western division, are leading the state class "A" basketball conference. Both teams have perfect records, with two wins credited in their favor.

In the western section, Salisbury is followed by the state championship Charlotte quintet, which has won a single game and is undefeated. High Point and Winston-Salem both have similar records. Gastonia, with no wins and two defeats, and Greensboro, with three defeats and not a single victory, trail the leaders.

Four Teams in Race

In the eastern section, only four teams are battling for the crown, with the withdrawal of Fayetteville from the league. The Scots, nevertheless, intend to complete their schedule, though the results will not count in the state race. Durham is followed by Raleigh in the standing, the Capital City outfit having a win and no losses. Wilmington, with a single defeat and no victories, and Rocky Mount, with two losses, are at the bottom of the list.

This week-end the standings are due for a shake-up. Friday,

OLD EAST SETS HIGH MARK FOR FIVES TO EQUAL

Fox Leads Dorm Team as It Amasses 102 Points to Swell Total for Season.

Records may come and records may go, but one record which appears fairly sure to stand for some time to come was set in yesterday's intramural basketball program when Old East's quintet scored 102 points in downing the Independents team.

The Old East five, which has been going great guns all season and had already rolled up the impressive total of 164 points in three games, added to that yesterday's tremendous score to bring its average to over sixty-six points a game. This high-powered team's opponents have been able to score only fifty eight tallies in these four contests, averaging less than fifteen points a game.

Fox Increases Lead

There was little to the game yesterday, except a constant procession of Old East baskets as the winning team amassed points at the terrific rate of over four a minute. Fox, the leading scorer of both intramural leagues so far, accounted for twenty-four points to run his

HIGH SCHOOL MAT AND RING TEAMS TO BATTLE HERE

February 16 and 17 Set as Dates for Third Annual Interscholastic Tournament.

Wilson high school will defend its state boxing championship and Durham high its wrestling title February 16 and 17 at the third annual interscholastic boxing and wrestling tournament for North Carolina high schools to take place in the Tin Can.

The sports affair will be conducted by the University of North Carolina through the extension division and under the supervision of E. R. Rankin, chairman of the high school athletic association committee. Coach P. H. Quinlan will direct the actual participation during the two-day competition.

Points Govern Awards

The high school winning the largest number of points in the boxing tournament will receive the tournament trophy, which it will keep for one year. The school which wins the award for three years shall have permanent possession of the cup. The wrestling award is governed by the same rules.

Preliminaries will begin in both sports at 3:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon, February 16. The boxing and wrestling tournaments will proceed simultaneously throughout the preliminaries and finals.

INJURED MATMAN LOWERS CHANCES FOR NEW VICTORY

Letterman Auman Will Have to Bear Brunt of Fighting in Heavyweight.

Misfortune lurked in the Tar Heels' wrestling stronghold yesterday. Marshall Thompson, varsity 175 pounder, reported to practice yesterday with a severe case of water on the knee. He was injured in his match with Waldrop, V. P. I.; he will not be able to wrestle all this week, barring his chances to meet the V. M. I. grapplers. The other piece of bad luck was the first big fall from scholastic troubles. Leonard, fine freshman heavy, was put on academic probation Saturday, and will not be able to participate in any more meets this quarter.

With a bad hangover from the V. P. I. meet, Coach Quinlan pressed his charges on to harder work. Only the men who took part in the meet Saturday were given light work. The remaining candidates took a heavy workout, because the grappling

ILLUSION:

In this startling trick, the magician seemingly pushes a huge threaded needle through the body of an assistant, pulling the needle out the other side, followed by the thread.

EXPLANATION:

Under the clothes of the victim is a pipe, extending around one side of his body from front to back. The needle, which is flexible, is inserted in the front end of the pipe, is carried around the body and emerges from the pipe in back. This operation is performed so quickly that the audience does not notice that the needle and thread are momentarily shortened during the act.

CAMELS

It's fun to be fooled — ...it's more fun to KNOW

We like tricks...but we prefer to keep them out of business.

Here's one that's interesting...The illusion that by some obscure magic certain cigarettes are "COOLER" than others. THE EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes burn slowly. They're cool. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They're hot.

Camels are carefully wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane...in the famous, air-tight Humidor Pack. Camels are cool because they're fresh.

A cigarette blended from choice non-irritating tobaccos also gives a cooler effect than one that is harsh and acrid. The finer the tobacco the less irritating it is, and therefore the "cooler."

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is why Camels are cool and mild, non-irritating—full of flavor. This is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made. It's the tobacco that counts. Keep the famous welded Humidor Pack on your Camels. It assures you a fresh, cool smoke.

GERMAN PIANIST TO PLAY AT DUKE THURSDAY NIGHT

Walter Gieseeking Will Appear as Third Presentation of Entertainment Series.

Walter Gieseeking, German pianist, will appear in concert Thursday evening at 8:15 o'clock in Page auditorium of Duke University, Durham. This is the third presentation of this year's Duke entertainment series which brought Doris Kenyon and the Belgian vocal duo, Clairbert and D'Arkor, to Durham last fall.

Gieseeking, although born in Lyons, France, is German by blood and received his training under German tutelage. He entered the Conservatory at Hanover, Germany, at the age of sixteen and remained there until he was twenty-one.

Critic Comments Favorably

Despite the fact that his American debut, made at Aeolian hall February 22, 1926, was practically unannounced, Gieseeking received favorable notice from his first appearance in this country. Olin Downes, musical critic of the New York Times, states that Gieseeking occupies a place all his own among the leading virtuosos of this period. The Times further states that Gieseeking is "the foremost pianistic genius of the twentieth century."

Information concerning tickets for Gieseeking's Durham appearance may be obtained at the office of the department of music, Hill music hall.

Luke Lea, Nashville publisher, and his son Luke Lea, Jr., were called to surrender in the Buncombe county superior court yesterday morning at 11:15 o'clock, but they were not present and capias were ordered issued for their arrest. The Leas were called to surrender under two charges—one for conspiracy and another for misapplication of funds in connection with the closing of the Central Bank and Trust company of Asheville.

METHOD OF GIVING DANCES REVIEWED

Because of recent confusion concerning the procedure of giving dances by organizations and individuals, the University dance committee yesterday announced the existing regulations covering all questions on this matter.

The organization or group wishing to sponsor the dance appoints a committee of three to make an application to the chairman of the faculty committee on dancing several days before the dance is scheduled. This application contains the time, place, character of the dance, a list of the committee in charge of the dance, a list of the chaperons, two members of the University dance committee whom they wish to invite and the name of the doorkeeper. The Monday following the dance the organization's committee meets with that of the University and makes a full report of the dance.

Dr. Skinner Very Anxious To Pay Advertisement Bill

"There's a man here who owes a bill to THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and he is just frantic to pay it before he leaves town." That was a message received in the college newspaper office yesterday morning.

Evidently Tufts College hasn't had its budget cut yet, or Diogenes' honest man has finally been located; for Professor Clarence Skinner, who recently conducted a seminar of liberal religion here, was the man so anxious to pay his bill.

Professor Skinner has been running a series of advertisements in the paper, and he wanted to be sure that he had settled all accounts before leaving Chapel Hill.

mentor is still not satisfied with the condition of his men.

Veteran Opponents

The V. M. I. wrestling team is one of the best clubs that the cadets have had in recent years. This team did not lose any meets last year nor did they lose a single letter man. The squad also has hung up a fine record. The "Flying Squadron" has not tasted defeat at the hands of any Southern conference opponent in three years, and it seems that the Virginians are determined on keeping a clear slate, Saturday.

Coach Quinlan had only four reasons for some consolation concerning the Gobbler meet. Captain Percy Idol; Jimmy Spell, Don Conklin, and P. P. Davis were the four main reasons; all these men easily downed their Virginia Tech opponents. The freshman club is showing promise, and it should round into a formidable machine before the season is over. Captain Shipman, Jesse Miller, and Jack Ranson are the most promising yearling wrestlers.

Both Heavies Out

Now that this bit of misfortune has hit the Carolina club, Coach Quinlan will be seeking some fine heavy in both his varsity and freshman classes. Auman, letter-man in the 175 lb. class, did not see action against the Virginia invaders, but he may start in the V. M. I. meet, although he is hard pressed by Pickett.

In both of the previous meets, Carolina has entered the meet a heavy favorite, this Saturday they will be the underdog. Quinlan is counting on the Fates smiling on his club, and giving the Tar Heels a different view, he hopes as the victor. Certainly the dope bucket might have proved the jinx, both teams were agricultural institutions with unimpressive records to back their entry; however they all proved Tartars in downing the Heels.

TIN CAN TALES

a mistake. Some of those people put up a violent squawk, not that it would cause the decision to be changed, but just because they felt that this being a supposedly liberal institution, they might voice their opinion, no matter how ungently their voices might be. Certainly, the hissing and booing that followed that bout didn't do the name of Carolina any good. The visitors here for that scrap, and there were plenty, surely didn't have any greatly exalted opinion of Carolina's sportsmanship. If they said "just a bunch of bums that can't take it," they were justified.

There's an answer to all we've said, but it's pretty weak. You can say that the crowd had students from both institutions, and claim that the State crowd started it, that they were boisterous and that Carolinians were therefore justified in making their own noise. That attitude is all right if you figure and Carolina must be no worse than the rest but doesn't need to be any better.

The integrity and fairness of Referee Charley Short has never been questioned in any way by any one. Short was in the ring, close to the fighters, in position to see all that went on. The boos were in the stands, with their vision barred in some instances by girders and posts. Short has had years of experience refereeing fights (he has of-season's total to seventy-nine, while his teammate, Henson, who has been running a close second for scoring honors all season, scored twenty-six to total seventy for the entire season.

Scott, another Old East luminary, scored sixteen points as his contribution to the winning team's overwhelming total. Roberts, of the Independents, somehow found opportunity to score eleven points in what turned out to be one of the highest scoring contests in intramural history.

Ruffin, last season's campus champion, will have plenty of food for thought as a result of Old East's exhibition of power yesterday. The holders of the title will meet Old East Friday afternoon, in what is expected to be the highlight game of the season.

Other Games

Delta Kappa Epsilon nosed out Sigma Chi in another intramural game yesterday, 31-30. Alexander sank the winning Deke basket with less than one minute to go. This two-pointer was a climax to Alexander's stellar play throughout the game in which he took individual scoring honors with fourteen points. McGinn added nine to the Deke total, while Barney, Brayhill, Rhem, and Wood were best for Sigma Chi.

Best House, with Irvin scoring fifteen points, nosed out Lewis for the former's third straight win, and the latter's third straight defeat. Unger scored eight points for Lewis, while Sutton's six markers helped Best House to its triumph.

S. A. E. continued on its way to another fraternity circuit championship as it crushed Zeta Beta Tau, 40-8. Parsley, with twelve points, and Connor and Shuford, with ten each, led S. A. E., while Simkowitz was best for the losers.

Theta Chi beat Sigma Phi Epsilon and Sigma Phi Sigma downed Lambda Chi Alpha, 2-0, by forfeits.

Today's Schedule

Today's intramural basketball program follows:

3:45 p. m.—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Tau Epsilon Phi; (2) Mangum vs. Crescent Cafeteria; (3) Swain Hall vs. Old West.
4:45 p. m.—(1) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Pi Kappa Phi; (2) Phi Delta Chi vs. Alpha Tau Omega; (3) Phi Delta Theta vs. Phi Kappa Sigma.

ficiated at more amateur bouts than any man in the world). There was hardly one of those who booed who could claim refereeing so much as a single point. You'll grant us those points. All right, now answer us this: who was the better qualified to render a fair decision?

That's enough. We got that off our chests whether it makes any difference to anyone or not. If you mark us down as the "Young Reformer" you are justified, but we always did think there was something fine about this University and we hate to doubt for a minute that this institution can't outdo all others in everything, including sportsmanship.

New extension classes for the spring quarter have been started in Roseboro, Clinton, and Carthage, according to R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension department. Kenneth R. Byerly, instructor in the geology department here, has charge of the new geology class in Roseboro and Professor L. C. Approximately twenty-five other extension classes organized in the fall are being reorganized for continuation of work during the spring quarter, which begins immediately.

The next speaker scheduled to appear is Ellery Walter, who will address the school January 30.

GRADUATES PLACE PROBLEMS BEFORE GATHERED CLERGY

Methodist Ministers Hear Students Tell of Impress of Circumstance on Minds.

At a recent meeting of the Methodist preachers in Philadelphia, many student problems of importance were brought up by University of Pennsylvania students. One student, an official of the University Christian association, presented figures on the number of college graduates without jobs, pointing out that seventy per cent of last year's graduates are in this class, and forty per cent of the class of 1930. Besides being in the unemployed group these men are adding large debts to those which they have already contracted. According to this student, the important factor in today's life is "who you can do and who you know rather than what you can do and what you know."

Co-eds' Problem

In presenting the co-eds' problem, a recent graduate stated that there is "a tendency towards cynicism" noticeable in all co-eds and that any attitude which might possibly point to the contrary is probably a defense on their parts. In all students there seems to be a growing sense of morbidity and a serious consideration of suicide. It was brought up at the Philadelphia convention.

Among the graduates who are fortunate enough to possess employment, the types of jobs are menial, while many recently graduated students offer to take room and board in payment for their work. The result of such a life is becoming very noticeable in student outlook, and some either become rabid fundamentalists or complete atheists.

THIS sort of thing has gone too far! When asked what product we get from whales, Bill Boner said, "Little whales."

Let's take action at once. Get him a good pipe and a tin of good tobacco. We all know a pipe smooths out the wrinkles, clears the mind for its best thinking. And we all know what smoking tobacco goes best in a good pipe. For a recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Coach Quinlan had only four reasons for some consolation concerning the Gobblers meet. Captain Percy Idol; Jimmy Spell, Don Conklin, and P. P. Davis were the four main reasons; all these men easily downed their Virginia Tech opponents. The freshman club is showing promise, and it should round into a formidable machine before the season is over. Captain Shipman, Jesse Miller, and Jack Ranson are the most promising yearling wrestlers.

Both Heavies Out

Now that this bit of misfortune has hit the Carolina club, Coach Quinlan will be seeking some fine heavy in both his varsity and freshman classes. Auman, letter-man in the 175 lb. class, did not see action against the Virginia invaders, but he may start in the V. M. I. meet, although he is hard pressed by Pickett.

In both of the previous meets, Carolina has entered the meet a heavy favorite, this Saturday they will be the underdog. Quinlan is counting on the Fates smiling on his club, and giving the Tar Heels a different view, he hopes as the victor. Certainly the dope bucket might have proved the jinx, both teams were agricultural institutions with unimpressive records to back their entry; however they all proved Tartars in downing the Heels.

a mistake. Some of those people put up a violent squawk, not that it would cause the decision to be changed, but just because they felt that this being a supposedly liberal institution, they might voice their opinion, no matter how ungently their voicings might be. Certainly, the hissing and booing that followed that bout didn't do the name of Carolina any good. The visitors here for that scrap, and there were plenty, surely didn't have any greatly exalted opinion of Carolina's sportsmanship. If they said "just a bunch of bums that can't take it," they were justified.

There's an answer to all we've said, but it's pretty weak. You can say that the crowd had students from both institutions, and claim that the State crowd started it, that they were boisterous and that Carolinians were therefore justified in making their own noise. That attitude is all right if you figure and Carolina must be no worse than the rest but doesn't need to be any better.

The integrity and fairness of Referee Charley Short has never been questioned in any way by any one. Short was in the ring, close to the fighters, in position to see all that went on. The boosers were in the stands, with their vision barred in some instances by girders and posts. Short has had years of experience refereeing fights (he has of-season's total to seventy-nine, while his teammate, Henson, who has been running a close second for scoring honors all season, scored twenty-six to total seventy for the entire season.

Scott, another Old East luminary, scored sixteen points as his contribution to the winning team's overwhelming total. Roberts, of the Independents, somehow found opportunity to score eleven points in what turned out to be one of the highest scoring contests in intramural history.

Ruffin, last season's campus champions, will have plenty of food for thought as a result of Old East's exhibition of power yesterday. The holders of the title will meet Old East Friday afternoon, in what is expected to be the highlight game of the season.

Other Games

Delta Kappa Epsilon nosed out Sigma Chi in another intramural game yesterday, 31-30. Alexander sank the winning Deke basket with less than one minute to go. This two-pointer was a climax to Alexander's stellar play throughout the game in which he took individual scoring honors with fourteen points. McGinn added nine to the Deke total, while Barney, Brayhill, Rhem, and Wood were best for Sigma Chi.

Best House, with Irvin scoring fifteen points, nosed out Lewis for the former's third straight win, and the latter's third straight defeat. Unger scored Eight points for Lewis, while Sutton's six markers helped Best House to its triumph.

S. A. E. continued on its way to another fraternity circuit championship as it crushed Zeta Beta Tau, 40-8. Parsley, with twelve points, and Connor and Shuford, with ten each, led S. A. E., while Simkowitz was best for the losers.

Theta Chi beat Sigma Phi Epsilon and Sigma Phi Sigma downed Lambda Chi Alpha, 2-0, by forfeits.

Today's Schedule

Today's intramural basketball program follows:

3:45 p. m.—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Tau Epsilon Phi; (2) Mangum vs. Crescent Cafeteria; (3) Swain Hall vs. Old West.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Pi Kappa Alpha vs. Pi Kappa Phi; (2) Phi Delta Chi vs. Alpha Tau Omega; (3) Phi Delta Theta vs. Phi Kappa Sigma.

ficiated at more amateur bouts than any man in the world). There was hardly one of those who booed who could claim refereeing so much as a single bout. You'll grant us those points. All right, now answer us this: who was the better qualified to render a fair decision?

That's enough. We got that off our chests whether it makes any difference to anyone or not. If you mark us down as the "Young Reformer" you are justified, but we always did think there was something fine about this University and we hate to doubt for a minute that this institution can't outdo all others in everything, including sportsmanship.

Class Organized

Byerly and MacKinney Instruct Newly Organized Extension Classes in Geology and History.

New extension classes for the spring quarter have been started in Roseboro, Clinton, and Carthage, according to R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension department. Kenneth R. Byerly, instructor in the geology department here, has charge of the new geology class in Roseboro and Professor L. C. MacKinney is the instructor of a class in European history in the crusading age in Clinton. These classes meet with their instructors once a week. Approximately twenty-five other extension classes organized in the fall are being reorganized for continuation of work during the spring quarter, which begins immediately.

SIX LECTURERS STILL TO APPEAR AT N. C. C. W.

The lecture course of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina has six addresses scheduled for the rest of the year. Lecturers yet to appear at Aycock auditorium include the Manchurian No Yong Park, the character potrayalist, Frances Homer, and Harold Nicholson and Lady V. Sackville-West, authors.

The next speaker scheduled to appear is Ellery Walter, who will address the school January 30.

GRADUATES PLACE PROBLEMS BEFORE GATHERED CLERGY

Methodist Ministers Hear Students Tell of Impress of Circumstance on Minds.

At a recent meeting of the Methodist preachers in Philadelphia, many student problems of importance were brought up by University of Pennsylvania students. One student, an official of the University Christian association, presented figures on the number of college graduates without jobs, pointing out that seventy per cent of last year's graduates are in this class, and forty per cent of the class of 1930. Besides being in the unemployed group these men are adding large debts to those which they have already contracted. According to this student, the important factor in today's life is "who you can do and who you know rather than what you can do and what you know."

Co-eds' Problem

In presenting the co-eds' problem, a recent graduate stated that there is "a tendency towards cynicism" noticeable in all co-eds and that any attitude which might possibly point to the contrary is probably a defense on their parts. In all students there seems to be a growing sense of morbidity and a serious consideration of suicide. It was brought up at the Philadelphia convention.

Among the graduates who are fortunate enough to possess employment, the types of jobs are menial, while many recently graduated students offer to take room and board in payment for their work. The result of such a life is becoming very noticeable in student outlook, and some either become rabid fundamentalists or complete atheists.

How To Avoid BONERS

A SATIRE IS A MAN WHO IS 50%
GOAT

THIS sort of thing has gone too far! When asked what product we get from whales, Bill Boner said, "Little whales."

Let's take action at once. Get him a good pipe and a tin of good tobacco. We all know a pipe smooths out the wrinkles, clears the mind for its best thinking. And we all know what smoking tobacco goes best in a good pipe. For a recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Next time you "cram" for an exam, light up a pipeful of Edgeworth. Ah! See how that different blend of fine old burleys makes even the toughest problem a whole lot easier.

Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms — Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes — 15¢ pocket package to pound humidor tin. If you would like to try before you buy, write Larus & Bra Co., 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va., for a free sample packet.

APPROPRIATIONS TO BE DISCUSSED IN MASS MEETING

University Students Will Make Plans to Attend Gathering in Raleigh.

Plans are now under way for a huge student mass meeting in Memorial hall, Monday night at 7:00 o'clock, for the purpose of stimulating interest among the students to attend the citizens' mass meeting being called in Raleigh, Tuesday to protest unreasonable reduction in educational expenditures of the state. At the Monday meeting the students assembled will, likewise, give official sanction to a petition to be sent to the appropriation committee of the legislature, and another to the state press.

The meeting is sponsored entirely by student leaders on the campus in the hope of demonstrating to the members of the legislature the interest that the student body has in any action they might take toward slashing the University's budget for the coming year, as well as those of the other state educational institutions.

Plans for Transportation

Plans are being made to carry some two or three hundred students over to the citizens' meeting Tuesday. And those persons who will have cars available to carry students to Raleigh at that time are asked to get in touch with E. C. Daniel as soon as possible.

Several campus organizations are co-operating in sponsoring the mass meeting Monday night. Letters are being sent to dormitory and fraternity presidents urging them to see that their respective groups are in full attendance at the assembly.

GLEE CLUB WILL SPONSOR SHOWING OF GRAND OPERA

"Pagliacci" Brings Grand Opera To Talking Screen for First Time.

The University Glee Club will sponsor the showing Pagliacci, the first production of grand opera in motion picture form at the Carolina theatre Monday, January 30. There will be matinee and evening showings of the picture. E. C. Smith, manager of the local theatre, has announced that there will be no advance in the regular admission price.

The opera was written by Ruggiero Leoncavallo, Italian librettist and composer of the nineteenth century, for a competition in which an opera of his fellow countryman Mascagni, the familiar Cavallero Rusticano, took first honors. Pagliacci has, however, become equally popular with the opera chosen as superior by the judges.

The talking picture version of Pagliacci is the first complete production of grand opera in sound movies. It was produced under the direction of Fortune Gallo, producer of the San Carlo opera company. Carlo Peroni is conductor of the chorus and orchestra, numbering a total of 225 musicians. The principal players appearing in the film are Alba Novella, soprano; Fernando Bertini, tenor; Mario Valle, baritone; Francesco Curci, tenor; and Giuseppe Interante, baritone.

R. P. Russell and W. R. Eddleman to Argue Negative Side of Debt Cancellation Question.

At the debate try-outs Monday night, R. P. Russell and W. R. Eddleman, with Dave Morgan as alternate, were chosen as a negative team to represent the University of North Carolina in a debate with the University of Pittsburgh next Tuesday night; the subject of the debate is Resolved: "That the Inter-allied War Debts Should be Cancelled." Although Carolina will take the negative side in this debate, an affirmative team was chosen for future reference, composed of Donald Seawell and F. H. Rankin, with Edwin Lanier as alternate. The judges for the try-outs were Professors E. J. Woodhouse, G. M. McKie, and W. A. Olsen.

Engineers Complete Annual Dance Plans

The time and place for the annual engineer's ball has been definitely set for Friday, February 3, in Bynum gymnasium, from 9:00 until 1:00 o'clock. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

The dance will be strictly an invitation affair, each engineer receiving two invitations, which will be available the early part of next week. The faculty members and their wives will act in the capacity of chaperons.

There will be an important meeting of all Socialists at the University at 7:00 o'clock in room 210, Graham Memorial.

CEMENT MARKER WILL BE PUT AT BASE OF TOWER

Latest Construction on Campus Is Part of National Triangular Measurement System.

Students and professors walking across the campus yesterday were surprised to find that a huge steel tower was being placed in the center of the campus, between South building and the library. Little groups of students stopped all during the day to inquire about this atrocity, but moved slowly on, much relieved when they were told that it would be removed in a few days.

This tower is being erected by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey as a part of the triangular system used in mapping the country. Two other similar towers have been placed in this vicinity, one at Duke University and the other at Hillsboro. The exact distance between these towers was determined by a group of army engineers who came through here several weeks ago. These engineers worked with steel tapes and obtained the measurement with an error of only a small fraction of an inch.

Lights Will Form Triangle

An automobile headlight will be placed in the top of the tower and for several nights will be directed toward the other stations nearby. Observers will measure the angles between these stations to the fraction of a second, and in this manner a triangle will be formed. After serving its purpose here the tower will be moved to another location.

The purpose of these measurements is to furnish a base to which future surveys and boundaries will be anchored. Similar triangles are being formed all over the country with the latitude and longitude accurately figured, and these points will serve as permanent fixed bases to which all land marks will be "tied." A concrete marker will be placed in the spot now occupied by the tower.

UPPER CABINETS HEAR BRADSHAW AND COMER

Addresses by Dean F. F. Bradshaw and Harry F. Comer, Y. M. C. A. secretary, featured Monday night's meetings of the upper Y. M. C. A. cabinets.

Dean Bradshaw spoke to the sophomore group on "Ethics," and in his address implored the cabinet and all University students not to desert the present honor system in favor of another as has been suggested.

Comer led a discussion in the senior cabinet on inter-racial problems which was entered into by several members. L. L. Hutchison led the devotional.

DR. HARRY CHASE RESIGNS POST AT ILLINOIS SCHOOL

Ex-President of University Accepts Chancellorship at New York University.

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, former president of the University of North Carolina, and the immediate predecessor of President Frank Graham, resigns his post today as president of the University of Illinois to become chancellor of New York University.

Although expressing regrets at leaving the University of Illinois, Dr. Chase said: "The chancellorship of New York University seems to me to present a distinctive and challenging opportunity and I have felt that I should accept it. New York University is carrying through a program of service to the metropolitan area which makes it, to me, one of the most interesting educational institutions in the country."

Starts New Schools

Under Chase's administration at the University of Illinois a college of fine and applied arts and a school of physical welfare were added to the University, disciplinary powers were vested in the university senate, and an economy program was carried through which cut down the operating costs of the school by twenty-two per cent for the current biennium.

Chase is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Clark University. He came to the University of North Carolina as professor of the philosophy of education in 1910. Following the death of Dr. Edward Kidder Graham in 1918, Chase became acting-president of the University. Serving in this capacity, he carried out Graham's reconstruction program so successfully that the board of trustees appointed him president of the University in 1920. From 1920 to 1930 under Chase's administration the University experienced the greatest decade of material growth in its history.

Chase left Chapel Hill in 1930, to become president of the University of Illinois, which office he has held for the past two years. Dr. Chase's resignation will be effective at the end of the scholastic year, or "as soon after as may be expedient."

TRUSTEES DEFER ACTION IN FILLING VICE-PRESIDENCY

Board Passes Resolution to Have Five Members Appear at Appropriations Hearing.

The board of trustees of the University yesterday afternoon indefinitely postponed the election of a vice-president for the Chapel Hill unit of the consolidated school.

Dr. Louis Round Wilson, librarian at the University of Chicago and formerly at the University, was nominated for the position by a special committee of the board but the executive committee suggested that the election be put off.

The board authorized Dr. Frank Graham, president of the Greater University, to make "temporary provision" for the conduct of the Chapel Hill unit pending the election of a vice-president.

Reports Heard

Dr. Frank Graham, Dr. E. C. Brooks, vice-president of State College at Raleigh, and Dr. J. I. Foust, vice-president of the College of Women at Greensboro, made their annual reports to the board of trustees, on the condition of their respective units of the Greater University.

The University budget was discussed and a resolution was passed stating that the Governor, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, who is ex-officio chairman of the board, appoint five of the board to appear, with the president and the two vice-presidents, before the joint appropriations committee of the legislature. The date of the hearing before this committee has not been definitely announced, but it is expected to take place next week.

FETZER BEMOANS STUDENT CONDUCT AT STATE MATCH

Director of Athletics Speaks to Freshman Y Cabinet Urging Better Sportsmanship.

Speaking before the freshman friendship council Monday night, Coach Bob Fetzer deplored the unsportsmanlike conduct of University fans at the U. N. C.-State boxing meet last Saturday, and urged that all members of the group use their influence in curbing a possible recurrence of the performance.

"The University," said Coach Fetzer, "has always prided itself on its sportsmanship. Cases of complaints by visiting teams of Carolina's lack of sporting qualities have been exceedingly rare. It is up to everyone on the campus to cooperate in re-establishing here that same spirit of good sportsmanship which so obviously was disregarded last Saturday."

Olympic Sportsmanship

Coach Fetzer cited instances of real sportsmanship that occurred last summer at the Olympic games at Los Angeles, where he was a spectator. The complete lack of underhand methods and the strict compliance with the Olympic oath was marvelous, said the University athletic director. He went on further to say that the fact that spectators disagree with the decision of the referee does not call for any vocal manifestation on their part.

Fields

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, president of the University of Illinois and former president of this University, has been elected to one of the highest honors to which an educational leader can aspire. He has accepted the responsible position of chancellor of New York University, whose enrollment of 40,000 students makes it the largest institution of higher learning in the United States.

Dr. Chase was born in Groveland, Massachusetts, April 11, 1883. He received degrees from Dartmouth College and Clark University and became a member of the faculty of this University in 1910 as professor of the philosophy of education. Upon the death of Dr. Edward Kidder Graham in 1918, he was successively appointed to the offices of acting dean, chairman of the faculty, and finally acting president. During his decade as president, from 1920 to 1930, Dr. Chase has been remembered as one of the most efficient executives this University has ever had, and his name is inseparably linked with its growth and improvement under his regime.

The ability displayed by Dr. Chase as president of the University of Illinois was largely instrumental in securing his election to the office which he will hold in the future. Under his administration, two new schools were added to the University's regular facilities—the college of fine and applied arts and the school of physical welfare. Among other improvements effected by him was an economy program which cut twenty-two per cent from operating costs for the current biennium.

Acceptance of the chancellorship of New York University makes Dr. Chase one of the foremost of the country's educators. Carolina may well be proud to number him among her presidents.—A.T.D.

Ideas at Face Value

The most important result of the open forum lecture series being conducted by a group of campus organizations is not in the amount of information which the students have gathered, but in the number of questions which the speakers have left unanswered. A mind that absorbs every drop of wisdom as it falls from the lips of the wise is like a sponge that needs only to be squeezed to lose all that is has absorbed.

The most valuable type of mind is that one which can and is not afraid to choose what it will learn. And having made its choices, it has the strength to build upon what it has learned. It will not accept another man's ideas merely because that man is considered an authority. Rather, it will ignore the man and take his ideas only for what they are worth.

The possessor of this discerning and judicial mind is stimulated by the expression of another's thoughts. He is not deluged with a flood of ideas of which he understands only the letter, but never the spirit. He is like a man who can not be content to live in or rent another's house, but must build his own house from materials which he himself selects and puts together after his own plan.

Development of this type of mind requires that it shall ever be suspended before judgment, that it shall eternally possess a questioning attitude. So, whenever a speaker appearing here leaves a question answered he has stimulated some mind to constructive thought.—E.C.D.

Lochinvars Out Of The North

The grave problems confronting our legislators in these stormy, fear-laden days would suffice to tax the wisdom of the Delphic oracle. Faced with tasks even supermen might quail before, they must weigh matters in the cold light of reason, calculate the most remote consequences of their activities, and render decisions affecting the lives of millions living and millions yet unborn. Truly in these times a cool head, a fair mind and a courageous spirit are prime essentials for men in high places.

At present, matters of finance seem to be demanding by far the most attention from our representatives. The "Budget" has grown from a harmless accountant's tool to a monstrous creature of claws and fangs with a gleam of destruction in its baleful glances. It is small wonder, some say, that business men quake and senators tremble at the very mention of its name. To placate this bogy must be their first consideration.

It might be well, however, to examine carefully some of the methods proposed for the taming of this modern Grendel. One of these methods which has been the object of much solicitude is the scaling down of funds for educational purposes. To be sure, everything and everyone must share in the reaping of the harvest of "Rampant Individualism" (which so recently flourished and quickly reached bloated maturity). Institutions of learning cannot be excluded from this generalization. However, if we must fall back in retreat and seek retrenchment, the last element to be subjected to undue danger certainly should be that delicate, carefully nurtured, and yet most dynamically purposive of civilization's blooms—Education.

The very foundation upon which rests our high material attainments consists chiefly of our complex educational system; the deeper and more significant features of man's existence depend upon the institutions of higher learning for sustenance. Let it be our hope that the future will not see, because of educational neglect, a stunted, morbid and hopeless degraded population—but rather a people filled with enthusiastic confidence in man's mental growth and social betterment.—V.J.L.

Results Rather Than Means

It would seem to be in line with the policy of a progressive university to eliminate insofar as is possible all elements in its educational system which smack of the secondary school. A system of compulsory attendance in a high school is very necessary in the light of the kind of work that must be done and the attitude which is usually held towards such work by students of a secondary school. There is a given task assigned to both teachers and taught, a definite curriculum which does not allow for much variation from the prescribed subject-matter. This training of youth in the essential background of the intellectual field seems well-advised.

In college, however, there is an entirely different problem to be faced. It is taken for granted, or at least it should be, that men and women come to college of their own free will and with a desire for learning. Otherwise they have no place on the college campus. If they attend our University, they then find themselves, after the first two years' work, given a wide range of subjects and corresponding courses which they may take up. Given as they are freedom to choose their field for more intense concentration, it does not seem quite logical to make any requirements as to class attendance, especially inasmuch as the students have elected to study the subjects which they are taking up.

A system of compulsory attendance in a university would seem to indicate a basic lack of belief in the sincerity of college students. It does, indeed, appear strange that students, supposedly adults, should choose to be educated; and then in the same breath, be subject to a discipline, apparently enforced to prevent them from not choosing to be educated. The fallacy in this aim of obligatory attendance indicates better and more work. It is everywhere tacitly admitted that physical presence in a class room in no way guarantees attention. It is possible to conceive, then, of a student of great ambition and intellectual curiosity who attended his class only fifty or sixty per cent of the time. Similarly, it is possible to conceive, and this more universally, of a student of little or no intellectual interest attending class like a well-constructed robot.

It is not necessarily true that a system of optional attendance would mean less actual class attendance than under a compulsory ruling. If the professor's lectures were of a stimulating sort and if his comments on difficult points lucid and pertinent, the student who cut would be using bad judgment. On the other hand, if the professor makes use of his class period merely to rehash what is already well stated in a good textbook, then it would seem that class attendance should be of secondary importance. In a system of optional attendance, a professor is able to check up on that all-important question of whether or not he is getting his material across by the size and regularity of his audience. In this way, more of real, sincere interest would be aroused in the student, and a far more frank and honest relationship would be established between professors and students. Let the discipline of the college office be exercised from the point of view of results

To the Editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

That the movement started by The Buccaneer is a desirable one and deserving of the support of the student body seems fairly obvious. I refer to the proposal that the chief of staff of the publication (and your editorial proposal to extend the suggestion to all publications) be elected by the staff rather than by popular vote. In theory, I suppose, the present method of electing the chiefs of staff is designed to place control of publication policy in the hands of the students. That would be desirable. But in practice, I suspect, the control of policy falls into the hands of political cliques who pull the strings the right way during elections.

The question may arise as to whether or not the election of the chiefs of staff by the staffs themselves would not constitute policy control by cliques. I suppose it would. But it would seem that it would be better to have the publications run by a non-political group and, what is most important, and what Mr. Mason pointed to in his statement Saturday, by experts in the particular fields.

Election of the chiefs of staff by the staffs themselves would, in most cases, probably, tend to reward meritorious service to the publication, and at the same time place in office the best all-around man. Further, I should imagine, such a way of selecting the chiefs would work for smoother running staffs.

Since this is but my first year here, some of my presumptions may be made with a not-too-good basis of fact and experience. However, from what I hear of the political machinations on the campus, and from what I have witnessed of the freshman elections, it seems to me highly desirable to get the publications out of the field of politics. It is disheartening to anyone with aspirations in the field of journalism to feel that promotion is likely to come to him who can play politics, or to him that belongs to a frat, regardless of the kind of work others may have done. And again, from the standpoint of the student body as a whole, it should be better for the University to have publications run by those interested in journalism and the school as a whole rather than by those who must divide their interests between journalism and political machines.

Yet, in all fairness to the present incumbents, one cannot be blind to the fact that this movement has come from the publications themselves, and that THE TAR HEEL has in the past condemned the machinations of political groups on the campus. But I think it possible that the paper could be still more disinterested in its political views, and could, possibly, give a still healthier tone to campus life, if it were separated from the graft and corruption with which Carolina seems to be cursed along with New York and Chicago and Philadelphia.—D. B.

A sports writer in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, student newspaper at the Carolina branch, casually mentions State College as the "Raleigh sub-division of the University." And Dr. Frank Graham remarks that the proposed budget will reduce Carolina to a prep school!—State Technician.

rather than means. The day of paternalism is passed. Let marks, not bodily presence in a lecture room, be an indication of a student's sincerity of purpose.—B.B.P.

With Contemporaries

For the Love Of Battle

It is somewhat startlingly illuminating and not at all uninteresting to learn that the so-called "Big Four" of eastern athletics have all of a sudden agreed to forget their minor relations. It could not, of course, be in the interests of the filthy lucre that arrangements might bring high minded institutions, that would be above lowering themselves for such mercenary motives, so the only thing left to believe is that the boys couldn't bear the separation any longer and just had to come over in each other's back yards to engage in contests of brawn and brains.

From dear old Harvard, Eli Yale, the Tigers of Princeton, and Dartmouth's indomitables comes the formation of the new interlocking schedule agreement. King football will once more reign without resistance over these four schools during the 1934 season. Harvard and Princeton are said by the sports scribes to be a little wary of each other in this agreement and have failed to do anything further towards once more becoming cordial enemies than signing a two year agreement subject to renewal. Both schools will continue to point to one of the other members of the agreement as the big climax foe.

A little bit of the same spirit might be seen in this year's Army-Navy game and the resumed relations between the two service schools, which were one of the methods of maintaining once again a high box office return in addition to the much-touted spirit of rivalry between the two. There is nothing wrong with the idea of resuming relations between old time rivals in the interest of bringing out bigger gates during a time when big gates are nearly all gone, but the humorous formality of the procedures in almost every case tickles the sense of something or other as it makes an attempt to cover up the fact that big gates were missing when the two old rivals weren't on the schedule and that the injured pride would have probably lasted much longer had the current economic depression been lifted by now.

We are in favor of contests between old rivals as we feel that in collegiate and all amateur sports this spirit is the outstanding claim to fame of the contests, but we fail to see the necessity of so carefully avoiding the facts of the case. When we need box office receipts to maintain collegiate football let's go after them legitimately and pile them up to a point where we can have real contests with the players protected by proper equipment made possible by the gate receipts, but let's not try to fool the public that it was just a service to the great mass of fans that the schools are once again resuming athletic relations.—Illinois Daily Illini.

Dependent Thinking

A Chicago dean, J. R. Jewell, has been giving freshmen some advice on how to get good marks. He warns against too much independence of thought, and adds that "A" students are usually the ones who are careful not to disagree with instructors.

This bit of counsel sounds like the kind of worldly sophomoric might give a first year man. But since a dean of an important university has seriously offered it, the statement is worth some comment.

Generally speaking, it takes some intelligence and more knowledge of a subject to disagree with the instructor than to nod in agreement. Excepting the annoying students who always disagree with their teachers on principle, it is almost certain that a student arguing with his professor is above the general level of his class. To disagree with the text or the teacher, a student must be thoroughly familiar with their point of view as well as with some other. Such a student deserves a better mark than one who is willing to accept his professor as the final authority.

Forced acceptance of a certain point of view is foreign to the spirit of a university. A modern university, like Chicago or Minnesota, has an army of scholars at work, making conclusions only after they have weighed all evidence on both sides. Should these scholars, who are the faculty of a university, teach their classes only one side of a controversial question and lower the mark of a student who introduces evidence on the other side?

Most faculty members, at least those of our acquaintance, would be the first to answer, "No!" But there are all too few of them who can really remain unprejudiced against a student who has the knowledge, the intelligence, and finally the courage to disagree violently with them. Too many professors are quick to dismiss such a student as one of the objectionable type we have already mentioned, and overlook his sincerity, his interest in the subject and his desire to learn. A great many faculty men and women, who would publicly brand Dean Jewell's words as very poor advice, would do well to consider carefully whether independent thought actually counts for or against a student in their classes.—Minnesota Daily.

WHITE PHANTOMS MAKE READY FOR TILT WITH V. M. I.

Downey, Forward, and Hancock, Center, Are Main Threats Of Flying Squadron.

The Flying Squadron from Virginia Military Institute will make its initial appearance in the Tin Can Friday night when the Cadets tangle with the Tar Heels in the main event of a double header. The Tar Babies will engage the Oak Ridge Cadets in the preliminary.

For the first time in several years, the Virginians are represented by a fine basketball team, and they have made trouble for all their opponents to date. In fact, they provided one of the winter season's major upsets when they toppled Maryland from the ranks of the undefeated by a 31-30 score.

Captain Pushes Squad

As a result Coach Bo Shepard has been pushing his squad hard for Friday's battle, with an eye on the Tar Heels' unmarked record.

Coach Shepard will probably rely on his usual starting team to open the game with the Cadets, although there is a strong possibility that Earle Beale may supplant George Brandt at the center post. The Wilmington lad has been improving very rapidly and can stand the "gaff" as has been evidenced in Carolina's recent games, and as a result, might be used alternately with Brandt. The other starting positions will be filled by Captain Wilmer Hines and Virgil Weathers at forward, and Dave McCachren and Snooks Aitken at guard.

The two main V. M. I. threats will of course be the persons of Downey, forward, and Hancock, center. The former is fifth in Southern Conference scoring circles with thirty-three points scored in three Conference games while his team mate is sixth with a total of thirty-one points.

BOXERS RESUME PRACTICE AFTER TIE WITH STATE

Fine Showing by Untested Tar Heels Helps Situation as Squad Resumes Work.

Although the tie outcome of the State meet due to the efforts of a really vicious Wolf-pack, surprised many followers of the ring pastime, it by no means discouraged the fighters who are gunning twice as determinedly for the V. M. I. team which comes here this week.

The meet revealed that Carolina has several boys who are the classiest standard bearers that have been around here in many a winter.

Quarles and Landis

In particular, there are Norm Quarles and Platt Landis who scored knockouts. The crowd was left gasping at the sizzling left hook that Quarles landed effectively and the potent right of Landis which dropped his man as soon as it connected. It is generally agreed that those two punches will bring the boys a long way to glory this year.

Quarles went after his opponent in a business-like manner, taking his time until the right moment. The right moment came in the third and, after a few of Quarles left-hooks, the State lightweight was barely able to stand and the referee stopped the contest.

Landis, with the echo of the gong still in the air, stood in a neutral corner watching the referee count over his opponent whom he had already felled.

New Heavyweight

Platt Landis is Carolina's heavy-hitting boxer in the unlimited class. He won both his opening bouts and set something of a record in the State-Carolina meet when he felled Stephens twice and disposed of him by the knockout route in a half round. Landis is from Charlotte.

The Can Opener

CLAIROBORN M. CARR

THE POINT-A-MINUTE FAD of the White Phantoms seems to be a permanent practice. The Tar Heels have played six games, or 240 minutes and have racked up 286 points which leaves 46 points over. The Phantoms have averaged a little better than 47 points a game so far which is not at all bad. All this time the opposition has come up with 135 points, or an average of a little more than 22 points a game. Coach Bo Shepard's men have committed 77 personal fouls and one technical misplay. The opponents have caught the referee's eye 78 times. Out of 78 free tries the Phantoms have hit the mark 47 times, well over half.

CAPTAIN WILMER HINES leads the Tar Heel racketeers with a total of 76 points. Wilmer has scored 31 field goals and 14 free throws. Weathers is next with 56 points, coming from 25 field goals and 6 free throws. George Brandt and Snooks Aitken are tied for third place with 36 points each scored through 15 shots from the field and 6 from the free line. Wilmer has connected on 13 of 17 free throws while Dave McCachren has rung 8 of 10 free chances to lead in this particular. These babies will have to keep this up next Tuesday in Durham when they meet the Duke Blue Devils if they intend to keep their slate clean. Coach Shepard has already put a ban on his players having frills on the sidelines, it is said that one member looked a little stage struck last Saturday in Raleigh and we will have none of that.

COACH SHEPARD HAD A bunch of the "fellas" out to his house for supper the other night. And you know the cutest thing, after supper the coach wanted everyone to play bridge. Hasn't he changed? Someone asked Cricket Weathers if he was a torch singer, and Verge said, "Why no, I just sing in the dark?" But he didn't tell anyone who he sang to, but I guess we all know by now. Weathers said something about there being a firebug who lives in the depths of Old West who has been his shining light on several occasions this year, wandering back and forth from Old West to Ruffin and er. After some one recounted in somewhat skeleton form an amusing incident which involved George Brandt's trip to Wake Forest with the baseball team his freshman year, everybody present voted that Vergil send off for a box of corn cobs.

TWO UNDEFEATED TEAMS WHIPPED IN INTRAMURALS

T. E. P. Wins Fourth Game at Expense of Unbeaten Phi Gamma Delta Outfit.

Three more teams ran their winning streaks to four-game proportions in yesterday's intramural basketball program while but two others, previously unbeaten, fell by the wayside. Pi Kappa Alpha and Phi Gamma Delta were the teams which suffered their first set-backs yesterday, with Pi Kappa Phi and Tau Epsilon Phi performing the feat.

T. E. P. chalked up its fourth win of the season in a hard-fought contest with Phi Gamma Delta. The score was 25-23, with the game going into an extra period before the verdict was reached. With the score 22-22 at the beginning of the extra period, Jacobs scored a field goal and Perris got a foul shot while the best Phi Gam could do was a foul shot by White. Perris, of T. E. P., took scoring honors among the individuals with eleven points, counting his shot in the extra period. Ostrow, his teammate, added six. Hodges led the losers with six points.

Swain Hall Scores

Old West was no match for the onrushing Swain Hall quintet which won yesterday's contest between the two, 44-17. Rhodes led the Swain outfit with fifteen points and Kennerly added eight to the team's total. Bost scored for the Old West team.

Mangum outsourced Crescent Cafeteria, 32-20, to keep its slate clean for the season. Smith scored fourteen points to lead Mangum, while Todd of the losers scored ten to gain second honors. Vick of Mangum scored eight for the winners.

Tucker and Mosier, scoring thirteen and twelve points respectively, led Phi Delta Theta to a 37-11 win over Phi Kappa Sigma. Reid was best for the Phi Kap outfit which dropped its fourth successive contest of the season as it lost the game.

Other Games

Pi Kappa Alpha fell from the ranks of undefeated quintets when it was upset by Pi Kappa Phi, 29-25. Three men, Cannon and Umstead of Pi Kappa Phi, and Bullock, of Pika, scored eight points in the close contest, while Pendleton, of Pi Kappa Phi, and Woerner and Sprinkle, Pika stars, scored five points each.

Phi Delta Chi dropped its third straight game to A. T. O., 36-29. Alan Smith, with twelve points, and Menge, with ten, led the winners on the attack, but Barham, of the losers, scored most points, fifteen.

Today's Schedule

3:45 p. m.—(1) Delta Psi vs. Delta Tau Delta; (2) Theta Chi vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (3) Manly vs. New Dorms.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Kappa Alpha vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon; (2) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Zeta Psi; (3) Aycock vs. Everett.

Foust Announces Cut In Faculty Salaries

Effective with January and continuing through the next five months, a cut of five per cent will be made in the salary of faculty members of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, according to a report made public by Dr. J. I. Foust, head of that college.

The five per cent cut came as a last resort to balance the budget of the institution, Dr. Foust stated. This reduction is in addition to a ten per cent cut authorized by the legislature which went into effect in September, 1931.

HARLEY SHUFORD BOLSTERS TENNIS TEAM'S CHANCES

Squad Takes Advantage of Fine Weather to Get in Hard Preliminary Practice.

Coach Kenfield of varsity and freshman tennis is back at the University after an extended business trip and is at present giving his tennis teams plenty of work as a result of the good weather.

Harley Shuford, a member of last year's number one doubles team, who was out of school last quarter is back and will be ready to go when the season opens. On the other hand Luke Abels who has a job is not back this quarter and Bitsy Grant is still out of school. Neither is likely to come back next quarter.

Grant in Miami

At present last year's number one man is in Miami playing in the all-south championship tournament which began Monday. Other stars entered in this tourney are Cliff Sutter of Tulane and third ranking amateur tennis player in the United States; Gregory Mangin, seventh ranking tennis player; George Lott, three times national doubles champion and a member of four Davis cup teams; and Berkley Bell, another ranking star. Grant won his opening match, yesterday impressively, 6-1, 6-0.

Much interest should be aroused among the students of the University as to the giant Carolina-Duke tennis tournament scheduled to take place here starting Saturday, April 1, and continuing until the following Saturday, April 8. Two or three hundred from each school are expected to enter.

Leads Wrestlers

Captain Percy Idol, who wrestles 175 and unlimited for Carolina, has not lost a match for the last two years, and is looking even better than when he won all-southern honors last year. He is a senior and is from High Point.

VANDERBILT STILL HAS LEAD DESPITE LOUISIANA'S WINS

Commodores Maintain First Place in Southeastern Conference With Five Victories.

Louisiana State, with four victories in four starts set the pace in the Southeastern conference last week. Vanderbilt, however, held on to the lead, having been undefeated in five starts.

Louisiana started the week by downing Mississippi State twice 45 to 40 and 37 to 33. Later in the week they took a pair from Sewanee 50 to 30 and 57 to 45. Louisiana climbed into fifth place as a result of their wins. Early setbacks by Mississippi and Alabama kept them from being higher.

The leader, Vanderbilt saw action twice during the week, downing Georgia Tech 38-27 and Auburn 25-24 in a thriller.

WRESTLERS WILL PRESENT REVISED LINE-UP TO V. M. I.

Law Exams Will Deplete Ranks Of Matmen When They Meet Cadets Here Saturday.

Another series of hard blows have hit the varsity wrestling team. Again it is in the heavy-weight classes. Jim Spell, varsity 165-pounder, who made his letter last year, will not be able to get into the starting line-up with V. M. I. Saturday afternoon. Spell is a law student, and is trying to win a fall over his scholastic troubles before essaying a win over the cadets.

Grier, a promising heavy reserve, is also a law student; and will also be kept busy by examinations this week. This late misfortune will mean that Pickett, fine looking heavy, will get his first taste of varsity wrestling Saturday.

Captain W. G. Shipman, leader of the first year grapplers, was not out for wrestling workouts yesterday. He reported for winter football practice. Shipman will start against the V. M. I. yearling matmen, however.

Inexperience Worries Coach

The problem now confronting the Tar Heel's grappling coach is the inexperience of his charges. The trouble with the men is not their lacking in promise as wrestlers, but their ability under fire is still minus. Coach Quinlan, himself, expressed surprise at the way his proteges acted during the process of the matches last Saturday.

Besides all this tough luck, Thad Hussey, 118-pounder monogram man, will probably not start Saturday because of the boils on his arm.

THEATRE TO SHOW FAMOUS GERMAN FOLK EPIC SUNDAY

Language Department Secures "Nibelungen," Germany's Great Silent Picture.

Germany's greatest silent picture, "Nibelungen," will be shown at the Carolina theatre, Sunday night at 9:00 o'clock. The film is being brought to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the German club in cooperation with E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre. Dr. Meno Spann, of the language department, will give a short introductory speech before the showing.

"Nibelungen" resulted from an effort of the famous Ufa encouraged by the German government to make a picture which could be dedicated to the German people, and at that the same time would make a good show. The age-old epic of Nibelungen is one of the high spots of literature, and is known by every German. The cinematic development affords an ideal way of becoming acquainted with the German Iliad which otherwise is not easily accessible to foreigners.

Film in Two Parts

The film consists of two parts, the first, called "Siegfried's Death," to be shown this Sunday, and the second part, "Kriemhild's Revenge," to be presented sometime in February. The historical background of the film and the epic is the time of the great migrations of the Teutons in the fifth century to England, Spain, Italy, and France, when they fought fierce battles with the Huns.

Moving picture critics in Germany have called this picture the finest film which has ever been produced in the country.

HOBOS DISCUSS TECHNOCRACY AT COLLEGE MEETING

Hobo College Dean Declares Theory in Respect to Leisure Is Not New.

Forty-three "hobos" sat in class as James McBeth, dean of Hobo College, aired out Technocracy at Hobo College.

After a long cheer to open class McBeth spoke thus: "The theory of Technocracy is not new to the philosophers of the road at Hobo College. At our last convention we adopted the four-day week and the four-hour day. The scientists have lagged far behind the hope in social understanding. We long since recognized that hard work dulls the mind and weakens the spirit and that long hours of labor mean short years of life.

Labor Limits Study

"We learned that labor interfered with our studies—and we had to give up labor. When the machine age gives leisure to all, we must raise our cultural level through education.

"We are pointing out the way at Hobo College. And in keeping with the tradition of dear old alma mater we are giving the first course in advanced technocracy to be offered in the world."

Many men have been thrown out of employment, McBeth understood, by machines which do the labor of twenty men when one simply presses a button.

And he is perfecting a machine that will press the button.

which are to be presented to George on their arrival. You know, to build houses with.

SEE MY MAN LANDIS ABOUT anything. The way Platt tore into State's man Stephens was a glory to behold. Just after the fight I asked Stephens, who also played end on the Wolfpack eleven last fall, how he thought Landis looked in there. Stephens, still a little bewildered, allowed as how he felt after the first blow Landis calmly placed in his face, "I couldn't see after that first tap," said Stephens. Platt was bent on finishing him in a hurry and he wasted no time in getting down to business. I wonder how our friend Red Espey, who was seconding all the State fighters, felt as he watched Landis blast into Stephens. Before "his friends" persuaded him to give up boxing, Red was slated to meet Platt in the unlimited division. It would have been a good fight, but I still wonder how Espey reacted having to throw the towel in for someone else. "Red" ought to play some football for the Army.

FRANK MCINTOSH DESERVES a bowl of credit for the gallant exhibition he put up Saturday against Captain Garner, Southern conference welter champ. Frank was weakened badly in an effort to get down to the required weight. But he fasted and made the weight. Mac was determined to fight his heart out for Coach Rowe and give Garner a tough battle. Garner won the fight but all in the stands gave Mac a cheer that echoed their admiration for the fight he had made against such odds, though few knew that Frank had had to lose weight to take on State's captain.

'Technician' Opposes Law Against Bumping

Opposition to the law recently proposed which will prohibit a student or a hobo, the State highways was recently brought forward in an editorial in the Technician, weekly organ of State College. "Solons who travel on the state's ten cents per mile should have the privilege of seeing the homeward-bound student passed by a warm bus on a wintry day before they cast their votes on the bill to prohibit 'Bumping'," the article reads.

"Spectator" Urges Abolition Of Fraternities On Columbia Campus

World-Famous Newspaper Explodes Another Bombshell on Columbia Campus as It Charges Greek Letter Men With Politics; Dean Hawkes Issues Mild Statement on Affair.

(College News Service)

Columbia University last week was recovering from the shock of the latest bombshell exploded by editors of Spectator, undergraduate daily, which proposed that all fraternities on the campus be abolished.

For weeks, Spectator has hinted that the university Greeks should not be taken at their face value, but should be considered as political groups, bent on controlling the student government.

Crooked Politics Alleged

These hints were crystallized in the form of direct charges when the paper alleged appointments and elections to student offices were dictated by a group of ten leading fraternities, which supported certain candidates as the result of political "deals." These deals, the editors charged, reached a low point when members of the houses combined "cold bloodedly" to auction off student offices "to the highest bidder."

Likening the situation to "the sins of Tammany" and the machinations of the notorious "Tweed Ring," Spectator boldly proposed as a logical solution that the Greek societies be completely abolished. Now the editors are sitting back waiting for a storm of indignant protest to develop into the type of editorial and news copy on which the paper thrives.

Perhaps they were a little surprised, however, at the meek comment of Dean Herbert E. Hawkes, who last year expelled Reed Harris, then editor of Spectator. "I think it is a wise thing to have this agitation on this matter," said the dean.

And although he would not declare his stand on Spectator's demand for the abolition of fraternities, he nevertheless indicated his belief that the entire controversy should be thoroughly aired with a view to purifying the campus political atmosphere.

Editor Expelled Last Year

Spectator's world-famous editorial policies, which have many of the elements of crusading journalism, were supposedly tempered by Dean Hawkes' action last spring in dismissing the editor. Harris at that time was engaged in an editorial war against a student dining hall, which assertedly served poor food and underpaid its waiters, but many said that it was his campaign against "football professionalism" which really caused his suspension.

If the many followers of Spectator, numbering both enemies and friends, thought that a mere change of editors would serve to check the crusading spirit, they were wrong, for under the new editor, Arthur J. Lelyveld, little difference has been noted in its policy of handling all news, particularly controversial matters, without gloves.

Consequently, the paper is hailed by some groups at Columbia as an enterprising organ of student service, which others curse it as a meddlesome, blatant and undignified "second edition of a yellow journal."

The latter now are wondering: "What next?"

BOXERS RESUME PRACTICE AFTER TIE WITH STATE

with his right. The State boy got up and Platt dropped him again; and, just as he was struggling to his feet, his seconds threw in the towel. The fight was so short and startling that the spectators could hardly believe that it was over.

Marty Levinson caught a Tartar. Neese of State covered and back-pedaled continually and, while Marty defeated him by an overwhelming margin, he could not get the opening to shoot a knockout punch.

Brown Meets Kostainsek

Peyton Brown got his second straight victory of the year in the State meet after a fight nearly as hard as the ones in which he participated the week before. With V. M. I. coming this week, it appears that Brown will have another strenuous night's work when he meets Kostainsek for the second time. Kostainsek got a decision over Peyton last year in their fight at Lexington and there were plenty of spectators who thought that the verdict should have gone to the Carolina boy. Brown will be out for revenge Saturday and this fight may develop into one of the best of the night.

Lee Berke and Sam Giddens, received the first set-backs of their boxing careers from State, but the boys were back at training Monday determined to erase the sting of those defeats with victories in the coming matches. Neither of the boys have anything to be ashamed of. Berke lost to Dunnaway, a man who has had but one opponent in the ring with him to answer the ball at the end of the first round; while Giddens lost a decision that was so close that it aroused the crowd into a prolonged verbal demonstration.

World News Bulletins

May Change School Control

An attack on the present setup of public school administration in North Carolina's 100 counties was launched in the general assembly in Raleigh yesterday. Bills were introduced in the house and senate to abolish the office of county superintendent of schools, county boards of education, and rural supervisors in each of the counties.

Silver Question Up Again

The cry for remonetization of silver at a 16 to 1 ratio with gold rang out in the senate at Washington yesterday as efforts were made by Democratic liberals to attach such an amendment to the Glass banking reform bill.

Roosevelt Confers

Determined to put a new international program into prompt motion, President-elect Roosevelt yesterday began a series of conferences on domestic and foreign economics with Bernard M. Baruch, financial authority of New York City.

Columbia University Disowns Technocracy

Columbia University officially severed connections with Technocracy Monday, but announced at the same time that it would continue to work on its energy survey of North America. The reason for this action, as stated by Professor Rautenstrauch of the engineering department, is the fact that Howard Scott, nominal leader of Technocracy, has expressed certain ideas and statements with which the University does not agree.

The one hundred unemployed engineers will remain at Columbia under the direction of Professor Rautenstrauch, with the financial backing of unemployment relief committee funds. These men are making a survey of the rates at which natural resources have been consumed during the past century in this country, the changes that have come about in ways of providing necessities and luxuries for the people, how these changes affect labor and the use of energy.

Digest Now Surveys College Slang Field

The Literary Digest, having completed its national election survey with success, has begun a nation-wide investigation to determine the most popular slang expressions in use on university campi.

Some professors are heartily in favor of the survey, hoping it will throw some light their way as to what some students are trying to tell them on class.

The list as compiled by members of the journalism department denotes a strong tendency toward that ancient art of loafing. Heading the list is that eloquent expression, "jelly." Closely following in meaning and popularity is "lillying" which implies loafing, preferably of the opposite. Some additional terms were: talkfest, playing fish, quill, jughead, mucker, and playboy.

DR. H. W. LAIDLER PRESENTS FORUM LECTURE TONIGHT

Economist to Speak on "Trends
In Labor and Industrial Organization."

Scholar, author, and economic expert, Dr. Harry Laidler, who is to appear on the third program of the Open Forum Discussion series here tonight, is expected to prove the most outstanding of the series of distinguished lecturers brought here during the winter quarter.

Tonight's subject is "Trends in Labor and Industrial Organization." After the lecture, which is scheduled to begin at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall, a discussion from the floor is planned. Alton Lawrence will preside over the meeting and a faculty member will conduct the discussion.

Noted Economist

Author of more than a dozen volumes dealing with labor and industrial questions, Laidler is recognized as one of the foremost economists in the country today. He was designated as such when he was placed among the seven economists who foretold the crash of the 1928 bull market. His findings and analysis prior to this time and since have been recognized as authoritative. His History of Socialist Thought is now used extensively as a college text book and has been called "the best single source of information in the English language." A list of his published works indicates the dynamic interest in the America of today and tomorrow and the untiring labor and mental discipline which Dr. Laidler possesses.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT THREE PLAYS ON TOUR

Group Will Leave This Morning
On Three-Day Trip Through Eastern Part of State.

Leaving this morning at 11:00 o'clock on their first tour in two years, the Carolina Playmakers, under the direction of Professor F. H. Koch, will present a program of three original folk-plays in Greenville Thursday night, in Wilmington Friday night, and in Goldsboro Saturday night.

The Playmakers will travel in their show bus, carrying three sets of scenery, properties, a portable switchboard, and costumes. This tour is the twenty-ninth of the Playmakers since organization fifteen years ago.

List of Plays

The three plays to be produced on the tour are Davy Crockett, a folk drama of the Tennessee frontier, by John Philip Milhous; Four on a Heath, a grotesque, by Foster Fitz-Simons; and Stumbling in Dreams, a folk comedy of Tin Pan alley, by George Brown.

The Thursday night program in Greenville will be presented in the auditorium of the Eastern Carolina Teachers College. Friday night the Parent-Teachers Association will sponsor the production in Thalian hall at Wilmington. In Goldsboro Saturday night the plays will be produced in the Community Theatre building under the auspices of the Wayne County Community Players. The group will return here Sunday.

Co-operative Book Shop Favored By Di

The passage of a bill, Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the establishment of a co-operative book market to replace the present Book Exchange, featured Tuesday's meeting of the Di senate.

Another bill, Resolved: That the inter-ally war debts be cancelled, was defeated by vote of 15 to 3.

The Phi assembly was invited to attend a joint meeting of the two University literary societies the first Tuesday in February. An acceptance by the Phi was received. This will be the first joint meeting this year.

Other important business included the vote in favor of relaying the action of the Di regarding the state appropriations conflict to the General Assembly.

DATE NAMED FOR UNIVERSITY PLEA AGAINST SLASHES

President Graham to Present Case at Hearing Before Committee February 1.

The postponed hearing of the University representative by the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly will take place Wednesday, February 1. The budget case of the University, which by the 1931 consolidation includes State College and the North Carolina College for Women, was to be presented last Tuesday, but a conflict with the meeting of the University board of trustees made the postponement necessary.

Dr. Frank P. Graham will speak for the Chapel Hill unit of the University, and sum up the cases for the entire consolidation. Appearing with Dr. Graham before the body will be Dr. J. I. Foust and Dr. E. C. Brooks, heads respectively of the Greensboro and Raleigh units of the Greater University. They will speak for the divisions they represent.

First Hearing

The hearing will be the first for major state educational institutions of higher learning. The drastically cut budget recommendation indicates that the appropriations committee intends to follow the suggestion of the General Assembly's joint committee of government reorganization, and to work out a plan whereby duplicate activities in the three institutions be abandoned immediately.

Informal discussions among the members of the appropriations committee indicates that efforts will be made to push the retrenchment program even more by various methods of curtailment within the institutions. A proposal virtually certain to be made is that the medical school of the University here be abandoned. Another motion discussed would reduce substantially the ranks of the higher paid professors in each institution, while at the same time strip the curricula of the three units of courses that are now regarded

Return From Trip

Dean H. G. Baity of the school of engineering, Professor T. F. Hickerson, T. P. Noe, and J. D. Watson have returned to Chapel Hill from New York City where they attended the meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers last week.

Playreaders' Club Acquaints Group With Famous Dramatic Productions

Formed in 1931 by Members of Faculty and Townspeople, Organization Has Grown Until Eighty Members Are Now Enrolled;
"The Last of Mrs. Cheney" Recently Presented.

Of the many organizations on the campus, there is one, comparatively new, which is probably unknown to the greater number of students at the University. The Playreaders' Club, which was organized in the fall of 1931, is not a student organization, nor is its membership optional.

The club was formed by a few members of the faculty and a number of the townspeople of Chapel Hill for the purpose of giving its members an opportunity to become acquainted with some of the more famous dramatic productions of the past and present. It was expected to meet monthly in the homes of the various members, and, for this reason, membership had to be limited to a convenient number.

Spread of Interest

However, as interest in the association's activities spread, increasing numbers desired to join. It was then found that a larger meeting place was necessary. When the club was offered the Parish house of the Episcopal church for its meetings, it was possible to accept new members. At this time the membership increased to eighty.

The affairs of the club are regulated by a system of committees, appointed by the executive committee which is elected by the organization. These various groups select the play which is to be read, cast it, arrange for refreshments, and attend to the numerous other details.

The plays are not produced on the stage, but an effort is made to read them so as to reveal the dramatic effectiveness of the lines. By frequent rehearsals, the casts attempt to make the action as natural as possible and make inconspicuous the fact that the plays are being read rather than produced.

Only a very little of the stage direction is carried out since the primary purpose is the reading of the play. Plays which are read at the monthly meetings are chosen from classic and contemporary drama, tragedy and comedy. The club departed from its usual choice when it once selected the Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, The Mikado. This production was presented in the appropriate setting of a garden of one of the members. Chinese costumes were worn, and the score was sung.

The club recently presented The Last of Mrs. Cheney, which enjoyed tremendous popularity on Broadway.

The membership includes Dr. P. C. Farrar, one of the organizers of the association and very active at the present time; Harry Davis, F. H. Koch, and Sam Selden, directors of drama in the University; Phillips Russell, George McKie, and E. E. Erickson, of the English department; Dean M. T. Van Hecke, and Albert Coates of the law school; Dean H. G. Baity, of the engineering school; W. F. Prouty, of the geology department; and Louis Graves, publisher of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

Heroic Efforts Made By Graham To Avoid University Budget Cuts

University President, Ill With Influenza, Appeared Before Legislature in 1931 to Plead Case of University in Attempt To Prevent Cut in Appropriations.

The immediate danger of another staggering budget cut is no new experience to the University. Perhaps one of the most retarding influences in its existence is the fact that it is obliged to struggle every two years for an appropriation commensurate with its activities and prestige. The winter of 1931 saw a budget battle no less crucial and bitterly contested than the present conflict.

In addition to the facts and figures, pleas and denunciations that marked the contest, there was an element of drama in 1931 that is lacking today. President Frank Graham, then as now, the chief spokesman for the University, supplied an almost tragic touch to the grim financial wrangling.

Appeared Before Assembly

From the very beginning of the winter quarter until the date for the consideration of the University's budget request, influenza had confined the president to his home. Realizing the importance of the matter, and, as ever, thinking less of the effects on himself than the danger of the University, he appeared before a joint session of the house and senate to plead his school's cause. At the time, more anxiety was expressed over his personal condition than of the ultimate fate of the University at the hands of the legislature.

Still pale and suffering from his affliction, President Graham delivered an address so outspoken, so forceful and convincing that numerous statements in the daily press referred to it as the greatest speech before the legislature during the decade. He declared that the budget reductions for the year 1929-30 and the proposed cut for the ensuing biennium were "unwise in principle, unfair in their application, and destructive in their consequences to the public service, public schools, public colleges, and public welfare."

The University request for the 1931-33 period had been $875,000, the same sum as for the period immediately previous. This proposal was met by the legislature with a recommendation for $573,000, a devastating reduction, particularly in view of the fact the largest freshman class in the history of the University had just been enrolled.

Pictures Decline of University

During the course of his speech, which sought to avert the apparent disaster from this suggestion, President Graham pictured the decline which the University was experiencing and the retrogression that the proposed reduction would cause. In reviewing the situation at the University, he mentioned that several members of the faculty had left for larger-paying positions, and he drove home again and again the fact that a decent salary is of paramount importance.

CLARK REPORTS ACTION AGAINST SCHOOL COMBINE

Charlotte Editor Declares That Assembly Will Get Bill to Revoke Consolidation.

The North Carolina General Assembly will be asked to revoke the action of the legislature of 1931 which provided for the consolidation of the University, Woman's College at Greensboro, and State College in Raleigh, according to an announcement made in Charlotte Monday night by David Clark, editor of the South-ern Textile Bulletin.

Report that such action would be taken came from Charlotte ten days ago, but a source for such information was not given at that time.

Clark, alumnus of State College, former member of the board of trustees of the institution, and leader of State alumni in Charlotte, said at least one bill would be introduced into the legislature asking abandonment of the consolidation plans.

He also stated that such a bill would have been presented sooner except for the fact that State alumni were waiting to see what the trustees of the consolidated institution would do at their meeting in Raleigh Monday.

Alumni Opposed

From other sources, it was learned that at least three bills to abolish the consolidation would be presented at the present session. According to reports, opposition to the plan is being expressed by alumni and students of the University as well as by those of the Greensboro and Raleigh units. One of these bills, it was said, will be presented from the University "side."

Reports from Charlotte further indicated that the possibility of a determined fight against the consolidation in the legislature was the reason that the trustees postponed action in the selection of a vice-president until a definite stand should be made by the legislature.

TAR HEEL STAFF OPPOSES POPULAR CHOICE OF EDITOR

Group Votes to Place Power of Electing Editor in Hands of Staff of Paper.

By a three to one vote the members of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff yesterday afternoon followed the Buccaneer in advocating a change in the election of publications editors so as to place more power in the hands of the staff members themselves. A motion to petition the student council and student body to delegate this power to the staff members passed by a vote of thirty-two to eleven.

A motion that the matter be tabled until a committee could be appointed to make a report on the question, died for lack of sufficient support.

The suggestion was made, however, that before staff members were allowed to vote on a candidate for the editorship they must have previously served on the publication not less than one year. This seemed to receive the general vocal sanction of the staff, although no vote was called on the question.

At present the DAILY TAR HEEL is the only college daily of any size in the country employing the method of popular election of its editor. In several of the other institutions a special board is given authority to make the selection, while in others a plan is followed whereby this authority is placed in the hands of the department of journalism in that school. This latter method is followed only where the publication is under the direct supervision of the journalism department.

UNIVERSITY GIVEN CHECK FOR $125 BY LOCAL STORE

Money Received From Stetson
"D" Stores and Will Be Applied to Loan Fund.

A check amounting to $125.28 was received yesterday by President Frank Graham from Maurice Robinson, president of the Stetson "D" Tailors, Inc., as a donation to the University emergency loan fund. This was the first check given as an addition to the short-term loan fund since the announcement January 18 that five per cent of the weekly gross sales of the local Stetson "D" store would be given for this purpose, and comes as a result of an extensive sale conducted last week.

According to Dean F. F. Bradshaw, the addition is particularly helpful at this time because of the demand from this source for non-secured short-term loans of nominal amounts. The Stetson "D" contribution bolsters the fund which has been exhausted since early December.

Donations Will Continue

The weekly donation come as a result of an announcement in THE DAILY TAR HEEL that was brought to Robinson's attention by L. V. Huggins, graduate of the class of 1925, who has returned here as district manager of the Stetson "D" stores in North Carolina and Virginia. The announcement stated that the short-term loan fund was exhausted and interested Robinson to the extent that he authorized

Carolina Boors

During the past few weeks the conduct of the student body at public gatherings where it represented the University has come in for much criticism and condemnation. In many instances this misconduct has been such as to stamp the undergraduate students of the University not only as poor sportsmen and poor gentlemen but also as being unfit mentally for intelligent college life.

Elsewhere on this page the action of students at recent intercollegiate athletic contests is discussed, and the ungentlemanly exhibitions deplored. There is, however, another phase which in the volumes of comment is too often overlooked; namely, the deportment at the Carolina theatre. Here, too, the conduct has frequently been such as is unbecoming of a gentleman. Many students seemingly fail to realize that the theatre is operated for the entertainment of the general public and not as an arena for any individual to display his wit, however brilliant it may be. One man's thirty cents is as good as another's. Liberty and the rights of the individual end where they interfere with the rights of society as a whole.

However disconcerting these actions may appear from a moral and ethical viewpoint, there is still another consideration. Such conduct does not flatter the intelligence of a supposedly mature student body. Admittedly many modern cinemas make no appeal to the intelligence, but occasionally there comes a picture where in at least an effort is made towards something approaching art. It is disappointing to learn that Carolina students cannot recognize nor appreciate such a picture.

Eugene O'Neill's Strange Interlude may not be a great play nor the cinema production a great picture, but it is an artistic effort, and as such it deserves intelligent consideration. Gentlemen of the University are supposed to be cultured and refined, capable of an understanding appreciation. Such an exhibition of boorishness as was given at the theatre Monday must be disconcerting, to say the least, to those of the older generation who persists in their faith and hope for the younger generation.—V.C.R.

What Next?

On the twenty-third day of this month, the state of Missouri sounded taps to which was interred one of the most antiquated and outworn legal customs of the American people, when, by action of her state legislature, she placed her seal alongside those of thirty-five of her sister states on a document which will eliminate the much talked of "Lame Duck" evil from American politics.

There has long been agitation for action which would undo a part of the work of the "Founding Fathers," by abolishing a provision which delays the date at which the expressed will of the people might be put in effect, but it was not until the last term of Congress that any definite action was taken on the matter, when a resolution proposing the present amendment was successfully carried through, and relegated to the people of the states for final action.

As it stands, the new amendment provides that members of Congress shall take office on the third day of January, following the national elections, and that the president's inauguration shall follow on the twentieth of the same month, giving the new Congress ample time to settle all problems pertaining to the election and qualifications of its own members, and also throwing the burden of choosing a president, in case of a tie, upon the new Congress.

The new amendment has merits too obvious and too numerous to warrant discussion, and stands out as the most profound and far reaching of all the attempts to transform a pseudo-democratic institution into a "Government of the People, by the People and for the People."—W.A.S.

Our Razz Mad Younger Generation

There is one subject upon which numerous editorials and letters have been written but about which it is impossible to say too much. That is the conduct of many Carolina gentlemen, so-called, at our basket ball games and boxing matches. Almost every event in the Tin Can is marred by some show of bad sportsmanship on the part of the spectators. Occasionally these displays actually cost the team points, at any event they awaken the antagonism of referees and umpires. Such actions are those of men who are neither gentlemen or sportsmen. Their conduct far from helping the team is a detriment and serves only to make the players ashamed of the rotten feeling manifested by the students they represent.

The men making decisions on the court or in the ring are trained and practiced in that work. They are attempting to act fairly and accurately. Being human they sometimes err, generally they do not. Booring their supposed errors or their decisions is questioning their good faith. The players on visiting teams are our guests. Were they among gentlemen this would entitle them to hospitality and courtesy. They hardly become aware of such when their efforts are rewarded by the jeers of their hosts. They depart taking with them a just resentment at our discourtesy.

Our own players are doing their best and are doing it for us. It is almost incredible that members of their own student body should show their appreciation by booing their own team, but even this happens. Perhaps the greatest sufferers are the coaches. It is up to them to put out winning teams. They do not enjoy seeing their hard fighting teams penalized for the misconduct of a group of raucous rowdies in the gallery. They resent it far worse because it is they who must preserve the good feeling between the schools and obtain the officials whom they wish to see treated courteously.

It is almost time that some action was taken to prevent this sort of thing from going on. If the student body cannot show signs of sportsmanship they are not worthy of admission to our sport events. If a minority of men lacking the first attributes of gentlemen make it necessary to deny the majority the pleasure of seeing our teams play that is a disgrace. But justice to teams, coaches, and officials and to Carolina is the first consideration. It demands that there be a change in the conduct of the students or that they be kept away from events that bring out their worst characteristics.—J.F.A.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Confession

Miss Edith Harbour, whom we must say is not numbered among our acquaintances, took occasion one day this week to chastise this column with subtle jibes at the chairman of the editorial board. This, we think, is unfair, since it has often been suggested that Life and Letters is written by the conductor of this column. Furthermore, Miss Harbour has denied that such is the case.

We'll try to clear it up for you. We write Life and Letters, but we're not Edith Harbour. The latter is a mysterious person known as "Dutch" who slinks into the DAILY TAR HEEL office now and then to peddle peroxide. "Dutch," in turn, is a former editor of The Nation, wintering in South Carolina, where he or she sometimes goes under the alias of "Berryman" or "Schwilling." Neither Hemmingway nor Lippman is in anyway connected with Our Times. It is slipped into the top drawer of the editor's desk in the wee small hours of the morning by a hooded figure riding on a broom.

Maintenance

Even in the midst of crumbling appropriations and threatened salary cuts our pedagogues still keep a stiff upper lip. At times there are smiles and facetious allusions to our plight, one, for instance, coming from Professor O. J. Coffin of the journalism department. He suggested yesterday that the state highway department was quite right in placing on the Pittsboro road just in sight of the University, the sign: "State Maintenance Ends."

Tower

Oil, it seems, has not been struck on the south campus. The derrick or tower erected there is the work of the U. S. Geodetic Survey, which is trying to measure distances from somewhere to somewhere. By forming a triangle (geometrical) with Hillsboro and the Duke University campus, distances and such things are figured out. If it would help the geodetic survey folks any, we don't mind saying that its 167 steps from Gerrard to Murphey; forty-five from Murphey to Saunders; 3,061 to Gimghoul castle from Pritchard-Lloyd's; and too far from Chapel Hill to Duke to give the distance much of a thought. Of course all this was measured in the rain.

Sanka

The distinction between a tribute and a dirty crack has become too precise. For instance: "To bed reading Archibald Henderson's Bernard Shaw."—O. O. McIntyre in the Charlotte Observer.

With Contemporaries

'Buy American'

Buy American, and join an alarmist mob led by an insincere jingoist. That same spirit forced us into the Spanish-American war. That spirit preserved the worn-out Monroe Doctrine. That spirit made the United States the most feared nation on earth and her people the most hated bi-peds on the five continents or the seven seas.

Buy American, and preserve the dangerous ideals of internationalism. That idea raised the tariff barriers which killed world trade. That idea is responsible for good farms grown to weeds, for idle ships tied to rotting docks, for empty trains on rusting rails, for great factories locked and dark, and long bread lines in every city.

Buy American, and tie the hands of diplomats. That scheme killed the League of Nations, blocked the Disarmament conference, and dealt a death blow to international good will and amity. It makes armies grow and navies necessary.

Buy American. A similar campaign failed in India; it did not work in France; it was a disappointment in England; it would be short-sighted anywhere; but it is now our turn to follow the fadist parade and fill the imitators' destiny.

Buy American and wave the bag of false patriotism; beat the War God's drum; sing the song of hate—and all for what? To build newspaper circulation.

Buy American and be a wooden puppet, a blind sheep, and an ignorant worm.

Buy American and be damned.

as non-essential and the teaching load be increased.

There will also be proposals before the group to the effect that tuition receipts be increased and that the expenditure of money to educate students for the teaching profession be curtailed at public expense when the professions are already overcrowded.

The sum asked for the Chapel Hill branch by President Graham last month in his budget request was $691,924. The recommendations of the budget committee, however, as presented by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus in his budget message to the General Assembly, January 17, was only $390,570. If the recommendation is adopted, the University here will be forced to operate through the coming fiscal year of June 30, 1933, to June 30, 1934, on an amount reduced $110,140 from the sum of $500,710 allotted for the present year.

Heroic Efforts Made By Graham To Avoid University Budget Cut

ance for the maintenance of the high standards of excellence in moral and intellectual training.

President Graham's spirited and heroic appeal for the preservation of this institution had its effect on the legislators. Moved by his graphic picture of present difficulty and future despair, the budget commission increased its recommendation to $800,000. However, this sum was pared down to $721,000 by the legislature itself.

Another crisis in the life of the University had been successfully weathered. The respite from battle for its leader, however, was short, for he immediately turned his energies to a preparation for the present conflict. The vicious circle in which the University revolves will shortly be completed when President Graham reappears before the budget group to plead this time against a more devastating and paralyzing blow to the University than has ever before been its lot to bear.

However, as we understand it, the Big Money Men who insist upon cancellation of the European war debts to save civilization are equally insistent on collecting the private debts Europe owes them, just to teach her a lesson.—Macon Telegraph.

As a result of a change in schedule, the frosh-Baby Deacon basketball contest will be played Tuesday, February 7.

Carolina's freshman cagers see action only one time this week, tomorrow night with Oak Ridge the opponents. The Cadet-Tar Baby game is scheduled for the Tin Can as a preliminary to the contest between V. M. I. and the White Phantoms the same night.

Oak Ridge will bring a strong team to face the freshmen. The Cadets are having one of the most successful seasons in a long time, and will have an advantage over the frosh in that they have been in several more contests. Oak Ridge, like the Tar Babies, have a team mostly made up of football stars. Smathers and Hayworth, forwards; Crater, center; and Brick and Nuzum, guards, will probably be their starting lineup.

Fast Workouts

The freshmen are being run through their usually fast workouts by Coach Dameron. Strowd Tilley, last year's captain of Durham high school, is making a decided bid for a first string position and may start at forward against the Cadets. Bill Moore and Melvin Nelson are at present holding down the forward posts and are the main opposition in Tilley's path. Bill Rankin seems to have clinched the center position and Jim McCachren and Raymond Glasgow the guards.

Strike Up the Band!

Organ music, used to soothe nerves of students after the worry of examinations, has been available at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina during the last three afternoons under the direction of the local collegiate student government association.

I ONLY HEARD

By

MORRIE LONG

A heavy session of leather slinging is scheduled for this Saturday night when the military boys wearing the spangles of V. M. I. battle Coach Rowe's boxing team at the Tin Can. Last year at Lexington the cadets gave the Tar Heel contingent a neat shellacking winning 5 to 2. Though the V. M. I. battlers have lost already to Virginia 6 to 2, they gave the Southern conference champs a tough evening. Outstanding fights should be between Crew of V. M. I. and Captain Levinson, Doyle of V. M. I. who extended Goldstein, intercollegiate champ from Virginia, and Quarles, and last but not least the light heavy tussle between Peyton Brown and Kostansek of the Cadets. Last year the Lexington fighter had the Indian sign over Brown but this year the decision will be different if Brown's present ring actions are up to par.

Ernest Blood, father of the Carolina basketball sophomore of the same name, has earned enough cage laurels to fill many a scrapbook. While coaching Undeclared Tar Baby Team to Enter Ring Confident of Getting Third Victory.

With two neat victories tucked away in the record books to their credit, Coach Archie Allen's Tar Baby boxers will enter the ring here against V. M. I. Saturday night confident that they have what it takes.

The success of the frosh face lifters is even more remarkable because of the gloomy outlook only a few days before the V. P. I. meet due to a scarcity of fighters. Coach Allen had barely enough men to put a starting line-up into the ring and the men who were available were, like all freshmen boxing for the first time, of an unknown quality. But the boys came through in fine fashion and, even this early in the season, there are many fans who are willing to predict an undefeated winter for them, now that the yearling pugs have gone through their baptism of fire and have gained the necessary confidence to go ahead with an abundance of vim.

Eugene Eutsler, bantamweight, fought his first fight against State last Saturday, having gotten a forfeit in his sched-

HURDLE DIVISION OF TRACK TEAM WILL BE STRONG

Two Lettermen and Three Promising Sophomore Tracksters Report For Preliminary Work.

Carolina's track team will have the best hurdle prospects that any Tar Heel track club has had in the past few seasons. Coaches Ranson and Fetzer have two letter men in this event while three sophomores will bolster the list of aspirants.

The most recent title-holders in the hurdling events were Moore, holder of records in 1925, and Watt, who hung up the Southern Conference record in 1926. These medalists were extremely good, helping put the Heels into the fore in the timbers. Although not a record holder of any conference nature, Rip Slusser, blonde flash, went places during 1929-31 both on the gridiron and on the track.

Close Races

Slusser had stiff competition in Duke's hurdling ace, Brownlee, and Finkelstein, Washington and Lee track star. These three men were all on a par, with none showing any marked superiority over the remaining pair.

The Blue Devils and the Generals both have their crack hurdlers back, but these men will find hard sledding from the fine timber aces that the Tar Heels will have. Carolina's colors will be

WRESTLING TEAM TO FACE CADETS IN BAD CONDITION

Quinlan Forced to Make Changes in Line-up for V. M. I.; Two Rookies Will Fight.

More changes in the Carolina wrestling line-up for the V. M. I. meet developed yesterday afternoon. With these new developments came more tough breaks, boding nothing but ill for the Tar Heel grapplers.

Thad Hussey, letter man in the 118 pound class, was declared definitely out of the meet Saturday with the V. M. I. Cadets. Hussey has been suffering with infected boils ever since the State meet, but should be back in the line-up against Washington and Lee wrestlers, February 4.

Another Rookie to Scrap

With this bit of tough luck Coach Quinlan will be forced to inject another rookie into the Carolina line-up. C. D. Kellenberger, mite with lots of scrap, will get the starting call. The other rookie in the meet, L. B. Pickett, is replacing Jim Spell, varsity 165 pounder, who is taking law examinations this week.

Marshall Thompson, 175 pounder who was setting a fast pace among the light-heavies, is also lost to the squad for some time.

ZETA PSI WINS AT EXPENSE OF ZETA BETA TAU

Kappa Alpha Features Scoring of Day With 72-3 Victory Over Sigma Phi Epsilon.

No matters of major importance were settled yesterday in the intramural basketball races. Zeta Psi, the only undefeated team scheduled to play, won handily, and no other title contenders took part in the day's program.

Zeta Psi's fourth win of the season was at the expense of Zeta Beta Tau, which dropped its fourth consecutive game, 35-23. Clark, for Zeta Psi, was largely responsible for the victory. The lanky center scored fifteen points to lead the scorers of both teams. Frankel, of Zeta Beta Tau, ran a close second for individual honors, scoring eleven points. Sasser of the winners, and Alexander, of the losers, had six points to each of their credits, while Barber and

ILLUSION:

One of Napoleon's soldiers rose to fame on the "Burning Oven" trick. A roaring fire was built in an oven ... the temperature rose to 600° F. Into the oven walked the "fire king," M. Chabert, carrying several raw steaks. A few minutes later the doors were flung wide and out he stepped ... safe and sound ... with the steaks thoroughly cooked.

EXPLANATION:

Heat rises. When Chabert entered the oven he hung the steaks above the fire, in the center of the oven, then dropped to the floor at the side, covering his head with a hood made from his shirt. He breathed through small air holes in the floor. When the steaks were cooked he threw back the hood, grabbed the steaks, and stepped out in triumph.

It's fun to be fooled — ...it's more fun to KNOW

"The Burning Oven" is an old illusion which has played a leading rôle in cigarette advertising. Its modern name is "Heat Treatment."

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use the heat-treating process.

Cheap, harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos, which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat.

The first Camel cigarette was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment. But remember that heat treatment never makes cheap, inferior tobacco good. It is not in heat treatments, but in more costly tobacco and fine blending, that Camels find their appealing mildness and flavor.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

You sense this quality in the mildness ... the distinctive flavor ... of Camels.

More costly tobaccos and a matchless blend tell the story of Camel leadership in public confidence.

Try Camels. Judge them critically. Compare them with others for mildness, for throat-ease, for good taste. Key your taste to quality! Camels come to you fresh and cool... in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack that keeps dryness outside and freshness inside.

PARENT-TEACHER GROUP CONDUCTS INITIAL MEETING

Dr. Clarence Heer Speaks on "Financial Outlook for Ensuing Biennium."

The Chapel Hill Parent-Teacher Association convened for its first meeting of the year Tuesday night. The topic for the evening was "The Financial Outlook for the Ensuing Biennium," the chief speaker being Dr. Clarence Heer of the economics department of the University.

During his discussion of the topic, Dr. Heer gave a brief outline of the financial situation, pointing out the deficits for the past years and remedies that have been proposed. A large crowd present expressed the opinion that the plan for balancing the state's budget was too rigid. Dr. Harold Meyer thought that the plan left out the human element entirely, he being supported in his views by many others.

See No Further Cuts

The opinion of the group seemed to be that the appropriations for the schools should not be cut further, even if it should be found necessary to levy a sales tax to take care of the needs of the state. Mrs. Urban Holmes introduced a resolution to that effect, and it was unanimously adopted.

An announcement was made that there is to be a citizens' meeting in Raleigh January 31, at which time the entire school situation will be laid before the legislators. Several of those present volunteered their cars to carry to Raleigh any who plan to attend the meeting, and plans are being made to secure other means of transportation.

He is troubled with water on his left knee. Thompson will not be able to report for active workouts until next Monday. Dr. Foy Roberson is draining the wrestler's knee. Auman, letterman, will wrestle in this weight.

Excepting all this, the Tar Heels should make a good showing against the Virginia Cadets Saturday. Coach Quinlan is pessimistic; he says his men, the small remaining handful, are in bad shape. His first year mat men are not looking any too impressive. At least one new man will see action Saturday. He is Winstead, 135 pound class; he has been looking good all the week and should supplant Roger Holman in this weight. As yet the frosh have not found a good heavy for their unlimited class.

Coach Hessmar of V. M. I. boasts a fine squad built around three fine veterans of tried experience. Captain Landis fights in the 155 pound division, and will draw Don Conklin, Carolina veteran. Rucker is another Cadet flash who wrestles in the 165 pound class; he will oppose Pickett. Lowe will meet Captain Percy Idol, Carolina mat star undefeated for the past two years.

The workout yesterday afternoon was exceptionally hard; the whole team took a generous dose of tough work. The Tar Heels' mat mentor believes that this will bring his club into shape quicker than any other cure-all.

Troop School to Meet

The next session of the 316th field artillery troop school will be conducted in Davie hall this evening at 7:00 o'clock.

House Gets Wines and Beer Bill
Two of the House's former speakers—Murphy, of Rowan county, and Bowie, of Ashe county, yesterday hurled their power against the hitherto unyielding prohibition lines in the state and offered a bill to the house legalizing the sale of light wines and beer in North Carolina in event Congress allows the sale of such beverages in the nation.

The smouldering conflict between these two countries over the possession of the Amazon river port of Leticia has been brought to the attention of world powers signatory to the Kellogg peace pact by the American government.

Passaic high in New Jersey his team ran up a string of 159 consecutive victories . . . and his club was the first one in the country to ever reach a 1,000 point season. Among his many pupils in the court game is the Carolina basketball mentor—Coach Bo Shepard, whom he coached at Army.

Speaking of records, the outstanding string of successive football victories enjoyed by major elevens in the country is held by the University of Washington. The Huskies under the tutelage of Dobie, now at Cornell, rung up 58 wins and 3 ties before suffering a defeat. This was back in 1908 to 1916. Michigan also has an impressive mark of 55 wins and one deadlock which she built up from 1901 to 1905. Of late the best consecutive winnings is in the hands of this year's national champs, Southern California who have snared 20 straight triumphs.

Many southern elevens are turning intersectional minded next year . . . which isn't such a bad idea . . . Georgia takes on a trio of leading juggernauts, N. Y. U., Yale, and Southern California being included on her schedule. Tulane journeys up to meet Colgate, one of the east's consistently good representatives. Tennessee and Auburn, giants of the past season's southern grid contingents both clash with George Washington . . . Alabama meets Fordham while Virginia has intersectional meetings with Columbia and Ohio State. Which all sets us wondering why Carolina can't branch out the next few years and take on a foe from another section.

uled bout at V. P. I. the week before. Eutsler came through like a major, turning in what many thought to be the best freshman fight of the night. He never lost his head during the bout and he displayed ring sense during the pinches. He is a good prospect.

The feather and lightweight divisions, have two good boys apiece. Max Frucht and Johnny Edwards are the 125-pounders, while Jim Flaherty and Francis Glenn are the lightweights. Frucht dropped a three-round decision in the State meet as did Flaherty; but neither boy lost by a wide margin and they will probably profit by their mistakes enough to get the verdict the next time under the same conditions. The mistakes this time seemed to be that the boys waited a bit too long.

Glenn has been doing some nice work in training bouts and he may get his chance this week. Edwards seems to have about the same good chance and, if he is not used in the V. M. I. meet, he will see action sometime during the season.

Charlie Sutton proved himself to be a much improved fighter last Saturday night. A good prospect in winning the intramural 145-pound title, Sutton was crude at times; but he has come along in rapid strides to show that he has plenty of ring savvy.

Baxter Brown tangled with Platt Landis' kid brother and the kid brother gave Baxter a big argument before the Tar Heel red-head walked off with the duke. Brown, in showing that he could take it as well as give it, made a good impression on the fans and he should go a long way. The week before, he stopped his V. P. I. opponent in two rounds.

Morty Ellisberg bore out his early season promise by putting up a nice night's work in the 165-pound class. Recently in the same division, Bill Owlick has been looming as a comer by going well against varsity men and he may get in there before the season is over.

Robert Henson, with an unorthodox style of fighting, should be hard to beat, although the big 175-pounder dropped his bout in the State meet.

Fans were disappointed at not being able to get a glimpse of Murray Kanner in action against State. The big boy got a forfeit but he will be seen this Saturday. His size and his aptness at grasping the finer points promise him a good year.

Laxton added five each to the winning five's total.

K. A. Scores Heavily
Kappa Alpha emerged at last from the list of fraternity teams with no victories as a result of a crushing 72-3 triumph over Sigma Phi Epsilon. The defeat was the fourth in a row for the losers. Everette was the big star for the Kappa Alpha quintet, garnering twenty-seven markers, while Skinner, a teammate, was close behind with twenty-five. Shriver added fourteen to his team's total. McCaskill accounted for all three of Sigma Phi Epsilon's points, scoring a field goal and a penalty shot.

Tucker and Jones collected eight points each for Aycock and Langsam got an equal amount for Everett as the former won yesterday's contest between the two teams, 25-13. The game had no influence on the flag race in the dormitory circuit and left each team with a fifty-fifty break in its four games to date.

Delta Psi Scores

Johnny Dillard amassed sixteen points as Delta Psi won another game, this time over Delta Tau Delta which has gone victoryless in all four contests this season. The winners' margin was 34-12. Burroughs was instrumental for Delta Psi, playing a good all-round game and scoring twelve points. Jackson scored six for Delta Tau Delta.

Phi Sigma Kappa won from Theta Chi, 2-0, on a forfeit.

Today's Schedule

Today's games follow:
3:45 p. m.—(1) Independents vs. Carr; (2) Alpha Tau Omega vs. Theta Kappa Nu; (3) Lewis vs. Steele.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Mitchell House vs. Crescent Cafeteria; Chi Psi vs. Pi Kappa Phi; (3) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Phi Delta Theta.

worn by Crook Stafford and Woody Glenn, both monogram men capable of running in both the high and low events.

Sophomores Show Promise

Three promising sophomores are Hawthorne, Abernathy, and Moore. Tom Hawthorne ran some fine races in both the high and lows last year, being one of the bright lights on the yearling club. Frank Abernathy was another of the first year men, hurdling in a dual capacity, who looked good to Coaches Fetzner and Ranson. George Moore, the other rookie, showed lots of promise too as a freshman hurdler who specialized in clearing the high timbers.

All these men with one exception have been coming out regularly, taking workouts to limber up their leg muscles. Moore is the man who has not been able to come for these workouts, since he is now working out with the varsity footballers, now in winter practice. He is getting the necessary leg workouts, however, and should be able to start in immediately when the grid practices start.

Possibilities Good

This group is an exceptionally fine one in that their material possibilities in height are splendid; all the men save Moore are over six feet and Moore is over average size.

There seems to be no outstanding difference in the abilities of these candidates unless Hawthorne could be possibly credited with having the inside on the high hurdles. In the lows, it is a toss-up between Stafford and Hawthorne with the remaining aspirants trailing in close succession.

At the weekly meeting of the Phi assembly Tuesday night, Don Seawell was unanimously elected speaker of the organization for the spring quarter. The bill, Resolved: That the plan to transfer the income of the state highway department to the state's general fund, was defeated by a large majority. Among other business, plans were discussed for a joint meeting with the Di senate the first Tuesday in February. GERMAN PIANIST WILL APPEAR AT DUKE UNIVERSITY

Walter Gieseking, Termed World's Foremost Pianist, Offers Varied Program Tonight.

Walter Gieseking, the German musician who has been referred to by critics of the press as the foremost pianist of the twentieth century, will appear in concert tonight at Page auditorium of Duke University.

His program is greatly varied, but shows a predominance of works by German composers. His concert will open with a group of selections by the foremost German composer, Johann Sebastian Bach, which will be immediately followed by three sonatas of the seventeenth century Italian composer, Domenico Scarlatti. A sonata of Beethoven and an Arabesque of Schumann will follow.

The latter portion of Gieseking's program will include compositions of the modernist composers Debussy, Ravel, and Niemann. Olin Downes of the New York Times describes Gieseking's interpretation of these modern writers as a "masterful intuitive comprehension of the intention of the composer."

MANY GROUPS TO ENTER CONTEST IN DRAMA FESTIVALMrs. Fussler States That Entries Have Increased Fifty Per Cent Over Last Year.

Entries in the annual dramatic festival this year have increased nearly fifty per cent over the number entered last year, according to Mrs. Irene Fussler, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic association. "The fact that more original plays have been entered in the contest this year than in any previous year is indicative of the increased and untiring efforts of teachers and students all over the state in the field of dramatic work and of a deeper appreciation of the value of such activities to the school and to the community," said Mrs. Fussler.

In the senior college division of the production contest, the entries are: Elon, Catawba, Lenoir-Rhyne, Duke University, and N. C. C. W. The junior colleges entered are Mars Hill and Biltmore Junior College.

High Schools Entered

In the city high and special school division, the contestants will be Needham Broughton high school of Raleigh, Spring Hope, Coon high school of Wilson, Whiteville, Southern Pines, Murphy, Lenoir, Morganton, Kings Mountain, Shelby, R. LOCAL CHURCHES
MAKE PLANS FOR RELIGIOUS COURSEThe Minor and Ed Martin Participate in Organization of
Bible Classes

Chapel Hill churches are each offering Bible courses especially for students of the University, with student classes meeting at the respective churches every Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

The Y. M. C. A. is expressing its Bible study emphasis by lending the full support of its cabinets to promote interest in these religious gatherings.

"Y" Committee to Help

Ike Minor and Ed Martin of the Y. M. C. A., assisted by a committee of two student members of the churches represented in Chapel Hill, have been appointed by the cabinets to advance this piece of cooperative work.

The following courses are being offered:

The Baptist church is presenting a course that follows the outline in the international Sunday school lessons.

The Presbyterian church has a student course in comparative religions.

The Methodist church is giving three special courses for students: an open forum on religious problems, the life of Christ, and the modern use of the Bible. The latter courses follows the outline of Dr. Harry Fosdick's lectures at Union Seminary on this subject.

The United church is offering a student course in liberal religion.

The Episcopal church will announce its course next week.

With Davidson Students.

According to an announcement from the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, the following men will compose the Y. M. C. A. deputation team that will journey to Davidson College tomorrow for a two-day stay: Bill McKee, group leader, R. M. McMillan, Ike Minor, L. H. Fountain, John Acee, L. L. Hutchison, Jack Poole, J. D. Winslow, Flow James, and Jesse Parker.

The purpose of this trip is not to present a group of programs as is done on most deputation trips, but to meet with the students there so as to create a feeling of fellowship between the two student bodies.

The group will meet in a joint cabinet session with the Davidson cabinet tomorrow, and will conduct the vesper services Sunday night at Davidson College. The team will return late Sunday night.

ECONOMISTS HAVE
MEETING AT DUKEEconomists of State Make Plans
To Create Central Steering Committee for Group.

Plans for a central steering committee and the continuation of their present policy of having three meetings a year were the result of the recent business meeting of the economists of the state which took place at Duke University Saturday night. Economists from each of the major educational institutions of the state and several smaller ones were present at this gathering to hear Professor Rippey of Duke deliver a paper on American investments in South America.

Plan for Committee

After a dinner in the student union of the woman's college, a business meeting was conducted, at which time the plan for the central steering committee was adopted. The committee is to consist of four members: two from the University of North Carolina, one from the Chapel Hill division and one from the Raleigh division; one from Duke University, and the other from one of the smaller institutions. A committee to nominate these committeemen will be appointed, one member coming from each school.

The policy of having three yearly meetings, one of which will take place at each of the larger institutions, will be continued. The first meeting of the year will be a social meeting, the second a more serious meeting for discussions, but no special plans have been made for the last.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS
LEAVE FOR CHARLOTTE

The senior members of the electrical engineering department will leave today for Charlotte and the vicinity for the purpose of inspecting the electrical equipment in use at the Southern Bell Telephone Company, radio station WBT, and the Riverbend station of the Duke Power Company. The group will make a stop in Norwood this afternoon to inspect the power plant of the Carolina Light and Power Company, going from there to Charlotte.

Gerald W. Johnson Says Reduction
In Appropriation Would Be WasteAuthor and Member of Staff of Baltimore Sun Says Advances of State Are Largely Attributable to Education and Retrenchment Is Undesirable.

Further reduction of state expenditures for education would be a waste rather than saving, believes Gerald W. Johnson, former professor of journalism at the University. In a statement published in the Raleigh News and Observer, Johnson, who is now a renowned author and member of the editorial staff of the Baltimore Sun, issued a stinging rebuke to the advocates of educational retrenchment.

"North Carolina has come a long way since 1876," he commented "but she can go back in a quarter of the time it took her to climb up; and she begins the slide downward the moment she begins to think good roads more important than good schools, and to pay more for gasoline than for education."

Wages and Teachers

Low scale wages mean low calibre teachers, believes the journalist. Citing the fact that the state pays its teachers the wages of a junior guard in a convict camp, he asserted that before long the ability of the average teacher in the state would be commensurate with that of the convict guard, the quality of instruction having come down to the level of the pay.

"If any North Carolinian is in doubt as to what poor teaching and poor schools will mean to the state, let him look about him at other southern states that started their education advance later than 1901 when North Carolina's began," demanded the former member of the University faculty. Poor teachers and schools, mean eventually, Heflins and Vardamans in the national senate; Bilbos and Bleases in the governor's chair, demagogery in politics, superstition in religion and stupidity in business, he added.

North and South

"There is doubt," he continued, "that some states, especially in the north and west are facing what amounts to an educational racket, which means that they are spending on the schools a great deal of money that doesn't go into education at all."

Such a condition does not exist in North Carolina, he believes. "The state at its highest point spent only a fraction of what northern and western states are spending per capita for schools. The state has been getting more for each dollar it spent than any other in the union, if comparative statistics mean anything. To reduce its small expenditures still further is not economy but waste."

Carolina Magazine Has Prepared
Many Authors For Literary FameMany Famous Writers Among University Alumni Have Found Starts During Student Days With Articles Published in Nation's Oldest College Literary Magazine.

The Carolina Magazine, the oldest college publication in the country, has been the training school for the University's host of writers and authors who have made marks for themselves in the literary world. The literary careers of many received auspicious starts in its pages.

Sparks of genius, later fanned into flames that attracted the favorable attention of critics, first glowed in the University Magazine, or the Carolina Magazine, as it was later titled. Dr. Archibald Henderson, Paul Green, Tom Wolfe, Phillips Russell, to name only a few, who now have the attention of the world of letters, were student contributors.

Phillips Russell, now connected with the English department, has become famous as a biographer. At the opening of the century he was successively literary editor and editor-in-chief of the Magazine. Russell also reviewed books and in one of his reviews he spoke of a novel as a "welcome relief from the problem and society novel with its dirty plots and wearisome conversation. The book," he predicted in his criticism, "will not be forgotten." That book, contrary to Russell's prophecy, is no longer in the library.

"A college magazine," he said in an editorial at the time, "should represent the university's serious thought. What goes in should be worth preservation."

Two decades later Thomas Wolfe, whose novel, Look Homeward, Angel, was his open sesame to literary fame, was a constant contributor to the Magazine. Some of his plays in the Magazine clearly show the direction that Wolfe was later to take. Stark reality figures in his writings. His cynicism and ability to see below superficialities can be noted, but the bitterness which Look Homeward, Angel shows is nowhere apparent in his college work.

While Wolfe was at school the Great War was in progress and a many of the patriotic, flag-waving, France-we-are-coming poems were by Wolfe's hand. Here and there little glimpses of his future genius are revealed. Speaking of Rupert Brooke, British poet killed in the war, he wrote:

"We madly trample under foot the flower we never see—

The flower that blooms among us and buds and blooms and then

Burts forth in glorious sweetness for all the world of men."

Paul Green, Pulitzer prize winner, author of The Cabin in the Cotton, was actively connected with the Magazine while a student. One of the greatest depictions of Negro life, Green seems to have steered clear of that subject in his student days. As a Magazine writer he was the author of a number of short stories about the mountaineer characters, he has used again in his mature works.

As a student, Dr. Archibald Henderson, whose Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet has at present captured the interest of the literati, did not take an active part in Magazine activities. He has, however, since his undergraduate days, contributed to it many essays on literary figures.

FRESHMEN HEAR
FREDDIE SINGTON
AND RED RANKINAll-American Tackle of Alabama's 1930 Team Tells Underclassmen
Of Experiences.

The first freshman smoker Wednesday night proved to be an immense success, with the music of Jack Wardlaw's band, good eats, and an address by Fred Sington, all-American tackle for two years, making up the program for the evening.

Adding a bit of humor to the occasion, Red Rankin, speaking in behalf of the upperclassmen, spoke of the remarkable change in the class since September.

Sington, featured speaker of the evening, then told about his trip to the Rose Bowl with the Alabama football team. He described the sight-seeing trips at the Grand Canyon and in California. Especially amusing was the account of a trip to Hollywood where he met Jean Harlow.

As a conclusion to his talk Sington gave an account of the football game with Washington State which Alabama won.

ENSEMBLE WILL PLAY IN DURHAMCarolina Salon Group Will Present
Premier of Composition
Sunday Evening.

The Carolina salon ensemble will include on its program to be presented at the Duke Memorial church in Durham, Sunday evening, the premier performance of a new composition by Tremont Bronx, contemporary American composer.

This work, a suite of three sequences, was composed especially for the Carolina ensemble by Bronx at the request of Thor Johnson, conductor of the group. Bronx is a resident of Charlotte, and since hearing the ensemble play has evinced an interest in the student musician movement. He describes his new composition as "my contribution to the young artists of the state and especially of the University of North Carolina." The piece is written for an instrumental combination of flute, horn, and stringed instruments. The solo parts will be played by David Bennett and Paul Schallert, accompanied by the string section of the ensemble.

Ensemble Offers Novelties

The salon ensemble has heretofore been instrumental in presenting the smaller works of Lamar Stringfield and the compositions of Herbert Hazelman to the public for the first time, and continues its policy of interspersing its programs with musical novelties with the new Bronx suite.

Included on the remainder of Sunday's program will be Saint-Saen's Prelude du Deluge, Massenet's Angelus from Scenes Pittoresques, and the Andante cantabile from the fifth symphony of Tschaiskowski.

These passes are granted through the courtesy of the manager of the theatre.

GIGANTIC STUDENT
MASS MEETING TO PROTEST SLASHESMass Meeting Monday Will Sign
Petition Prior to Protest Trip
To Raleigh Tuesday.

Plans for the huge mass meeting of students to take place in Memorial hall, Monday night at 7:00 o'clock, are being elaborated. Student leaders are endeavoring to have the meeting stimulate interest on the campus in attending the citizens' mass meeting in Raleigh, Tuesday night, to protest the unreasonable reduction in educational expenditures by the state legislature.

The mass meeting of students here Monday night is expected to give official sanction to a petition to be sent to the appropriations committee of the state legislature. A copy will be given to the state press.

The meeting is sponsored by student leaders in order to demonstrate to members of the legislature the interest of the student body in any action the legislature might take toward slashing the University's budget for the coming year. Cutting the budget or other educational institutions supported by the state will be opposed. The petition will emphasize the deteriorating effects that a reduction in appropriations will have on the educational system in Chapel Hill.

JOHN LIVINGSTONE
TELLS NEW STORY
ABOUT UNIVERSITYLibrarian of N. C. Supreme Court Reveals New Light on Founding of University.

New light on the founding of the University was revealed in the current issue of Nocalore, the Masonic journal of research, according to an article written by John A. Livingstone, librarian of the North Carolina Supreme Court.

According to the author, many legends have grown up concerning the founding of the University, including the erroneous one to the effect that the situation of Old East, Old West, and South buildings was so arranged as to form the outline of the Masonic emblem.

Davie Grand Master

The article continues with the statement that the first public Masonic procession ever held under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina was on October 12, 1793 when the cornerstone of Old West was laid by Grand Master William R. Davie. A similar procession occurred before the cornerstone of South building was laid in 1798. Livingstone comments on this fact by saying, "It is a tribute to the forward-looking Masons of that era who participated in the beginnings of our state University."

An interesting story which Livingstone cites in his article in the Masonic periodical concerns a brass plate placed near the cornerstone in Old East. The plate, engraved with an honorary inscription to William R. Davie, was purloined during the

Toward Permanent

Insomnia

After a totally apathetic interval of six years, the student body has at last awakened from a deep dream of peace. During this brief but disastrous lethargy, the stock of the University has descended with amazing rapidity from the high pinnacle of almost unchallenged supremacy of the glorious educational year of 1927. While the student body has slumbered blissfully, the burden for maintaining the prestige of this institution has bowed the heads of two presidents and worn the combined administration and faculty to the breaking point.

It is small wonder that the Legislature, seeking to wipe clean the debt slate of the state, has cut down on education. Though the importance of education is readily admitted by our solons, and despite the fact that many of them are University graduates, the length of their post academic tenure removes the exigencies of higher education further and further from their scope. It is thus that an apparently fabulous sum of money requested to maintain a state institution of higher education appears ludicrous.

In waging the battle for appropriations, the president and faculty of the University have always succeeded in marshaling their forces like true veterans of the field. Yet in all this length of time, there has been no sincere and spontaneous effort of the student body to come to the aid of the University; it seems that the student body has not realized the direct effect that the paring of appropriations will have upon them individually.

Perhaps today we are visualizing a new era. It appears now that there is a concerted sentiment among the student body to enlist in the battle for the life of the University as the group most likely to suffer from any further curtailment of appropriations. Many realize that a diploma from an institution which continues to descend over a period of ten years is worth little or nothing a few years hence. They realize that a slash in appropriations would force the elimination of some important component of the University, perhaps an entire school or a number of departments. They are aware that further salary cuts must ultimately drive forth what members of the faculty in high stations we now possess.

Perhaps we have come to realize that our present circumstance eclipses any single depredation in the history of this institution.—D.C.S.

Things Are

Picking Up

It was a scene in "Hell's Angels." With all her décolleté charms, Jean Harlow was trying to entice the noble hero into her arms. Apparently reluctant to leave her, he seemed about to turn away and yet was on the verge of going back. At the very height of this moment of delicious suspense, a calm, he-manly voice intruded upon the dramatic stillness, addressing itself to the hero on the screen: "Courage, man!" The audience roared.

University student movie audiences are critical to the extreme. Their standards are strict. They voice their disapproval with vehemence, their praise with enthusiasm. Although they cannot give their reasons, it is easy enough to tell what they like and what they do not like. Strangely enough, their opinions usually coincide with those expressed in the best reviews.

But, as a rule, the students in the Carolina theatre carry their expressions of approbation and condemnation to an unwonted extreme. Their exhibitions, usually beginning every afternoon at 1:30, are the most objectionable displays of collegiate bad manners that this campus is subjected to seeing. The practice of booing, yelling, and wisecracking is a hangover from the old days in the Pickwick theatre, when students went to the movies at their own risk and women stayed at home.

Noise and rowdiness were objectionable in the days of the silent films, but they are unpardonably rude during the performance of a talkie. It is natural for a college community to take comedy or facetious drama for what it is worth. Yet, it is difficult to understand how an intelligent audience could be so indiscriminating as the students in Chapel Hill have become. Boorishness has become a habit with them.

No one objects to the booing of an incontestably rotten picture, nor to applause of a good one. But, when it gets to the point that no serious moviegoer can ever enjoy a picture without impolite interruption a halt must be called. Motion pictures, like all drama, attempt to create a mood for the audience. If this mood is once broken, enjoyment of a picture is rarely possible.

Theatre boors must be squelched. Some of the more serious movie-goers have lately gotten courage enough to hiss back at the hissers. And that is a good sign, we hope.—E.C.D.

Rigor

Mortis

The announcement recently by David Clark that a bill would be introduced in the present session of the North Carolina General Assembly calling for the abandonment of the proposed plan of consolidation of the three state institutions of higher learning shows the growing impatience of the general public for the procedure of the consolidation committee.

The plan as originally presented by advocates of the Greater University urged the complete unification of the three institutions with a careful division of functions to prevent overlapping. The whole idea and principle of the consolidation was to be economy. It was proposed by its adherents that it would combine departments in the various branches and do away with the need of appropriations for duplicating functions of the University. There was to be one central executive and one central purchasing board for the three division. In a word, the three institutions would be one.

With such a plan of consolidation THE DAILY TAR HEEL is heartily in accord, but as matters have proceeded we have been seized by misgivings. In the issue of January 10 THE DAILY TAR HEEL urged that unless some definite steps be taken the plan be dropped. Said the paper:

"For this reason, therefore, it is only logical that in times such as these, if the proposed consolidation as presented by the investigation committee... is not carried out to its fullest extent, the idea had best be given up entirely until the sentiment of the public as well as the state's financial condition is more satisfactory to the realization of the proposal."

The University and the state are in dire distress. The recommendations of the budget committee to the legislature called for a curtailment of expenses at an estimated reduction of $2,000,000. Of this reduction the University must bear its share, a circumstance which this year seems to allow it but $390,000.

Instead of an economy program what have we? Nothing has been done towards an actual, material consolidation. We have a Greater University in name only. None of the duplicating departments of the institutions have been combined or abolished. We have only a president, a circumstance which, should Dr. Wilson leave Chicago and the consolidation be abandoned, bids fair to leave either him or Dr. Graham out of a job.

The need for some form of concerted action is urgent. If the University is to meet the situation with a program of rigid economy it calls for the laying aside of petty prejudices and jealousies. For the moment we must do without red-tape and useless technicalities. Instead of going forward we are going backward. If we cannot approach the matter sanely and soundly, let us wipe the sheet clean and let the Greater University die a natural death.—V.C.R.

CLIP THE COUPON!

Did you know that you can "step into a well-paid hotel job?" No? Well, all you have to do is clip the coupon. "Many earn $1,800 to $5,000 a year."

With the many lucrative jobs at our scissors' ends, there is really no reason we should not all be as rich as kings.

Do you know that "you, too, can learn to write!" It's easy. Just write the "Newspaper Institute of America" and it will send you (without obligation) a "writing aptitude test." If you pass this test (no one has ever been known to fail) you are fair on the road to big profits in the "writing game."

If you are a woman, perhaps you will be interested in how Mrs. Brown "made up for John's shrunken pay check." Poor old John! He was "only making a bare living"—and "working at top speed, too." When "they cut his piece rate," he didn't know what to do. He "fears it will be impossible to make both ends meet." Mrs. Brown knew what to do. She "idly fingered thru the pages of a magazine and saw an advertisement telling how women at home were making $15.00 to $50.00 a week." She clipped the coupon, and soon hers and John's worries were over. "You can do the same!" Simply buy a pair of scissors and cut your way to easy street.

"Good dancers are always popular—sure of a good time wherever they go!" Do you "create a favorable impression, have ease of manner, a pleasing assurance that wins?" If you don't, it's probably because you don't dance. "Good dancers are good mixers." Clip the coupon!

All of Bill's friends want to know if he's "been on a vacation?" With a smile, he assures them that he hasn't even left town. The reason he's "gained six pounds in a week" and "feels like a new man" is because he has given up "the dreadful narcotic habit," or, in other words, smoking. A harmless drug does it. All correspondence is strictly confidential.

You can "make real money in commercial photography." No—this is not a counterfeiting scheme. The picture shows a well-fed and beaming photographer taking a picture of a young, almost nude, lady. You can do the same if you are a photographer. "Salaries are good, opportunities plentiful. Skilled operators are needed everywhere!" Particulars are free. And, best of all, "no salesman will call on you!"

Do you want "a marriage that will remain a lasting honeymoon—a love life that will grow more complete with the years, unfettered by doubts and fears?" Well, you can have it. At last the publishers have persuaded the censors that their book, which "fearlessly tell you everything you should know about your desires—wipes out all the dirty sentiment and misinformation and reveals sex and love for what they REALLY are" should be "available to all." At one time, only doctors could secure the book, and it cost them $7.50. Now, because of the generosity of a public-minded publisher, and a slightly less expensive binding, the same book, mind you, can be had for only $2.98 and a few cents postage. Clip the coupon!

A woman, says a western sociological group, should not marry a man until she is sure she is his mate, or at least, we venture to add, until she is sure she's a match for him.—Boston Herald.

With Contemporaries

Say, My Name's Long! "I says to him, 'this is the Kingfish,' and then I said 'I want a post office.'"

"He said to me 'I think you have a fair chance of getting it if you are right.' Well, I'm always right."

—Good Ol Huey

That's the way, Huey, old boy. Show 'em the stuff you're made out o'. Give it to 'em right from the shoulder—you're the Kingfish.

You don't wanta take nothin' from nobody. You can't never tell when they'll try an' get yo-all in a jam. You're it.

An' if Roosevelt hadda sassed you, you shoulda upped and told him he was only President-elect of the United States and you were Huey. That woulda slayed him.

An' when it comes to those doggone senators up there at Washin'ton—why, you've put them in their places. They're all a-scared of ya.

Think of it. You're only thirty-four and ya come up there an' told those old boys where ta get off at. They don't know nothin', Huey, not a thing. You know it all.

Why, sure we think you've got the stuff in ya, Kingfish, sure we do. Only don't let 'em bluff ya out.

An' lissen, Huey, ol' boy, ol' boy. When they start pullin' that old stuff like love of country and squawk about not gettin' nowhere in this relief business an' helpin' the hungry widows and children, all you have to do is hop right onto yer ol' feet and let 'em have it, Huey, let 'em have it. —Daily Iowan.

MANY GROUPS TO ENTER CONTEST IN DRAMA FESTIVAL

junior high of Charlotte will join this group. The six county schools entered are: Hallsboro, Paw Creek, Oakhurst, Bragtown, Seaboard, and Garner.

In addition to the schools and colleges, several community organizations will compete. This group includes some of the recently organized entrants such as the Lenoir Little Theatre, the Durham Community Players, the Rocky Mount Little Theatre Guild, and the Wayne County Community Players of Goldsboro. The Thalian association, one of the oldest theatre groups in the state, is also an entrant.

Preliminaries in March

Preliminary contests for the groups near each other will be conducted and should be concluded by March 1. The more widely separated groups will conduct preliminary contests here at the time of the festival March 30, 31, and April 1.

Twenty-four original plays, representing three colleges, two junior colleges, four city high schools, one county high school, two community organizations, and four individuals, have been submitted. The best of these plays will be selected by the judges for production at the festival. The judges, who are now reading the plays are Professor George McKie, J. O. Bailey, R. B. Sharpe, A. P. Hudson, Harry Russell, and G. F. Horner, all of the University faculty; and Mrs. F. W. Hanft, Loretta Carroll Bailey, and Cora Mae Green Russell, wives of members of the faculty, and all authors of one or more plays.

Reorganization Banquet Of Monogram Club Sponsored By The Order Of The Grail

Grail to Aid in Reorganization Of Club Which Has Been Inactive for Three Years.

PLAN NEW CONSTITUTION

All Lettermen in School Are Invited to Affair Monday Night in Graham Memorial.

The Monogram club, practically extinct in everything except name for the past three years, will again function actively this year, if plans now under way succeed. The re-organization meeting will be held in the form of a banquet to be given by the Order of the Grail Monday night at 7:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial for all lettermen now in school.

At this meeting, the monogram wearers will discuss a constitution, which has been drawn up by a representative committee appointed at an earlier meeting of lettermen interested in the re-organization of the club, and elect the officers who are to serve for this year.

Dale Ranson, captain of the track team in his undergraduate days and since then coach of the cross-country squad, has actively co-operated in furthering this movement, started primarily by lettermen.

Minuteographed copies of the proposed constitution will be delivered to all lettermen before the banquet and immediately after the opening of the business discussion Monday night. Objections and suggestions as to any changes appearing necessary in the constitution will be heard before a vote adopting or rejecting it will be taken.

Membership in the Monogram club will be optional, but all monogram men in school are invited and urged to be present. The Grail is anxious to have as large an attendance of lettermen as possible so as to secure a representative viewpoint on the questions that will arise. Everyone is urged to wear his monogram sweater to the banquet.

FROSH QUINT MAY LOSE GRID STARS

McCachren, Nelson, and Moore May Have to Drop Basketball For Winter Football.

Carolina's freshman basketball team may be at a disadvantage when they face Oak Ridge in their fourth game of the season tonight. The game is scheduled for the Tin Can at 7:15 o'clock.

Winter football practice may interfere with the frosh line-up. Coach Collins issued a call for all football players on the quint to report for winter football practice. This includes Jim McCachren, Murry Nelson, and Bill Moore, all first string players on the quintet. There is a chance that these boys will not be able to continue work on the Tar Baby cage team. Collins, however, will not require football men on the varsity team to leave basketball for winter practice.

In case Nelson, McCachren, and Moore do not play tonight, Strowd, Tilley, McKeithan, or Rogers will start at the two forward positions and Guarino at the guard post left vacant. The rest of the line-up will be the same that got first call in the last contest, Rankin at center and Glasgow at guard.

Oak Ridge will bring their usual strong team to face the little Phantoms. Smathers and Hayworth, forwards; Crater, center; and Brick and Nuzum, guards, will probably be the Cadet line-up.

The Can Opener

by
CLAIBORN M. CARR

A FEW MONOGRAM WEARERS have taken the lead in reorganizing the Monogram club with powers and objectives that will lead to the club recapturing the high position it once held on the Carolina campus. Without any exception, this move on the part of student athletes, to whom representing Carolina in athletics and wearing the NC really means something, is the greatest step forward that has been originated among the student body in a long while. Realizing that the monogram men at the University are only loosely, if at all, bound together and that the somewhat questionable sportsmanship that the student body has displayed at times in the past may be due in part to the loose functioning of the monogram club, these men have gone to work and have a plan to present to the other members of the club Monday night. These men feel that by whipping the lettermen into a closely knit club with the power to deal aptly with any evidences of unsportsmanship displayed on the field or off on the part of the athletes themselves, that then the players will have a higher conception of loyalty to the University in wearing the NC and that indirectly the student body can be made to respect our athletes for the way they compete and keep training rules and thereby back them in the true sportsmanship manner.

THE ORDER OF THE GRAIL has voiced its approval of this move for the reorganization of the Monogram club by voting unanimously to be hosts to all lettermen in school at a banquet Monday night. Just as the monogram men want to elevate the conduct of the Carolina athlete, the Grail is determined to elevate the conduct of the Carolina student body at athletic contests. The order is co-operating with the athletes in their reorganization because it wants the co-operation of the athletes in raising the conduct of the student body. This banquet being given Monday night is going to be no tea party. All lettermen are being invited but only these sincerely interested in the movement are wanted by either the athletes or the Grail. It is high time something definite be done

UNDEFEATED HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS TO PLAY EACH OTHER

All Teams in Western Conference Have Games Tonight; Four Have Perfect Records.

All six basketball teams in the western North Carolina class "A" conference will see action tonight. The league-leading basketballers of Salisbury high school play High Point, also undefeated.

Charlotte, 1932 state champions and close behind Salisbury in the standing, will take on Gastonia there. The latter team has dropped both games played this season, but boasts a fast combination. Greensboro will entertain Winston-Salem, the other undefeated quintet in the group. Greensboro has lost three straight games.

In the eastern conference, Rocky Mount will tangle with Wilmington on the New Hanover court. Neither team has won a game yet, Rocky Mount being in the cellar position with two defeats in two starts.

THREE IMPORTANT FACTORS IN WHITE PHANTOM ATTACK

Here are three of Carolina's hardwood flashes who have figured prominently in the White Phantoms' string of six wins this season. Weathers is the all-southern forward, while Brandt and McCachren have been starring at center and guard respectively. This trio will be in trim tonight seeking to ring up their seventh victory against their second conference foe of the year, V. M. I.

White Phantoms Engage Strong V. M. I. Team In Tin Can Tonight

Coach Shepard Will Throw Entire Strength of Tar Heels Against Virginia Cadets.

FROSH TO PLAY OAK RIDGE

V. M. I. Team Gained Prominence by Surprising Win Over Maryland Quint.

Led by Coach Bill Raftery, the V. M. I. basketball squad, composed of ten players, initiate their invasion into North Carolina tonight with a game against Carolina's fast moving White Phantoms. The Tar Babies will meet Oak Ridge in the preliminary at 7:15 o'clock.

The visitors plunged into the conference spotlight two weeks ago with a 31-30 victory over the highly-rated Maryland team, conqueror of Duke, and there is every indication that tonight's game will be one of the highlights of the season.

Phantoms to Use Full Strength

Coach Bo Shepard will throw his entire strength against the Flying Squadron tonight in an effort to keep the Tar Heels' record unmarred by defeat. Captain Wilmer Hines and Virgil Weathers, Carolina's scoring aces, will be seen at their customary forward posts, Dave McCachren and Snooks Aitken have been playing heads-up ball at guard and will start, while George Brandt will probably start at center, with Earle Beale in reserve. The reserves have been pushing the varsity this week and Stuart Chandler, Dave Henry, and Bill Markham, will see their share of action. The varsity squad took a day off yesterday.

Raftery will present almost an entire team composed of veterans. Captain Edmunds will have as his running mate at forward, Downey, one of the conference's leading point getters, while Hancock, another leading scorer will cavort at center. Stumpy Travers of football fame will be at a guard post, while Miller, the only rookie in the Cadets' starting line-up, will also be seen at guard.

The Cadets journey to Durham Saturday for a game with Duke. If the Tar Heels and the Devils should come through the V. M. I. with victories, it would make a perfect setting for the Carolina-Duke contest in Durham Tuesday, for not only would the Big Five leadership rest upon this contest, but the pace setting position in the conference race as well.

Attend student mass meeting, Memorial hall, Monday night, at 7:00 o'clock.

SORORITY TEAMS WILL CLASH FOR CHARITY BENEFIT

Pi Phi and Chi Omega Lassies Will Tangle in Benefit Basketball Battle February 6.

The charity basketball contest between Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega, national woman's sororities on the campus, is shaping into what is expected to be the biggest event of the woman's athletic program this year.

Much interest is being evinced in the contest, if ticket sales are any indication. Members of the sororities are pushing the sale of tickets hard and report that the drive is successful.

Meanwhile the Pi Phi and Chi O. teams are working vigorously for the contest, and a hot battle is expected when they hook-up in the Tin Can February 6.

Each of the organizations will devote their part of the proceeds from the game to charitable purposes. The Pi Phi's will turn their part over to the Pi Beta Phi settlement school at Gatlinburg, Tennessee, while Chi Omega will lend assistance to similar work undertaken by their national organization.

STROWD BASKETEERS WILL MEET HILLSBORO

The Strowd Motor company basketball team turns out tonight to test its floating power against the Hillsboro All Stars, in Hillsboro.

This team is sponsored by the American Legion post here in Chapel Hill and a percentage of the gate receipts is turned over to the Central Welfare Committee here, for the continuance of their welfare work throughout the county.

The Strowd boys are tied for top place with the Doctor Peppers of Durham. Games for Chapel Hill will be announced as soon as they are scheduled.

The Tar Heel aggregation is composed of men tried at the art of ball and pin. CHI PSI DEFEATS PI KAPPA PHI TO TIE LOOP LEADERS

Undeclared Team Beats Pi Kappa Phi; Crescent and A. T. O. Also Win in Other Games.

With Chi Psi as the only leading team scheduled to play yesterday, the intramural basketball campaign idled through another easy day in preparation for today's program in which four undefeated teams will take part.

Chi Psi took a rough-and-tumble setto from Pi Kappa Phi by the score of 31-22. Three men, Baukney, Atwood, and Lawrence, accounted for twenty-eight of the winning quintet's points with twelve, nine, and seven markers to their respective credits. The win was Chi Psi's fourth in a row and sent the team into a stalemate with three other fraternity outfits which have won an equal number of games to date. Cannon scored eight points and Winstead seven for the Pi Kappa Phi team, but their efforts were in vain.

Crescents Win

The Crescent Cafeteria outfit took a 27-14 decision from the much maligned Mitchell House five which dropped its fourth game in a row. Todd scored ten points for the winning team, while Hunter, one of the loop's leading scorers, added nine to his season's total. Comer scored six. Mitchell and Surprenant made eight and four points respectively for the vanquished team.

A. T. O. Wins

Alan Smith scored seventeen points, the largest individual total of the day, as A. T. O. won its third straight game at the expense of Theta Kappa Nu, 32-22. Jones Pollard added ten more to the winning team's score, while Cecil Longest accounted for thirteen markers for the Theta Kappa Nu outfit.

Steele and Independents lost on forfeits to Lewis and Carr respectively, while the Phi Delta Theta-Sigma Phi Sigma contest was postponed because of the installation of the court for last night's tennis exhibition. The postponed game will be scheduled later in the season.

Today's Schedule

3:45 p. m.—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Sigma Nu; (2) Phi Alpha vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; (3) Sigma Chi vs. Kappa Alpha.

4:45 p. m.—(1) Ruffin vs. Old East; (2) Delta Psi vs. Beta Theta Pi; (3) Grimes vs. Best House.

CAROLINA

PAGLIACCI WILL BE ON CAROLINA BILL NEXT WEEK

Talented Cast Perform in First Grand Opera Recorded for Sound Cinema.

Sixty-four selected musicians from the ranks of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the San Carlos Grand Opera company, comprise the orchestra that played the musical score of Leoncavallo's Pagliacci in sound film, which will be presented at the Carolina theatre Monday. The University Glee Club is sponsoring the showing of the film, which is the first production of grand opera in motion pictures.

The entire cast of the cinema production was especially selected for the parts. Fernando Bertini, dramatic tenor who sings and acts the role of Canio, is a real Roman and was one of the staff of conductors with the Chicago Civic Opera a few years ago. Besides being a marvelous singer, Bertini is an engineer, a talented architect, and a painter of some merit.

Alba Novella, the young lyric soprano who portrays the role of Nedda in Pagliacci, is only twenty-one years old. She sang with the Metropolitan Opera company when she was only eighteen. Mario Valle, the handsome dramatic baritone who is Tonio, sang with Mme. Galli-Curci in South America and has appeared in the leading opera houses of Europe and America.

The opera was written by Ruggiero Leoncavallo, Italian librettist and composer of the nineteenth century, for a competition, which was won by the well-known Cavallero Rusticano, written by his fellow countryman Mascagni. Pagliacci, however, has become equally famous in its production throughout the world.

and this meeting Monday night is going to do business.

SOME OF US CYNICS WHO always look down on everything that strives toward elevating the good old college spirit will say immediately that this sounds like "high school or good old Rutgers stuff." I am willing to bet that nine out of every ten that say this are about as athletic as Kate Smith. The writer was fortunate enough to be asked to sit in on the meetings these interested athletes have been holding recently about reviving the club and I can say that these men are sincere. You can say what you want to about the silliness of all this college spirit but unless some of it is re-born at Carolina in athletes and students as well, we are going to the bottom as our Virginia rivals went a few years back. When you hear men like Barclay and Phipps and others too, tell openly and frankly their feelings about the necessity of some sort of change and hear them stress the necessity of the revival of some of the good old do or die spirit, there must be something in it. Too many of us are afraid of being ourselves and admitting we agree because someone may call us a sissy. Its high time we snap out of it. I take my hat off to the lettermen behind the movement as to athletics and Graff in its determination to improve student conduct. All of us whether we are lettermen or students ought to be proud to get on whichever one of these two hand wagons that will take us and go to town. There is a basketball game tonight and boxing tomorrow night. How 'bout stopping a little and thinking this over.

AMONG UNIVERSITY ALUMNI

by J. MARYON SAUNDERS
Secretary, General Alumni Association

Athletic Council Member

Dr. Foy Roberson, Durham surgeon, is well known to Carolina students and the University community. His recent appointment to succeed Dr. E. A. Abernethy, resigned, as director of the University infirmary, brings him even closer to the University.

For many years Dr. Roberson has been one of three alumni to represent the General Alumni Association on the University Athletic Council. He makes of University athletics a personal hobby and gives a considerable amount of his time and interest in aiding the University athletic program. Last month his reelection by the alumni to the Athletic Council for another three year term was announced.

Dr. Roberson is a native of Chapel Hill. He entered the University in 1901 and played varsity football upon the teams of 1903, 1904 and 1905, serving as captain in his last year. His playing was of such quality as to give him a reputation of being among Carolina's best football players of all time.

Completing his premedical work in 1905, Dr. Roberson took the two-year course here and then won his M.D. degree at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. He located in Durham for the practice of his profession in 1912.

SEVERAL BOOKLETS ON APPROPRIATIONS LEFT

A few booklets on "The Situation at the University" written by Dr. Frank Graham still remain in the office of THE DAILY TAR HEEL and may be obtained from the office by interested persons.

Dr. Graham, in the pamphlets, discusses the need of the University for financial aid and the detrimental effect on both the University and the state if this need is not satisfied. Also, in the pamphlets, are editorials from newspapers throughout the state concerning the University and the harmful effects further cuts in the appropriations will have on the future generations of the state.

Doctor's Examination

The final oral examination of Herbert Dale Pegg for the degree of doctor of philosophy in the department of history and government will be conducted tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock in Saunders 313. BOXERS TO MEET VIRGINIA CADETS HERE TOMORROW

M. I. brawl of the night against Virginia by trimming the Cavalier fighter handily in three rounds. Marty Levinson, never guilty of doing a waltz with any opponent, and the two-fisted Crews should offer the boys some good entertainment with their little fuss.

Koteen will hold down the bantamweight post and Captain Jack Epps will weigh in for the 155 pound bout. Both boys lost their fights to Virginia by knockouts, Koteen in the third when the referee stopped it. Epps was on the floor at the end of the second, and he was unable to answer the bell to start the third.

Bain, V. M. I. welter, figured in the most sensational events of the Virginia meet when he rushed out of his corner in the first and floored Fishburne, the great Cavalier scrapper, for nine. It looked like curtains for the Cavalier; but he got off the floor to eventually drop Bain twice for nine and take a decision.

Bleckenstone put up a great battle against Smith of Virginia, only to lose the duke in three rounds. Bleckenstone will meet Sam Giddens in the 165 pound affair.

DR. H. W. LAIDLER SPEAKS HERE ON LABOR PROBLEM

Forum Speaker States That Labor Movements in America
Are Weakening.

That organized labor in the United States must immediately begin an aggressive campaign for the organization of the unskilled and for needed social legislation and must break alliances with old party machines if labor is to prevent further weakening of its forces, were among the contentions of Dr. Harry W. Laidler, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, in his lecture at Gerrard hall Thursday evening. The subject of the lecture was "Trends in the Labor Movement—Organization of the Unskilled."

Dr. Laidler, in his speech, traced the growth of the labor movement, telling of the Industrial Workers of the World and its failure. The failure, he said, was the formation of the American Federation of Labor and the failure of the workers to recognize the value of worker's insurance. He said that from the eighties to 1920, the labor movement increased proportionately with every decade. The movement expanded during the World War until organized labor constituted twelve percent of the workers of the country. Since 1918, this number has decreased to eight percent. One reason for this decrease is that the machine has taken the place of many of the skilled workers who comprised the main portion of the organizations. At the same time

EDITOR DEPLORES ERROR IN CREDIT FOR FIRST FLIGHT

Louis Graves Says That Smithsonian Institute Fails to Keep Good Records.

The national government and the Smithsonian Institute denies credit to the Wright brothers for the first flight in a heavier-than-air machine. North Carolina has been done an injustice by a "scientific clique" which is not only responsible for the fact that the first airplane rests in a museum in England, but which gives all credit for invention of the first plane to Professor S. P. Langley. Chapel Hillians and students were amazed yesterday when Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, brought forth grave charges of injustice to the true inventors of flying machines.

Graves charged that official records of scientific developments kept by the United States government in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington contain the errors. Repeated efforts to force a correction have been in vain, Graves charges, "because there are those behind the Smithsonian management who have stood by the error."

Correction of the mistakes in the records is important, the Weekly editor asserts, although all Americans realize that Wilbur and Orville Wright were the first to successfully fly a plane. Historians of the future will depend upon the records of the museum for accurate facts on early aviation. Since the first

Coates To Resume Law School Duties

Professor Albert Coates of the University law school, who spent the fall working with the Institute of Government, will return to his teaching duties here Monday.

As director of the Institute, Coates was a leading figure at the ceremonies of the installation of state officials in December. The activities during the installation were broadcast over the radio, and Coates was largely responsible for the program.

The movement, which had as its purpose the better acquainting of citizens with the process of the government of North Carolina, received high praise all over the state.

SHAW-HENDERSON EVENT DEFERRED TO SUNDAY WEEK

Illness of Speakers Who Were to Have Participated in Festival Causes Postponement.

The opening feature of the Carolina Playmakers' Shaw-Henderson festival, originally scheduled for Sunday afternoon, has been postponed for a week due to the illness of two of the principal speakers. President Frank Graham and Percy Mackaye, it was announced yesterday.

The festival is designed as a joint tribute to Henderson, and is being presented in celebration of the publication of Dr. Henderson's latest work on the famous Irish playwright, Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet.

At the first meeting, over which F. H. Koch will preside, Henderson, as the authorized biographer of Shaw, will make the principal address on "Shaw as a World Power."

Dr. Henderson will be preceded by President Graham and Mackaye, who is to speak on "The World and the Drama."

In connection with the festival, which will last a week, the Playmakers will present one of the playwright's comedies, You Never Can Tell, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, February 2, 3, and 4.

MAGAZINE STAFF MEETING SET FOR SUNDAY EVENING

Group Will Discuss New Plan for Selection of Editor of Publication at 8:00 O'clock.

The staff of the Carolina Magazine will meet in the office of the publication Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock. The meeting, according to Editor Robert Barnett, is to be concerned with two important matters: one, the discussion of a change in policy regarding election of the editor; and second, discussion of plans for the Magazine for the remainder of the year.

The editor has urged that all contributors attend the meeting. The next issue of the Magazine is to follow a unique pattern. All contributions are to be in the form of character sketches of campus personalities, either faculty or undergraduate. It is important that personalities be filed with the editor so that there will be no duplication.

Special features and symposiums will be discussed and assigned at the meeting and a plan for the Magazine for the remainder of the year drawn up.

The Right Of Selection For The Welfare Of The Publication

—AN EDITORIAL—

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is now engaged in an attempt to obtain the right exercised by almost every college paper in the country—the right to a strong voice in the selection of its own editor. This University has been unusually backward in granting to its publications this reasonable and logical privilege, and it is gratifying to see the various publications combining in an effort to gain their rights.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is the newspaper of the students, it is supported by their money, produced by their labor and concerned in their welfare. Without the favor and support of the student body it could not live a single day and it is duly cognizant and appreciative of the debt it owes the student body. These considerations notwithstanding it is neither reasonable nor equitable that the student body should maintain the power of choosing the editor of the TAR HEEL.

The captains of most of our athletic teams are not selected by a vote of the campus but by the members of the teams who know what men among them are best fit by spirit and ability to lead them. And the student body is far more capable of selecting an outstanding athlete than the man for the technical and highly responsible position of editor.

The staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL is a team. It represents the student body just as does an athletic team. It is a group of men working together for Carolina. This staff is composed of men who are sacrificing time and effort in order that they may produce a good paper. They are entitled to the right we give our teams, the right of choosing from their midst the men they want to lead them. It is obvious that the student body, having no opportunity to observe or know the worth of these men, are in no way capable of making a wise choice. All the more for that reason should the right of selection be the privilege of the staff.

THE TAR HEEL does not wish to usurp the rights of the student body. THE TAR HEEL is the voice of that body, it is composed of its members and all are welcome to the staff that desire to work for the paper. The selection of editor by the staff would be the selection of the student body thru those of its members that are interested in the paper. If left to the vote of the campus the position comes at once under the domination of machine politics. A line-up of fraternities controls the outcome of each campus election and the post of editor is the reward of some fraternity for its place in the frame-up. Supposing the selection of editor by the staff not to be the most democratic method, it is at least one that would insure a choice by a qualified group rather than by a ruthless and unqualified machine.

Far better the editorship of the student's paper be the position of a man chosen by the confidence of his co-workers than a political plum bandied about among some dozen fraternities that fortified behind the impregnable defenses of machine politics can remain totally oblivious to the true wishes of the student body and to the welfare of its paper to which many are daily giving their best.—J.F.A.

Results Of Psychology Experiment Show Radio Advertising Superior

H. N. DeWick Makes Study Of Effectiveness of Visual and Auditory Types of Advertisements; Copy of His Experimental Work Goes to Columbia Broadcasting System.

Howl as the general public may, at the vast amount of advertising that cuts into radio programs, the results of a recent experiment by Henry N. DeWick of the University psychology department may very likely increase their angry laments.

DeWick's experiment showed definitely that spoken advertising is retained longer than the printed form. If the advertisers of the nation abide by this discovery, gaudy signboards and full-page newspaper advertisements may shortly be a thing of the past. An advance copy of the report of the recently completed experiment has been purchased by the Columbia broadcasting system, one of several bidders.

The experimenter explained the purpose of his work by stating, "National advertisers are beginning to question the advisability of radio advertising and are beginning to demand positive proofs of its efficiency. This experiment, one of many which I expect to conduct along this line, shows conclusively the value of radio advertising in comparison with that in which the printed word is the medium of expression."

Seventy-three students were selected impartially from the elementary psychology class last spring as subjects for the tests which were given them as a regular part of the laboratory work.

New Man To Debate Against Pittsburgh

When the University meets Pittsburgh in debate on the war debts in Gerrard hall Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock, R. P. Russell will be participating in his first intercollegiate debate. Bill Eddleman, veteran of several debates last year, will be the other representative of the University.

The debaters representing the University of Pittsburgh on the affirmative side are John P. Bracken, who ran in the last Democratic primary for register of deeds, and Leonard Boreman, who is prominent in discussion groups on the Pitt campus. Bracken, who is president of one such group, has debated the Tar Heels twice.

The contests, which are sponsored by the extension division and the several University departments concerned, will be in Latin, French, Spanish, and mathematics.

The purpose is to stimulate interest in scholarship, particularly in these particular fields.

This year marks the ninth annual high school Latin contest, and the eighth in French, Spanish and mathematics.

Dates for the contests are as follows: Latin, February 24; French, March 10; Spanish, March 24; and mathematics, April 21.

Papers, as they are sent in by various high schools, will be graded by University faculty members of the department concerned. Announcement will be made as to winners of first places, and honorable mention will be given those schools whose pupils submit second-best papers.

REPRESENTATIVES FROM Y CABINETS TO ATTEND MEET

Comer, McKee, Minor, and Nesbit Represent Carolina at Gathering in Greensboro.

Harry F. Comer, Bill McKee, Ike Minor, and Tom Nesbit will represent the University at the joint Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. state student cabinet, which will convene at the Y. W. C. A. hut at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina next Saturday. This is the first joint session of this kind to take place in the state.

Cabinets from twenty-two institutions of learning have been invited to answer the roll call by Archie Ward, president of the state Y. M. C. A. cabinet who will conduct the session. Bill McKee, president of the University "Y," arranged the program.

Harry Comer will lead a discussion on "What Does the Membership in the association mean?" Miss Lucy Cherry Crisp, of the Woman's College, will lead a similar forum on "What Can the Students Do to Help Form a Student Christian Association in North Carolina?"

STUDENT LEADERS POSTPONE MEETING PLANNED MONDAY

Meeting Prevented by Conflicts; Way to Be Provided for Those Wanting to Go to Raleigh.

Because of various conflicts which have arisen since the plans were first discussed, the scheduled mass meeting of the student body for Monday night at 7:00 o'clock in Memorial hall has been definitely called off. It was the opinion of the student leaders sponsoring the movement that it would be far more beneficial to the cause of the University if this meeting were called at a later date.

Arrangements are still being made, however, for those students interested in attending unofficially the citizen's mass meeting of Raleigh on Tuesday. All those students who desire to attend this meeting but have no means of transportation are asked to leave their names with Mayne Albright in Graham Memorial building as soon as possible. Likewise, those persons who have cars available and are planning to attend the meeting will leave their names so that sufficient transportation can be furnished.

No Official Representatives
The group attending the Tuesday mass meeting will only be those individuals who are anxious to attend of their own accord. They will not attend as official representatives of the student body of the University of North Carolina, as was first planned.

The meeting was originally planned to stimulate student interest in the appropriations.

OWEN D. YOUNG PRESENTS PLEA FOR UNIVERSITY

Noted Economist and Industrialist Says Education Cuts Should Come Last.

That our educational appropriations should be the last to be cut is the opinion of Owen D. Young, one of the most distinguished American financiers and industrialists. In a letter published by the Raleigh News and Observer, Young expressed deep regret at the proposal to cut appropriations for higher learning in North Carolina.

"The proposal of the Legislature of North Carolina," wrote Young, "to cut the appropriation of the state to the University of North Carolina from its high point of $394,000 in 1929 to $390,000 in the present year excites mixed feelings of regret and admiration; deep regret that the work of a great educational institution will be impaired, and in some measure, its position destroyed; admiration that a state has the courage to deal with a difficult fiscal situation by drastic reduction of its expenditures."

Young stated that he felt very deeply that educational appropriations should be the last to be cut, and that then the reductions should be made only to the extent of readjusting salaries to the new price level and discontinuing activities justifiable in prosperous times but which can be disposed of without impairing the basic usefulness of the educational program. A Sane

Reconsideration

The recent change of plans regarding the proposed student mass meeting Monday night seems to have come as a result of some sane thinking on the part of those students sponsoring the movement. It would have been unwise from the standpoint of the impression it would have made on the Legislature for a group of students to move on Raleigh en masse and officially take part in a meeting which was called for citizens of North Carolina. It is not to be denied that the students of this institution are citizens of this state. But they are likewise students of this institution.

And had they attended the Tuesday meeting in Raleigh along with the numerous teachers which will likewise be in attendance, the educational forces of the state would have thrown themselves open to the criticisms of the Legislature that the meeting was nothing more than a teacher-student affair. Being called as a citizens meeting, it would have looked as a framed job to pack the house with official representatives from the three student bodies of the state institutions.

Not only was it wise from this standpoint to postpone the meeting here Monday but also in view of the fact that there have arisen certain conflicts which would have prevented the meeting from being as representative as it might have been, was it a sane step.

It is a relief to see this matter cleared up. For had the plans been carried out as first proposed, they would have certainly resulted in more harm than good for the University's interests.

To Louis Graves—Amen

Bursting open the front page of his Chapel Hill Weekly yesterday with heavy boldface headlines, Louis Graves delivered a scathing accusation against the Smithsonian Institute for attempting to deprive North Carolina and the Wright brothers of recognition as the first men to fly a heavier than air machine. He laments the fact that although it is common knowledge and open to proof that the Wright brothers made their flight at Kitty Hawk, December 17, 1903, officials of the institution have worded certain documents so as to give credit to Professor S. P. Langley, late secretary of the institution. And as further cause for groans and lamentations he pointed out that the Wright's plane resides in an English museum. And so on for five and a half columns.

By the end of the fourth column we were all tears and flappy-doodle. And then we too began to meditate on our grievances. North Carolina and North Carolinians seem to be cursed with doing great things and having the credit go to some other state. Few historians give us credit for having produced a president of the United States, yet in reality we have had a hand in developing three. Andrew Johnson was born within a mile of the capital of the state and there lived his early days. The other Andrew, Andrew Jackson, first saw the light of day near Charlotte and lived there until his family emigrated to Tennessee. Our last presidential experiment, Woodrow Wilson, who like Homer is claimed by a variety of places with Virginia in the lead, played mudpies in Washington, N. C.

But presidents haven't been our only jinxes. We mustn't forget Listerine, Bromo-Seltzer, and Vick's Salve, all of which are native Tar Heels. We've even heard it rumored that northern literary circles are trying to deprive us of our own Tom Wolfe. North Carolina seems to be a wet nurse for the great who soon get weaned away from us. With Mr. Graves at the head of the crusade we bid well to gain our rightful heritage like a hero out of one of the Alger tales we used to read.—V.C.R.

Trust to Mankind

There is an almost universal tendency in man to consider himself, his wife and his temporal and spatial environment as the apex of the universe, about which gravitates all the tradition and affluence of the world since time began. . . . Even the stars twinkle for his delight and self-satisfaction. It is difficult, under such circumstances, for the average man or woman to consider realistically the momentous forces at work in our contemporary civilization, forces which are shaping the future of mankind, but which are nevertheless of little interest to the "Now-minded" individual.

The same can be said in regard to the interest (or lack of interest) in historical movements. That which is not spectacular—explosive—is looked upon with disapprobation.

A good example of a long-time social movement (borrowing the economic phraseology) is the growth of the newspaper. People generally do not stop to ponder over the remarkable differences between eighteenth-century means of propaganda and those employed today. People, in the large, do not realize why they think as they do about certain matters, much less the manner in which they derive their every-day concepts.

The newspaper as a means of influencing public opinion in these days is almost unlimited, yet few see the part played by news instruments in effecting these marked changes in personal bias. The mere casual reading of the "daily paper" in time will profoundly modify most people's reaction patterns. This fact has been successfully exploited by many zealous exponents of various "causes," as well as by advertising men. Persistent suggestion usually has its desired effect.

The rise of the great newspaper chains is another phenomena of great consequence in the field of journalism. Desire for political power, thirst for monetary gain and the general trend toward collective enterprise have been major factors in this comparatively recent growth. The Hearst chain, the Block interests, the Scripps-Howard combine—each controls a multitude of dailies throughout practically every state in the union, in small towns as well as in large cities. One can rather easily witness the result of a continuous editorial policy such as (for example) the Hearst anti-World Court campaign. Only too often are matters of grave public importance the objects of journalistic play, in which a policy in a particular direction has built up such a reader-response that a changed position would be almost disastrous to circulation.

The power of such instruments of propaganda as the newspaper constitutes a real challenge to thinking people. The growing collective spirit of our age makes it more likely for "big things" to occur quickly. Social forces are tremendously potent and cannot be tampered with indiscriminately. The realization on the part of many newspaper proprietors of their important trust to mankind in this respect is something heartily to be wished.—V.J.L.

Our Times

Dear Departed

Columbia University, so say the news dispatches, has decided to make the world unsafe for Technocracy. We were so wrought up about the whole thing that we may not have the particulars clear, but we are given to understand that Nicholas Murray Butler and his cohorts have finally been convinced that "we are not ready for Technocracy" or something of the sort.

Worst of all, it ends the string of clever little puns at Technocracy which have been coined by campus wits. This column, nevertheless, will always remember the contribution by the gentleman who once wrote "In the Main" (who had a new name for his column "Things in Main but not Albright" and was afraid to use it). He queried, "If the world accepts Technocracy with its jowls and ergs, will mechanical hens lay the ergs?"

More Tower

Like a troupe of boy scouts who erect a bridge with thin wooden staves in a few seconds and then destroy it after the jamboree judges have made their inspection, our friends of the United States Geodetic Survey dismantled their tower on the south campus yesterday and departed as quickly and silently as they had arrived. Not too soon, however, for us to collect another little story about the tower.

A friend of our tells us that he approached the tower the other night, attracted by several figures not quite discernible in the dark who were scrambling aloft. Attracted by the idea, he approached the base of the tower preparatory to ascending its lofty heights. Just as he put one hand on a low rung of the flimsy steel ladder, a figure stepped out of the dark and grabbed his arm. "It'll cost yuh a dime to go up there buddy," saluted the mysterious figure. Puzzled, our friend withdrew, to discover the next morning that an enterprising sophomore had made a dollar and a half the night before, charging freshmen a dime to take a look at the top of the tower.

Library

The telephone in the main room of the University library tinkled in a solemn tone and a lady librarian hastened to answer its plaintive summons. "What are the pictures showing in Durham tonight?" was the startling request.

Unruffled, save by the sudden appearance of a small crowd of library-goers which had gathered at the desk, the librarians sought a newspaper and took up the receiver again. "Smilin' Through, The Passion Plumber, and Is My Face Red?" she answered. Her face took on a violent red hue. The crowd tittered and then shuffled away in embarrassment. Librarianne fled to the stack room.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor

DAILY TAR HEEL:

Concerning the proposal of the Buccaneer staff in which it was stated that the editors of the various publications are selected by an "unfair and unsatisfactory" system, and their proposal for remedying this situation, I would like to raise this question:

If the editor be selected by the staff only, to whom will he be responsible for his actions and policies when he himself determines the actions and policies of his own staff?

As I understand it, a student begins work upon a publication and, as he gains experience and ability, more and more responsibility is placed upon his shoulders until he becomes one of the "shining lights" and his masterpieces are adorned with his own name. His ability is recognized by the student body. His name is placed as candidate for the editorship and the student body picks the man whom it thinks most qualified for the position. He is then directly responsible to the people who elected him, the majority of the student body. Within the few years I have been here the best man has been given the job and we have suffered in no way because of the method used in selecting the man.

I should like to know if there has ever been a group of "political bosses" so foolish as to attempt to place a man at the head of a publication who has had little or no experience in that field. True, I have heard that in the dim and dark past there have been more qualified men than there were organizations to sponsor them. But in one or two cases the best man won without a party backing. Even in the last election was there such a case (and I have heard no questions concerning his ability). Although politics enter into all elections on this campus, so far as I am able to ascertain, the parties have selected the most qualified man, in their opinion, and certainly have not tried to make a grand joke of the whole affair by putting up some inexperienced "politician."

It has been the custom in the past for the staffs of the respective publications to publish in their papers the names of the men they wish to be their guiding spirits. But the student body has the final say-so in the matter and does not have to sit by in complete resignation to those who feed them their news, jokes, memories and aesthetic thoughts. It seems to me to be much more in accordance with the principles of this University to keep inevitable politics on the entire campus and not to place it in a small group where the same difficulties will arise without the right for the student body to have its chance to speak.

North Carolina's

University

All the universities of the United States, even in the midst of their own financial troubles must have special sympathy for the University of North Carolina, the oldest state university in the United States. It was chartered in the first year of Washington's first administration. It had to endure the vicissitudes and hardships, as had all southern institutions, during the Civil War, but in the last quarter of the century it has risen to take rank with the leading American universities, whether of public or private support. The public school property of the state grew from $2,000,000 to $100,000,000 by 1928. Governor Gardner said in 1929 that perhaps no state had changed more than North Carolina, and that in addition to its remarkable industrial progress there had been an almost equally striking advancement notably in education and highway instruction.

There has been wide and deep satisfaction over the rise of this oldest state university to a position of leadership. But it is not its age or its age alone that has sponsored this feeling. There has been a courage in face of difficulties that has compelled the admiration of the university world. A European visitor not long ago singled out this university for special praise. It was here that the late President Alderman developed his zeal for the idea that it was the primary duty of the university to care for the state, interesting itself in the things which concern the people, no matter how homely or prosaic. Possessed of that ideal, the University of North Carolina became the center of the educational revival in the south.

It has in extraordinary ways served the state and the south but now finds itself threatened with a cut of nearly one-half in the amount asked for next year, though this was less by twenty-two and one-half per cent than the 1929 grant by the legislature. The actual expenditure in 1928-29 was $894,000, while that proposed by the budget commission for next year is $390,000. This would mean a reduction of fifty-six per cent and be a "crushing blow" to the University. President Graham, who was inaugurated less than two years ago, has made a heroic struggle and deserves what help of spirit and substance they can give who believe that the public universities should not be made to suffer disproportionately in these difficult times. President Hutchins, the head of a great privately supported institution, said not long ago that our people "must believe that tax supported education and research are important and must themselves determine to protect them."—New York Times.

DR. H. W. LAIDLER TALKS OF LABOR PROBLEMS HERE

that labor was becoming less organized, the United States was going through the greatest merger period of history. As labor failed to organize, capital was becoming more organized.

"If the labor movement will save itself, it must begin a vigorous and intelligent fight for the organization of the unskilled," Dr. Laidler stated. Further, he said, this organization must be both industrial and political in order for the labor to get the maximum use from the movement.

In conclusion, the author and lecturer asserted, "The present economic order is failing to secure an abundant life for all. Insecurity is increasing with every passing year. With twelve million unemployed and other millions partly out of work, we are now passing through the worst period of depression and the longest since the seventies of the last century. For the first time in civilization, we of this country have technical and human resources sufficient to feed, clothe, and shelter every man, woman, and child in the United States in decency and in comfort. Yet people are starving in increasing numbers. Labor is questioning the fundamental soundness of an industrial system that leads to such results. In ever larger numbers, it is demanding that the machine become the servant and not the master; that industry be transferred from the hands of private monopolists to the community and run in a planful manner for the benefit of all. The labor movement must increasingly work for such a planned co-operative society or be faced with increasing chaos as the years go on." A. A. Lawrence presided.

were held the first and fifth days following the presentation, as well as five months later. The groups were reversed, and those who had been subject to the auditory tests were presented with the visual, and vice-versa.

The results showed that, for the visual groups, the number of advertisements remembered decreased steadily with the lapse of time. The auditory groups showed practically no loss over a period of 120 hours. From five days to five months the loss was noticeable, but not equal to the visual loss. They are approximately equal when the recall is immediate, but the auditory recollection is slightly superior to the visual after a delay of twenty-four hours.

Phantoms Sweep Thru Seventh Straight Win 36-17 Over Fast Cadets

V. M. I. No Match for Fast Flying Phantoms Who Lead At Half by 21-8.

WEATHERS LEADS SCORERS
Forward Scores Eleven Points; Whole Team Functions Smoothly as Unit.

The University of North Carolina basketball team defeated the much vaunted V. M. I. squad, 36 to 17 last night in the Tin Can before a crowd of about 3,000 persons. It was the seventh straight victory for the White Phantoms and the third Southern Conference decision.

The game was fast and very clean, but the visitors, conquerors of Maryland, were no match for the fast passing, spectacular Tar Heels.

George Brandt initiated festivities by taking Weathers' bullet-like pass and sending it cleanly through the net. Travers made good a crisp shot tying the score, but the Tar Heels were unrelentless in their attack and slowly forged ahead with Weathers and Brandt scoring eight and six points respectively. The half ended with the score 21-8 in Carolina's favor.

Coach Bill Raftery's pep talk between periods evidently had some effect, for the Cadets presented an air tight defense to start the final half. But if V. M. I.'s defense was close, that of Carolina's was just as airtight, for the visitors could do nothing within short range of their goal, depending on long shots to keep them in the ball game.

Whereas the first half was a

FOOTBALL GAME POSTPONED DUE TO MUDDY FIELD

Collins Announces That Three Teams Will Form League For Winter Contests.

The first winter football game, which was scheduled for today, has been postponed as a result of rain and wet grounds, Coach Collins stated yesterday. However, practice and some kind of scrimmage will take place this afternoon as usual.

Coach Collins does not believe the squad is in quite good enough shape to play a regular contest yet. The first game will probably be played next Saturday with scrimmages taking place all next week.

The coaches are planning on using a new method this year in carrying on the games. Instead of having two teams called Blue and Yellow, there will be three teams. The regulars or first team will make up one team, the second string varsity another, and the freshmen a third.

Coach Collins has ordered all freshman football players on the basketball team out for football, which will give the freshmen a pretty strong club to play against last year's varsity teams. Two teams will play every week and a record will be kept of the wins and losses in regular league form. All the rest of the squad who do not see action in the regular games will play in contests during the week, so as to get a chance to show their stuff in something besides everyday scrimmage.

With old men from last year and freshmen coming out for practice daily, the squad has increased to one of the biggest in football history. Yesterday afternoon practice was postponed as a result of the heavy down-pour of rain.

Grant Leads Sutter

According to a late bulletin received last night by the Daily Tar Heel, Bryan Grant, captain of this year's tennis team, was leading Clifford Sutter in the fifth set of a lengthy struggle in one of the semi-final matches of the all-south championships at Miami. Grant and Sutter had each won two sets apiece when the battle was postponed because of darkness with Grant leading 5-4 in games. George Lott won the other semi-final match from Gregory Mangin. No scores were available.

TEMPLE FROSH REQUEST RESTORATION OF HAZING

Freshmen at Temple University are in favor of the movement to restore hazing on the campus, claiming that they are tired of the absence of discipline. Dr. Charles Beury, president of Temple, states that the spirit of the University has suffered since the abolition of hazing regulations. Any physical disciplining of the first year men will not be included if the former freshmen rules should go into effect.

TAR BABIES WIN THRILLER FROM OAK RIDGE FIVE

Frosh Rally in Second Half to Win 39-34; Crater, Cadet Center, Star of Game.

The Tar Babies came from behind with a stirring second half rally to defeat Oak Ridge 39-34 last night in the Tin Can. The contest was the preliminary of the Carolina-V. M. I. fracas.

Oak Ridge, with Al Crater, center, leading the way, led at half time, 21-13.

Carolina Starts Half Strong
Carolina started the second session with a rush, two field goals by Moore and one by Rankin bringing Coach Dameron's squad to within four points of the visitors. Then Crater, who had scored ten points the first half, went to work and brought the Cadets well into the lead. This seemed to spur the Tar Babies on and shot after shot was made successfully, climaxing with Nelson's two field goals to break a 27-27 deadlock.

Crater Scores Nineteen Points
Moore and Nelson were Carolina's bright lights with fourteen and twelve points respectively. Crater, with a total of nineteen markers led his squad. Nuzum also played a good game for the Cadets.

Fetzer Asks Better Deportment Of Fans At V.M.I. Meet Tonight

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this, the second of his series of articles on sportsmanship, R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics, asks Carolina's students to match the splendid sportsmanship of the boxers who will enter the ring with V. M. I. tonight.

By R. A. Fetzer
No other sport on the college program affords such a severe test of the real sportsmanship of participants, supporters and spectators, as boxing.

Watch the rival boxers in the matches with V. M. I. here Saturday night. From the clang of the gong, every man who enters the ring will be giving everything he has to hang up a victory for his side.

To resort to slang, which is sometimes more expressive than acceptable English, he will give it and he will take it, and will come back with a smile for more. It is not easy to take the full force of a worthy rival's blow and not lose one's temper, but these boys have trained themselves to do exactly that. They will fight their hardest until the last bell, but always as true sportsmen, and without ever a thought of taking any unfair advantage.

Competent critics unanimously agree that there is no comparison between college and professional boxing. The collegian fights for the love of the game and the glory of his school. He gives everything he has for the three rounds he is in the ring instead of stalling or of saving himself until he can deliver one punch which will build him up a bigger purse for his next fight. He boxes a match in which men do not foul or cry foul, for such things as these, which sometimes slip into professional boxing, are unknown in the college ring. In short, the college boxer is a true sportsman under the hardest competition, the hottest fire, the most difficult conditions.

If the boxers who represent Carolina in the ring can practice such real sportsmanship, it seems to me that the least Carolina students can do is to match their efforts with a display of sportsmanship as spectators and supporters which will be equally high and above reproach. The N. C. A. A. and Southern Conference rules forbid any cheering or demonstration during the progress of a round. All cheering must be confined to the interval between rounds and between the bouts. As Carolina men we must refrain, of course, from any hissing or derogatory remarks, and we make a point of applauding a good performance by a rival.

If our students will consider the splendid sportsmanship our boxers are showing when they

and we'd like to talk with you about it

All races of people since the beginning of time, so far as we have been able to read, have had some kind of a pipe and have smoked something—whether they called it tobacco or what not.

AND since smoking a pipe is so different from smoking a cigar or cigarette, we made a most painstaking, scientific study in an effort to make, if we could, a tobacco which was suited to pipes.

We found out, first, that there was a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called White Burley, and that there was a certain kind of this tobacco which was between the tobacco used for cigarettes and the tobacco used for chewing tobacco. It is this tobacco which is best for pipes.

We found out that Mr. J. N. Wellman, many years ago, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular. But it was never advertised and after he passed away nothing more was heard about it. We acquired this Wellman Method and that is what we use in making Granger.

The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

Next was the cut. We knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times. So remembering how folks used to "whittle" their tobacco we cut GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco—"Rough Cut." It smokes cooler, lasts longer and never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco —right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has become a popular smoke. And we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

OLD EAST BESTS FORMER CHAMPS

Best House, Beta Theta Pi, and D. K. E. Also Victorious in Yesterday's Intramurals.

A champion fell yesterday in the intramural basketball race as Old East's powerful quintet topped Ruffin, 1932 campus champion, from the top rung of the dormitory standings with a 29-20 defeat.

Old East started with a rush, running up a commanding lead of 23-7 at the whistle for the first half. The Ruffin outfit was a little stage-struck as it battled in vain against the team which had swept all before it in its four previous contests of the season. Three of the highest scoring players in the two leagues are numbered among the old East team; and, although these men were held to far lower totals than usual, Hinson, who scored ten points, and Fox, who got seven, were continual thorns in the side of the Ruffin five.

Last year's titleholders played a different game in the last two quarters, but to no avail. Try as they would they were unable to overcome their opponents' lead, although they outscored the winners, 13-6 in the second half.

Weathers with six points and Stuart with five led the Ruffin attack, as their team was swept from another chance at the campus championship.

Best House Wins

Best House chalked up its fourth successive win in downing Grimes, 56-22. Snyder scored twenty points to lead the winners, while Irwin added sixteen and Parker twelve to the Best House total. Frou and Goldberg scored eight and six points respectively for Grimes.

Beta Theta Pi continued its season without a defeat as it downed Delta Psi to the tune of 30-20. Three men scored all the Beta points. Anderson got eleven, Barnett twelve, and Tenille seven, while Dillard and Blount, with eight and six, led the attack for Delta Psi.

Delta Kappa Epsilon crushed Phi Alpha, 37-16, with Alexander taking individual scoring honors with seventeen points. McGinn followed with ten. Schulman, Bessen, and Losewick scored four each for Phi Alpha.

Sigma Nu won from Phi Gamma Delta and Kappa Alpha beat Sigma Chi on forfeits.

DUKE FULLBACK IS NEW BOXING STAR

Artie Ershler, more famous for football, has returned to boxing after a layoff since his freshman year when he was undefeated.

Ershler will add considerable strength to the Duke mit team which is scheduled to meet State this week-end in what may mean a lot in the Big Five championship race. Virginia handed the Blue Devils a decisive beating in their opening match, but Duke will be pointing toward revenge in this week's fight.

Virginia Captain Will Not Perform Tonight

Bobby Goldstein, the Washington, D. C., lad who is Virginia's boxing captain, will be missing from the lineup when the Cavalier ring team faces V. P. I. at Charlottesville tonight.

Goldstein has been forced to go to bed with a cold which has been bothering him for some time and which slowed him down in the V. M. I. match last week. In his place Bob McEwen of Richmond will do the lightweight scrapping against Joe Yaggi of New Philadelphia, Ohio, for Tech.

We see by the papers that the South Carolina lower house has passed a bill providing for the broadcast of athletic events of the secondary schools in the Palmetto State. While the writer feels that the athletic policy of colleges in South Carolina is not a matter of legislative concern, we do feel that the Southern Conference might well follow the spirit of that proposed bill and lift its ban on football broadcasting. At present the conference is the only organized circuit of any size that has maintained its ban on the radio.

The writer believes that publicity is a tonic which can make the conference one of the most formidable, and what better publicity can be obtained than through the medium of radio broadcasting.

Of course the main argument against radio broadcast is the feeling that it will hurt the gate receipts. That is a doubtful belief. All the big games in the east, west, and far west are broadcast and still we find football supporting all the other sports. On the other hand, there is a feeling, and justly so, that radio broadcasting increases interest in football games, which may very easily be turned into increased receipts. Take the University of North Carolina as an example. Whether or not we have our home games broadcast, Wake Forest and Davidson will still draw from between 7,500-10,000 persons. Georgia and Georgia Tech will be good for about 16,000-20,000, while the Virginia contest will pack the stadium regardless of broadcasting.

While on the Southern Conference, we note that President Miles is sponsoring a change in the scoring system of games won and lost. We congratulate Miles on this forward step. The old percentage scoring system was an evil of the old conference and might easily develop into one in the present conference. The football championship should not only be based on the number of games won, lost, and tied, but also on the number of games played. Therefore, we suggest the scoring system employed by the National Hockey League. For every game won, two points are awarded and for every tie game, one point is added. The use of this system would foster games with conference rivals and strengthen the circuit internally. Thus, if a team played seven conference games and won six of them, it would finish with a total of twelve points, whereas a school playing five league games and victorious in all, would have a total of ten points.

Next week the Carolina basketball team will meet Duke in its first "crucial" contest between the two schools. Recent developments in the Big Five race show that the Tar Heels must beat the Blue Devils to win the crown and on the other hand the Devils can't repeat their championship unless they take the Tar Heels twice. And those boys from the Durham school are mighty good. They mean business when they step out on the court. Ask State and Wake Forest about that. There'll be plenty of personal duels that day too which will go a long way toward deciding the berths on the all-State team. Hines and Horne, McCachren and F. Lewis are just two of the torrid battles that will be waged.

NAVY INCLUDED ON TENNIS SCHEDULE

Tar Heels Take on Annapolis Midshipmen During Northern Trip, April 29.

North Carolina along with four other southern tennis teams are on the Navy schedule for the coming spring season. All the southern teams are to meet the Navy at Annapolis.

The Tar Heels stop off at Annapolis on their usual northern trip which includes most of the big colleges and universities in the northeast. Last year and the year before when Carolina won all their matches, Navy was among the victims each time.

Carolina is scheduled for April 29, while Maryland, April 1; Virginia, April 15; Duke, May 3; and Davidson April 23 are other Southern conference or North Carolina teams scheduled to play the midshipmen.

at Lexington, and to regain the ground that they lost by tying with State College last Saturday.

McIntosh Out

Due to the illness of Frank McIntosh, welterweight gamester who fought Charlie Garner off his feet, Bruce Langdon will get his chance. He has been training hard and from all outward appearances he should be ready to give Bain, the visiting 145 pounder, a warm welcome. Bain, a knock-down and drag-out type of fighter, is the boy who nearly stopped Tom Fishburne of Virginia in a furious affair, only to lose the duke after being floored twice himself.

Marty Levinson will meet Crews whom he defeated last year after a stormy session, and the doughty Tar Heel captain will be out for a fast win. Peyton Brown feels the same way about Kostainsek who took a decision from him last year.

Norm Quarles, the Tar Heel Express, will meet Mickey Doyle, the boy who led Bobby Goldstein a hectic pace and the spotlight will be on him when he squares off. Generally conceded to be one of the smoothest fighters around here, Quarles will be watched intently when he faces the strolling opposition that Doyle is sure to give him. He will be after three straight knockouts, having gotten his first two against V. P. I. and State College.

Platt Landis will square off against Millard in the heavyweight encounter and this fight is likewise expected to be a hummer. Not much is known of the Virginia heavy whom Millard knocked dead last week; but everyone feels that if he was a Virginia fighter, he must have been good. Platt displayed his punching power before a satisfied audience last Saturday.

Frosh After Win

The frosh team will be after its third straight victory with two new faces in the line-up. Max Frucht, who is out with a cracked hand, will be replaced by Johnny Edwards in the featherweight spot, while Francis Glenn will step into Jim Flaherty's shoes in the lightweight class.

The rest of the team is, so far, unchanged. Eutsler, Sutton, Baxter Brown, Ellisberg, Henson, and Kanner will be ready to go for the Tar Babies.

scoring orgy for Coach Shepard's squad, every point that was scored in the latter period was hard fought, but Carolina's superiority was never in doubt, although the going was tougher.

V. M. I.'s famous finishing power was lacking last night, and when Coach Shepard sent in Henry, Chandler, Long, and Beale to relieve Aitken, Weathers, Hines, and Brandt, the Cadets were still able to do very little through the Tar Heel defense.

Weathers High-Scorer
Weathers, with eleven points on five field goals and one free throw, was Carolina's high scorer. Hines and Brandt were next with seven and six respectively. Downey was V. M. I.'s high scorer with five points. McCachren and Aitken played their usual unrivaled floor games for the winners.

Cagney Stars After Long Local Absence

James Cagney, after an absence of several months, returns to the screen in "Hard to Handle," showing today at the Carolina theatre. Mary Brian has the leading feminine role.

The story, which is taken from Houston Branch's comedy drama, takes the spectator from the West Coast to New York and Florida in multifarious publicity schemes which include dance marathons, treasure hunts, reducing cream and grapefruit campaigns.

Included in the supporting cast are Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly, Claire Dodd, Emma Dunn, Robert McWade, Matt McHugh, Gavin Gordon, and John Sheehan. Vervyn LeRoy, who has had charge of such hits as "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," "Two Seconds," "Local Boy Makes Good," and "Five Star Final," directed.

would think that in the case of the University the cut from $894,000 to $721,000 reflected a normal reduction for the time and that when it was dropped from $721,000 to $504,000 by executive order, one must assume that it went to the bone," he said.

Young declared that in times like these when it is almost impossible for young people to get employment, it is of vital importance that they be kept in school. He would like to see the activities of the great state universities enlarged to employ fully the enforced leisure of the young people. It is the duty of the older generation to train and discipline their children so that they may not only be of service to their generation but may also obtain the maximum happiness for themselves. He stated that the present economic plight is not the young peoples' fault nor should they be made its victims to any extent which can be helped.

"The friends of education everywhere will especially hope that no tragedy may come to the great University of North Carolina," concluded Young.

AMERICAN DAVIS CUP VICTORY IS PREDICTED

United States tennis warriors will regain the Davis cup from France when they take the warpath in 1933, according to no less an authority than Pierre Etchebaster, world's court tennis champ and a Frenchman himself.

The Frenchman thinks Ellsworth Vines is going to be the big gun in the Yankee conquest, and that Vines is going to be the one big reason why France is going to lose the cup. Etchebaster was recently in New York, where he gave an interview to a representative of the press.

NOTED MUSICIANS WILL PLAY WORK BY STRINGFIELD

Maganini's Sinfonietta to Present "Cripple Creek" on Program at Winston-Salem.

Lamar Stringfield, research associate to the institute of folk music, will conduct the performance of his Cripple Creek by the New York sinfonietta at its appearance in Winston-Salem February 20.

The New York sinfonietta is under the direction of Quinto Maganini, American composer and flute player who organized his ensemble of twenty musicians several years ago in order to present programs of modern music, preferably American, without the expense and incumbences of a large symphony orchestra.

Pulitzer Prize Piece

Maganini is holder of the 1927 Pulitzer prize award for musical composition for his Chinese Pieces. Another of his compositions, The Humming Birds from the Ornithological Suite, was recently presented in Chapel Hill by the North Carolina little symphony under the direction of Lamar Stringfield. Maganini has publicly expressed his opinion that the only really native American music is that preserved by the western North Carolina mountaineer descendants of the Anglo-Saxons who settled here a century ago, and has commended Stringfield for his devotion of his career to the preservation of this type of music.

As representative of this American idiom, he has included on the Winston-Salem program of his sinfonietta Stringfield's Cripple Creek, the final movement of the suite of mountain folk song settings entitled From the Southern Mountains, while the judges for the 1928 Pulitzer prize competition chose as the outstanding composition submitted to them.

Many Performances

The work has been given at numerous performances since its composition in 1928, the first complete presentation having been by the Asheville Symphony in the year of the work's completion. Since that time it has been performed in its entirety in Washington on two occasions.

PAMPHLET ISSUED BY FRESHMEN TO APPEAR TUESDAY

"Themes," Magazine Containing Student Essays, Published
By First Year Men.

Containing four articles representing the work of as many students, Themes, a pamphlet issued by the freshman English classes, will make its initial appearance Tuesday when it will be distributed to all students in English 1 and 2 at the regular class meetings.

Essays written during the ordinary course of English work—some of them in class—make up the contents of Themes. Because of limited funds the paper is limited to a mimeographed two-page pamphlet. Other numbers will be published monthly during the remainder of the school year.

Hudson Introduced Pamphlet
Dr. A. P. Hudson, chairman of freshman English, introduced the magazine on this campus; at the University of Mississippi a similar publication met with considerable success under his guidance.

The purpose of the magazine, as outlined by the English department, is to stimulate interest in composition work among the freshmen and to offer a medium for publication of creditable work. The task of selecting the compositions was stated by the department to be a particularly difficult one as many excellent themes were considered before the committee was able to make a final selection. The department stated that the committee was guided to a great extent by the length of the compositions under consideration, numbers of creditable papers being rejected solely on account of their length.

DURHAM ALUMNUS PROTESTS CLOSING MEDICAL SCHOOL

Judge James R. Patton Opposes Abolition Reported in State Legislature.

A protest against the move reported to be now under way in the legislature to abolish the medical school of the University of North Carolina was made Friday by Judge James R. Patton, Jr., president of the Durham alumni chapter. Judge Patton's protest came after a report that the appropriation committee would recommend the abolition of the medical school.

Judge Patton said that such a pruning of one of the most important branches of the state's educational responsibilities, should and will be a matter of grave concern to the people of the commonwealth. "The University will arise to this present universal situation of distress," he stated, "as she has always done in the past. The responsibility of the state to afford youth the opportunity to equip itself in the professions cannot be scuttled," he argued.

Y. M. C. A. PLANS TO OFFER NEGRO MORALITY DRAMA

Racial Department Negotiates With Clark University for Appearance of "Pearly Gates."

The University Y. M. C. A., through its department on interracial study and cooperation, is negotiating with Professor Frederick Hall of Clark University, Atlanta, in an effort to bring to Chapel Hill the widely-famed negro morality play, Pearly Gates. The play, based on the negro spiritual, was written and set to music by Professor Hall. A tentative date of May 9 has been set for the negro presentation.

Pearly Gates has a talented negro cast comprised of eighteen students from Clark University and the Gammon Theological Seminary of Atlanta. The production ran for a week in Chicago and has enjoyed tremendous popularity. It is considered as a masterpiece along with Green Pastures, the Pulitzer Prize winner.

In addition to the regular cast, a chorus of from one hundred to two hundred local negroes in the town in which the production is given is trained several weeks before the presentation.

CINEMATIC OPERA WILL BE OFFERED HERE TOMORROW

"Pagliacci" Will Appear Here
Under Auspices of University
Glee Club.

Cinema's first operatic production in sound Pagliacci will be shown tomorrow at the Carolina theatre. The production is being sponsored by the University Glee Club in cooperation with the local theatre. A cast of one hundred and fifteen people and an orchestra of sixty comprising the best musicians in the operatic field of New York feature Audio-Cinema's screen innovation.

Pagliacci is perhaps the best known of the average works of this type. The famous Prologue and the aria of the dramatic tenor, closely associated with the triumphs of the late Enrico Caruso, have made the opera popular with a vast public. It was written by Ruggero Leoncavallo, Italian librettist and composer of the nineteenth century.

Fortune Gallo, successful producer of grand operas, collaborated with the Audio-Cinema, Inc., in the sound film production. The San Carlo Grand Opera Company, under Gallo's supervision, sings and acts the seven reel feature, and brings to the screen the personal touch of the stage production.

Among the cast are such well-known artists as Fernando Ber-

WRITING CLASS WILL PUBLISH BEST WORKS

Following a precedent set by several leading colleges of the southwest, the creative writing class of Phillips Russell has unanimously voted to publish a collection of the best pieces of writing turned in by the class. The members of the class will be assessed a small sum to cover the cost of the publication, which will be released at the end of the quarter.

The editorial board for this publication will meet in room 214 in Graham Memorial this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Dramatist And Biographer To Be Honored This Week

Celebration, Sponsored by Carolina Playmakers, Given Chiefly in Recognition of Dr. Archibald Henderson's Latest Volume, "Bernard Shaw, Playboy and Prophet."

By R. W. Madry

During the coming week the University community will pay formal tribute to George Bernard Shaw, the famous Irish wit, and his authorized biographer, Dr. Archibald Henderson, distinguished member of the University faculty.

The celebration, which is sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers, under the guidance of Director Frederick H. Koch, is to take the form of a Shaw-Henderson festival.

The event is chiefly in recognition of Dr. Henderson's latest volume, Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, which represents the culmination of twenty-nine years of literary labor. Dr. Henderson has put into words about the famous Irish playwright.

With the passing of Anatole France, Dr. Henderson regards Shaw as the world's "grand old man of letters," and he regards this last volume as his principal literary achievement to date.

Dr. Henderson says that in his last book about Shaw, he has brought up to date the whole story of Shaw's remarkable career. Doubtless he says this seriously, for it was only last week that he sold his valuable Shawian collection at public auction in New York. The collection brought around $8,000.

Tributes from Authorities
The climax of the Shaw-Henderson Festival is set for Sunday night, February 5, when, at a celebration in the Playmakers theatre, Professor Koch, presiding, will read tributes from distinguished men and women of letters.

President Graham will speak the tribute of the University, and Percy MacKaye, celebrated poet and dramatist, bringing greetings from his colleagues throughout the nation, will speak on "The World of the Theatre and the Drama." Dr. Henderson will then deliver the principal address on "Shaw as A World Power."

Professor Koch has invited to the festival a number of distinguished writers, critics, and patrons of the theatre from all over the world. Many who were unable to accept the invitation sent congratulations, some of which will be read.

An interesting feature of the celebration will be an exhibit of Shaw posters, works of art in themselves, gathered from all parts of the world. They promise to form an excellent background for the festival.

The other outstanding feature of the week's celebration will be the presentation by the Playmakers of You Never Can Tell, one of Shaw's earliest and most delightful comedies, next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights, February 2, 3, and 4.

There is peculiar appropriateness in the selection of this play, for Dr. Henderson's first contact with Shaw, he says, was back in 1903 when he, then twenty-six and a graduate student at the University of Chicago, first became interested in Shaw after witnessing a performance of that comedy.

How Acquaintance Began
"Somehow that witty comedy, which is full of clever wisecracks, convinced me that here was an undiscovered genius," Dr. Henderson says. "I felt a keen urge to write the life of a man like that. I sat down immediately and wrote Shaw, and after we had exchanged several letters he agreed to let me begin work on a biography of him."

The versatility of Dr. Henderson has long been recognized. As scientist, literator, and historian he has been widely acclaimed throughout this and other lands. He is head of the department of mathematics in the University

Newton Baker Sounds Challenge For State To Sustain University

Former Secretary of War Says That Any Backward Step Taken In Difficult Year Will Do Damage That a Generation Cannot Repair; Pays Tribute to Eminence of University.

Another challenge was sounded Friday by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war and in his own words "in a sense a southern born man," for the south and particularly for North Carolina, to sustain its educational institutions. He wrote the following in a special statement to the Raleigh News and Observer from Cleveland:

"I am in a sense a Southern born man. Throughout my life I have looked with eager concern upon the development of the educational institutions of the south and have increasingly believed that the handicap of that section from the prostrating aftermath of the War Between the States could only be overcome by constantly raising the educational standard and multiplying the facilities for higher education there. The University of North Carolina has been a comfort, indeed an inspiration, as it has grown year by year in dignity and efficiency until its graduates could proudly take their places with those of the great colleges of the north and the great state-fostered institutions of the middle-west. Education everywhere is likely to suffer in this depression, but apart from the mere bread and butter necessities of the hungry, there is no higher challenge to the patriotism of the south than to continue to sustain its educational institutions, and this is particularly true in North Carolina where the University has obtained such eminence and where any backward step taken in a difficult year may do damage which a generation cannot repair.

"I am deeply concerned at the shrinking support which the state has given and is proposing to give to the University and I venture to write this expression to you in the hope that it and like words from friends of the University scattered throughout the country will be a challenge to the statesmanship of your legislature to preserve the priceless progress the University has made."

FORUM WILL HAVE MEETING TONIGHT IN LOCAL CHURCH

"The Place of Personality in Religion"
Will Be Subject for Discussion
At Chapel of The Cross.

The Chapel of the Cross forum, organized by Tom Wright, has continued its Sunday night meetings since Wright's acceptance of a position in New York. This evening at 7:00 o'clock the forum meeting in the Episcopal church will discuss the "Place of Personality in Religion."

The organization is primarily a discussion group, confining its discussions to religious discussions. However, according to Nutt Parsley who is directing the work, the treatments are liberal and non-denominational, and its direction always toward a modern and rational analysis of pertinent questions.

This group was popular under Wright, and students whom he interested are conducting it according to his plans. The following topics are scheduled for future meetings: "Place of Personality in Religion," "The Christian Philosophy," "Transition in Religious Thought in the College Man," and "Force of Love in the Leadership of Man."

QUERY SELECTED FOR HIGH SCHOOL DEBATE CONTEST

Final Contest for Aycock Memorial Cup Will Be Conducted
Here April 13 and 14.

According to a debate handbook compiled by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the high school debating union, the query to be discussed this year by the high schools in the twenty-first annual state-wide debating contest is Resolved: That North Carolina should adopt the sales tax as a feature of its state system of revenue. The high school debating leagues of twenty-nine states will discuss taxation in some form this year.

All schools who become members of the union and enter the contest will be arranged into groups of three for triangular debates, the status and standards of the schools, their proximity, accessibility, and convenience of location to be considered in forming the groups. Each school of every triangular group will furnish two debating teams of two members each, one to uphold the affirmative side of the query, and the other to defend the negative side. March 31 has been selected as the date for these triangular debates to be run off.

The schools which win both of their debates shall be entitled to

A High-Class Opera At a Nominal Fee

It is a rare opportunity that the students and townspeople will have tomorrow at being able to see the famous opera "Pagliacci" at regular admission prices shown at the Carolina theatre in sound pictures. The screen production is identical with the stage presentation, except for a few minor stage setting changes which were necessary in order to film the complete performance.

This is the first time in years that a truly high-class performance of this type has been shown in Chapel Hill at such reasonable admission charges, and it was only through the diligence of Manager E. Carrington Smith that this special arrangement was possible.

Realizing the high calibre of the opera and the seldom-encountered opportunity of seeing it at such prices, persons from Greensboro, Raleigh and nearby communities have already purchased tickets to the showing.

Those persons who appreciate high type screen performances should be truly grateful to the local theatre for bringing this opera to Chapel Hill.

Huey and a Dictatorship

In a time when millions of gaunt, jobless citizens stalk the streets of our metropolitan areas, wheat and surplus clothing crowd our warehouses, a great public begins to glance toward what some claim is inevitable—dictatorship. The more popular magazines are filled with articles in the vein "If I were Dictator," "Dictatorship Comes to America" etc. seeming to indicate that the brain trusts seek to pin their faith in control from a strong individual.

Truly, many have lost faith in our existing forms of government, but there are nearly as many who seem oblivious of the national predicament. We cannot afford to be too obviously reactionary, yet it seems that the road to dictatorship must be paved with leaders whose strength and judgement is above reproach. There are few men in the United States today who can merit the true appellation of "Leader." Owen D. Young and Huey Long seem to be this generation's sole contribution to this legion of individuals. Many, no doubt, point toward the "Kingfish" as a potential dictator. But a dictator needs more equipment than a pair of brass bound lungs.

Should Washington ever be visited by a dictator, he should need arise from the ranks of our present leaders. That we have few, if any, is not to be doubted. An American dictatorship will certainly not be realized in this generation—D.C.S.

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

Robbins Tells All

Since my esteemed contemporaries, Miss Harbour and Mr. Shoemaker, have broken through the ice of tradition and conferred upon the public those lucid and entertaining little introspective sketches in the latest editions of Life and Letters and Our Times, it has been suggested that the rest of these naturally timid and retiring creatures called columnists should be prevailed upon and encouraged to step boldly forward and give unselfishly the facts of their lives for the benefit of posterity. After much persuasion and offers of enormous royalties, I have consented to present for your edification and enjoyment, the life history up-to-date of the mighty Robbins, iconoclast extraordinary, twin brother to the baron Munchausen, and charter member of the Ananias club.

I first saw the light of day in Chicago, at the age of 33, after having spent my early life in Pittsburgh, and it was three years before any one knew whether I would walk or glide.

There was no one but myself at home when I was born, my father having been killed at the battle of Thermopylae, and my mother being away at the Army-Navy game where she was killed by a New York gangster. So, like Popeye, I was born an orphan, or pretty nearly so.

It was in the Smoky City that I acquired my Hungarian accent, and in Chicago that I learned to duck at sudden noises.

I first attracted national attention while serving as Admiral Dewey's flagship at the Battle of Manila Bay and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for my famous backhand stroke which completely dumbfounded the Spaniards, who were all left-handed.

My family moved from Chicago to North Carolina the following year, and I immediately took out my first naturalization papers, eventually becoming an American citizen. I entered the University of North Carolina the next fall and soon became a famous hockey star and crap shooter.

When the World War began I was made a brigadier-general, although I was then only a junior in the College of Liberal Arts. After serving throughout the war with distinction, I returned home with 36 medals, a trunk full of Paris picture cards, a pillow from a convent, and one of Mata Hari's garters.

While traveling through Sweden after the war, as a member of the President's Peace Commission, I met a beautiful young actress, practically unknown except for the distinction of having the largest feet in the world, and fell violently in love with her. She returned to America with me and entered the moving picture business. You know her as the world's greatest lover. We were married last summer and now live quietly with our family at our simple country home in Hoboken. My wife expects to return to the screen next spring unless I get a job. I do not think that it would be a good idea for her to give up her art entirely. We artists must consider our public.

I voted for Harding in 1920; but the world soon forgets, and I was able recently to take up my right name again.

I have recently been interested in technocracy. I understand that the technocrats will have it arranged so that everybody can live without work. I think the government should furnish money for them to carry on their investigations in this wonderful field.

I had dropped almost into oblivion and was virtually unknown when the editor discovered me one day last fall while I was sitting on my back fence, whittling out a new snuff stick and ruminating upon the affairs of the universe. I accepted his offer of free board, room, tuition, and a salary of $15,000 a year with liberal allowance extra for peanuts, liquor, and chewing tobacco, to come back to school and help improve the general tone of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

I am carrying 14 courses in the Greek department, running a chain of boarding houses, editing the Yellow Journal, writing a weekly column, doing desk work for the student paper, writing Life and Letters and contributing to The Atlantic Monthly in my spare time.

I think you for your kind attention.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

Ann Vickers was released during the past week by Doubleday-Doran. This is Sinclair Lewis' first novel since he received the Nobel Prize, and it was accordingly treated as a publishing event of world importance. It appeared simultaneously in the United States, England, Canada, Australia, France, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Denmark and Norway, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and Italy.

Ann Vickers is the story of a modern American woman, not a type, but an individual, of such calibre as to be rendered more thoroughly human, and more deeply understanding, by the purgatory of "a Career in Social Work."

Mr. Lewis discreetly explains: "All the characters in this story are entirely fictitious, and no reference is intended to any actual person. And while it is believed that an entirely accurate account is given of prisons settlement houses, and suffrage organizations, none of the institutions described refer to actual institutions."

Another recent addition to the rental library of the Bull's Head is Women Against Men. Storm Jameson makes her point—it is only rarely that women stand any chance against men—by presenting this group of three short novels.

John Masfield, poet-laureate of Great Britain, is now visiting this country. The Bull's Head reading this week will be given over to a consideration of his poetry. Peter W. Hairston will read several selections from that collection known as Minnie Maylow's Story and Other Tales and Scenes. As usual, we shall be glad to welcome any who wish to draw away for a brief while, from those things which must be done. We ask you to spend a quiet half-hour at our fireside Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Just to save you from inquiring may we add, the Bull's Head is that casual book shop in the Y. M. C. A. to left before entering the "Book Ex."

Carolina Mittmen With Revamped Lineups Take Cadets With 6-2 Victories

Quarles and Landis Score Knockouts; Edwards and Ellisberg K. O. Frosh Opponents.

BOTH TEAMS ARE CHANGED

Lumpkin, Raymer, and Parsons Appear for Varsity; Edwards, Owlick, New Freshmen.

The boxing teams, varsity and freshman, both came through with smashing 6-2 victories over the V. M. I. Cadets last night before a crowd of 3,500 down at the Tin Can.

Norm Quarles and Platt Landis again thrilled the crowd with spectacular knockouts, Quarles getting his man in the third and Landis getting his in the first. Quarles went after Mickey Doyle with the calmness of a butcher in an abattoir and with about the same results. The blonde bomber left-handed Doyle silly in the first, landed on him with both hands in the second, and stiffened him in 1:35 of the third.

Landis Hot Again

Landis electrified the audience by clipping Hilliard with a savage right that echoed through the house and Hilliard went down. When he rose, Platt, over-anxious to finish him, missed repeatedly but finally got to Hilliard and then it was curtains for the Cadet scrapper. The end came in 1:12 of the first.

Cliff Glover opened the varsity show by pounding out a whale of a decision against Koteen in three rounds. Cliff looked fine in winning his first of the season, landing a whistling over-hand right to the jaw repeatedly.

Crews, V. M. I. feather, had plenty of Marty Levinson at the end of three innings, Marty having slugged him nearly at will. Crews could take it and he was still on his feet at the end, but that was about all.

Furches Raymer displayed a good left hand in addition to his well-known right and he fought a fast three round draw with Eppe, V. M. I. captain, in the

MONOGRAM CLUB WILL REORGANIZE TOMORROW NIGHT

Banquet for Reorganization of Group Is Being Sponsored By Order of the Grail.

From all indications every monogram wearer in school will be present at the reorganization banquet which is being given the Monogram club tomorrow night by the Order of the Grail.

The dinner is to be given in the banquet room of Graham Memorial and is set for 7:00 o'clock. All monogram men are reminded that they are to wear their sweaters to the banquet and to come prepared to make any suggestions they may have concerning the proposed constitution which has been distributed among the lettermen.

Code to Be Presented

Along with the constitution a code of conduct which will apply to all Carolina athletes has been drawn up and the idea now is to have this code read to every squad of each sport at the initial practice of said sport. Special emphasis will be laid on presenting the code effectively to freshman squads that they may see the honor of competing for the University.

The Grail is particularly interested in raising the conduct of the student body at athletic events and it was for that reason that the Order took this step in sponsoring the reorganization banquet.

WINTER FOOTBALL PRACTICE STARTS WITH FAST GAME

Phipps and Martin Score Touchdowns as Orange Team Defeats Blue Squad.

The Orange eleven picked by Coach Chuck Collins opened the winter practice games with a 13-0 victory over the Blue team, yesterday on Kenan field. The game was close and hard fought throughout.

Coach Collins commented on the exhibition after the game and seemed favorably impressed. The play of both teams was above what he had anticipated in the first of the winter games.

John Phipps, playing one of the halves for the Orange team scored the first marker after the Blue forward wall had warded off several Orange thrusts from within the shadow of the goal. Phipps went around right end for the score. He missed the try for point.

The second score came on a pass to Pepper Martin. The Orange team was in Blue territory and Martin took the pass in the open and ran about twenty yards for the score. On the attempted try for point the pass from center was muffed but Martin ran around left end for the extra point.

The Orange team showed Frankel and Manly, ends; Collins and Barrett, tackles; Kahn and Barclay, guards; and McIver, center. In the backfield Martin was at quarter, Schaffer and Phipps at halves, with Croom at fullback. The Blue eleven had Moore and Barwick, ends; Evins and Hobgood, tackles; Blythe and Caldwell, guards; and Gardner, center. In the backfield for this team Woolen was at quarter, MacDonald and Thompson were at the halves, and Bell was at fullback.

These two teams opened the game but numerous substitutions were made throughout, some Orange men playing on the Blue team and vice versa.

Grant Loses

Clifford Sutter, number one ranking in national collegiate tennis and number three in the United States ranking, came back strong yesterday to take three straight games from Bryan Grant, Carolina star, and win the fifth and deciding set 7-5, according to a late bulletin last night. In the final round of the all-south championships at Miami, Sutter met George Lott, former Davis star and lost to Lott in four sets. The scores of the final match were 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Debate Rehearsals Planned

W. R. Eddleman and R. P. Russell will deliver their debates on the cancellation of war debts before the debate group Monday night at 9:00 o'clock. This is the rehearsal for the debate with the University of Pittsburgh which will take place Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Tau Beta Pi Banquet Planned

The Tau Beta Pi honorary engineering fraternity will conduct a banquet at the Carolina Inn for the members and their guests, the faculty members and their wives immediately preceding the engineers' ball February 3. An informal entertainment will be arranged.

Probable All-Southern Heavyweights

Above are two Tar Heel heavyweight fighters, Platt Landis in the ring and Percy Idol on the mat. Idol won his third straight mat victory of the year by a clean fall yesterday afternoon, and Landis smashed his way to his third win and second knockout of the year in the first round of his fight last night.

NINE TEAMS LEAD INTRAMURAL RACE WITH NO DEFEATS

Five Teams in Fraternity League And Four in Dormitory Group Have Won Every Game.

Ruffin's defeat by Old East, Pi Kappa Alpha's upset at the hands of Pi Kappa Phi, and Phi Gamma Delta's loss to Tau Epsilon Phi last week reduced the number of undefeated teams in the intramural basketball races to five fraternities and four dormitories.

In the dormitory loop Old East is setting the pace at the season's half-way mark with five wins and no defeats. Best House, Mangum, and Swain Hall have each won all four of the games they have played to date.

Five teams, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Zeta Psi are tied for the fraternity leadership with four wins apiece.

Dormitory Scorers Lead

In individual scoring the dormitory players are far outshining the fraternity cagers. Old East players are running one-two-three for honors in the smaller loop with Hinson, who scored thirty-six points in two contests last week, rapidly closing the gap which separates him from his teammate, Fox, who leads the league. Hinson's total mounted to eighty last week, while Fox scored thirty-one markers to total eighty-six. With three games to go, a hot race is in sight between these two members of the league-leading quintet.

Hamlet is the third Old East player at the top of the heap in individual scoring, with fifty-three points to show for his season's work.

Alexander, of Delta Kappa Epsilon, passed Longest, of Theta Kappa Nu, last week to take the lead in the fraternity scramble for high-scoring honors with fifty-seven points. Longest's total rose to fifty-three, only four behind. Anderson, of Beta Theta Pi, has forty-seven in third place.

Zeta Psi Meets Chi Psi

The schedule for this week, the fourth of the campaign, offers only one game between two undefeated quintets. Friday afternoon will bring together Chi Psi and Zeta Psi in a game which will eliminate one from the list of unconquered teams.

Several other teams will meet stiff opposition and face the chance of losing their first game this week, however. T. E. P. faces the strong Deke five Tuesday in a game which promises plenty of action. Best House takes on the Crescent Cafeteria outfit Wednesday and Mangum faces Grimes the same day.

The schedule for tomorrow

CAVALIER TEAMS FACE BUSY WEEK IN FOUR SPORTS

Boxers, Track Men, Cagers, and Varsity Swimmers of Virginia Will See Action.

Virginia athletes face a busy week. Cavalier varsity and first year boxing, basketball, and track teams will all be in action, as will the varsity swimmers. Only the first year tankmen will not be competing during the next seven days.

Basketball games will be played with two Southern Conference rivals, both on the home court. Maryland's strong quint comes here Tuesday night, January 31. Two evenings later there's a contest with North Carolina State.

Gus Tebell's charges have just completed games with three state members of the conference. Now they turn their attention to the quintets from outside the Old Dominion.

Indoor Track Meet Saturday

Virginia's one and only track meet during the indoor season is set for next Saturday night, February 4. It will be a contest against both the varsity and freshman teams of Washington and Lee. Cavalier trackmen will, of course, be entered in the annual Southern Conference indoor meet here early in March.

Three basketball games are scheduled for the first year basketball team which has played through three opening games without a defeat. Roy Randall's charges play Augusta Military Academy at Fort Defiance Monday, North Carolina's freshmen here Thursday, and Central High School of Washington here next Saturday. All the games will be in the afternoon.

Duke Wins

The Blue Devils defeated the V. M. I. Cadets last night in Durham by the score of 41-20. J. Thompson, Horne, and Weaver led the Duke attack which showed power in spots and seemed ragged at times. The score stood 16-11 in favor of Duke at the half.

Tar Heel Wrestlers Lose To V.M.I. By 15-11 Score

HEELS WILL MEET CAVALIER BOXERS HERE THIS WEEK

Virginia Matches Saturday Are Only Events on Schedule For Week in Tin Can.

Another full week of sports is on the schedule for Carolina's athletic teams this week. Eleven events are on the card but only two will take place in the Tin Can.

Both the freshman and varsity basketball teams, after meeting Duke at Durham, make trips into Virginia and Maryland where they will spend the latter part of the week. The wrestling teams go to Virginia for their only meets. For the third week end in a row the crack Tar Heel freshman and varsity boxing teams hold a match in the Tin Can. The fights, which are with Virginia, are the only events scheduled for Chapel Hill.

Duke's freshman and varsity quint teams offer the first opposition of the week at Durham Tuesday night. The varsity contest is scheduled to be one of the biggest games in the Big Five. Each team has four victories and no defeats. The freshman contest is important since each team has one less against it.

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the basketball squads see action out of the state. Wednesday night the freshman quint meets Virginia's first year team at Charlottesville. The following night, while the White Phantoms are taking on the highly touted Maryland cage teams at College Park, the Tar Babies meet Woodberry at Orange, Virginia. Navy's basketballers, who doubled the count over Duke early this season, will offer opposition for the White Phantoms Saturday night at Annapolis. The same night the Tar Baby basketballers meet A. M. A. at Ft. Defiant, Virginia.

Saturday offers four other events for sports fans. The Tar Heel wrestlers, both freshman and varsity, see action against W. and L.'s mat men at Lexington. Saturday night in the Tin Can the varsity boxing team will have a chance to show every thing they have when they meet Virginia's boxing team, which won the Southern Conference championship last year. The Cavaliers will bring along two champs in Goldstein and Reiss. The freshman teams of the two universities will fight in preliminaries to the main bouts.

Sociology Faculties To Meet Here Tuesday

Members of the sociology faculties of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina and N. C. State College will be guests of the North Carolina Alpha chapter of Alpha Kappa Delta at a dinner to take place in Graham Memorial, Tuesday evening, January 31. The dinner will begin at 6:00 o'clock.

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, of the faculty of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, will preside over a discussion which will follow the reading of a paper, "Recent Trends in Industrial Relations in North Carolina." The author of this paper is Dr. Sandford Winston, of the N. C. State College faculty.

Cadet Fighter Improving

Wilson, V. M. I. freshman who was injured in the boxing match, is recovering, according to an infirmary report last night.

Tar Babies Gain First Victory of Year, Downing V. M. I. "Rats" by 20-18.

CAPTAIN IDOL GETS FALL

Captain Shipman, Snowden, Miller, and Holland Are Point Winners for Freshmen.

Carolina's varsity wrestlers gave the V. M. I. varsity grapplers, the Southern Conference champions and undefeated in Dixie for the past two years, the worst scare that the Cadets have had in years when Carolina pressed the Lexington boys very hard, only to lose 15-11. The Carolina freshman club came through with its first win this year, turning back the V. M. I. "Rats" 20-18. All the matches were staged yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can before a crowd of more than 700 fans.

Varsity Results

C. R. Kellenberger proved his varsity mettle as he won a time decision over Harkness, Cadet 115 pounder. The fight was forced through two extra rounds with the Carolina man finally copping the decision with 2:52 minutes' margin.

Clarke Mathewson, Carolina 125 pound class grappler, showed good form, although pressed all the way by Rugh, V. M. I. Cadet. Several times both men seemed to have a fall forthcoming; however, the match went the entire route with the Tar Heels' representative gaining a time advantage of 3:57 minutes.

Another thrill-packed bout came in the 145 pound division. W. M. Smith, V. M. I. mat man, was able to cop a time advantage of 5:55 minutes over Hillier. The Cadet proved to be clever and strong, besides being a fast man on his feet.

The classic match of the afternoon came next, the 155 pound weight. Captain Warren Landis, leader of the Virginia wrestlers, gained a time decision over Don Conklin in 2:25 minutes.

Idol Wins Fall

Carolina's last win came in the unlimited class as Captain Percy Idol carried the Tar Heels' colors to cop a fall over Burgess in seven and a half minutes. Idol found his man tough, but proved himself worthy of his all-southern position by trouncing the Virginia Cadet.

The Virginia aggregation was especially strong in the heavyweights, having five men from the 155 pounders to the unlimited. C. R. Dorrier, 175 pound class, went to the Olympic trials this past summer, and went far. He took a four minute time decision over Mac Auman in a slow but hard fought battle.

Freshman Results

All the Tar Babies' points came via falls. Captain Shipman led the way among the fall winners by gaining his laurels in the 165 pound class. Snowden, Miller, and Holland were the other first year men's points. Jack Ranson lost a hard fight to R. W. Boyd, Virginia 175 pounder, when he lost his large time margin in Boyd's sensational rally.

The summary is as follows:

Varsity

115 Kellenberger, Carolina, won time advantage, 2:52, over Harkness—two extra rounds, 126 Mathewson, Carolina, won time advantage, 3:57, over Rugh. 135 Lathrop, V. M. I., won time decision over Davis, 3:53. 145 Smith, V. M. I., won time decision over Hillier, 5:55. 155 Captain Landis, V. M. I., won time decision over Conklin, 2:25. 165 Rucker, V. M. I., won send their teams to the University to compete in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial cup. Should it appear to be necessary under the circumstances, however, the debating committee may arrange for a second triangular contest between the winning schools throughout the state prior to the final contest here. In this case only those schools whose teams win both debates in the second contest will be entitled to representation in the final contest.

The school having the strongest team on the affirmative side of the query and the school having the strongest team on the negative side shall be entitled to contest publicly at the University for the cup. The strongest team on each side of the query will be determined by means of preliminary contests in debate here. The final contest has been arranged for April 13-14. Any school winning the final contest for two successive years shall have the cup permanently.

Miss Katherine Keister and Nash Herndon of the Curry high school won the award of the fourth Aycock Memorial cup in the final debate here last April.

DRAMATIST AND HIS BIOGRAPHER TO BE HONORED

and has written reams of authoritative stuff about Einstein's theory of relativity. In history he has delved into the pioneer story of the west; into the historical background of his own state, particularly the neglected men and events which shaped its destiny, and into the lives of famous figures of the contemporary world. The Conquest of the Old Southwest, The Romantic Story of the Early Pioneers in Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, and Kentucky, 1740-1790, Washington's Southern Tour, Contemporary Immortals, and a memorial volume about O. Henry are shining examples of his work in this field.

Gains Wide Praise

During the past quarter of a century Dr. Henderson's essays on modern drama and dramatists have appeared in leading magazines of the world in half a dozen languages.

Dr. Henderson's world-wide campaign in behalf of the recognition of Shaw as a great dramatist and a great man is almost unprecedented in the history of literature. Bernard Shaw, time and again, has acknowledged the great indebtedness he feels that he owes Dr. Henderson for his work.

During the past twenty years Dr. Henderson has written a number of standard works on modern drama and dramatists. It is a fact of significance that he has published eight books dealing, in whole or part, with Bernard Shaw, his life and career in all its multifarious activities. These books are: Interpreters of Life and the Modern Spirit, European Dramatists, George Bernard Shaw: His Life and Works, The Changing Drama, Table-Talk of G. B. S., Is Bernard Shaw a Dramatist?, Contemporary Immortals, and the recently published definitive biography, Bernard Shaw: Play-boy and Prophet.

These books taken as a whole deal with all the important dramatists from Ibsen to the present day, and in themselves constitute an exhaustive history of the modern theatre and the modern drama.

Long Exponent of the Drama
In advance of Professor Koch's coming to the University in 1919, Henderson had for some years prior done pioneer work in the theatre and drama throughout the south as a field agent for the Drama League of America of which he was vice-president. He delivered lectures on drama from Richmond to New Orleans, founding Drama League centers in New Orleans and Columbia.

On the occasion of the dedication of the new University library in 1929—University Day, October 12—Dr. Henderson presented to the University a collection of plays by Americans, which was given the name, "The Archibald Henderson Collection of American Drama." The gift, 650 volumes of American plays, was collected over a period of twenty-five years. May 30, 1930 he made an additional gift of 700 plays to this collection.

Only Authorized Biographer
Bernard Shaw: Play-boy and Prophet is a biography of qualities. It is much more detailed and comprehensive than Sir Sidney Lee's Life of Shakespeare, the standard Shakespeare biography. It is generally conceded to be the most complete and fully documented biography of a living man ever published. It is the most elaborately illustrated biography of a dramatist ever published.

It is the only authorized biography of Shaw, the only one which has been read entirely in proof by Shaw. It has been ranked by several critics with James Boswell's Life of Dr. Samuel Johnson, universally ranked as the greatest of all biographies. And as a work of art and of orderly arrangement of materials it has been said to excel Boswell's Johnson by Percy MacKay, famous poet and dramatist.

Shaw has often been referred to as the most versatile of living writers. In the opinion of a number of critics, he required as a biographer a man of similar versatility; and it is probably for this reason, these critics say, that Henderson's biography of Shaw has received such wide commendation.

though quite at variance with those of the hero on the issues in question."

Barrett H. Clark, a leading American authority on the drama: "The ideal of Boswell is not dead. The epithets Playboy and Prophet belong to A. H. quite as deservedly as they do to G. B. S."

Glenn Hughes, head of the English department of the University of Washington, author of The Story of the Theatre: "This book will be read after some of Shaw's plays have passed out of general circulation. . . . Many generations of students will express their indebtedness to Dr. Henderson as we, his contemporaries, are expressing ours now."

Thomas H. Dickinson, dramatic critic and historian of the drama: "Archibald Henderson was the second man in the world to apprehend the full importance of the Life Force as it was expressing itself in the genius of George Bernard Shaw. The first man was George Bernard Shaw himself. While our civilization endures the names of Shaw and Henderson will be linked."

Walter Pritchard Eaton, a leading American critic of the drama: "Long life to the genius who can understand both mathematics and G. B. Shaw! That puts him two up on most of us."

In a fast 155 pound affair, Nat Lumpkin nosed out Rogers in three rounds. The bout was featured by some fast fighting and Lumpkin was a shade better in each round.

Giddens Wins Easily
Sam Giddens, Tar Heel middleweight, made a successful comeback against Blenckstone. Sam went about his chores like a master, piling up points and clinching the decision early in the fight by his clever boxing.

The long-awaited bout between Peyton Brown and Ed Kostainsek did not come off, Tom Parsons being substituted for Brown at the eleventh hour. Parsons did nicely, but Kostainsek was too strong for him, taking a three round verdict by a wide margin.

Frosh Win Third Straight
The Tar Babies court-martialled the Cadets, taking their third straight victory of the season.

Eutsler, Glenn, Brown, and Kanner scored three round decisions, while Edwards, in his first start, and Ellisberg, got three round knockouts.

Sutton dropped a close decision to the rugged brother of Ed Kostainsek and Owlick, in his ring bow, gave his man so much trouble that the Cadet had to go an extra round to win.

Wilson, in going down from Ellisberg's hammering fists, struck his head on the edge of the ring-floor and had to be carried from the ring. He was unconscious for some time, but was finally brought around.

MONOGRAM CLUB REORGANIZES AT SPECIAL MEETING

Sincere Group of NC Wearers Pledge Itself to Promote Cleaner Sportsmanship.

Voting unanimously to support sincerely and further to the best of their ability closer adherence to training rules, cleaner play on the field, higher standards of scholarship among athletes, and better examples for the student body to emulate as to conduct at sporting events, seventy-three wearers of the NC gathered last night in the reorganization meeting of the Monogram club.

The monogram men were guests of the Order of Grail at a banquet in Graham Memorial. At a strictly business meeting, after the meal, a constitution was adopted and the officers of the club were elected. John Phipps is the new president of the club, Stuart Chandler, vice-president, Vergil Weathers, secretary, Percy Idol, treasurer, and George Brandt as representative on the athletic association. Dr. Charlie Mangum and Dale Ranson were elected to serve on the advisory board as representatives from the monogram men of the faculty, and from the coaching staff respectively.

Spirit of Meeting

The theme of the meeting centered around the sincerity with which the men assembled faced the question of elevating the spirit of the University both as to athletes and student followers. Nearly every member present expressed his profound hope that the club advance from the enthusiastic beginning of last night toward placing Carolina at

STUDY OF SOCIAL REPORT WILL BE MADE BY Y. M. C. A.

After Two Weeks, Dr. Howard
Odum Will Address Joint Cabinet Meeting.

A cumulative study on recent social trends as reported by President Hoover's committee on social survey has been initiated by all Y. M. C. A. cabinets. Copies of the review of findings by the research committee, of which Professor Howard Odum of the University was assistant director, have been distributed to the cabinet members for study.

The plan to be followed by the Y. M. C. A. groups will allow a two-weeks study of the report and other social research developments, at the end of which period Dr. Odum will address a joint cabinet meeting in an analysis of the situation.

Extra Copies Available

The research committee has conducted a national survey in an effort to supply a basis for the formulation of large national policies looking to the next phase of the nation's development. Dr. Odum was one of seven famous sociologists chosen to make the survey, and served as associate director of the group.

According to Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here, a limited number of extra copies of the report are available for students not members of the cabinets, and can be obtained from the main office in the Y. M. C. A. building.

Freshman Publication Distributed Yesterday

Freshmen in English 1 and 2 yesterday received copies of the new publication issued by the English department, called Themes. The publication is expected by the department to stimulate interest in composition work among the freshmen. The first issue of Themes contains four articles: "On a Denominational Boarding School," by Lewis Puckett; "A Strange Animal," by George H. Dickinson; "On Freshmen English Themes," by William Howard Wang; and "Sick Once," by Phil Hammer, make up the contents of this issue.

PLAYMAKER TOUR PLAYS TO PACKED HOUSES IN STATE

Professor Koch Considers Tour
One of Most Successful
In Recent Years.

After playing to enthusiastic audiences in Greenville and Wilmington, Thursday and Friday nights respectively, the Carolina Playmakers concluded their 29th tour playing to an appreciative audience in Goldsboro, Saturday night. They returned home Sunday.

Performing to over 1,000 people in the auditorium of Eastern Carolina Teachers College in Greenville, and to packed houses in Wilmington and Goldsboro, the tour was regarded by Professor Koch as one of the most successful ever made by the Playmakers. The Playmakers, according to Professor Koch, found the audiences particularly interested in the variation of the productions from the usual type of plays presented on the tour, this being the first time that folk-plays of other than a traditional type have been presented by the Playmakers on tour. Commenting on the plays rendered by the group, the Wilmington Morning Star, in a front-page review of the productions, says: "They were offered in a manner that strengthened every drama-

Alpha Kappa Delta Entertains Faculty

The North Carolina Alpha chapter of the Alpha Kappa Delta sociology fraternity will be the hostess to the sociology faculties of the Woman's College of North Carolina and North Carolina State College tonight at a dinner in Graham Memorial at 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, of the faculty of the North Carolina Woman's College, will preside over the meeting. The program will feature the reading of a paper, "Recent Trends in Industrial Relations in North Carolina" by Dr. Sanford Winston of the State College faculty.

DI WILL DISCUSS MOVE FOR LOW RENTAL FEES

The Dialectic senate in its regular meeting tonight will discuss two bills. The first is: Resolved: That the University should rent Graham dormitory to self-help students at cost until such time that it is needed for people who are willing to pay the regular rates. The second resolution is: Resolved: That the plan for election of editors proposed by the Buccaneer and sponsored by THE DAILY TAR HEEL should be adopted.

Members Of Faculty State Views On Proposed Plan Of Staff Elections

Majority of Men Interviewed Are Whole-Heartedly in Favor of Selection of Editor for Daily Tar Heel by Staff Members Who Are Fitted to Choose Their Leader.

In order to determine faculty opinion on the recent proposal to permit the staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL to elect its editor, a member of the feature board interviewed several representative members of the faculty. Statements varied from hearty endorsement to distinct rejection of the suggestion, but a majority of the opinions expressed favored the change. The men interviewed were largely faculty members who have maintained a close contact with the publication.

Said Dean Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts: "I am in favor of the change. Without criticism of anyone or of the existing method, I think that a position of that kind demands a certain amount of technical skill, and should not be a matter for public election."

Coffman Favors Plan

Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the University English department, declared himself heartily in favor of the plan, stating that "The men best equipped to know the most capable man for the highly specialized position of the editorship are those who work on the staff with him, and can observe the extent of his initiative and ability. I am emphatically in favor of the proposed change."

Robert W. Madry, director of the University news bureau, said: "As a general rule in the past the nominee of the TAR HEEL staff has been elected. Nine times out of ten, in my opinion, the members of the TAR HEEL staff are better qualified to select the editor than is the campus at large."

Francis Bradshaw, dean of students, expressed his opinion thus: "Some years ago the associate editors of a campus publication were popularly elected. The present method of electing an editor-in-chief with power of appointment and suspension was adopted to give the editor-in-chief real power to stimulate and direct his board. When this change was made it was proposed that the editor-in-chief also be elected by the board. This was rejected on the grounds that since the TAR HEEL is financially supported by the campus and spokesman for the whole student body, its chief editorial writer should be elected as is the President of the student body, its executive representative. I am inclined to believe that there is validity in that point but can see no great objection to letting the student body try the proposed plan, if they so desire."

Carroll Suggests Compromise

The head of the school of commerce, Dean Carroll, declared himself in favor of a compromise: "I believe that the nominations should be made by the TAR HEEL staff and elections from this group of nominees by the student body."

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, head of the University history department, had this to say: "I think the election of the editor of the

SAM SELDEN TO TAKE STAR ROLE FOR PLAYMAKERS

Instructor Will Play Lead Part in
"You Never Can Tell" Scheduled for Week-end.

Samuel Selden, associate and technical director of the Carolina Playmakers, takes the lead in Shaw's You Never Can Tell, which is being presented by the Playmakers Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

This is the first role he has agreed to take in a Playmaker production although he has been connected with the group for the past six years. While playing at Columbia University on a tour, one of the players was injured to an extent that he would be unable to appear in a play to be presented the next night at Yale. The following day while in the bus going to New Haven Selden memorized the lines and appeared in the production that night.

Selden has played in several of Eugene O'Neill's early plays. He was stage manager for "Desire Under the Elms," produced by the Eastern Touring company. Selden has played with the Gladys Clarke players on the professional stage and has been connected with the Taylor-Knickerbocker Stock company and the L. Verne Slout Chautauqua players. He was for a time leading man for the Manhattan players in New York.

Selden takes the role of a waiter in You Never Can Tell. Dr. Archibald Henderson has stated that this role is one of the greatest that Shaw has created. The play inspired Henderson to write his biography of the author.

LAWYERS START WORK OF SECOND SEMESTER TODAY

Joseph Suisman and Frank B. Campbell Complete Required Work
For Bachelor's Degree.

The first semester of the law school came to a close last week with the completion of the final examinations at which time two law students completed their work for degrees. Registration for the new semester took place yesterday in the library of the law building, and the work for the new term begins today.

Two students, Joseph Suisman and Frank B. Campbell, completing last semester the required work for the degree of Bachelor of Law. These degrees will not be awarded, however, until the time for the regular graduation in June. Seven students of the law school have recently taken the state bar examination but the results of this test have not yet been announced.

Yesterday, January 30, was the regular time for registration for the spring term, and all students who failed to register or make the proper financial arrangements then will be required to pay an additional fee for late registration.

PHI TO DISCUSS NEED OF STAFF ELECTIONS

Two bills will be discussed tonight by the Phi Assembly. The first resolution calls for debate on the advisability of having editors of campus publications elected by the staffs. The second bill is Resolved: That the economic plan advocated by the Technocrats should be put in actual operation. The Phi will meet at 7:00 o'clock in New East.

Law Student To Read Poems At Bull's Head

Peter W. Hairston, law student in the University, will read several selections from John Masefield's Minnie Maylow's Story and Other Tales and Scenes at the weekly gathering of the Bull's Head in the Y. M. C. A. building this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Professor T. B. Stroup of the English department will precede Hairston's readings with a short talk concerning Masefield, who is Great Britain's poet-laureate.

The Masefield program is offered in honor of a visit by the famous poet to America. Masefield is now in America.

MAGAZINE VOTES UNANIMOUSLY FOR STAFF ELECTIONS

Literary Publication in Accord
With Plan Proposed by Buccaneer Staff Members.

By a unanimous vote the members of the Carolina Magazine staff in a meeting Sunday night gave their sanction to the recently proposed plan of empowering the various publication staffs with the authority to elect their own editors. This action on the part of the Magazine now leaves only the Yackety Yack as not having expressed its opinion regarding this question.

The Buccaneer came out with the proposal after a unanimous vote of the staff, and the TAR HEEL registered its approval of the plan by a three to one count.

This plan, according to a survey, seems to have received the approval of the majority of the important faculty members. The expressions of the various professors appear elsewhere in this paper.

According to the present arrangements the idea of giving the staff power to elect their own editors will be discussed at the activities committee banquet next week. After that meeting it will possibly be put definitely to a vote of the students.

Debaters Will Meet Pittsburgh Tonight

The University debaters will meet the University of Pittsburgh in Gerrard hall at 8:00 o'clock on the question: "That war debts should be cancelled." Carolina's representatives will oppose cancellation while Pittsburgh will favor it.

John Bracken, one of the debaters from Pittsburgh, is interested in politics, having received over a thousand votes in his run for Register of Deeds in the Democratic primary. Both he and Leonard Boreman, the other debater from Pittsburgh, take an active part in the discussion groups on their campus.

William R. Eddleman, a junior who is active in his literary society and on THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and R. Phillips Russell, a freshman, will represent this University in the debate.

SENIOR ENGINEERS RETURN FROM TRIP

The senior class in electrical engineering has returned to the University after an inspection trip to Charlotte and vicinity. On the tour the class visited the Riverbend plant of the Duke Power company, radio station WBT, and the Southern Bell Telephone company.

APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE WILL HEAR DR. GRAHAM

Tomorrow Set for Hearing Cause Of Greater University of North Carolina.

The University's postponed hearing before the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly will take place tomorrow afternoon in Raleigh at 3:00 o'clock. President Frank P. Graham will speak for the Chapel Hill unit of the consolidated institution and will sum up the case for the three schools. Dr. J. I. Foust and Dr. E. C. Brooks, respective heads of the Greensboro and Raleigh units, will appear with Dr. Graham and speak for the divisions they represent.

A state-wide citizens' gathering will meet this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Raleigh auditorium for the purpose of discussing and presenting the educational situation of North Carolina. The North Carolina citizens' committee will convene this morning to make final preparations and propose resolutions for this afternoon's convention.

Student Attendances

University students wishing to attend the public gathering will meet in the lobby of Graham Memorial at 1:30 o'clock. Students with cars available for the trip are asked to get in touch with Mayne Albright, at Graham Memorial immediately.

The hearing will be the first for major state educational institutions of higher learning, and the most important hearing before the committee. Dr. Graham will be faced with a greater task than two years ago when he successfully waged a battle that re-

LEE AND GRUENING WILL LECTURE ON POWER QUESTION

Both of Thursday's Speakers
Qualified to Discuss Problem
Of National Import.

The halfway mark in the series of eight Open Forum Discussion lectures arrives this Thursday night with the appearance of W. S. Lee and Ernest Gruening on the Gerrard hall platform, discussing the power question. Both men are particularly qualified in this field, Gruening being the author of a number of books on the subject and Lee recognized nationally for his ability as president of the Duke Power company. A president and open forum leader for the fourth series have not yet been designated.

Gruening, a Journalist

Gruening, who began his brilliant journalistic career with the Boston American a short time after his graduation from Harvard, is known for his militant writing. As assistant editor of the Boston Traveler, he increased the circulation of that publication 30,000, going to greener fields as managing editor of the New York Tribune. He was managing editor of the Nation from 1920 to 1923 and last month became one of the editors of that journal.

Lee is also known as the builder of Duke University, and as the chief executive of the Duke Power company has contributed much to the power problem in North Carolina.

Advocating a Cooperative Book Exchange

High prices of text-books bought at the Book Exchange have been considerable source of discontent among students of this University. Those who complain may find means to avoid paying what they consider an unjust price by buying from numerous companies which advertise new and second-hand books at unusually low prices. The catalogue of the College Book Company, Columbus, Ohio, for instance, offers Hart's College Algebra at $1.60 per new copy and $1.00 per old copy. The Book Exchange charges $1.95 for the same text. The same company advertises Hayes' Political and Social History of Modern Europe, volume one, at $2.25 per used copy, while the Book Exchange price for the same book is $3.50.

There are numbers of these book companies scattered throughout the United States, most of them, like the College Book Company, being located in a university town, where students have direct access to their bargains. Others, however, like the Missouri Store Company, Columbia, Missouri, are organizations independent of a local trade which do most of their business by mail order. Almost every known text-book is available at these stores, either in new or in excellent used condition. And every price is below publishers' price.

Students of the University of California pay less for their text-books buying through co-op agencies. A four dollar text can be bought for one dollar and eighty cents in this way: The purchase of a four dollar book with a five per cent rebate amounts to three dollars and eighty cents. At the end of the term or semester, the co-op second-hand book department buys back the book for two dollars. Consequently, the text costs only $1.80,—which is a considerably saving in times like these.

So, if we complain of high prices at the Book Exchange and continue to buy books there, nothing can be done about paying more for them than the prices of the same books when bought elsewhere. If high prices of books are a genuine grievance on this campus, students will take a little extra trouble, buy their texts where they can be bought cheaply, and save money.—A.T.D.

The State Must Remain Intact

It is interesting to note that in their recent admonitions to the legislatures and budget makers of the southern states, in regard to their appropriations for higher education within these states, Mr. Owen D. Young and Mr. Newton D. Baker have addressed their pleas specifically to this state and in behalf of this University. The concentration of these warnings on one particular state and on one particular institution, while admittedly serving as an illustration of the reaction in the south to depressed conditions, more broadly speaking, may be taken to mean either of two things—probably both: either this University stands out so far above her sister institutions as to merit the especial attention of public spirited individuals, or, that the injuries she is about to suffer through slashed income from the state is out of all proportion to those suffered generally throughout the south.

These two able financiers are indubitably right in their fears that not only the immediate prestige of the University, but also the future of the state will suffer from such drastic reductions as the state's legislators find themselves forced to make in appropriations; though these men have been successful in handling affairs of a fiscal nature, and have rendered much valuable service to their country by their able advice, yet they do not properly understand the situation in which the state finds itself, having lived in states where the question of finance has never so vitally confronted their budget makers as it now does ours.

With a very great number of alumni of the University now in control of her destiny, and having her interest at heart, it can be said, with all due regards for Mr. Young and Mr. Baker, and to all the friends of the University, that, whatever action might be taken on the matter of appropriations will be for the preservation of the integrity of the state.—W.A.S.

With Contemporaries

Our Heartiest Congratulations—And Regrets

With a feeling of regret that the University is to lose such a man as President Chase just at the time when his efforts were beginning to promise an era of accomplishment such as this campus has never known before, The Daily Tar Heel offers its heartiest congratulations and best wishes to Dr. Chase in his new post. President Chase feels that he is being offered "a distinctive and challenging opportunity" for service in education, and we are sure that he will make the most of this position both for service to his new institution and service to the metropolitan area which it serves.

This chancellorship which is causing President Chase to present his resignation as the sixth president of the University is certainly a fertile field of endeavor for anyone as interested in educational progress as President Chase has proved himself to be while at the University. It is for this reason that our only regret concerning the change is a selfish one in that President Chase will no longer be with us, otherwise the opportunity is too great to be passed by both from the President's personal point of view and from the point of view of service to education. We feel that the New York University council selected the person best fitted in our opinion for the position. His past record proves his ability to handle progressively the problems of a university that demands not only administrative ability, but foresight and continued ascendancy in the educational world such as is demanded by the metropolitan university. His ten years as president of the University of North Carolina are acknowledged by educators to be among the most productive years any college or university in this country has ever experienced.

Individual responsibility has been the guiding factor in President Chase's work in decentralization and liberalization since coming to this campus. From the students' point of view he liberalized the cutting system, placing the responsibility squarely upon the individual in his dealings with the professors and instructors, thereby eliminating the University as a go-between in such matters. The disciplinary powers have been reapportioned during his administration, being removed, upon recommendation of the University faculty, from the offices of the dean of men and the dean of women, to be placed largely in the control of the University Senate.

The College of Fine and Applied Arts and the School of Physical Welfare were both established during his regime. In his dealings with the state legislature and the board of trustees President Chase has continually been moving toward the goal of better cooperation along all lines. His economy program has proved itself to be effective during the present biennium appropriation, saving approximately twenty-two per cent on this appropriation to date.

While we have not the opportunity to enjoy his administration as long as the University of North Carolina or nearly as long as we could wish, we sincerely extend the best wishes of the student body to President Chase as he prepares to accept the responsibilities connected with his new position, where he will direct the activities of an institution of 40,000 students, which will give him an opportunity to further his services to education which he so much desires.—The Daily Tar Heel.

Professor Albert Einstein says: "The improvement in the apparatus of production through technical invention and organization has decreased the need for human labor and thereby caused the elimination of a part of the labor from the economic circuit and thereby caused a progressive decrease in the purchasing power of the consumers." He's telling us!

A hick town is one where there is no place to go that you shouldn't.—University of South Carolina Gamecock.

Our Times

Wrestling

From the standpoint of the spectator there is something far more gratifying in amateur sports such as wrestling than in the professional field. Amateur wrestling, such as the variety offered in the Tin Can, seems much more difficult and physically inspiring than the professional brand, or such in our impression after watching the late matches. Professional wrestling is infinitely more brutal but seems to require less physical dexterity than the open and sportsmanlike unprofessional variety.

In this connection a professional match between two third rate grappling artists comes back to our memory. It was in a steel city and we made the weekly pilgrimage to the wrestling ring from the sports desk of the daily newspaper. It was a hot July night and the crowd roared for gore and more gore. In the third fight on the card each man had one fall to his credit. Suddenly at the outset of the third period Sailor Simpson grappled his smaller foe and holding him aloft, began the airplane slam. The Irish Kid, for such was the little fellow named, went hurtling out of the ring.

Sailor Simpson paused to hoist up his trunks and then sauntered casually to the edge of the ring, peering over to see what had become of the enemy. The ring was mounted on piles to height of about two feet, and the Irish Kid was nowhere in sight. So the Sailor continued his quest, leaning far out over the ropes. Meanwhile the Kid had passed underneath the ring, pausing long enough to pick up something not quite discernable to the spectators. He appeared at the opposite corner and leaped craftily into the ring. Despite the howls of the spectators, lanky Sailor Simpson was oblivious of the impending danger. And then the Kid was upon him, the weapon in his hand. He jabbed it in the Sailor's back once, twice, and that gentleman cleared the ropes in one jump and made for the shower room, his trunks smoking.

The Kid smiled and held his weapon aloft. It was a glowing cigar butt which someone had flipped under the ring.

Tonight's battle will have an important bearing on state and Southern Conference races. Both teams have won four Big Five contests, State and Davidson being defeated once and Wake Forest twice by tonight's contestants. In conference circles, the Tar Heels have a more impressive record as the Devils dropped a close two point decision to Maryland two weeks ago, while Coach Shepard's squad has yet to meet defeat. If the Phantoms win tonight's game, they will have undisputed possession of first place in both the Big Five and Southern Conference.

Against V. M. I. last week-end, both teams looked pretty much alike. The Cadets fell before the onslaught of the Tar Heels 36-17, and were defeated by Duke 40-21. Both squads have high geared offenses and a battle royal should result.

Phantoms Have Slight Edge
Although Carolina will enter the fracas a favorite, the game will be played on the Duke floor, and past experience has shown that the Cameronmen are well nigh invincible before their home crowd. But the Tar Heels have been pointing for this contest since the season started and will attempt to upset tradition by garnering their eighth victory of the campaign.

Duke's offense will be built around Jimmy Thompson, high scoring center, Horne, forward, and Weaver, guard. These three are three big reasons why the Devils are near the top of the conference heap. If the Tar Heels can stop any or all this trio, the result will not be in doubt. On the other hand, Carolina's sharpshooters, Weathers and Hines, are due to go on a rampage, and tonight would be just as good a time as any.

WRESTLERS TAKE LIGHT WORK-OUTS

Varsity Shows Best Form of Year in Taking Three Bouts From V. M. I. Cadets in Match Saturday.

Carolina's combined varsity and freshman wrestling teams took light work-outs yesterday as an aftermath of the V. M. I. doubleheader in which the Tar Heels' grapplers split the bill. Carolina's varsity club lost to the strong V. M. I. varsity 15-11, while the Tar Babies came through with their first win of the year, downing the V. M. I. "rats" 20-18.

The Tar Heel varsity matmen had not shown any remarkable form or extraordinary ability until the V. M. I. meet, having dropped meets to both N. C. State College and V. P. I. wrestling aggregations. The Tar Heel grapplers looked better in their meet with the Cadets, taking two matches by time verdicts and one by virtue of a fall. All the Lexington boys' points came by time decisions.

The Can Opener

by

CLAIBORN M. CARR

CAROLINA TEAMS WON FIVE of the six contests staged in the Tin Can last week from the Cadet teams of V. M. I. and Oak Ridge. Carolina students won in all six events as they rallied to the requests of better sportsmanship on their part and put on the best exhibition of conduct seen in the Tin Can in several years. We not only behaved well but made that old Can rock with cheers.

CAROLINA SPIRIT HAS SLIPPED in recent years and sports writers in the state, as well as others, have noticed it. Wade Ison of the Charlotte News commented Sunday on the spirit here, saying that it "isn't what it should be." No one can improve this spirit but the student body itself.

THE VARSITY BASKETBALL and boxing teams meet their hardest opposition of the season this week in Duke and Virginia respectively. The outcome of both these encounters will be close and uncertain until the last minute and the stronger we back

DARK HORSES TO MEET KENTUCKY WILDCATS TONIGHT

Vanderbilt's Surprise Team Will Play Kentucky Cagers to Defend Conference Lead.

Vanderbilt's surprise quint, built around two veteran forwards, weathered all opposition last week and turned toward its February campaigns far into the fore of the Southeastern conference basketball fives, having to its credit eight consecutive victories. The Commodores take on Kentucky tonight.

Coach Josh Cody's Vanderbilt Commodores, who were unmentioned in the pre-season dope gossip, started their current warfare with a rush, grabbed the conference leadership from Kentucky ten days ago; and since that time have not been headed.

L. S. U., who boasted a club with two adding machine forwards, both high scorers in Dixie, was bowled over by Vandy, and the Commodore guards forced the high averages of the Louisiana five to drop to an average of only six points a game. Just to show Huey Long's alma mater that they were bound to win, the Vandy club trounced L. S. U. twice, 54-34 and 52-26.

Saturday night, Vanderbilt handed the University of the

Duke's High Scorer

Jim Thompson, who is leading the Duke five in swishing the nets, may prove a thorn in Carolina's side tonight in their effort to keep a clean slate. Thompson was an all-southern second team forward last season but has been shifted to center this year and George Brandt and Earle Beale will have their hands full guarding the lanky sharpshooter.

CHI PSI DEFEATS PHI SIGMA KAPPA IN FIFTH VICTORY

Theta Kappa Nu Goes on Scoring Rampage; Cecil Longest Gets Thirty-Three Points.

Only one undefeated quintet took part in yesterday's intra-mural basketball campaign as the two races swung into the second half of the season with but one upset marring the day's play.

Theta Kappa Nu went on a wild scoring spree and handed Phi Gamma Delta, which, until recently had been numbered among the leading fives in the fraternity circuit, a crushing 61-8 setback. Cecil Longest established a new individual one-game scoring mark for the current season as he amassed thirty-three points. Fox, Old East's scoring luminary, had held the record previously with twenty-nine. Berry and Myers added fourteen and twelve respectively to the winning team's total. Johnston got two field goals to lead his mates on the Phi Gamma team.

Chi Psi Annexes Fifth

Chi Psi became the first fraternity outfit to win its fifth game as it downed Phi Sigma Kappa, 43-18. Phi Sigma Kappa held a 4-3 lead in the first quarter, but the league-leaders came

TAR BABIES WILL PLAY IN VIRGINIA

Game With Duke Blue Devils Postponed; Will Meet Virginia Freshmen.

Carolina's freshman basketball team will not see action tonight against the Blue Imp cagers as a preliminary to the Duke-Carolina varsity tilt. The contest has been postponed until a later date.

This postponement comes as a relief to Coach Dameron as he must lead his Tar Baby cagers into three other battles during this week. The freshmen are scheduled to leave here Wednesday and will see action against the Virginia teams Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Meet Virginia Frosh Thursday
Thursday, the Tar Babies take on Virginia's first year team at Charlottesville, which will give fans an idea of what Virginia's undefeated freshmen will have for their varsity next year.

Carolina's yearlings meet Woodberry Forest at Orange, Virginia, Friday, and A. M. A. at Ft. Defiance Saturday, to complete their hardest week of the season.

Football Men Still Out

There is still some question as to whether the football players on the freshman team will quit basketball for winter football or not. In any case they will likely make the Virginia trip before

ILLUSION:
Like a fly this remarkable woman walks—head down—in defiance of gravity—backward and forward across a board hung from the ceiling!

EXPLANATION:
This old illusion is dependent for success on a simple scientific principle. Attached to each of the performer's shoes is a rubber "sucker" or disc which creates a vacuum and adheres to the board—supporting the "human fly's" weight.

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

We all like magicians' tricks. But tricks in cigarette advertising are quite another matter.

Here's one you may have wondered about. The illusion that only one cigarette is "pure."

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes are made under the most sanitary conditions. All use a good cigarette paper. All are made with practically identical modern machinery. All are pure.

But the quality of the tobacco is another story.

The pleasure you find in a cigarette is determined by the quality of the tobaccos used. Mildness and fine flavor come from the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

It's the tobacco that counts...plus a matchless blending of leaf with leaf to bring out the delicate flavor of choice tobaccos. That's why Camels have given more people more pleasure than any other cigarette.

Camels are always fresh, always cool, always in prime condition...in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack.

CINEMATIC OPERA FAILS TO ARRIVE

Hundreds Turned Away From Theatre When "Pagliacci" Film Is Lost in Shipping.

Hundreds of people from all parts of the state as well as the crowd of local students and citizens who flocked to the Carolina theatre yesterday to witness the showing of the first complete grand opera in sound film, Leoncavallo's Pagliacci, were forced to return home disappointed when the film failed to arrive at the scheduled time.

Manager E. Carrington Smith explained that he expected the film on one of the morning trains, and that when it failed to arrive, he wired the New York office to learn the cause of the delay. The film had been shown at the University of Ohio, from where it was supposed to have been shipped directly here. The shipping consignment was confused at that point, however, and sent back to the New York office, which only discovered its whereabouts when the film arrived there at 1:00 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Smith said that if the film had been handled through one of the regular distributing centers, there would have been no confusion, but since this was a special picture, it was being handled by a special office in New York.

Manager Smith expressed regret over the unavoidable accident. The film will be shown Wednesday at 1:30, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, and 9:00 o'clock.

the Phantoms in Durham tonight with our yells and the louder we cheer between the rounds here Saturday night for Coach Rowe's men, it's just that much more probable that we may encourage one last effort that may mean victory.

THAT IS GOING TO BE A real battle in Durham tonight when the Blue Devils and the White Phantoms hook up. Watch Jim Thompson, the Duke center and a clean looking athlete just like our Brandt. He can rack those babies up. Some of the varsity squad went over to the Sunday services in the Duke chapel and there was Thompson all dressed up in his Sunday go-to-meetings. One of the Carolina players who is particularly subtle and known among his brethren as "Dr. Quack," said, "Ha, Jim, I see you are here this morning beseeching the Penates (gods of the hearth, and I don't know why he picked on those poor down-trodden deities, but then Dr. Quack has the dope) for help Tuesday night." Thompson smiled a little and went off; Dr. Quack shook violently and grogged. The Phantoms were also going to church. I saw Dave McCachren sitting in a pew beside a friend and before long he began to squirm and wiggle. Maybe the service was getting a little Draughon out for Dave. Yeah, Macbell, it was. But what did she say about Dan and me? and Snooks?

CAROLINA'S BOWLING TEAM opens its season tonight when it meets a Greensboro team there. Since then Billy has been using the extra cue balls from the game room.

Bids will also cover all trellis work, building department expense, wiring, installation of amplifiers, orchestra sound board, waxing of the floors, and all incidental expenses. The committee retains the right to refuse any or all bids.

Members Of Faculty State Their Views On Staff Elections Plan

TAR HEEL should be by the staff, who obviously know better what the qualifications for the job are than members of the student body."

Dr. Harry K. Russell, of the English department, made an interesting point: "There seems to be, under the proposed plan, less danger that the TAR HEEL will fall into the hands of a political clique rather than a literary or athletic group of men on the campus."

To the question, "What do you think of the proposed change in the method of electing the editor of the TAR HEEL?" Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, replied: "If you are selecting a man for the editorship of the TAR HEEL from the standpoint of his value and ability, I should think that people who are regular members of the staff are in a position to see who is the most competent man for the job, since they are better able to see the man at work, and to note his talents and ability."

Dr. A. P. Hudson, head of freshman English at the University, stated the case for the editorial policy of the paper thus: "As I understand the proposed new plan for selecting the editor of the TAR HEEL, it would insure better editorial qualifications."

Saunders Opposes Change
J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association and former editor of the TAR HEEL, said: "Although I see clearly advantages that may be gained by an election of editors by student editorial boards rather than by the entire student body, yet I would hesitate to cast aside benefits that accompany popular election of these editors. Here on this campus our opportunity is to develop even more a democracy of student governing rather than to remove farther from the student body the election of student officers or editors. The declaration that our student electorate is incapable of voting upon candidates seems to me to reflect upon the intelligence of our student constituency, and sounds a challenge to student leaders and editors for a real program of constructive education in student government."

"After all, leadership depends not alone upon one's capabilities but also upon how one relates himself to his public. My suggestion, without hearing all sides of this movement discussed, is to keep student government and student newspapers close to the students through popular elections."

back to hold a 16-5 advantage at half time. The Chi Psi passing attack was functioning smoothly except in the first part of the game and there was never much doubt as to the eventual winner. Phil Lawrence scored fourteen points for his team, and Bauckney added ten to that total. Peetz scored nine for the losers, but Mitchell, who had only four to his credit, was the star for Phi Sigma Kappa.

Lambda Chi Alpha downed Phi Kappa Sigma, 22-20, in a hotly contested game. The winners held a 8-6 margin at half time, but were unable to expand that gap throughout the second half. Brooks and Lothian, with ten and six points, led Lambda Chi Alpha, while Reid, with twelve, and Odum, with eight, accounted for all the losing team's points.

Kappa Sigma handed Sigma Phi Epsilon a 50-3 setback as Eagles, last year all-fraternity star, scored nineteen points. Jones and McCaskill scored a field basket and a free throw respectively to account for the losing five's total.

Plans for another tour, which will include Raleigh, Wilson, Hamlet, and Southern Pines, are already under way. In the spring quarter the Playmakers will appear in several cities in the western part of the state.

COMMITTEE WILL HEAR GRAHAM ON BUDGET PROBLEM

President to Place University's Case Before Appropriations Group at Raleigh Today.

President Frank P. Graham will present the University's case in the postponed hearing before the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly in Raleigh this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. Dr. Graham will speak for the Chapel Hill unit of the consolidated university and will sum up the cases for the three schools. Dr. E. C. Brooks and Dr. J. I. Foust, respective heads of the Raleigh and Greensboro divisions, will appear with Dr. Graham and speak for the units they represent.

The hearing is the most important that will be conducted before the committee this year. It is the first for major state educational institutions of higher learning. The sum recommended for the entire University by the budget committee as presented by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus in his budget message was only $760,240. Of this sum $390,570 was stipulated for the Chapel Hill branch. The budget request of the Chapel Hill unit is $691,924.

A mass meeting was held yesterday afternoon in Raleigh, which packed the new Memorial auditorium, to protest unreasonable reductions in the budget for higher education. The state papers have, likewise, been pleading the cause of higher education.

FRESHMAN GROUP HEARS WEEKS ON STUDENT CONDUCT

President of Council Asks Cooperation to Eliminate Unsportsmanlike Attitude.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, addressed the freshman friendship council Monday night on "Carolina Sportsmanship." Weeks further elaborated on Coach "Bob" Fetzner's speech of last week by asking the group to cooperate with the student council and other campus organizations in ridding the athletic meets in the Tin Can of unsportsmanlike jeering and sideline remarks. He lauded them on their efforts in this direction so far, and thanked them for the publicity they have spread in an effort toward amelioration of the condition.

Members of the freshman group received a special section of the New York Times, entitled "Modern Social Trends," which gave an analytical review of the research findings of President Hoover's committee on social research. Dr. Howard Odum of the University sociology department was associate director of the nationally prominent group. Harry F. Comer addressed the junior-senior cabinet on "The Meaning of Membership," a topic which he will discuss at the joint Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. cabinets meeting in Greensboro next week. Open forum discussion followed Comer's speech.

The Carolina Salon ensemble will make its fifth campus appearance of this quarter at the Playmaker theatre Thursday evening in connection with the new Playmaker production. The ensemble, conducted by Thor Johnson, will offer an overture, Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, and several musical interludes between the acts. Earl Wolslagel will act as concertmaster.

The ensemble presented its first out-of-town concert of this quarter Sunday evening at the Duke Memorial Church in Durham. Included on this program was a violin solo by Earl Wolslagel, and the premier presentation of the Suite, by Tremont Bronx, which was written especially for the ensemble. A concert in Greensboro at the Women's College has been scheduled by the group for the latter part of February.

STRINGFIELD WILL SPEAK ON NATIVE DRAMA THURSDAY

Lecture Is Part of Program to Acquaint People of State With Development of Art Sources.

Lamar Stringfield, research associate to the institute of folk music, will speak Thursday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock before the Women's club of Henderson on the subject "Folk Music in Native Drama." This lecture has been arranged by the extension department in connection with its program of acquainting the people of the state with the development of native North Carolina art sources carried on here by the Playmakers, folk music institute, and other departments.

Stringfield will use as the basis of his lecture the material contained in his bulletin on native American music issued by the extension department. This treatise contains a foreword by Paul Green, also famous as a developer of folk lore as an art source.

Stringfield appeared before the dramatic and press association meets here earlier this month speaking on a similar topic, illustrating his lecture with a composition based on a native theme.

Manly Residents To Convene For Smoker

Residents of Manly dormitory will convene tonight in Graham Memorial for a smoker. Following a program of entertainment, the team will be guests of the Carolina theatre.

University Sociologist on National Committee Will Discuss Social Trends.

Dr. Howard Odum will conduct an open forum on "Social Trends" in Gerrard hall, Monday night, February 20, at 7:00 o'clock. Dr. Odum will present a thorough review of the results of President Hoover's national committee on social trends, of which Dr. Odum was associate director.

The forum is sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, whose members will engage in a comprehensive study of the committee's report during the next two weeks. Each member has received copies of a condensed review of the survey. Members will present questions which will be included in Dr. Odum's analysis of the subject.

University students are invited to participate in the social study. A limited number of copies of the report of the national committee are still available at the Y. M. C. A. and may be obtained there at any time.

Dr. Odum especially requests students workers to make written questions and criticisms of the committee's work as may be gathered through a study of the report. Queries from the floor will be answered at the forum.

Move Toward Fine Arts Seen On Campus As Art School Organizes

Twenty University Students Enrolled in Art School Conducted by James Augustus McLean, Eminent North Carolina
Artist and Portrait Painter.

Paradoxical as it may seem, this year of the University's severest privation has given rise to more new artistic enterprises than in the days of large budgets. The latest movement is the student's art guild which takes its place with music and dancing to complete the circle of fine arts instruction in the University. Like the recently formed dancing class, this course in painting will be private, and the participants will receive no University credit.

The well-known portrait and landscape painter, James Augustus McLean, has undertaken to offer instruction to the members of the guild. Meetings are scheduled for twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, in an improvised studio in the Hill music hall.

Twenty Students in Class

Twenty students have enrolled for the course. McLean will start the class with lectures on the fundamentals of art. Elementary members are to begin actual painting and drawing with studies of still life. Following this will come endeavors in landscape painting which will entail trips to nearby spots of interest during the spring months. The most advanced students will be taught to do charcoal and crayon sketches of live models as a preliminary study to portraiture. The course includes work in charcoal, pastel crayons, water colors, and oils.

McLean, who is a native of North Carolina, studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He was winner of the Cresson traveling scholarship which allowed him to spend four months of study in European galleries. Four years ago he

GEOLOGISTS BACK FROM STUDIES IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Dr. W. F. Prouty and I. E. Martin
Take Collections From Marl
And Phosphate Beds.

Dr. W. F. Prouty and I. E. Martin of the geology department have returned from a short visit to Charleston, South Carolina, where they made collections from the marl and phosphate beds lying north of Charleston, between the Ashley and Cooper rivers. These marls are rich in fossil foraminifera of Eocene Age, which are being studied by Martin for his doctor's dissertation.

This well known Charleston phosphate bed lies from five to fifteen feet underground and it is so rich in fossil remains of both marine and land animals that it is known the world over. In the short period of an hour, 130 fossil sharks' teeth and many other fossils were gathered from a phosphate dump.

The great abundance of both land and marine forms in this phosphate bed has caused much speculation, and several years ago Bishop Keener went so far as to publish a book concerning the conditions. It was his belief that the area between the two rivers, the Ashley and the Cooper, was the real garden of Eden and that the vast number of fossil bones in the phosphate bed resulted from the Noachian deluge.

Seven students from the University of North Carolina Law School numbered among the seventy-nine applicants for admittance to the bar at the recent semi-annual examination prepared by the Supreme Court of the state. This number taking the examination prepared by Associate Justice W. C. Connor was the smallest in recent years and included the names of but two women. The names of the candidates have not been released.

There was a general disagreement among those who took the test as to the "reasonableness" of the questions, but it was noted that applicants took an unusually long time to answer them. Included in the examination was a number of queries relating to problems now being faced by the present general assembly.

MORRISON TALKS OF ADMINISTERING RELIEF IN STATE

State Director of Relief Speaks to North Carolina Club on Social Conditions in State.

Dr. Fred W. Morrison, state director of relief, spoke before the North Carolina club Monday night on state conditions that necessitate enormous sums to be expended for direct relief.

At the present time about a half million individuals in North Carolina are being provided with the necessities of life by relief and welfare organizations in the various counties of the state. More than one million dollars a month is now being spent in this state for relief work.

The federal relief funds are administered through the Governor's office. Dr. Morrison was picked by ex-Governor Gardner to direct the relief work for this state, and is continuing under Governor Ehringhaus.

Dr. Morrison explained how the needs are determined, how the funds are secured from Washington, and the details of administering in counties and municipalities of the state.

Playmaker Production Has Difficult Settings

The play, You Never Can Tell, being put on this week by the Carolina Playmakers is the most technically difficult that they have yet attempted, and the property men have been busy this week gathering the various articles needed to set the four acts.

The first act opens in a dentist's office but the second, third, and fourth are centered around an English seaside resort.

The scenes, made from sketches by Mary Dirnberger under the supervision of Harry Davis, the costumes of the dancers, and the general setting are quite complete and every detail in the play will be carried out.

Glee Club Picture

The Glee Club picture for the Yackety Yack will be taken tonight in Hill music hall at 7:30 o'clock. All members are requested to be dressed in tuxedos. Old members who have paid their fall dues and new members who have paid their winter fees are eligible for the picture.

GRAHAM DELIVERS PLEA

Kemp Battle Advocates Sales Tax to Provide Money for Maintenance of Schools.

By Don Shoemaker

A spirited airing of North Carolina's case for education brought five thousand citizens from every section of the state to Raleigh's massive Memorial auditorium yesterday afternoon. Hundreds thronged the streets of the capital enroute to the mass meeting, coming from the legislative chambers and hotels from noon until 3:00 o'clock, when the vast hall was packed with an intense and serious crowd of educators, students and citizens, who sought judiciously to weigh what later was described as the chief asset of North Carolina—education.

From the large crowd of speakers it remained for Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University and Kemp Battle, an alumnus, to set the educational and political keynote of the day. Their remarks and the opinions of citizens speaking from the floor were both unique and momentous in the educational annals of North Carolina.

McLendon Presides

When the great hall had filled to the galleries, Major L. P. McLendon of Durham, chairman, took the speakers rostrum and pointed out the importance of the problem, stating that "We days, and Thursdays.

Short devotional programs in Memorial hall every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock will be conducted by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, according to an announcement issued yesterday by Harry F. Comer, general secretary. The exercises, to which attendance will be voluntary is open to all students in the University.

The initiation of the religious gatherings came as a result of an action on the part of the University committee on chapel programs to inaugurate meditation periods on the days that regular chapel exercises do not take place. Accordingly, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, of the committee, asked the co-operation of the Y. M. C. A. in the project.

First Program Tuesday

The programs, which will begin with an exercise next Tuesday, will consist of two selections of meditation music by Walter Patterson, University organist. One selection will be played at the beginning of the program, and will be followed by a short religious reading by a member of one of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets. The exercises will end with Patterson's second musical rendition.

The meditation programs will take place throughout the winter and spring quarters. They will probably embrace Mondays and Fridays when regular chapel exercises are not conducted.

Speaking the Public Mind On the Budget Question

If the sentiment expressed through the editorial columns of the more important newspapers of the state are at all indicative of public opinion in those sections of the state in which these journals are circulated, it is quite evident that the majority of citizens of North Carolina have the interest and welfare of the University and other state institutions truly at heart. On few occasions before has the state press been so outspoken in its praise of the work of higher education in North Carolina, or so condemning of the budget commission for advocating such pronounced reductions in education.

All of the liberal, progressive newspapers within the borders of this state, including among others the Greensboro Daily News, the Raleigh News and Observer, and the Raleigh Times, have eagerly upheld the position of the higher educational institutions. And only the Charlotte Observer, termed by Dabney in his book Liberalism in the South as the most conservative newspaper in the state, has failed to take up the cause of education.

Not only have the newspapers of this state diligently plead the cause of higher education in North Carolina, but some of the New York papers have voluntarily taken up the fight. Both the New York Times, and the New York Evening Post have come out with editorials emphasizing the place the University of North Carolina has made for itself in the educational circles of the nation, as well as the set-back it must undergo if the budget commission's proposed reduction goes into effect.

The nation's educators are watching with keen interest what action the Legislature will take, realizing the strong possibility of the University's losing her present prestige and standing in university circles if she receives this financial reduction.

Education in North Carolina will go through a grave crisis within the next two weeks, for in that time the Legislature will have taken its vote, and the fate of the state educational institutions will have been determined. The importance of the Legislature's action can not be too greatly emphasized. It calls for slow and deliberate consideration, tempered with unrestrained leniency.

American cows gave twelve percent more milk in 1932 than in 1918, according to the report of a governmental committee on social trends. Maybe the bovines haven't been told that overproduction is causing this depression.

Academic Conservatism at The Center of Liberalism

Any theory advocating the complete withdrawal of all restraint from around the college student would reveal a lack of reason and forethought on the part of its authority for college work is supposed to carry with it a certain amount of training, and training always presupposes the application of at least the rudimentary principles of discipline. It seems necessary that certain requirements and regulations be set up by which to evaluate the student, but the tendency in recent years has been to confine these regulations to a few basic ones, and to allow the student a large range of freedom in the matter of how he shall conform to the standards set up.

With regard to compulsory attendance upon class, several of the leading educational institutions of the country have found, by experiment, that this once indispensable requisite may be eliminated from the legal code of the college with, not only a great saving of time and labor to the instructor, but also without any appreciable decline in the standard of scholarship set by the student body as a whole.

The student who is interested in his, or her, work very seldom plays the part of a truant, under the system of optional attendance, and then only when the lecture is considered to be of little import to him. The sluggard, on the other hand, if not interested in the class discussion, will usually be led to attend by the pressure which examinations exert, and by the evil consequences resulting from failure to pass.

A system of optional attendance would preclude the necessity of calling the class roll, and would, thereby, add several minutes to the time granted for lectures, or open class discussions, and would render the class period much less formal, more enjoyable and less free from the "martyr" attitude so often displayed by the disinterested members of classes, as they are now constituted.—W.A.S.

With Contemporaries

The University of North Carolina

The Old North State has no greater, no more powerful and no more effective factor for the diffusion of knowledge, for the spread of light and truth, and for encouragement of a spirit of freedom, than the University of North Carolina. It is more than a pile of stone, brick and mortar. It is more than libraries, laboratories and classrooms. It is a vibrant, pulsating, living thing. It was chartered in the first year of George Washington's administration. It struggled along through the earlier days of the nation's trying life. It endured the vicissitudes of the war between the states. It lived—it carried on—through the hardships and perils of the reconstruction. During the last quarter of a century it has taken position in the front ranks among the oldest and the greatest universities in America. It is a factor that trains the minds and develops the characters of men and women who leave its portals by the hundreds every year equipped to take positions of leadership all over the state, in other states, in other nations, and in the far-flung outposts of civilization. Our forebears have left us no greater and no more noble heritage than the great seat of public education in the classic shades of the great trees in the picturesque village of Chapel Hill.

The University of North Carolina, like the other units of the state's educational system today, is facing the cross-roads. It must advance, or retreat. There is no standing still. What is the pleasure, what is the command of the people of North Carolina? Theirs is the last word: Is it "Fall back"? God forbid! It was not so at Alamance. It was not so at Gettysburg. It was not so at the Hindenburg line. It cannot, it will not be so in the capitol at Raleigh when the life of the University is the stake. The eyes of many states today are focused on North Carolina to see what she will do to keep the torch of education aloft in the present financial crisis. What is the verdict? Will America's oldest university be crippled, perhaps killed, for lack of financial support? Or will the command be "Advance!"—"Move up!"

The University finds itself threatened with a reduction of nearly one-half in the amount asked for next year, though that amount was less by twenty-two and one-half per cent than the legislative appropriation for 1929. The actual expenditure in 1928-29 was $894,000, while that proposed by the budget commission for the ensuing year is $390,000. This further cut would mean a 56 per cent reduction, a reduction that would deal a staggering, if not a mortal blow, to the University.

Unless there is speedy and heroic action, unless the legislature and the people come to the rescue, it must follow that North Carolina will blight, or kill, by neglect or through failure to support, an institution which has been more than a century in the making. It is hardly conceivable that North Carolinians, even in the present period of financial adversities and vicissitudes, will stand idly by and witness the wreck or the slow starvation of so vital a part of the state's organism as the University of North Carolina.—Greensboro Record.

A survey at the University of Oklahoma reveals that thirty men and thirty-four women at that institution claim they never swear. Evidently professors don't spring surprise quizzes at Oklahoma.

What we would like to know from Professor Picard (who went so far in the air) is whether the clouds, viewed from the other side, showed any silver linings.—U. of S. C. Gamecock.

Depression Is Socked On Chin

Playmakers Tour, And Davy
Crockett Sets New Flight
Record Across Stage.

By Marion Tatum and Foster Fitz-Simons

Returning from a week-end of strenuous spreading of Playmaker doctrines in eastern North Carolina, our campus Thespians entered the home portals Sunday afternoon yelling triumphantly from the top of their red Carolina bus. The three days of their tour were marked by everything from frantic females to fateful safety pins; and the coastal plains rang with "Drinks, Davy Crockett!" liberally mixed with "Christ! I got ideas".... The depression is officially buried; the Playmakers tour again.

Following the first performance before E. C. T. C.'s 1,000 girls.... the janitor and two policemen.... George Brown and Bob Novins held an "At Home" in their dressing room for 999 of the dear damsels.... (the 1000th had Red Rankin's back to the wall pleading for an autograph)

Item: Proff and Eugenia Rawls sold four copies of the Carolina Folk Comedies to the unsuspecting, between acts.

After sending out searching parties for George Brown.... and other searching parties for the searching parties.... the company proceeded to Wilmington to be wine, dined, and feted by the Thaliens in a really Charlestonian manner. Before the performance, they broke the ice and went wading in the s-sun k-kissed Carolina waters; afterwards they broke the ice and attended a Country Club formal in their much begrimed traveling clothes, plus shoulder corsages of gardenias.... courtesy of the Wilmington P.-T. A.

Item: Proff and Eugenia going strong.... sold eight books. Goldsboro was another revelation, with more and more southern hospitality. The high spot of the evening was when the temperamental safety pin, sole support of Davy Crockett's trousers, gave way in the midst of a violent political speech on the stage. From then on the action speeded up noticeably.... cut two-minutes fifty-three seconds off the former running time. Following the show, the Barrymores and Duses were regaled with pretzels and cocolas in the lobby, and an informal dance, not in the lobby. Item: Total sale of Folk Plays brought up to twenty-one.

There was much hilarity in the theatrical chariot on the last lap home: Jo Orendorff and Bill Bonyon gone Hollywood in a touching love scene; Sam Selden singing sentimental ballads in Jo Orendorff's hat.... a performance which moved the gathering to such lengths that Harry Davis was forced to pass Betty Barnett's hat for contributions. So home came the conquerors, seasoned troupers, and oozing greasepaint and enthusiasm from every pore.

Item: Betty Barnett has sworn off cigars.

Item: Mr. Fitz-Simons is now writing the third chapter of his memoirs entitled, "Suspence or Suspenders."

Five Thousand Citizens Protest Budget Slash

are not here for condemnation but for presentation.... to lift and hold high the light of truth. If we cannot be constructive, we must not be destructive."

A group of seven designated speakers and a number of citizens arising from the floor echoed his sentiments and declared emphatically for a re-valuation of the essentials of government. Graham Speaks

Dr. Graham, in characteristic manner, brought forth the case of higher education after Clyde Erwin, Rutherfordton, president of the North Carolina Teachers' Association and Colonel Sanford Martin, editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, had presented the case for general education.

Said Dr. Graham, in part: "We take our stand as North Carolinians, grimly aware of the conditions of the country, but endeavoring to share the facts with our governmental forces. The cut in salaries of our University faculty is already below their peers in business."

He pointed out the fifty-six per cent cut in University appropriations since 1929, revealing that in the face of a salary scale less than one-half of that offered elsewhere, sixty-one members of the faculty refused ninety offers totalling over one hundred thousand dollars.

"It is proposed," stated Dr. Graham, "that in 1934 all divisions of the Greater University will receive less than the appropriation realized by one branch in 1929." Standing with the secondary schools, he pointed out that the effect of the University cut is felt as directly on them as is the planned slash of their appropriations felt by the University.

Advocated Sales Tax

The most significant point of the afternoon's discussion came from Kemp Battle, a member of the class of 1909. His address advocated a sales tax in answer to the question of "Where will the money come from?" He urged that the merchants of North Carolina who wield the weapons for defeating such a measure in the legislature release their representatives from an expression against such a measure and join with the citizenry in preserving the educational institutions of the state.

Also striking was another point. Admitting the qualities and public benefices of the State's Confederate Womens' Home, Caswell Training School, Sanatorium and similar institutions, he advocated that they be scrapped in preference to what appears to be the ultimate disbanding of the University faculty.

"It would be better to close the doors of these four than to cut the University.... a blow beyond our capacity. For the proposed full professorial salary of $170 a month, we cannot obtain the type of men who must lead the youth of our University.... If the faculty is disbanded we could not replace it in a generation. The University is the heart of the state."

Other speakers included Silas Lucas of Wilson, Mrs. J. M. Hopgood and Mrs. McKee, former senator, whose eloquent and bombastic plea brought forth a thunder of applause. The floor was thrown open to a series of one-minute speeches from members of the assemblage who elicited numerous interesting angles of the educational question.

Blue Devils Overtake Tar Heels In Last Minutes To Win Close Game, 36 To 32

Phantoms Appear Stage Struck At First and Trail 15-4 at One Stage of Game.

RALLY IN SECOND HALF

Carolina Comes Back and Leads 31-25 With Six Minutes to Play; Thompson Stars.

The Duke Blue Devils halted the White Phantoms in their victorious march last night in Durham before a capacity crowd by the heart-breaking score of 36-32.

Led by their brilliant center, Jim Thompson, who racked up fourteen points for the night, the Devils led 17-13 at the half. The first half play was clearly Duke's. The Phantoms appeared stage struck and nervous, dropping passes, allowing their opponents to cut clear, and missing numerous shots from everywhere. At one time in the initial period the Devils held a lead of 15-4, and it was not until the half was nearly over that Weathers shot two one-handed beauties, Aitken got one in a beautiful shot under the basket, and Long, subbing for Hines, sank one. As the half closed the Tar Heels were beginning to become adjusted to the game and were outplaying the Dukemen.

Carolina Gets Started

Captain Hines returned at the opening of the second half and Carolina began to work on the Duke lead. Hines sank one from the floor, Brandt got a foul and then rubbed it in with a beautiful shot from the floor as Carolina shot ahead for the first time 18-17. On the next tip-off Jim Thompson connected, and the Devils were in front 19-18. Then a double foul was called

TAR HEEL BOXING HOPES RAISED BY WIN OVER V. M. I.

Coach Rowe's Fighting Machine Looks Impressive in Saturday's Victory.

The Carolina boxers returned to training with plenty of pep Monday after their decisive victory over the V. M. Cadets and they are determined to make their last home stand a successful one against the undefeated and untied Cavaliers of Virginia this Saturday night. It now begins to look as though Captain Marty Levinson's boys will have a better than even chance to come through with an upset.

Saturday night's fights showed that Coach Rowe's boys are back in high gear after the previous tie with State, and that the chances of the team against Virginia are first-rate as the Tar Heels were able to get the same margin of points over the Cadets that Virginia did and in a more impressive manner.

Norm Quarles knocked out Mickey Doyle, the boy who extended Bobby Goldstein the previous week. Doyle was never troublesome to the Tar Heel Express who rolled over him in masterful fashion. Boxing fans are talking to themselves because of what might happen this Saturday night when Norm meets the mighty Goldstein. This fight was hot right from the beginning of the season and now, after Quarles has three straight knock-out victories, it appears that the lightweight brawl alone would fill the Tin Can.

V. M. I. Editor Impressed

The sports editor of the V. M. I. paper, The Cadet, was quite certain before the fight that Doyle would defeat Quarles or

by MARLING SPIKE

Perhaps we should be all hot and puffing about the Duke-Carolina basketball game, but since that's all a matter of history now, we've decided to bounce off on the subject of boxing.

Saturday brings the much-heralded Virginia fights which promise to be very much in the humdinger class, although we must admit that Carolina's chances of winning over the conference champs are problematical at best.

The biggest single event of the Virginia card will be the Goldstein-Quarles fight, which, if staged alone, would probably draw as large a crowd as the average program of sixteen bouts.

Having watched boxing here for several years and seen some rather startling reversals of form on the part of favored pugilists, Marling Spike has become a bit skeptical about picking a winner in advance without due hedging, but this time he's going to indulge—

COACHING STAFF CONDUCTS EARLY DRILLS IN TRACK

Fetzer Adopts New Card System for Checking Each Man's Records.

Coach Fetzer yesterday afternoon paraded his runners before the time watches with hopes that his men would improve with the seasoning which the early track drills will give.

The track coaching staff has devised a system of cards with the names and records of each individual aspirant for the team. The coaches hope that by these cards on file they may check each man's daily work. The managers will give out each day the work prescribed by the coaches for the man and he must see how closely he can measure up with the requirements of the Tar Heels' mentors.

Yesterday the men were given easy laps with some prescribed time to work by, and remarkably enough, a large number of the candidates easily bettered the goals set by the coaches. This just goes to show the fine condition that the Carolina tracksters are rapidly rounding into; however, a large number of the likely looking candidates for the team have not been out. Some of these men have been hindered by football practices, examinations, and even influenza has kept its total out.

Some of the weight, discus, and javelin men have been going through their paces and are gradually hitting their strides.

Changes In Football Rules Are Advocated

A couple of new football rules have been planned for presentation to the national football rules committee at its meeting in early February.

The most important deals with the forward pass. Lou Little, Columbia, says that the penalty for two unsuccessful passes in the same series of downs should be increased from five to fifteen yards. Dick Hanley, Northwestern mentor, declares that forward passes should be permitted from any point behind the scrimmage line, replacing the present restriction that the ball must be thrown from a point at least five yards behind the line. Another suggestion is that a forward pass caught by the defense after it has touched an ineligible receiver be ruled an intercepted pass, instead of an incomplete pass as has been the case.

The other important change suggested is that the ball should be brought in from the edge of the field without the loss of a down, before it is carried over the sideline.

Coach Fetzer yesterday supervised some hurdle drills for the men out for this event.

It is still not too late for all men, freshmen or upper classmen, who want to go out for the track team to report at Emerson field. Workouts are being held daily at 3:15 and 4:15 o'clock. Two different times to suit the times for the individual candidates.

GENERALS WILL PROVE HARD FOE FOR WRESTLERS

Varsity Mat Coach Puts Charges Through Series of Hard Drill In Practice Yesterday.

Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan, varsity mat mentor, put his men through a series of hard drills yesterday afternoon, priming his charges for their next wrestling meet with the Washington and Lee Generals in Lexington Saturday night.

The Lexington school is reported to have another strong wrestling club, equal to its last year's edition. For the past three years, the Washington and Lee wrestling teams have been undefeated in Dixie while amassing a record far surpassing that of its next door neighbor, V. M. I. Since these two schools do not have athletic relations with one another, both schools, undefeated in the south, claim jointly the title of the southland. By comparative ratings of the records of the two schools, the Generals have the edge.

Coach Gloomy

"Carolina will be lucky to count five points," said Coach Quinlan yesterday afternoon. "The Tar Heels are looking better since their V. M. I. meet, and should be in an improved condition Saturday; however, the Lexington team (Washington and Lee) has five likely looking sophomores who did well last year as freshmen in addition to a veteran trio of seniors which

TWO TEAMS KEEP PERFECT RECORD IN FRAT LEAGUE

Swain Hall Retains Its Lead in Dormitory Group by Defeating Lewis 28-18.

Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Psi, and Swain Hall retained their positions among the undefeated quintets in the two intramural basketball races yesterday, but the two fraternity outfits were hard-pressed to keep from dropping decisions.

T. E. P. gained its fifth win of the season, 23-22, at the expense of a hard-fighting D. K. E. five which fought to the last second. The Dekes trailed 6-4 at the end of the first quarter, and 13-10 at the half, but pulled up to take a brief lead of 19-18 as the third quarter ended. The last period was close. While the whistle blew the game's end with the score 22-22, a double foul involving Eisenberg of T. E. P. and Alexander of D. K. E. occurred. On the free shots resulting the game was decided, for Eisenberg sank his, while Alexander's was no good. Alexander had been the leading factor in keeping the Dekes in the running, however, having scored seventeen of his team's points. Lussan and Jacobs scored seven and six respectively to lead the T. E. P. attack.

PLAYMAKER BOOK RECEIVES PRAISE

Magazine Publishes Article
Lauding Value of Comedies Produced by Students.

"Carolina Folk Comedies," fourth in the series Carolina Folk Plays, has again come in for national recognition and praise. In the February issue of Theatre Arts Monthly, one of the best known magazines in the dramatic field, Carl Carmer, assistant editor of the publication, writes as follows on the new edition:

"Those merry one-acts springing from the soil of the Carolinas are happy evidence that the Carolina Playmakers have lost none of their initial impetus. Indeed they advance the line of development that took its beginning when Professor Koch forsook the Dakotas for the University at Chapel Hill. The variety of the material shows how intensively the college playwrights have cultivated their background. One of the most amazing facts about the southern states, to the uninitiate, is their heterogeneity. The variety of bloods, of races, of religions and customs found in the south, should provide material for the writer and the student of society for many years to come. Professor Koch has impressed this fact on the young dramatists whom he advises. His reward is ample.

"The writing of one-act comedies requires perspective, an adequate sense of values. The preciousness that characterized the gloomy one-act folk-tragedies on which earlier theatres once batted will not withstand the light of such true observations as these ambitious students have trained themselves to practice. These amusing studies in American rural life are particularly effective in their characterizations, most of which give an impression of complete authenticity. Whatever they lack in theatrical effectiveness may, for the most part, be laid to the limitations of the one-act play.

"The worth of these little plays of folk-life, if only as exercises, has been well established. Paul Green has woven many of his early one-acts into his later and more important full-length works. It is an easy flight of the imagination to picture other plays of distinction made, at some time in the future, out of the dramatic folk materials which are so suggestively and effectively displayed in this volume."

but both Hines and Weaver made good. Hines, who was taking the balls off the basket in aggressive fashion, fought for a recovery and landed. Carolina went ahead again, 21-20.

Then Brandt settled and casually dropped in a field goal to lead 23-20. Coach Cameron called Thompson out in favor of Pargoe, and immediately Brandt left him on the corner and swished another, making the score 25-20. Then Horne made a foul shot for Duke and Jim Thompson returned and rung up a two-pointer. The score was tied a minute later on Weaver's follow-up of Bell's long attempt. With nine minutes left to play Snooks Aitken dribbled through the Duke defense and scored. Hines and McCachren missed easy shots under the basket, but then Hines wriggled free and counted making the score 29-25. Weathers got the next tip and passed beautifully to Hines who counted and the score read 31-25 for Carolina with a little over six minutes left.

Another blow hit Duke as Herb Thompson fouled Weathers and left the game. Weathers missed his shot and Weaver counted for Duke. The ball was batted out under the Duke basket and before McCachren and Aitken could shift men, Horne had counted on a crisp shot. Five and a half minutes were left and the score stood 31-29.

Phantoms Lose Drive

Here the Phantoms seemed to lose something and Aitken and McCachren fouled and both were made, knotting the count with less than three minutes left. Weathers put Carolina in front again with a free throw. Lewis, Duke guard, dribbled down the floor and shot a long one off balance, it swished, and Duke was ahead, 33-31. Clark, who replaced Herb Thompson, got one under the basket and Jim Thompson connected on a free throw before the game ended with the score 36-32.

Hines led Carolina in scoring with nine points. The all-around star for the White Phantoms was Snooks Aitken who racked up seven points and was a constant worry to the Duke defense.

TAR HEEL BOXING HOPES RAISED BY WIN OVER V. M. I.

come pretty close to it. After watching the blonde mauler's work for two rounds, he declared that he would be willing to take a bet on Quarles to beat Goldstein, so favorably was he impressed.

Platt Landis' short work of the V. M. I. heavy was pretty to behold, although Platt used a good many punches to fan empty space before he put the crusher on Hilliard. Landis is the heaviest hitter cruising around the heavyweight classes this winter and it is possible that he may add another quick kyo to his list this week when he goes against the Virginia man who has already been flattened twice.

Raymer Makes Game Fight

Furches Raymer gave a grand exhibition in his first start this year. He stepped into the welter-weight breach, faced a man who weighed nearly twenty pounds more than he, and made him travel an extra round to take a verdict. Raymer had been in the infirmary a week before the bout and the effects of his severe cold left him listless in training, but he made a gallant stand Saturday and came within a hair's breadth of defeating his heavier foe.

Cliff Glover came through for his first win of the season in nice fashion. Glover never has lost a fight by a very wide margin, but the breaks seemed always to be against him. Saturday night he clinched the verdict beyond any doubt, scoring the cleaner punches from the very beginning. With Cliff back on the win side of the ledger, Carolina's chances of blazing along the highroad to success this year are much improved.

Lumpkin Replaces Berke

Nat Lumpkin replaced Lee Berke in the new 155 pound weight at the last minute and came through with a victory. Whether this change in the line-up is temporary or permanent, Lumpkin looked good winning and he seemed right at home among the 155 pounders.

Sam Giddins, in contrast to his slam-bang tactics of the week before, came out carefully and boxed his way to a victory by a wide margin. Sam had plenty to spare at the end and there was no question about the duke this time.

Tom Parsons, the boy who fought as light-heavy in Peyton Brown's place, did well against the rugged Ed Kostainsek, but Ed was just a little too big and heavy for him. Nevertheless, Parsons did land some nice blows that at one time actually had the big Cadet nodding.

FRESHMEN MAY ATTEND GRAIL DANCE SATURDAY

For the first time this year, freshmen will be admitted to one of the Grail dances when that organization sponsors its second dance of the winter quarter in the Bynum gymnasium Saturday night from 9:00 until 12:00 o'clock. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra will furnish the music.

Bulletin About Summer School Work Mailed Out

It was announced yesterday through the office of the school of education that a preliminary bulletin containing general information for the summer school terms has been issued to those who have requested this information. It was also announced that the correspondence regarding summer school, and requests for catalogues was normal. There have been requests from nineteen states, and several reservations have been made up to date.

and threw a scare into the league leaders before the final whistle sounded. Zeta Psi led, 10-3, at half time, but the margin was gone as the regular time expired with the teams deadlocked at 26-all. In the overtime period Milt Barber sank two field baskets for four points, while the best Theta Chi could get was one two-pointer by Kelly. Barber led his team throughout the contest, amassing a total of twelve points, while Clark, his teammate, got nine. Bennett scored eight and Harrison six for the losers.

Swain Hall had little trouble chalking up its fifth win of the season over Lewis, 28-18. Parks led the winning team with ten points, while Gillie added eight to his total. Willis and Loudermilk scored six each for Lewis.

Johnny Dillard and Phil Hammer ran wild, scoring fourteen and twelve points respectively as Delta Psi handed Phi Delta Chi its fourth consecutive setback, 36-15. Braham scored fifteen to lead the losers on the attack. Phi Delta Theta doubled Pi Kappa Phi's score as it fought to a 28-14 triumph with Mosier leading the attack with thirteen points. Hershey scored six more, while Cannon's seven markers were the outstanding individual contribution to the Pi Kappa Phi cause.

Mitchell House won, 2-0, from Steele on a forfeit.

Today's Schedule

3:45—(1) Best House vs. Crescent Cafeteria; (2) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Delta Tau Delta; (3) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.

4:45—(1) Aycock vs. Old West; (2) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Sigma Chi; (3) Mangum vs. Grimes.

would make any team sit up and take notice."

Quinlan is not very pessimistic; he is just stating plain facts. Carolina has not made any outstanding showing against its supposed "set-ups," N. C. State and V. P. I., taking beatings from the hands of both. Against V. M. I.'s team last week, the Tar Heels showed great improvement and might have given the cadets a trimming if Jim Spell had been in condition to wrestle Rucker, V. M. I. 165-pounder. Spell was out most of last week, taking law examinations.

The Carolina team this week should have its same line-up despite the possibilities of a last minute shake-up. Pickett, who ably substituted for Spell last Saturday looked good to Carolina's mat coach and may get the start over Spell. Hiller is the only Tar Heel who has not counted a win in the three meets that he has participated and should show some improved form in order to make the trip to Lexington. Thad Hussey, 115-pound regular, is back taking work-outs, but is still troubled with boils on his arms.

The Tar Heels limbered up yesterday taking some calisthenic drills given by Coach Quinlan. The entire squad then was put through some hard work on the mat, pairing off and wrestling among themselves. All the men had taken some track work previous to their work-out in the Tin Can.

Tin Can Tales

with due hedging.

Whatever is in this colyum is opinion, purely personal, possibly a bit cock-eyed, and certainly not expert, but here goes. If you agree with our views, all well and good; if you disagree (which is likely) at least you have something to squawk about.

Goldstein's record proves conclusively that he's good. He's known to be clever, fast, and possessing sufficient hitting power. Bickey Doyle, of V. M. I., whom Quarles knocked out last week, extended Goldy to such an extent that the Cavalier was forced to pull a vigorous rally in the final round to win the fight, and there is a possibility that Goldstein has slipped. However, we're not paying much attention to that. But the fact remains that Goldstein found Doyle a pretty tough proposition, and that Quarles knocked the Cadet out in the third round.

Quarles' best chance for victory seems to be in getting in close and banging away at the body as much as possible. Goldstein stands to hold the advantage if he can force Norm to stand away and box.

Fast and clever, Quarles is not a particularly hard hitter, despite his three knockouts. Quarles is a distance fighter and has scored his knockouts after weakening his opponents almost to the point of exhaustion with a continuous body barrage. Norm's big advantage should show in the third round, and if the fight goes into the fourth session his advantage will show to even greater extent for, as said before, Quarles' type of scrapping requires a little more than the usual three rounds to show its true effectiveness. So: if Goldstein can keep away and box at long range, it looks like Goldy; if Quarles can get inside and keep pounding, it looks like Norm.

Stringfield Will Play At Charlotte Tonight

Lamar Stringfield, flutist-composer, will present a recital this evening at 8:15 o'clock in the auditorium of Queens-Chicora College at Charlotte. He will be assisted by Adeline McCall, pianist. The concert is under the auspices of Kalpha Lambda Nu musical sorority and the two literary societies of the college.

Stringfield's program will feature works of American born composers but will include several recognized compositions of classical composers. A novelty group will include works of the modern writers Debussy, Ravel, and Barrere. The American group will be composed of Poem by Charles Griffes, Nocturne by Robert Bennett, and Dance by Charles Vardell.

Move Toward Fine Arts Seen On Campus

Strudwick of Hillsboro came over once a week to give lessons, but this venture proved dissatisfactory and was soon discontinued.

Official sanction of the art movement was indicated when President Graham appointed a committee on fine arts, consisting of Dr. George Howe, chairman, Dr. W. S. Bernard, Dr. J. P. Harland, Dr. J. M. Booker, and Professor F. H. Koch. Miss Rebecca Cushman has been placed in charge of advertising and business details. An executive committee was elected at the last meeting. Those on the committee are Rene Prud-hommeaux, Anne Simmons, Harry Coble, and Mayne Albright.

WOMAN'S LODGE LEADS AVERAGES FOR UNIVERSITY

Pi Beta Phi Leads in Scholarship
With Sigma Delta and Theta Chi Second and Third.

Pi Beta Phi, national woman's fraternity, had the highest scholastic average of the thirty-one campus fraternities during the fall quarter, according to official information received yesterday. The leading lodge's score was 2.41, based on a system stipulating the score 1.00 as the highest possible grade and 6.00 as the lowest.

Sigma Delta, with a 2.44 average, and Theta Chi, with 2.53, were second and third, respectively, in the standing.

Fraternity Average

The fraternity average, obtained from the available grades of 429 fraternity members, was 3.14, and the general academic average was 3.30. The lodge average is the same as that of the fall quarter last year, and the academic score a trifle better. Grades of professional students in medicine and law were not taken into account for the fall standing.

The following fraternities were above the fraternity average besides the aforementioned leading three: Tau Epsilon Phi, 2.56; Zeta Beta Tau, 2.71; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 2.75; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 2.76; Chi Phi, 2.90; Sigma Phi Epsilon, 2.94; Phi Alpha, 3.02; Zeta Psi, 3.07; Sigma Nu, 3.12; Phi Kappa Sigma, 3.12.

Four other fraternities were above the general academic average; Phi Sigma Kappa, 3.16; Beta Theta Pi, 3.27; Delta Tau Delta, 3.28; Sigma Chi, 3.29.

SYMPHONY MUSIC COMMITTEE WILL MEET SATURDAY

Advance Programs for Music Groups
Of State Symphony Society
Will Be Chosen.

The music committee of the North Carolina Symphony society will meet at 4:00 o'clock Saturday in Hill music hall for the purpose of selecting advance programs for the musical organizations of the society according to an announcement by Dr. H. S. Dyer, chairman of the committee.

The executive board of the society, under Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, president of the society, has ruled that all programs be planned in advance of the rehearsal period for each concert in order that music may be procured and issued to the individual members of the orchestra scattered over the state. The present committee meeting is to comply with this ruling in selecting programs for a series of presentations.

The little symphony of the society will present its next program in Southern Pines, February 23. Lamar Stringfield will appear as conductor and soloist. The concert is to feature two compositions which were recently given their premier performance here by the same group. They are Prelude Aural by Nathaniel Burt whose father, Struthers Burt, the novelist, is a resident of Southern Pines, and Herbert Hazelman's Logy March. The remainder of the program will be divided between standard classic compositions and modern American works.

Henderson Explains Significance Of Shaw's 'You Never Can Tell'

H. S. Dyer To Address
Musical Club Monday

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, will speak before the Thomasville music club Monday evening, February 6. His subject will be "Festival Movements in America," and will deal with the current progress being made through the efforts of the National Federation of Music Clubs in organizing musical festivals throughout the country.

Professor Dyer was recently appointed to the post of national chairman of choral festivals for the federation, and in this capacity has already begun the organization of numerous such events in the counties and districts of this state as well as in other states. Professor Dyer will direct a series of demonstration festivals in miniature at the meet in Minneapolis next May.

STUDENTS ISSUE LARGE NUMBER OF BAD CHECKS

According to a report issued yesterday by William Medford, chairman of the bad check committee, there were 260 checks, drawn for a total amount of $2,761.08, returned during the period December 1, 1932 to January 26, 1933. All those who have been reported have been taken up except twenty-three. Of this twenty-three, however, six were drawn by boys who are no longer students.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT DRAMA OPENING TONIGHT

"You Never Can Tell," Part of Shaw-Henderson Festival,
Plays Three Times.

As their part in the observance of the Shaw-Henderson festival which will honor George Bernard Shaw and his official biographer, Dr. Archibald Henderson of the University mathematics department, the Playmakers will present Shaw's You Never Can Tell in a three days' run in their theatre beginning at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

The performance tonight, Friday night, and Saturday night, will be the Playmaker's first public offering of the quarter. You Never Can Tell, written in 1897, was first produced at the Royalty Theatre, London, and was offered in this country for the first time by the Hart-Conway School of Acting in Chicago.

Harry Davis Directing
The play is under the direction of Harry Davis, with Thor Johnson conducting the music Thursday and Friday and Lamar Stringfield conducting, the Faculty Chamber Orchestra Saturday.

The main part of the play is to be centered around an English seaside resort in the year 1886.

Included in the cast are: Aileen Ewart as Dolly, Foster Fitz-Simons as Valentine, William Wang as Phillip, Olive Newell as a maid, Sudie Creech as Mrs. Clandon, Martha Hatton as Gloria, John Whitehead as Crampton, Daniel Weiner as McComas, Samuel Selden as William, James Thompson as second waiter, and Irving Katz as Bohun.

Biographer of Dramatist Tells How Play Presented Here
This Week, Was Written.

"The real clash in Shaw's career as a dramatist pivots on the play You Never Can Tell," declared Dr. Archibald Henderson, official biographer of the dramatist, yesterday in an interview with a member of the feature board of the DAILY TAR HEEL. You Never Can Tell is being presented by the Playmakers this week-end in connection with the Shaw-Henderson Festival.

At the very time when Shaw had impressed the important theatrical managers in the West End of London that he had money-making plays to offer them, Cyril Maude, famous actor-manager of the Haymarket, (a theatre historic in the life of the English drama) asked Shaw to submit to him the text of Candida for consideration. The dramatist, knowing that the conservative West End of London was not educated up to the sophistication and modernity of the type of drama which he had written, decided to write an altogether new play for Cyril Maude and his company.

Accordingly in the summer of 1897, Shaw hired a public chair (similar to the principle of hiring a deck chair on an ocean liner) in Regent's park, and proceeded to write You Never Can Tell. When this play was completed he submitted it to Maude, who accepted it, and began to put it into rehearsal. At this point the trouble began. Many of the character's speeches, the social philosophy in general, and even the dramatic technique necessary for putting it across the footlights to a London audience was quite incomprehensible to the old fashioned point of view. Shaw went on patiently week after week endeavoring to explain to the cast how the lines should be delivered, but to no avail. His cor-

DR. R. W. WILCOCKS VISITS UNIVERSITY

Distinguished Psychologist From Africa Is Studying Social Conditions in America.

Dr. R. W. Wilcocks, a distinguished psychologist from the Union of South Africa has visited the University during the past few days. Dr. Wilcocks, who is an authority on social conditions in South Africa, came to this country with assistance from the Carnegie corporation in order to make a comparative survey of the problem of the poorer white people in this section of the country. During his two day stay in Chapel Hill, he has interviewed members of the departments of sociology, economics, and psychology in order to find out their views in regard to this subject.

He spent a day traveling around this county with a member of the school of public administration in order to see at first hand the condition of some of the small tenant farmers here.

While at the University, Dr. Wilcocks talked particularly with the members of the staff of the institute for research in the social sciences and the department of rural social economics and discussed with them the various phases of this question.

FORUM SPEAKERS LECTURE TONIGHT ON POWER TOPIC

W. S. Lee and Dr. Gruening
Through Occupations Know
Subject Thoroughly.

W. S. Lee and Dr. Earnest R. Gruening will lecture tonight at the fourth of the series of lectures sponsored by the Open Forum discussion group. The subject of the lectures is "Power." Both men are well qualified to lecture on this subject inasmuch as Lee is chief engineer of the Duke Power Company, and Dr. Gruening in his newspaper work has made an intensive study of the power situation.

Lee is a pioneer in the high tension hydro-electric power development. For this and many other achievements he was made a fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and a member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the Canadian Electrical Institute.

Dr. Gruening, the leader in the fight against the power trust, was graduated from Harvard in 1908 and received his M. D. degree in 1912. However, he has never practiced medicine, but as his interest led him to enter the journalistic field. He became managing editor of the New York Tribune in 1917.

Survey Of College Dailies Shows That Staffs Usually Elect Editor

Letters From Editors at Texas, Princeton, Ohio State, Wisconsin,
And Illinois Reveal That Head of Paper Is Generally Chosen
By Paper's Staff or Appointed by Governing Board.

A survey of five of the leading college dailies indicates that the elections of the editor of those publications is generally either the privilege of the staff or is limited to specially elected delegates. This information has been obtained from letters to the DAILY TAR HEEL from the editors of the Wisconsin, Texas, Princeton, Illinois, and Ohio State university daily newspapers. The University of Texas is the only one of the above schools which elects its editor by popular ballot. The remainder of the schools have discarded the system in favor of staff selection or appointment by boards of control.

An excerpt from the letter of Frederick J. Noer, editor of the Wisconsin Daily Cardinal, is as follows: "The control of college and university publications by campus political organizations through the selection of their editors by popular vote has long been a thing of the past at the University of Wisconsin. Students and faculty alike realize that election of editors and business managers and their staffs can, by this method, be too easily controlled by small machines that are neither competent nor responsible.

No Politics Is New Plan
"Political machines controlled by a small minority of headstrong, glory-seeking students have the habit of selecting men and women to head organizations and to fill duties for which they are not in the least fitted. Frankly, editors, business managers, and their staffs, receive ability to carry their duties only through study and hard work, and not through licking the boots of some vote magnate.... Politics, strange as it may seem, has been almost entirely divorced from the work of this board, and even from its election. By this I mean machine politics. The members do not run on coalition tickets. I believe this has come about through their active interest in the paper and its problems, for they clearly see that politics has no place in determining the management or policy of any campus publication."

Leaders Make Plea For Higher Education Cause

Phi Favors Election
Of Editor By Staff

After a heated, extended discussion Tuesday night the Phi assembly voted 14-13 in favor of selection of editors of the campus publications by their staffs.

Representatives John Wilkinson, L. L. Hutchison, and Rubin upheld the resolution, Resolved: That the editors of the student publications at the University be chosen by their respective staffs. Representatives Edwin Lanier, Cecil Carmichael, L. H. Fountain, and A. S. Kaplan opposed the measure.

Plans for the attendance of members of the assembly upon a night session of the legislature were presented and accepted by Representative Ralfo Farlow.

John Formy-Duval and John Munden were accepted as candidates for initiation.

UNIVERSITY DEBATORS SPEAK ON WAR DEBTS

R. P. Russell and W. R. Eddleman represented the University in a no decision debate Wednesday night against speakers of the University of Pittsburgh on the subject of cancellation of war debts. Debaters Leonard Boreman and John P. Bracken of Pittsburgh upheld the affirmative side of the query, Resolved: That the war debts should be cancelled.

GRAHAM PRESENTS CASE

in His Work.

By Don Shoemaker

North Carolina's leading sons in the field of education, statesmanship, journalism, and law plead the case of higher education before the joint committee on appropriations from the senate and house yesterday afternoon in Raleigh with an eloquence and sincerity unprecedented in the history of their state. Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of North Carolina State College, Dr. J. I. Foust, president of N. C. C. W., and Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, spoke as representatives of the three great state institutions. Kemp Battle, University alumnus and president of the North Carolina Bar Association, plead the cause of higher education as a citizen, lawyer, and member of the board of trustees; Judge John J. Parker, judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Hon. Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, presented their pleas for a cause which has rocked the state and nation.

In his simple, yet dignified and emphatic manner so characteristic of his address to that same assemblage of legislators two years ago, when he fought successfully for the life of the oldest state university, Dr.

CITY EDITOR FOR THIS ISSUE: J. D. WINSLOW

A Responsibility Always

Present With Student Editors

Of the criticisms made recently against the Buccaneer proposal to place power of electing editors in the hands of staff members, one around which opposition to the plan seems to be centering is that it will cause the editors to lose their sense of responsibility to the student body. At first presentation this would seem to be a valid condemnation. But when the matter is given even so much as a moment's serious contemplation, the condemnation loses all of its potential aspects.

Regardless of the fact that under the new system the editors would not be elected by the students, the mere fact that the publications are financially dependent on the student body for their existence would make it essential for the editors to feel a responsibility toward their benefactors. This point is made viewing the matter from a cold, business-like outlook. And despite the fact that this viewpoint answers the criticism, it would be much saner to view the matter just as the editors themselves would do.

The editors, despite what any critics might say, are constantly aware of the fact, and are continually trying to make the truth even more evident, that the publications are mouthpieces, or mirrors of student opinions. At all times the publication heads are striving to make this boast fundamentally true. And in this attempt they never overlook the fact that they must keep themselves in direct contact with the members of the student body. Thus in a sense one of the aims of the editors is not to detach their publications from the student body, but rather to keep at all times in close contact with it in order that the student opinions might more accurately be presented through the columns of the publications.

The fact that the editors will look to the staff members rather than the students for their election will not shift their center of responsibility, but will rather insure that the editors will be possibly more responsible to the students. As it is now the editors usually take the viewpoint that they are elected by the students, and are consequently responsible to no one for their actions.

Under the proposed plan this sense of freedom of the editors will be limited to a certain extent, and as a result they will actually feel even more responsible to the students than before. Since they will be elected by the staff, and financially supported by the students, their sense of responsibility could not help but be with the latter group, whose opinions the publications are at all times anxious to present.

John Galsworthy, Prime Minister of English Fiction

With the passing of John Galsworthy, England has lost the most distinguished figure in modern literature. With the appearance of his first novel of importance, The Man of Property, he rapidly rose to prominence in the literary world, and since the completion of the Forsyte Saga he has held his position as prime minister of English fiction. He has throughout his works exemplified the spirit of the English tradition of realism, frequently picturing the weakness of human beings in directing their own lives. He was a painter of the English upper class. The fundamental theme which recurred repeatedly in his novels was one of social stratification, the conflict of the individual and his class.

There was, perhaps, in much of his writing, especially his plays, a tinge of bitterness and ironic satire. Yet he differed from the social novelists of the nineteenth century in the restraint of his own personality and what he often called a "serious conception of his art." His art was his life. Several years ago he refused an offer of knighthood because he felt that the satisfaction of his work was sufficient. Such a sincere feeling for the nature of his task and a belief in an art for art's sake, though not the causes, were the proofs of his greatness.

Such a man must invoke admiration, if for nothing else, for himself alone. There were many who felt that in the past few years, though not an old man, he was losing the fine touch and insight into the deeper feelings which so marked his earlier novels. Yet, whatever we may think, he made an inestimable contribution to the world. It was not merely a contribution to the field of literature, though that alone would suffice to give his name immortality. His contribution was deeper than that, something that penetrates and touches the chords of humanity. Whatever he may have been, his one-time greatness rises like a rock. So we, being men, must grieve "when even the shadow of that which once was great has passed away."—V.C.R.

Goodbye Yale

Yale University was originally founded in 1701. In point of antiquity she is second only to Harvard among the more famous of American schools. Her beginning was humble, and lowly—in keeping with our poor, young America of colonial times. Last year her endowment exceeded $93,000,000 and her annual income was over $8,500,000! For many years, she was one of that mighty if somewhat haughty triumvirate known as the "Big Three." But, unfortunately, universities like men are born, grow into maturity, reach a peak in stature and accomplishment; and finally grow fat, senile, and begin a slow decay which ends in death. Like men, too, this age is indeterminate, differing with the individual.

Last week Yale gave unmistakable evidence that she has begun that decline, that fatness, that senility which forecasts her early doom. The misguided board of alumni which controls her destinies, announced that henceforth only students of a definite financial rating would be admitted. The alumni who passed that ruling committed matricide; they cut the throat of their alma mater with a shortsightedness that is remarkable for its stupidity.

It is an interesting reflection that Yale's founder could not gain admission to the Yale of our time. Neither could Lincoln, Coolidge, or Hoover, struggling students, have been able to raise the bond she now requires. Many of the leaders of the nation, including some of her most distinguished benefactors, would be turned away if they sought admission to her gilded doors.

If Yale now occupied the distinction she once held; if she were the epitome of a very limited group where higher learning could be obtained in this country, her act in setting up the dollar sign as the entrance requirement would have dealt a serious blow at America and her institutions. But now Yale, by her act, only injures herself. Long since she has been passed in the struggle for leadership in educational ranks. Johns Hopkins probably has a better medical school; Massachusetts Institute of Technology a better technical status; Michigan and Virginia and Columbia offer legal instruction equalling, if not surpassing Yale's. Many of the young, vigorous institutions of the Middle-West and West have far exceeded old Eli.

There was a time when the alumni of Yale sat high in the seats of the mighty. There was a time when the sons of Eli held up their heads rather proudly, and with cause, in the pulpits, in the counting rooms, in the legal forums, and on the nation's battle fields. In generations to come that cannot be true. She has drawn a class line; she has set up a caste recognition which the people of this republic will not tolerate.

It is sad to see Yale pass. She had such proud traditions. She was such a fine high hat for the brain aristocracy of the land. Her label has carried many an average specimen to more than average glory. But even though we may rightly shed a tear as the fat, diffident old matricide is borne in splendor to her golden bier, we may take some consolation in the fact that she can never be forgotten. She has furnished no presidents, but she gave to her country two immortals—Walter Camp and Rudy Vallee!—Daily Trojan.

In seventeen years, co-ed's practices have become no more radical, according to an alumnus of the University of Washington. Co-eds smoked, drank, and necked just as freely in 1915 as they do today, she says.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Guvment

Marking time prior to the citizens' educational mass meeting in Raleigh the other day, we wandered into the Senate chamber of the Capitol building to feast our curious eyes on the peoples' representatives in action. The chamber was crowded from sidelines to gallery with more or less interested spectators, many of whom we were informed, hang around night and day in the hopes of seeing something exciting stir the solons into debate of the old school variety.

The Senate was worrying about a bill to decrease the salaries of state solicitors at the same time raising or lowering expense accounts (we never got straight on the expense business). Page boys of assorted ages dashed too and fro with surprising alacrity carrying bills and amendments to the reader's desk and cigarettes and Life Savers to several of the senators. Things were pretty dull, but the gallery stuck by hoping against hope. Finally, at the tail end of discussion on the solicitor bill, the Senator from — sent an amendment on the bill to the chair, and the reader, after removing his feet from the desk in front of him, smiled and read the amendment. It was phrased to the effect that "There shall be no more crime in North Carolina."

The gallery relaxed and tittered. The Senators shifted in their chairs and looked glum, apparently bored. Used to it, we suppose.

SPEAKING

the CAMPUS MIND

To the Editor

DAILY TAR HEEL:

The move to take the elections of the editors of the several campus publications out of the hands of the students is in keeping with the schemings of political bosses. It is an effort to centralize the powers of certain forces. When the scheme has been accomplished, the mighty ones will let the sunshine of their worth fall on the students in quantities to suit themselves and their purposes. We shall bask in the light that they see fit to give us.

As one who pays a proportionate share for these publications, I demand a proportionate share in the selection of who shall edit them. I do not propose to pay my money for a right that I am not allowed to exercise. It is foolish to suppose that the stockholders of a corporation who hold an equal number of shares of the company's stock would surrender their voice in its policy to a group who held no more of its capital than they. And if the second group should assume control, it would be a slap in the face of the intelligence of the first group and an act that demanded separation of the two parties.

It has been pointed out that the editors of most of the leading college papers in the country are elected by the staffs. Ignorant as to the truth of the claim, I grant it. But, are we to follow like dogs on a chain because it is being done? Can't we preserve the individualism of this "seat of liberalism" and pat ourselves on the back knowing that the majority is usually wrong?

Further, no one has shown anything wrong with the present system other than to say that it is dominated by political leaders and parties. In the past we have had good editors. In all cases they have been a credit to our school. And they were voted on, after gaining the bosses' appointment, by the students. They were subject to the students.

But should the proposed change take effect, they would be responsible only to the publications union board, which they, in large measure, would control. The circle would be vicious, and once begun, would be hard to break. One group, by careful selection of the staffs, could and would keep control from year to year, and so on ad infinitum—or as far into ad infinitum as the institution lives.

As a citizen of the University jealous of my right to have a part in its students' activities, I raise a profanely emphatic—profanity lends more emphasis for some people—cry against the usurpation of that right!

—Cecil K. Carmichael.

Governor Appoints School Committees

In accordance with the action of the trustees of the University Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has appointed committees to present the needs of the University to the legislature and to assist in working out reorganization plans for the Greater University.

The legislative committee is composed of the following: Kemp D. Battle, S. B. Alexander, Mrs. E. L. McKee, Miss Easdale Shaw, Kemp P. Lewis, Haywood Parker, and Dr. Charles E. Mad-dry.

The reorganization committee is composed of the following: Josephus Daniels, A. W. McLean, Mrs. Laura Cone, C. W. Tillet, Jr., Irvin B. Tucker, Dr. Clarence Poe, and Charles Whed-bee.

Leaders Make Plea For Cause Of Higher Education In State

Frank Graham presented the cause for higher education in North Carolina in an address which must stand thus far as the crowning point of his brilliant career. Conclusive, convincing, and scholarly in his manner, Dr. Graham brought forth the plaudits of legislators and spectators alike.

Graham's Speech

Following the statements of his colleagues from the other two great state institutions of higher learning, Dr. Graham plead for the educational life of the commonwealth. He prefaced his remarks with an outline of the inability of the University to maintain its high level in the face of the proposed budget. "Since 1929," said Dr. Graham, "North Carolina has cut her operating expenses $8,000,000. The average cut for all divisions has been 15 per cent, while higher education has had to suffer a cut of 42 per cent. Since 1929 $436,000 has been cut from the University of North Carolina. Looking impersonally, as I do, at the question, we are placing the position of the University in danger through the slashing of faculty salaries. Since 1929 and the first faculty cut, ninety offers totalling $130,000 in added salaries have come to sixty-one faculty men. They have stayed with us in the face of these magnificent offers, yet before the year is out we must cut them another one hundred thousand dollars. But it is not salary they want, for if they had wanted such they would have left us long ago . . ."

Dr. Graham pointed out that the University salary scale was the lowest of any university of similar ranking in the country. "The appropriation of $390,000 has shocked the entire university world," he continued.

"Our back is to the wall. We must not back our way out, for it will take the intelligence of university trained men, whom education prepares, to maintain the life and future of North Carolina," he concluded.

Battle Speaks

Speaking of consolidation, Kemp Battle stated: "Consolidation is a wise plan and goal to which we can build toward the future, but it does not answer our immediate problem . . . at present we cannot move our engineering school to Raleigh or their education school to Chapel Hill without incurring an expense which would greatly overshadow that reputed to be saved under the consolidation plan. We might save $38,000 by abolishing the medical school, but that move would be a virtual drop in the bucket, in the place of these losses. It is proposed that the saving come out of professors' salaries, but that would plunge the state of our teaching force into a condition only rivalled by the Civil War days. The source of our wealth in every endeavor is in the development of young minds," he stated in closing.

In pleas both as eloquent and stirring as those which preceded them, Josephus Daniels and Judge Parker brought a round of ringing applause. Daniels traced the development of education in North Carolina and urged that North Carolina not force her youth to other states by a slash of higher educational facilities.

More than a hundred spectators, many from Chapel Hill and other seats of education, filled the hall to overflowing. At the close of the session, a long line of admirers, inspired by the messages brought to them, crowded the aisles to express their sentiments to the speakers.

Phantoms Leave Tonight On Four Game Trek Northward

Squad Puts Duke Loss Behind Them and Leave Determined on Victories.

TEAM RIGHT PHYSICALLY

George Brandt Has Charley Horse and Infected Foot, But Will Be Ready Tomorrow.

With the Duke game behind them as a nightmare, the White Phantoms swing northward tonight for a four-game trek against Maryland, Navy, V. M. I., and Washington and Lee. Coach Shepard, a manager, and a squad of nine or ten players will leave Durham tonight at 7:12 o'clock and will return Wednesday morning.

Neither the coach or players offered any excuses for the Duke loss. All are convinced that Carolina has a better club than the Blue Devils and determined to show that in the Tin Can a week from Saturday. There is an excellent chance that the Devils and Phantoms will meet in the conference tournament. If they do, and the Tar Heels win the game over here, that battle on a foreign court will settle the issue.

Coach Bo worked his second team hard against his reserves yesterday in an effort to determine who would make the northern trip. The varsity warmed up but for the most part took it easy after their hard test last night.

Glance May Go North

Jack Glance, lanky sophomore center, showed up well in yesterday's workout and as a result may be taken along. Glance has good possibilities but for some reason has not been developing as fast as Coach Shepard had hoped. It may be that he has at last hit his stride.

The squad is in good physical shape with the exception of George Brandt who has a slight charley horse and an infected foot. Trainer Quinlan stated last night that he would be ready to go tomorrow night against Maryland.

SORORITY SQUADS WORK HARD FOR CHARITY CONTEST

Teams Have Conducted Secret Practices in Bynum Gym For Two Weeks.

With both squads taking heavy work-outs daily, the Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega basketball teams are whipping themselves into shape for their contest next Monday which is expected to be the biggest event of the woman's athletic program for the year. The game between the two sororities is scheduled for the Tin Can at 8:00 o'clock next Monday night.

For the past week the two teams have been conducting secret practice in sessions in Bynum gymnasium in preparation for the contest. Neither of the sororities have announced probable line-ups as each position on the two teams is hotly contested. These practice sessions will continue throughout the week.

Members of each of the two have expressed their confidence of victory in the contest.

Both the organizations are canvassing the campus in the sale of tickets to the event. The price of admission is twenty-five cents and the proceeds will be used for charitable purposes.

The University might greatly add to the comfort of approximately three thousand spectators and about thirty contestants every time there is an athletic event carded for the Tin Can by improving the heating system, or rather the lack of a heating system, in the local arena. You simply can't expect people to enjoy athletic events under the chilly atmosphere of the Tin Can.

The writer predicts the largest crowd of the season Saturday night when the Tar Heel pugs mingle with the championship Virginia fighters. Two years ago about 4500 saw Carolina take a 4-3 decision over the Cavaliers, but this Saturday an even greater crowd should attend. BALLY-HOO FOR VIRGINIA FIGHTS NOT NECESSARY

Bout of Quarles With Goldstein Arouses Most Interest On Campus.

The drums of bally-hoo, never greatly needed in college boxing, can be discarded altogether for the meet this Saturday night with Virginia. The campus waxes hotter each day at the very mention of the impending fights and the one particular subject of discussion is, "can Quarles take Goldstein?"

Yesterday in training Norm boxed two rounds with Assistant Coach Archie Allen and the affair was beautiful to watch. Allen, holder of the conference lightweight championship a few years back, knows all there is to be known about boxing; and, as boxing is Bobby Goldstein's game, his training bouts with Quarles should sharpen the blonde mauler for the Virginian.

His First Appearance

Saturday will mark Goldstein's first appearance in Chapel Hill although he has fought against Carolina, or rather against Marty Levinson, for three years. Two years ago, Virginia's last visit to the Hill, Goldy was slated to fight Marty but the shindig was called off, much to the disappointment of

GREENSBORO BOWLERS DEFEAT LOCAL TEAM

A team representing the Greensboro bowling alleys defeated the newly organized Carolina outfit 1625 to 1520 in a three game match Tuesday night. Wesley Ferrell, star moundsman for the Cleveland Indians of the American league, was a member of the victorious Greensboro team. Atwood, Brewer, Tucker, Hudson, and Sensbach represented Carolina. The two teams will meet again Tuesday night with Greensboro playing here.

the fans, at the last minute due to an illness of the Cavalier boxing master. Norm will be in there to make Goldstein's debut as miserable as possible this week.

This will be, by no means, the only hot fight as Virginia, the stronghold of conference boxing, will bring here an all-star cast composed of Archie Hahn, Gordon Rainey (brother of Bob, the conqueror of Archie Allen), Tom Fishburne, the whirlwind Stuart, one of the toughest 155 pounders in the business, and Lewis Reiss, victor last year over Peyton Brown.

REX ENRIGHT MAY BE NEW MICHIGAN FOOTBALL COACH

Former Carolina Mentor Mentioned For Job Along With Chet Wynne And Charles Bachman.

Rex Enright, varsity coach of basketball and assistant coach of football at Georgia University, and a former coach at Carolina, is under consideration for the position of head football coach at Michigan. This position was left vacant at the close of last season.

The post was filled last year by Jim Crowley who resigned in order to go to Fordham University. Enright has been asked to come to East Lansing and talk with Michigan officials. It has been reported for some time that Chet Wynne, Auburn mentor, and Charles Bachman, who resigned in December as head coach at Florida University, were the main candidates for the position. Both of these latter two coaches are also cited as possibilities for the directorship of athletics at Notre Dame in case Jesse Harper gives up the job.

BEST HOUSE AND MANGUM GARNER FIFTH VICTORY

No Fraternity Loop Leaders See Action in Yesterday's Intramural Basketball Battles.

Mangum and Best House continued undefeated yesterday in the dormitory division of the intramural basketball campaign as each chalked up its fifth win in as many starts. No fraternity loop leaders were active yesterday.

Mangum's win was over Grimes, which led most of the game, but lacked the finishing power to protect its lead and lost out in the last quarter, 30-24. Vick, with twelve points, and Smith and McRae, with eight each, led the winners, while Morrison and Watson scored ten and six respectively for Grimes.

Best House Wins

Herman Snyder was the bright star as Best House rolled up a 58-24 win over the Crescent Cafeteria team. The freshman luminary accounted for twenty-two points, and was closely followed by Leonard, who got eighteen. Whisnant added eight more to the Best House total, and Todd and Hunter scored twelve and eight points to shine for Crescent Cafeteria.

Phi Gamma Delta finally halted.

ILLUSION:

The stage is all set for target practice. The magician lifts his bow and aims an arrow at the bull's-eye. His lovely assistant then steps in front of the target and he shoots the arrow—apparently through her—and it fixes itself in the very center of the bull's-eye! And she smiles through it all while the audience gasps.

EXPLANATION:

The arrow which the marksman "shoots through" his assistant simply folds up into the crossbow! The arrow which is actually embedded in the target is shot by the girl herself from a belt concealed under her dress. She releases a little spring, the arrow unfolds, and shoots straight into the bull's-eye! It is all done in a flash! So quickly the eye cannot detect the girl's movements! To heighten the impression that the arrow has gone right through, the girl releases a ribbon from the front of her dress—the continuation, apparently, of the ribbon attached to the arrow in the target.

CAMELS

It's fun to be fooled —
...it's more fun to KNOW

Like to see through tricks? Then let's look at another... the illusion in cigarette advertising called "Cigarettes and Your Throat."

The audience is told that by certain magic processes tobacco can be made as soothing as cough medicine.

EXPLANATION: The easiest cigarette on your throat is the cigarette that is made from the choicest ripe tobaccos. Cheap, raw tobaccos are, as you would naturally expect, harsh in their effects upon the throat.

If you have to consider your throat, the quality of the tobacco in your cigarette is important.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Camels are as non-irritating as a cigarette can be because Camels use choice, ripe, tobaccos.

And because of the matchless blending of these costlier tobaccos Camels have a rich bouquet and aroma... a cool, delicious flavor.

PIERSON REPORTS DEGREES GIVEN IN PAST FOUR YEARS

Total of These Years Nearly Equals Number Awarded in Previous Decade.

During the four-year period from 1928 to 1932, a total of 430 degrees were awarded in the graduate school as compared with the total of 510 awarded during the ten-year period from 1918 to 1928, according to a report of an investigation recently completed by Dean W. W. Pierson, head of the graduate school.

Dr. J. F. Royster in 1928 made a survey of the number of degrees conferred upon graduates during the preceding decade. His report revealed that sixty-one doctor of philosophy, 365 master of arts, and eighty-four master of science degrees had been awarded during that time.

Dean Pierson, in order to learn how the number of degrees awarded during the four-year period compared with that of the ten-year period, made an investigation and found that seventy-five doctor of philosophy, 300 master of arts, and forty-five master of science degrees had been awarded from 1928 to the beginning of the current year.

Largest Enrollment

Dean Pierson stated that ordinarily the enrollment in the graduate school dropped during the winter quarter but that the present enrollment, 252 students, is the largest in the history of the University for that quarter.

The degrees awarded in the various departments during the four-year period were as follows: English, twenty-nine doctor of philosophy and 147 master of arts; chemistry, thirty doctor of philosophy and eighty-five master of arts; education, seven doctor of philosophy and 151 master of arts; history and government, fifteen doctor of philosophy and seventy-eight master of arts; sociology, fifteen doctor of philosophy and forty-eight master of arts; romance languages, six doctor of philosophy and forty-seven master of arts; classics, nine doctor of philosophy and thirty-three master of arts; economics and commerce, three doctor of philosophy and thirty-five master of arts; math, forty master of arts; physics, three doctor of philosophy and sixteen master of arts; physiology, seven doctor of philosophy and sixteen master of arts; zoology, two doctor of philosophy and fifteen master of arts; botany, three doctor of philosophy and eight master of arts; geology, three doctor of philosophy and twenty-nine master of arts; rural social economics, two doctor of philosophy and four master of arts; engineering, thirty master of arts; philosophy, two doctor of philosophy and five master of arts; comparative literature, five master of arts; and German, two master of arts.

'The Animal Kingdom' Is Presentation Today

Ann Harding and Leslie Howard are co-starred today at the Carolina theatre in "The Animal Kingdom," film adaptation of the Phillip Barry play that was last season's stage hit in New York. Howard is playing the part he created on the stage. The same is true of William Gargan, as the pugilist butler, and of Ilka Chase as a not-too-bright society woman.

The play shows that men's mistresses do not necessarily live out of wedlock—that many of them are those who press themselves under the title of "respectable wife."

settees. Incidentally, we pick Carolina to win by a 5-3 score—and with the intercollegiate lightweight champion, Bobby Goldstein, to take his first college defeat. But little Norman Quarles will have to be right to do it.

Tonight the White Phantoms begin a four game trip through Virginia and Maryland, and including two of the best teams in the east in Maryland and Navy. This season the Tars have ran roughshod over Dixie teams, taking a 40-20 decision over Duke and a 53-21 victory over Maryland. But comparative scores mean very little to the Phantoms. They can only be described as a "money team." They seem to play according to the ability of their opponents, and the results this year have been better than average. Although the Tar Heels will enter the Navy class as underdog, a victory will not surprise this person. If Wilmer and Vergil get hot, and Brandt, Aitken, and McCachren play their usual game, there'll be no rejoicing on the banks of the Severn that night.

Were it not for the fact that the Tar Heels mitmen fight Virginia Saturday, Coach Crayton Rowe would have most likely entered the boxers in the Golden Gloves tourney sponsored by the Charlotte Observer.

Dr. Beard Speaks To Economics Seminar

The graduate economic seminar of the school of commerce met last night in room 213 of Bingham hall. At this meeting Dr. Charles A. Beard, who is a national figure in the fields of economics and history, spoke informally to the group of graduate students and faculty members who were present. Dr. Beard, who came to Chapel Hill to deliver the Weil lectures, will be here for about six months, lecturing and studying. His talk before the seminar was of a most informal nature, and attendance was limited to members of that group.

editing news copy, planning the make-up) during the winter quarter. And from these ten the five best are selected to do the same during the spring quarter. This selection is made by the editor-in-chief, together with the members of the faculty of the school of journalism.

"At the end of the spring quarter the faculty of the school get together and choose the new editor-in-chief from the five spring quarter news editors. The selection is made on the basis of news handling, news sense, handling of his staff, originality in handling his paper, merit of assignment sheets, scholastic standing, etc."

"Daily Texan" Plan

The editor of the Daily Texan, Robert Baldrige, writes: "It appears from your few words that our manner of electing editors must be much the same. However, we have been fortunate in having rather strong leaders in the past as heads of the various publications. It is clearly evident that we are in danger every year of getting one or more incompetent editors, and I have seriously considered a campaign for placing more strenuous requirements on those running for editorship."

System at Princeton

H. L. Chapman, managing editor of the Daily Princetonian, explains the system in effect at Princeton thus: "In both nominations and elections meetings participation is limited to active board members, those who may be supposed to be familiar with the work and qualifications of the various candidates. In the elections discussion is free within reasonable limits under the presidency of the outgoing chairman. Voting is by secret signed ballots which are usually counted by members of the senior or sophomore boards."

"Though I am not familiar with the DAILY TAR HEEL's system of elections, I imagine our system of Senior Board nominations might be of interest to you. The senior officers are obviously the best qualified to judge the ability of the men who have been working under them and their selections have always carried a good deal of weight. In the case, however, of any obvious injustice or of strong sentiment on the part of the other members of the paper full opportunity is given to make whatever changes are desired."

Board of Control at Illinois

From O. B. Willett, managing editor of the Daily Illini, comes this information: "We have a publications Board of Control, composed of four faculty members and four students. The faculty members are appointed by a university senate committee. The students are elected by popular vote. They are, usually, politicians, but they have found it rather hard to function the past two years, because the faculty usually sticks together."

"This publications board, made up of eight members, interview candidates for all publications offices; and then meet and elect. Students have nothing to say concerning the elections, unless it is through the four student members, who are elected by the students."

"There is usually one square student member, at least one, who is interested in selecting the best man, rather than the man for such and such a political machine or from such and such a fraternity...."

Henderson Explains Significance of Drama

response with Ellen Terry, the celebrated English actress, at this period is filled with satiric lamentations over the density of Maude's company.

Ellen Terry begged him to continue because of the importance of effecting a lasting connection with some established West End manager, but finally Shaw abandoned the production in despair. This severing of connections was crucial in his career since for the following fifteen years he made no further attempt to establish contact with the conservative clique dominant in London theatrical circles. He struck his own path, creating an individual technique which is today associated with his name, the technique of the debated drama.

The failure of You Never Can Tell may almost be said to have produced—in his reactions therefrom—the dramatist Shaw as we know him today.

It was a capital blunder on Maude's part to lose Shaw and his play, for the Irish innovator has proven to be the greatest dramatist of his age, and the play one of the greatest money-makers of his career. After it began to be produced on the regular stage—up until then it had been produced by the little theatre, not unlike those of the Provincetown theatre in America—it ran almost continuously for five years, throughout London and Great Britain.

The most famous players who have acted in You Never Can Tell are Hartley Granville-Barker and Lillian McCarthy in England, and the late Arnold Daly in America.

You Never Can Tell has a certain importance in the history of modern social development, because in it Shaw, for the first time, introduced, not as the heroine, but as the dominant female character, the modern woman, as a representative of the Woman's Rights Movement. It is of further historic value, for in the most vivacious character in the play, Dolly Clandon, Shaw anticipated by some twenty years the type of female figure of the post-war era, the flapper.

TIBBETT WILL OFFER CONCERT IN RALEIGH

Lawrence Tibbett, concert, opera, radio, and movie star, will appear in recital at Memorial auditorium, Raleigh, Wednesday evening, February 15.

Although better known to the American public by his appearances in feature roles of moving pictures and by his radio programs, Tibbett began his career in a more serious type of presentation and is foremost as an opera singer and a concert artist. He is by birth an American and his education, secured for the most part by his own effort, has been confined to the schools and teachers of this country.

Tibeau and Johnston led the winners throughout the game with eight and six points respectively. Jackson's ten points were the best individual contribution to the Delta Tau Delta total.

Sigma Phi Epsilon dropped its sixth contest in a row to Phi Kappa Sigma, 18-13. Reid, with fifteen markers, was high scorer for the winners, while Fowler and Frazier scored eight and four respectively for Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Old West Loses

Aycock downed Old West, 38-36, despite a brilliant second half rally on the part of the Old West team. Crouch led this uprising in the latter part of the game, scoring fourteen points after the Aycock team had held an overwhelming margin at the half-time whistle. McNair added seventeen more to the total for Old West, but the winners had a little too much power in reserve and got the decision. Efland scored ten and O'Kelly eight for the winning team.

Sigma Chi got its first win of the season at the expense of Zeta Beta Tau, 27-9. Phelps led Sigma Chi with eight points, while Straus got four for the losers in their fifth consecutive defeat.

Today's Games

3:45—(1) Beta Theta Pi vs. Alpha Tau Omega; (2) New Dorms vs. Independents; (3) Lewis vs. Manly.

4:45—(1) Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Alpha Epsilon; (2) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Phi Delta Theta; (3) Phi Delta Chi vs. Sigma Nu.

French Picture To Be Shown Sunday Night

With the showing of Jean de la Lune at the Carolina theatre Sunday night, February 5, the series of foreign talking pictures sponsored by the departments of Romance and Germanic languages will be resumed. This picture, which is based on the stage play by Jean Choux, will be the first foreign picture shown this quarter. Admission is the same as for regular performances.

Made in Epinal, near Paris, Jean de la Lune, or Moon-dreaming John, is characteristically French. The plot is light and whimsical, the dialogue excellent, and the acting polished. Madeleine Renaud, a member of the famous Comedie Francaise, has the feminine lead, and she is ably supported by Rene LeFebvre, who was seen in Le Million, Constant Remy, and Michel Simon.

'TOPICS' CONTAINS
GRAHAM'S SPEECHSecond Releases of News Sheet Sent Out Yesterday to Parents of Students Here.

The second issue for the academic year of the Tar Heel Topics, news sheet issued eight times a year from the office of F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, was released yesterday. It will be sent to parents of University students residing in the state and prospective students and their parents.

Several prominent articles appear in the latest publication. The speech before the annual general assembly of University alumni by President Frank P. Graham was quoted in full. The views of Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, regarding the University's plight if appropriations are reduced, are also given; as are those of Owen D. Young, one of America's foremost industrialists and financiers.

Chart Shows Reduction

A comprehensive chart showing the dwindling resources provided the University through state aid appears on the front page, and gives a comparative graph of the relationship between the reduction of state appropriations and the increase in student enrollment.

Other features, including stories on the law and medical schools, comprise the remainder of the bulletin.

SECOND ISSUE OF

By Claiborn Carr Came Off
Press Yesterday.

The February edition of the Student Journal of the North Carolina Federation of Students, was published here yesterday. The magazine, a monthly, is the official organ of the state organization of colleges and universities. Claiborn Carr is editor of the new publication, which is now in its second edition. The magazine was mailed to all North Carolina colleges and universities and to principal schools of America.

The magazine for this month contains articles of national scope. John Lang, former University student who is now president of the National Student Federation of America, has contributed the leading article. An article dealing with the student auditing system here explains the functions of the organization for the benefit of other North Carolina schools. Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial, has contributed a lengthy article discussing student unions in America.

The staff of editors assisting Carr in the publication of the Journal are Vermont Royster, Carl Thompson and Donoh Hanks.

INTER-DORMITORY COUNCIL PLANS TO IMPROVE SMOKERSBroadcasting Stations Abolished,
And Movement Afoot to Stop
Playing on Quadrangles.

Suggestions for more entertaining programs at the dormitory smokers were received by the inter-dormitory council at its regular meeting Wednesday night. Presidents of dormitories which have already held smokers spoke on the subject.

The council voted to abolish the amateur broadcasting stations which have been operating in several of the dormitories on the campus. The council stated that the action came as a result of complaints filed by radio owners in the dormitories.

The president of the council was authorized to draw up a plan that will prohibit students from walking or playing on the grass. The plan will shortly be submitted for approval to the student body, the dean of students, the buildings department and the ground's committee.

The organ recital will be preceded by the usual Sunday carillon concert by Lawrence Anger, Duke organist, at 3:45 o'clock.

Dorm Room Becomes Chamber Of Horrors For Unsuspecting FelineAmateur Zoologists Demonstrate Theoretical Knowledge by Dividing Kitty Into Several Parts and Frightening Janitor With Skeleton of Victim.

Heeding the advice of that great Elizabethan, Sir Francis Bacon, that before coming to a conclusion all reasoning should be based on actual experiment, three dormitory dwellers, students of zoology, sought to extend their theoretical knowledge into the uncharted field of the practical last Friday evening, by performing an autopsy on a hitherto live and mewling felis domestica. The success of the venture, aver the scalpel-wielders, was not only perfect but somewhat too much so.

The future disciples of Galen inveigled an unsuspecting householder to loan them his tabby for the ostensible purpose of ridding their room of mice. Cramming the unprotesting cat into a burlap bag, the group smuggled the contraband—the building regulations say that no animals are allowed in the dormitory rooms—up to the chamber of horrors.

Disposition of Feline

The first dilemma that presented itself was the despatching of the animal. But an overdose of ether, humanely applied, took care of that exigency. Now for the first time haunting fears gripped the class in anatomy. Suppose they couldn't carry out their intentions? Suppose they couldn't dispose of the incriminating evidence? After all, they felt, it wasn't exactly the place to insinuate a dissecting room in a sleeping chamber that had never seen anything more bloody than a bull session.

But sleeves were rolled up, excess clothing was discarded, and the Vesalians got to work. Scalpels of all shapes and stages of effectiveness flashed under the glare of the electric light.

Ground-Hog Does His Bit Toward Loading People With More Ills

Yesterday, (dedicated to mid-term reports, Ann Harding, the L.I.D. program and Bernard Shaw), brought with it one other item of importance. Although completely forgotten by the bulk of the student body, it was the date on which that pesky little animal, the ground-hog, had his opportunity to presage evil and more of it for a helpless humanity.

Old-timers on the campus viewed the early morning rain with distinct pleasure. The ninety-three fog cheered them even more. But the bursting sunshine of noon shattered them beyond repair.

Ground-Hog Sees Shadow
The met furtively in little groups and wailed their lamentations. There could be no further doubt about the matter. The ground-hog had crept out of his hole, blinked his eyes surprisedly, and had registered joy in the manner peculiar to ground-hogs.

Groves' Book Printed

Chicago Press Releases Text Book for Next Year's Sociology Course.

A book, Marriage, by Dr. Earnest R. Groves, professor of sociology in the University, has just been released by the Chicago Press. This book was taken from the senior course in sociology and will be used next year in this course.

ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY UNIVERSITY
STUDENT'S WORK"Danse Moronique," by Hazel-man, Will Be Presented by All-Southern Orchestra.

Danse Moronique, a musical composition by Herbert R. Hazelman, undergraduate music student, will be played by the all-Southern high school orchestra when it meets in Atlanta during March. Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, professor of music at the University of Michigan and director of the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan, recently notified Hazelman that his composition had been chosen to be included on the Atlanta program.

The all-Southern high school orchestra meets once every two years in a prominent southern city and is made up of the leading high school musicians of the south. This organization is under the direction of Dr. Maddy, whose plan for the promotion of public school music has resulted in an annual summer camp of music study for young musicians and public school supervisors. The southern organization is the outgrowth of this national movement begun by Dr. Maddy for the purpose of training young musicians of the country.

Knows Hazelman's Work

Dr. Maddy is familiar with Hazelman's work through a program given at the meeting of the all-Southern orchestra in Memphis in 1931 by a woodwind quartet of which Hazelman was a member. There his Sherzo, a short piece for small ensemble, and his Suite Americana were given public hearings. Dr. Maddy requested Hazelman to send copies of these works to the National Music Camp where they were again played.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, will be in charge of the sessions at the all-Southern meet, and a group of associate faculty members and students will go to Atlanta to hear the performance of Hazelman's composition.

Linker Will Speak

Professor Robert W. Linker of the department of Romance languages will address a meeting of the Salisbury Woman's club in Salisbury, Saturday. The life and works of Maxim Gorky, eminent Russian novelist, will be treated by Professor Linker in his lecture.

Mid-Term Reports Today

Mid-term deficiencies will be posted on the bulletin boards in the registrar's office this morning.

FESTIVAL BEGINS WITH PRODUCTION OF SHAW DRAMAClimax of Festival Will Be Graham's Expression of University's Tribute.

The Shaw-Henderson festival, which the University community is celebrating this week, began last night when the Playmakers presented Shaw's You Never Can Tell. The play was attended by a fair-sized crowd and will continue tonight and tomorrow night.

The festival is chiefly in recognition of Dr. Henderson's latest volume, Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, which represents the culmination of the twenty-nine years of literary labor Dr. Henderson has put into works about the famous Irish playwright.

Program Climax Sunday

The climax of the festival will take place Sunday night at the Playmakers theatre. President Graham will express the tribute of the University, and Percy MacKaye, celebrated poet and dramatist, will speak on "The World of the Theatre and the Drama." The principal address will then be delivered by Dr. Henderson on "Shaw as a World Power."

A number of distinguished critics and writers have been invited to the festival by Professor Koch. Many who were unable to accept sent congratulations, some of which will be read.

Gray, Jr., Still Director.

At a board of directors meeting in the Raleigh office of the General Alumni Association Tuesday, George Watts Hill of Durham was re-elected general treasurer and Bowman Gray, Jr., was re-elected director for a three year term. The current business of the association was disposed of and the University's present situation in regard to the legislature was discussed.

In the absence of Judge John J. Parker, president of the organization, Dr. H. B. Haywood, first vice-president, presided over the meeting. Other directors present were Ray Armstrong, second vice-president, K. P. Lewis, Luther T. Hartsell, Jr., Thomas Turner, Jr., E. E. Rives, T. A. DeVane, T. J. Pearsall, and J. Maryon Saunders, general secretary.

State College Professor Will Speak Here Sunday

Professor T. S. Johnson of State College will speak at the local Baptist church Sunday. Professor Johnson, who began his duties as professor of industries on January 1, has long been identified with the civic and religious life of Raleigh, where he has taught a men's class in the First Baptist church and served on the board of governors of the Rotary club.

For the past few weeks, since the resignation of Reverend Eugene Olive, former pastor of the Baptist church here, visiting speakers have been invited to conduct the services. This practice will be continued until a regular pastor is chosen for the church.

Division by Achievement

Criticism of the proposed change whereby the election of THE DAILY TAR HEEL editor rests only in the hands of the newspaper staff has been so superficial as to appear to be a mere conservative resistance to anything new. Clearly, when the leading college papers throughout the country have adopted the system of staff election of their editors, there must be reason behind it.

It would not be possible, even if it were desirable, to have the entire student body take part in editing THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Two rather fixed ideas seem to permeate the criticism directed at the new election proposal: first, that the student body has some sort of inalienable right to determine who shall be editor of the daily newspaper; second, that, if the election of the editor is taken out of the hands of an omniscient student body, then the TAR HEEL will be ipso facto run by an editor and staff responsible to no one. The first idea seems to be a survival of an outworn tradition and seems to support a doctrine of outside interference rather than of democratic participation. It is obvious that only those on the staff of the TAR HEEL would be competent to judge the ability and competence of a candidate for the editorship, while the question of whether or not a candidate is popular on the campus or not is quite irrelevant. There is no more reason why the editor of the TAR HEEL should be elected by popular vote than that the head of the debating society or captain of the basketball team should be selected according to the taste and disposition of the student body at large.

As for the allegation that an editor elected by the staff would not be responsible to the student body, the mistake seems clear. Critics who talk in this vein fail to see the purpose of the TAR HEEL. As the official newspaper of the University of North Carolina, the TAR HEEL has no interest other than serving the University which it has the honor to represent. It is published by University men for University men. The Carolina men who devote time and effort to the paper do so with the express purpose of putting out the best possible publication which they know how. Just as it would seem best to let the University debaters debate FOR the University and let the University basketball players represent the WHOLE University in the game of basketball, so it would seem best to let the editors of the TAR HEEL speak for the University in the field of journalism. Just as the debaters are presumably best qualified to debate and the basketball players the most expert in the University, so should those on the TAR HEEL have the most experience in editorship. By division of labor and not by diffusion will we achieve the most perfect whole.—B.B.P.

Our Little Nell

The General Assembly of North Carolina cannot fail to see the justice of the University's appeal for a living-wage appropriation. As it has been so eloquently stated by President Graham, the case for the University is this: If the University is to maintain its high standards of research and instruction, it must keep its able faculty. Unless reasonable salaries are provided for the faculty members they can not be expected to remain in North Carolina. It has taken more than a generation to build up this faculty. If it is lost, it will take more than a generation to rebuild it.

At best, the University's salary scale has been lower than that of any university in its class. In spite of that handicap, the University of North Carolina has become the center of intellectual advancement of the state and of the south and has gained a world-wide reputation for scholastic integrity. But if the legislature persists in crippling the University, it cannot retain its present eminent position.

While other state agencies have been cut fourteen per cent since 1929, the University Chapel Hill division would have its appropriation cut fifty-five per cent for the same period if the recent recommendations of the budget bureau are adopted. Reductions in state expenditures are imperative, in consideration of existing economic conditions, but it appears that the University has been the object of inequitable discrimination.

If the members of the legislature have not been completely unconscious during the past week, they must have come to realize that the University's loss will be irreparable unless they vote an adequate appropriation. Most of them are men of enough wisdom to realize the importance to the future of the state of proper educational facilities. Their next problem is where to get the money. However hardboiled the representative from McWakesylvania may be, he cannot resist the earnestness of Frank Graham, the rationality of Kemp Battle and Uncle Joe Daniels and the militance of Sister McKee. No, sir, the children of North Carolina shall come first. But with what will the bill be paid?

As every fair critic should do, the defenders of education and the critics of the legislature have offered a way out. Kemp Battle received a mighty ovation when he suggested that the people of North Carolina will make sacrifices to give their children good schools. As a practical suggestion, he hinted that the people would willingly assume the burden of a sales tax, in preference to ruining the schools. Josephus Daniels rode his editorial hobby-horse of the last legislature into the appropriations committee chamber and demanded that the money be dug up from places where the people of North Carolina know that it is. And former-lady-Senator McKee told the assembled citizens in the Raleigh Auditorium that "if we had done our duty at the last legislature, we wouldn't be in this fix." Another suggestion, also from Mr. Battle, was that appropriations for the state's charitable institutions be cut, instead of increased, according to the recommendation of the budget bureau.

With these suggestions, none of them new, what will the legislature do? Those interests which, according to Mr. Daniels, have the money also maintain a stable of lobbyists who can be depended upon to forestall any attempt of the state to muscle in on the Big Money. Unless the legislature gets desperate for funds, more than will be needed to properly finance the schools, it will not risk the displeasure of the powerful Merchants Association by passing a sales tax. If the legislature is obliged, in spite of the lobbying interests, to seek out and uncover the pots of gold at the ends of the state's few remaining rainbows, the University will certainly get its share of the loot.

Otherwise, all that the University can hope to get must be at the expense of other state institutions, as Mr. Battle suggested. As things look now, that policy would give the least pain to all parties concerned: the Big Boys, the bankrupt merchants, the people, and the bewildered legislature, to everybody in fact except those Peters who are robbed to pay Pauls.

Our legislators doubtless see the reason in the University's plea, but they dare not displease the holders of the mortgage on the Capitol: the people and certain financially considerable portions thereof. They are going to look out for our Little Nell, the University, but it will more than likely be at the expense of other hungry mouths in the state family.—E.C.D.

No Dead Art

Is the art of oratory rapidly joining the ranks of the vanishing buffalo, the American Indian, or the shaving mug?

Those several hundred spectators and legislators who crowded the hall of the House in Raleigh Wednesday to hear the case of higher education pled before the joint committee on appropriations may tell you otherwise. Many old time "speechifiers" confess that the verbal pyrotechnics of our Dr. Graham, Kemp Battle, Josephus Daniels and Judge Parker were of such brilliancy that they clearly outshone anything heard in those venerated halls within modern recollection.

But let Tom Bost, North Carolina's star reporter, whose prolific journalism has spread afar, describe it to us: "The oldest reporters could not remember an afternoon of such rare presentation. . . . The committee listened like country negroes—fascinated, enthralled. It was an afternoon of such surpassing eloquence that members tortured by daily harangues fell into a pious silence and leaned over. . . ."

When Dr. Graham spoke, had anyone in the assemblage dropped a pin (and it was rumored that some of the belying variety were stowed away for such a purpose) it might have sounded like a bucket of rivets. The audience was bewitched. The committee was in a hypnotic spell. And legislative committees are rarely spell-bound. Those in the gallery who have followed Dr. Graham's extensive oratorical career agreed that his Wednesday address is the high-point of his career. Collected, composed, he strode about the committee chamber, driving his points home with emphatic gestures and precise intonations. And the same can be said for the revered Raleigh editor, Judge Parker, and Mr. Battle.

Oratory, at least in high places, is not a dead art. It needs only the embellishment of sincerity and conviction.—D.C.S.

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

THE DEVIL'S TEST

A man stood at the gates leading to Hades and knocked for admittance. At last the devil answered his knock.

"What do you want?" asked his majesty.

"I want to enter."

"What qualifications have you?"

The man was surprised. "Does one have to possess certain qualifications to enter? I thought anyone could walk right in."

"Oh, dear me, no!" said Satan. "Everyone who wants to come in has to measure up to certain standards. If we let everyone in who wanted to get in, the place would soon be so overcrowded that none of us old-timers would have any fun."

The stranger was bewildered. "Why do so many people want to enter? On earth, they always told me that this was a dreadful place."

Satan winked. "That depends on what you think 'dreadful.' You have, no doubt, heard on earth of 'sinful pleasures' and 'hellish amusements.' They are called that because they all originate here. To people who regard these things as dreadful, this is a dreadful place. It's all in the point of view."

"We have so many applications from the other place that we have to be careful how many we admit. The moving-pictures, radios, dancing halls, pool rooms, high-powered automobiles, card games, dirty jokes, risqué books, liquor, and pretty-girls-who-don't-mind-petting are all down here, and some of those fellows in heaven miss them."

"Being in heaven, you know, is mostly like living in a church. All you do is sit around and be good. You spend so confounded much time in just being good that there's no kick in being dead at all."

The stranger interrupted. "Quick! Give me the test."

Satan smiled. "The test is very simple: You have only to name one thing you did that is sufficiently diabolical to make you a true brother of mine."

The man told of the time he strangled his cat, of the time he almost killed his brother with a club, of the time he stole from the collection plate.

To all of these the devil shook his head good-naturedly. "I'm afraid none of these will do. It's the little irritating things that count—the things that torment other people and make them want to kill. Have you ever done anything like that?"

The man considered carefully. He had lots of annoying little habits and it was a job to think of the worst. At last he looked at Satan with a smile. There was a note of pride in his voice as he told of his very worst trait!

"There was one thing that I did quite often: Every time there was a good movie in town, I'd go to it. I'd take some chewing gum and some peanuts. When the picture reached a dramatic point, I'd pop the gum and I'd crack the peanuts."

"Brother!" Satan interrupted. "Come right in. Hell is yours to command!"

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

This Buccaneer

Proposal
To the Editor
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

The attack recently published in "Speaking the Campus Mind" seems to me to be unfair from beginning to end.

The writer begins by stating that the plan is in keeping with the schemings of political bosses. Is it not decidedly peculiar that the only concentrated opposition to this plan has come from other political bosses?

The writer does not propose to pay his money for a right that he is not allowed to exercise. The largest portion of his fee for student activities goes to the athletic fund. There are three students on the athletic council, all elected. They have the three votes out of nine on that council, and they control the money which is paid by the students as the athletic fee.

On the publications union board there are three men elected by the student body who have three votes out of five. They control the money which is used for the DAILY TAR HEEL and other campus publications. The writer of the attack states that those in control of the DAILY TAR HEEL would be responsible only to the publications union board, which they would, in large measure, control. Quite the reverse are the facts in the case. The publications board, having complete control of the purse strings of all publications is in the position to dictate a policy, which they, as elected by the student body, believe the most beneficial to the student body at large.

Why, asks the writer of the letter, need we follow the example set by most of the other college dailies in the country? The explanation is simple. They have in most cases, as a recent article in the DAILY TAR HEEL makes clear, tried our outmoded system and found it unsatisfactory. Would it not be wise to profit by the experience of others before it becomes necessary to learn from our own?

If, in just one case, the student body as a whole, were to vote according to the dictates of intelligence and not as their bosses instructed them to, to whom would they turn for the information about the merits of the various men on the DAILY TAR HEEL? There is only one answer—to the men best qualified to know, the men on the DAILY TAR HEEL staff.

Why not put the whole matter in the hands of those best able to judge from the first?

As a member of the staff of the DAILY TAR HEEL, and as a student in the University who wants the best possible paper under the best possible editor, I raise another emphatic protest—against the selection of next year's editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL in the back room of a fraternity house in October!

What Price Entertainment?

To the Editor
DAILY TAR HEEL:

So much is spoken about the current depression, and so little is done about it, that I have thought of a plan whereby it may be alleviated somewhat. This plan has to do with the existing forms of "entertainment" now on the campus. One is the Buccaneer, the other is the Student Entertainment program.

Concerning the first, it would be well for the students to realize that the Buccaneer costs them $2.00 a year payable in advance by installments. This is 25¢ per copy, which is much higher than the newsstand price of comic magazines far superior to our own. I know of several schools that publish humor magazines, but they leave it for the student to decide whether he wants it or not. In regards to the Student Entertainment business, I wish to quote Dean Carroll speaking to a group of freshmen on the question of whether the commerce school should enter the other select groups. He first told the freshmen that since they were the ones to "benefit" they should be the ones to decide. All this was well and good. But then he added, "if the commerce school joins with the other schools, the committee, due to an enlargement of funds, would be able to secure better productions." Many of the programs have been presented either during exam week or during the first week of the quarter which times are very inopportune. Finally, I haven't seen one production that has met with widespread approval.

Now here is the point I am driving at. Why should the masses be obliged to pay for the benefit of the few? There are a few individuals who want the Buccaneer because it satisfied their egotism to see their names in print under some half funny joke. And there are a few individuals who want the Entertainment productions because they are interested in fine arts. Five dollars a year is not an awful lot of money, but with it one can buy enough stamps to write one letter a day every day of the school year.

IF ON DESERT ISLAND STUDENTS WANT BIBLE

(By College News Service)
Stanford is not Godless, the Stanford Daily reported this week, after asking leading students the following question:

"What two books would you take with you if you were to spend the rest of your life on a desert island?"

Most of them replied that they would take the Bible. Shakespeare's works was second choice for many of those questioned.

Sixteen Virginia Boxers Leave Today For Meet With Carolina

Cavalier Varsity and Yearlings Engage Tar Heels in Tin Can Here Tomorrow Night.

CLOSE SEASON ON HILL

Carolina to Wind Up Schedule At Home; Quarles-Goldstein Bout to Feature Evening.

University, Va., Feb. 2.—Sixteen Virginia boxers will leave tomorrow afternoon to meet North Carolina's varsity and freshman teams in a double-header match.

This will be the last of four Southern conference encounters scheduled by the Cavalier varsity. Duke, V. M. I., and V. P. I. have been defeated. The Virginians recognize the Tar Heels as the stiffest opposition in the path toward retaining the conference ring championship. Virginia has two matches after boxing Carolina.

Against Carolina the Virginia varsity line-up will be about the same as it was against Tech, except that Captain Bobby Goldstein and Lewis Reiss will be back at their regular posts.

Tar Heels to Take Last Work for Cavaliers Today

The Tar Heel boxers, varsity and freshman, swing today into the last day of training for the match with Virginia's unbeaten and untied Cavaliers here tomorrow night. All the boys, with the exception of Lee Berke, who is out with an injured leg, are ready to go.

The bouts will be marked by several outstanding incidents, in addition to the actual importance of the meet itself, which is

CAVALIER TEAMS HOLD RECORD IN JANUARY SPORTS

Virginia Boxers Remain Unbeaten While Other Cavalier Teams Lose Few Games.

Virginia's varsity and first year teams made a record during January that they'll have difficulty living up to through the remainder of 1933. There were twenty-one victories and only three defeats out of twenty-four contests during the month.

Cavalier varsity teams had sixteen indoor engagements, won fourteen and lost two. First year teams competed eight times and scored seven victories.

Cavalier Boxers Unbeaten
Virginia's boxers have won all their meets. The varsity ringmen have defeated Duke, V. M. I. and V. P. I. while the freshmen have won from Augusta Military Academy and the "rat" teams of the Cadets and of Tech.

Including three preliminary contests against non-collegiate rivals the varsity basketball five has won nine games out of ten played. Victories have been scored over Maryland, V. P. I., Washington and Lee, William and Mary, Randolph-Macon and Galludet. The one defeat came at the hands of V. M. I., by one point, and in an extra period contest.

Virginia's first year basketballers have won all their games so far. They have played Woodberry Forest School, Augusta Military Academy, Fork Union Military Academy and the V. M. I. frosh.

The Cavalier varsity swimmers have scored victories over George Washington University and the Richmond Y. M. C. A. They have lost one meet to the University of Delaware. The only meet of the first year swimmers was lost to Augusta Military Academy.

YEARLING CAGERS LEAVE ON ANNUAL TRIP TO VIRGINIA

Three Games Scheduled for Frosh Quint; Dameron Takes Eleven Men Along.

Carolina's freshman basketball team left yesterday morning on the annual trip into Virginia. The schedule cards games for yesterday, today, and tomorrow in the afternoons. The Tar Babies return to the University tomorrow night or Sunday morning.

Eleven freshmen made the trip along with Coach Sandy Dameron and Manager Joe Patterson. The players going along were: Bill Moore, Melvin Nelson, Ernest McKeithan, Gayle Rogers, and Strowd Tilley, forwards; Bill Rankin and Ben Willis, centers; and Jim McCachren, Ray Glasgow, Bob Guarino, and Frank Orr, guards.

To Bear Brunt of Work

Nelson and Moore, forwards, Rankin, center, and McCachren and Glasgow, guards, will carry the main attack in the three games while Tilley, forward, will also see action. The rest of the players will be used as much as possible in order to keep the first string in good condition for the extra hard grind of three games on successive days.

Yesterday afternoon in the opener of their trip the Tar Babies took on the undefeated Virginia first year quint team at Charlottesville. This afternoon the freshmen move on to

WRESTLERS WILL MEET GENERALS TOMORROW NIGHT

Hussey and Conklin Sufficiently Recovered From Ailments To Place in Line-up.

Carolina's varsity and freshman wrestlers will leave Emerson field this morning at 9:00 o'clock to invade Virginia where they will meet the Washington and Lee University mat men in Lexington Saturday night.

The Tar Heels were put through a hard work-out yesterday afternoon as Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan put the finishing touches on his charges prior to their leaving here. The invaders will take a short work-out this afternoon in Doremus gymnasium in Lexington as the final bit of work before they meet the strong General aggregation.

Hussey Back in Line-up

Save for several minor injuries, the Carolina line-up is intact. Thad Hussey, who has been troubled with boils since the State meet, will be back in the line-up. He did not fight against the V. M. I. cadets last week. Kellenberger took his place. Both men will make the trip, but Hussey should get the starting call.

Don Conklin, veteran in the 155-pound class, reported for practice for the first time yesterday afternoon. Conklin has been bothered all week with appendicitis. He may wrestle tomorrow night in spite of his

S. A. E. DEFEATS KAPPA SIGMA IN UPHILL STRUGGLE

Beta Theta Pi Loses First Contest of Intramural Season By 21 to 20 Score.

Two leaders in the fraternity loop played in yesterday's intramural basketball games, with S. A. E. coming out on top in an overtime struggle against Kappa Sigma while Beta Theta Pi dropped its first game of the season to Alpha Tau Omega.

S. A. E. gained its decision only after an uphill struggle. Kappa Sigma led at the end of the half, 9-8, and at the end of the third quarter, 14-12. S. A. E. closed the gap, however, in the last period, and the regular time elapsed with the score standing

You know how it is when a fellow is accustomed to smoking a good cigarette and he gets hold of one that isn't right. He's likely to get in a bad humor.

I am a great believer in the old saying that "quality will tell," and I have noticed that the things which come to stay are good things.

You can buy a package of good cigarettes for 15c. Six cents of this goes to the Government. So that outside of the 6c paid to the Government, you get a little over two cigarettes for one cent.

CHI OMEGA-PI PHI TEAMS PREPARED FOR BIG CONTEST

Captain Florence Yancey, Pi Phi center, will likely have the following at hand when the clash opens: Julia Bates Brown and Betsy Harding, forwards, and Grace Bowes, Jayne Smoot, and Peggy Rawlings, guards.

In case of casualties or in the event that cigarettes begin to tell on the first teams, both lodges have able substitutes ready to rush out to aid. The Pi Phis will have at hand Louise Pritchard, Betty Barnett, and Charlotte Winborne.

The Chi Omegas have a complete team of substitutes: Betty Bolton, center; Emma Ray and Evelyn Kneeburg, forwards; and Lore Royal, Mary Waldo, and Dot Norman, guards.

The outfits are being tutored by Julia Bates Brown, Pi Phi, and Anna Spiers, Chi Omega.

Powell Featured In Picture Here Today

William Powell and Joan Blondell are teamed together in pictures for the first time in "Lawyer Man," a Warner Brothers production showing at the Carolina theatre today.

Powell is of the ultra-correct and dignified type of player, while Miss Blondell is wise-cracking and slangy. As feminine lead, she has a characteristic role in the picture, being a typical East Side New York girl who has worked her way up to the point of a secretary to a leading attorney, but who never forgets her early training.

Powell's characterization is quite different to what he usually plays. He is an East Side lawyer whose brilliance brings him to the forefront of his profession. Powell and Miss Blondell have, a supporting cast which includes Helen Vinson, Alan Dinehart, Allen Jenkins, David Landau, Claire Dodd and Shelia Terry.

The picture is a revelation of metropolitan political intrigues, based on the novel by Max Trell, and adapted for the screen by Rian James and James Seymour. William Dieterle directed.

at 19-all. In the overtime period S. A. E. ran wild, with Morgan piling up five points, Joiner two, and Connor one, while the opposition went scoreless. Connor had seven points to his credit for the complete game, while Joiner, Morgan, and Shuford, another S. A. E., had six each. White had seven and Finch six for the losers.

Betas Succumb
Alpha Tau Omega crushed Beta's titular aspirations by an uphill win over the hitherto unbeaten five, 21-20. Beta led 11-6 at the half, but Alan Smith got his eye on the basket and the margin was soon wiped out. The second half turned into a nip and tuck affair, with the Betas missing countless baskets near the close. Smith had six points, while Pollard, Robertson, and Menge got four each for the winners. Tenille and Trainer scored six each to lead the Betas on the attack.

Phi Delta Theta crushed Sigma Phi Sigma, 41-16, with Tucker, Moffitt, and Mosier getting fourteen, twelve, and ten points respectively for the victors. Froneberger's five points were the best individual total for Sigma Phi Sigma.

Manly downed Lewis, 26-23, in a closely contested game. Wright scored ten points to lead the winners, but Ginsberg's twelve points for Lewis were the largest individual total of the game.

Phi Delta Chi beat Sigma Nu again, this time on a forfeit, 2-0. The pharmacists had downed the Sigma Nu team earlier in the season, but the result was protested by the losers. New Dorms also lost on a forfeit to Independents.

Ground-Hog Does His Bit Toward Leading People With More Ills be conducted to determine student sentiment on the subject.

Shadow Theory Blasted
The local pessimists admit that the ground-hog went back into his den, but they insist that what caused his retreat was not the time-honored reason, the sight of his own shadow. Rather, they maintain, that in these joyous days the ground-hog never even thought about his shadow. When he peered forth for his annual scrutiny of this world of ours all that he could see was depression, Technocracy, Clara Bow, David Clark, depression, eight-thirty classes, mid-term reports, depression, Samuel Insull, spinach, Pop-eye, and depression.

Cartoonists in yesterday's papers suggested that the ground-hog stood aside at the entrance of his hole and waited for the poor mortals to come out.

Dorm Room Becomes Chamber Of Horrors

Where scalpels and surgeon's shears were not enough, razor blades came to the rescue. The heart of a Pare or a Morgagni would have been delighted by the interest shown over the task. Here a Boerhaave took time out to lecture to unhearing ears about the work in hand. There a Harvey explained the character of the arteries and veins.

Attracts Audience
Soon the fact that something of interest was going on made itself felt—strongly felt—to the other dwellers. That sickish, sweet smell was unmistakable. Surprised and incredulous eyes beheld the lurid sight. But there were very few who desired to see the operations at close hand, and even these retreated precipitately. Finally after six hours of intensive labor, everything was finished and the odor of formaldehyde pervaded the "morgue;" someone desired to mount the skeleton.

When the janitor, on his morning round of cleaning, entered the suspiciously odoriferous room, a close observer might have noted a sudden paling of his visage. There on the wall hung the pelt of what must have been a cat, and there on the table, rising above a pan of formaldehyde, was the obvious framework of that cat. The janitor could only imagine what was in the paper bag on the window sill, but it was more than his imagination that carried him out of the room at breakneck speed.

If the Tar Heels can trip all three of their conference foes on this jaunt, and if Duke comes through its trip into Virginia unscathed, the game here next Saturday night will be for the conference leadership. So far both teams have been hit fatally once.

The Carolina-Navy tilt tomorrow night will be an interesting one. The Middies have been defeated only once, and that was by the fast Pennsylvania club. They hold impressive victories over Duke and Maryland, having doubled the score on both. The court at Annapolis will cause the Phantoms some worry. The floor is made of concrete with about an inch layer of insulate on the top. The Duke Blue Devils who met the Middies there, say that it was difficult to get accustomed to playing on the queer surface.

Coach Shepard took his first team of Captain Hines and Weather, forwards; Brandt, center; with McCachren and Aitken, guards, and five other men. Others on the trip are Glace and Beale, centers; Henry and Chandler, guards; and Morrie Long, forward. Glace showed to such advantage just before the trip that Coach Shepard took him along for experience. Beale can be used at either center or guard, and Chandler can be run in at either forward or guard, as the case may be.

The Phantoms return Wednesday morning and begin preparations for the second Duke game which they are determined to take.

BENEFIT MOVIE BILLED FOR THEATRE TOMORROW

"The Miracle Man" is returning for a second engagement at the Carolina theatre, Saturday morning at a special 10:00 o'clock matinee program. Instead of the regular admission price, theatre-goers are asked to bring foodstuffs, which will be distributed among the poor.

Sixteen Virginia Men Leave For Carolina

the biggest home boxing event of the season. It will be the last time that Marty Levinson will ever be seen in action in Chapel Hill, for the Tar Heel captain is now a senior. Marty still has fights to engage in against Penn State, Duke and in the conference tournament, but these will all be away from Chapel Hill.

Goldstein to Fight
Then Bobby Goldstein will be seen in action here for the first and last time, Goldstein also being a senior with three years of college boxing behind him.

The Virginia team will come here fresh from a 6-2 victory over V. P. I., which they took without the services of Goldstein and Lewis Reiss. Carolina took the Gobblers over the hurdles by the same score with Nat Lumpkin missing from the lineup.

Cavaliers Get Three Kayos
Virginia's victory came with the help of three knockouts, Hahn batamweight, Fishburne, welterweight, and Stuart, 155-pounder, scoring them in two rounds apiece.

In addition to the much discussed impending bout between Norm Quarles and Goldstein, there are several others that are arousing the interest of the fans. Lumpkin, back at the welterweight guns, unless Coach Rowe shifts his line-up, will give Tom Fishburne a busy six minutes, while the embroglio between Marty Levinson and Gordon Rainey should be another hummer. Rainey had Fred Lloyd worried about the decision for two and a half rounds, when Lloyd suddenly uncorked one from down around his ankles and flattened the Virginian.

Brown to Meet Reiss
Peyton Brown will tangle with Lewis Reiss in the light-heavyweight scrap and, as Brown is after sweet revenge for the shellacking Reiss gave him last year, the affair ought to have sparks flying. Brown is in first class condition and he has looked forward to this fight all season.

With three straight victories behind them, Archie Allen's Tar Babies will face the Virginia frosh determined to blast their way through to an undefeated season. With the punch that the freshmen showed last Saturday night, chances are good that they will do it.

Coach Allen's change in lineup for the V. M. I. meet was two-thirds successful, as two of the new comers won and the third one lost. All the boys looked good, including Bill Owllick who, although he lost in his first start, made his opponent go an extra round to get the decision.

Johnny Edwards, fighting his first fight, went into the third round trailing his opponent on points. Edwards suddenly cut loose with a terrific sock to win the fight by a knockout. Morty Ellisberg was also impressive with a three-round kayo.

Francis Glenn fought for the first time, and the rangy lightweight, although tiring badly in the third, had enough points to win. He is a fine prospect, having a long left that is going to be hard for the other boy to evade.

physician's orders to the contrary.

Marshall Thompson, promising 175-pounder, hurt an injured knee in Wednesday's work-out with Captain Percy Idol, but was back out for his daily work-out today. Dr. Foy Roberson, school physician, has drained the leg several times and will have to perform another operation unless Thompson's knee improves. Thompson was one of the most promising reserves among the heavies and was carded to see lots of action this year.

Generals Are Strong
Washington and Lee's varsity team is one of the strongest that the Generals have had in years, and they have had some fine teams. They have been undefeated in Dixie for the past three years and have boasted of a record far surpassing that of their neighbor, V. M. I. Quinlan expressed the opinion that the Carolina varsity would be indeed lucky to count five points.

The following men will go to Lexington: varsity, 115, Hussey and Kellenberger; 125, Mathewson; 135, Davis; 145, Hiller; 155, Conklin; 165, Pickett and Spell; 175, Auman; and the unlimited, Captain Idol; freshman, 115, Blalock; 125, Snowden; 135, Holman; 145, Miller; 155, Sumner and Holland; 165, Captain Shipman; 175, Ranson; unlimited, Connell.

Regulation and Control.

J. P. Lucas, presenting the power company's view of the power situation, and Dr. Ernest Gruening, presenting the idea of government ownership of utilities, lectured Thursday night on "Power." Lucas presented the speech prepared by W. S. Lee for this lecture because of the inability of Lee to be in Chapel Hill. Mr. Lee through the medium of Mr. Lucas, stated that the municipal government of New York was unable to give power to the citizens of the city of New York as cheaply as the power companies were able to do it and that the interests of the power companies and their customers are identical, i. e., the power companies must deliver power to the customers as cheaply as possible so that there may be a maximum consumption. Dr. Gruening said that the interests of the power companies and their customers are far from identical and that the power companies have given more thought to propaganda than they have to the manufacture of power.

Forum on "Agriculture."

The moot question of "Agriculture" will bring to the fifth Open Forum Discussion series Thursday night two of the most distinguished authorities in the agricultural field, Dr. Gordon H. Ward, associate professor of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer.

Both men are well known for their work in this field. Ward, for the past ten years, has specialized in the study of the problems and advantages of cooperation among farmers, going directly to the various agricultural regions where such projects were in operation.

The discussion is scheduled for the same hour as the previous ones of the series. The names of the presiding officer and the conductor of the open forum will be announced at a later date.

FRESHMEN HEAR
DR. E. R. GRUENINGChanges in Economic Structure
Today Compared to Changes Of Roman Decadence.

The fundamental changes that were brought upon this country by the depression were stressed by Dr. Ernest R. Gruening, associate editor of the Nation and speaker at the open forum discussion series, in a talk to freshmen during assembly yesterday.

Dr. Gruening compared the depression with the fall of the Roman Empire as to the period of hard times which was followed by the Renaissance. The change that has come over this country is, according to Dr. Gruening, a change in fundamental ideology. Salvation in work was formerly our idea; now, that principle is impaired because there are many people who are well equipped to work are unable to work.

According to Dr. Gruening, new inventions have ruined various means of earning a living. The credit structure of the United States has fallen. Conditions as they were in this country never had appeared before, and probably will never appear again.

Dr. Gruening touched upon the declining subject of Technocracy.

Conduct Minneapolis Symphony
In All-German Program.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy, will appear at Aycock Auditorium of the Greensboro branch of the University Wednesday evening, February 8, at 8:30 o'clock. The concert is sponsored by the Greensboro Civic Music association.

The program will be composed entirely of German works and will include the overture to Oberon by the German operatic composer Weber; the seventh symphony of Beethoven, which has been recognized from the date of its composition as a masterpiece of this form of composition; Don Juan, a tone poem by Richard Strauss, a contemporary Austrian composer; the Dance of the Nymphs and Satyrs from Amor and Psyche by Shumann, and the overture to Tannhauser of Richard Wagner. These works are all of recognized classical standing among the program makers of the major symphony organizations and are regular features on the programs of the New York and Philadelphia orchestras.

Since the Greensboro concert is sponsored by a civic association there will be no box office sale of tickets at Aycock auditorium, but a limited number of guest tickets may be obtained through the office of the local department of music.

EDITOR CONTINUES
TO FIGHT CLIQUEGraves Runs Article by Findley Condemning Negligence of Smithsonian Institute.

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, is continuing his campaign against the Smithsonian Institute for refusing recognition to Orville Wright as inventor of the first heavier-than-air machine capable of sustained flight.

In this week's issue of the village paper Graves has reprinted an article by Captain Earl N. Findley, U. S. N., entitled Smithsonian ad Nauseam. Findley, editor of the United States Air Service, a military periodical, first published his story in that magazine.

Findley describes the unveiling of the monument to Wrights and their machine. He continues with telling of two other events which were contemporaneous: first, removal of the original machine to England; and second, refusal of the Smithsonian Institute to recognize the Wrights as the inventors of the airplane.

The navy editor filled the body of his story with the affirmation of the movement to bring the machine back to America and a plea for recognition of the Wrights by the National Museum.

NO ACTION TAKEN

versity Made in Report of Appropriations Committee.

While approving of an annual $2,000,000 slash in the educational appropriations for state schools as allotted by the advisory budget commission for the next biennium by the joint appropriations committee of the general assembly has taken no action in regard to the University or any other higher institution of learning, reports from Raleigh indicated yesterday.

It is probable that the committee is awaiting the reports of a sub-committee now at work investigating teachers' colleges with a view to co-ordinating their work and of a committee appointed by the governor to study the consolidation before making any recommendations toward the institutions of higher learning.

The cause of the University, asking for $300,000 more than the $391,000 recommendation of the budget commission, was ably pleaded by President Frank P. Graham, Josephus Daniels, and other backers of the University Wednesday. No indication of the time for a report of the committee regarding the University has been given.

To Gay Music" Scheduled to Be Conducted Monday.

Try-outs for the next Playmaker production, Sad Words To Gay Music, will take place Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock and Monday night at 7:00 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre. There are ten parts in the new play, six male and four female. Typo-script copies of the play may be obtained from the reserve shelf in the library. The production will be staged February 23, 24, and 25.

Sad Words To Gay Music is a modern English-American comedy written by Alvin Kerr, former Carolina student. Kerr was in the University in 1928. For several months he has played on the professional stage in New York, and had a leading role in Five Star Final. Sad Words To Gay Music was produced by a professional stock company last summer in several leading theatres in New York state.

ACTIVITIES GROUP
PLANS TO DISCUSS
STAFF ELECTIONSDate for Meeting of Discussion Group Set for February 7
In Graham Memorial.

With the Buccaneer proposal to turn the selection of editors of the different publications over to the staff instead of the present form of popular election listed as the chief topic for consideration, the Student Activities Committee will meet at a banquet in Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock p.m., February 7, according to plans announced yesterday by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body.

The meeting will take the form of a joint fall and winter quarter meeting. The gathering in the fall was postponed because of the nearness of the date set to examinations, and that meeting has been combined with the regular winter quarter meeting.

Staff Elections Proposed

The proposal to allow staffs of the different publications to elect their own editors instead of the present form of popular vote has provoked much discussion on the campus since it was sponsored by the Buccaneer two weeks ago. The DAILY TAR HEEL and Carolina Magazine staffs have also voted in favor of the plan.

If the Activities Committee favors the proposal, it will re-

Gruening States Public Opinion
Favors Government OwnershipRecent Insull Debacle Has Altered Thoughts of People So That They Now Realize Importance of Power Issue and Public Control of Utilities, Says Authority.

The cataclysmic crash of the vast power interests of Samuel Insull has definitely aided in directing public opinion against private ownership of public utilities. In the opinion of Dr. Ernest Gruening, associate editor of the Nation and an authority on the power question, expressed yesterday in an interview with a member of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff, the tens of thousands who were victimized by the selfish machinations of the Chicago power magnate have been convinced of the inadvisability of private ownership.

"Before the Insull debacle," declared Dr. Gruening, "the advocates of public ownership were voices crying in the wilderness. We were branded Bolsheviks and what-not. All that has changed now. The public realizes the importance of the power issue and has proven itself amenable to the attack on private control."

Private Owners on Defensive

The power companies are at present on the defensive, he believes. Public opinion has been crystallized against them by the suffering and resentment caused by the Insull failures in thirty-two states. While the demand is not everywhere for public ownership, the necessity for efficient governmental regulation is widely realized.

"This regulation," declared Dr. Gruening, "is doubtless coming under the Roosevelt administration. The president-elect has shown himself favorably disposed toward it and has given ear to the theories of Senator George Norris." Norris has for the last ten years been engaged in campaign designed to give the federal government more direct supervision of the power industry.

Public Ownership Solution

Despite this outlook, it is the belief of Dr. Gruening that the sole solution to the problem of excessive rates and profits upon the part of the power interests is absolute government ownership. "Until a year and a half ago," he explained, "I believed that regulation was sufficient. Careful inspection has taught me that the power people are financially too strong to be subjected to regulation."

As an example of the growing opposition to private ownership, the expert cited the changing attitude toward the publication of the report of the Federal Trade Commission. When this information, revealing the inequality and exploitation in the power industry, was published four years ago it attracted little or no attention. To-day it is being read and discussed nationally as a most conclusive argument against the continuance of individual control.

"This report, the Insull failure, and general conditions," said Dr. Gruening in conclusion, "have had their effect on public opinion. Since Insull's operating companies remained in good shape they were taken over by interests subsidiary to those of J. P. Morgan. At the time many felt that public ownership would have been a much more equitable disposition. From every angle, the advocates of state control view the Insull fall as one of their most effective weapons against private ownership."

Department Of Physical Education
Adds To Life Of Carolina Co-edsNew Program Inaugurated With Active Schedule for Women Students; Mrs. J. C. Beard Serves as Directress of Athletics; Insignia to Be Awarded.

A further step toward equality between the sexes on the campus has been achieved with the establishment of a department of physical education for co-eds. Sponsored jointly by the University and Woman's Association, the new branch of activity endeavors to round out completely the life of the Carolina co-ed. The project consists of training in basketball, tennis, archery, bowling, hiking, fencing, running, high and broad jumps, and baseball.

Mrs. J. C. Beard of the University extension division coaches the class in required athletics Monday and Friday afternoons from 4:15 to 5:15. This course is being given only to the freshmen, since the majority of the students are of the upper classes and have had two years of scheduled athletics. The field opposite the arboretum has been conditioned and given over to the exclusive use of the co-eds.

Tabulation of Points Is Kept

A careful tabulation is being kept of the achievement of each girl in the different sports and insignia will be presented at the end of the year to the girls who meet the requirements by scoring a certain number of points. These are given for playing in intramural basketball or bowling, participation in the semi-finals or finals in a tennis tournament, accuracy throws in baseball, proficiency in scoring twelve consecutive arrows in archery, belonging to the fencing club and hiking sixty miles during the year with two miles as a minimum walk. Clogging is taught on rainy days in a classroom in Peabody hall.

Since it is against the constitution of the Woman's association for the co-eds to participate in intercollegiate athletics, the only games in addition to the intramurals will be with the local high school. At the present time the co-eds are undefeated by the high school basketball team.

Mrs. Beard received her training at Northfield Seminary, Wellesley College, Columbia University and Cornell. She has had experience in directing physical education at Yonkers, New York, Pratt Institute, and the Superior Wisconsin high school.

Intramural Games Sponsored

Although there has been an organization known as the Woman's athletic association for several years, very little was accomplished since there was no means of requiring participation. The first step forward was made two years ago when representatives were sent to an archery tournament at Pinehurst. Nothing else was done until this fall when a series of intramural basketball games between the floors of Spencer hall was sponsored by the association. The culmination of the interest aroused by these contests will come February 6 when the Pi Beta Phi meet the Chi Omegas in a basketball game at the Tin Can to determine the co-ed champions. The proceeds from this game will be used for charitable purposes. These organizations also recently sponsored the first of a series of bowling tournaments. Their plans for spring sports center around a tennis tournament.

Their Last

Faltering Claim

Opponents to the proposal giving staff members authority to elect publication editors have been forced to abandon all of their criticisms of the new idea, and are now, as a drowning man clinging to the last thing afloat, making their final attempt at existence on the basis of their contention that the plan is not democratic. And on this they seem to be struggling for their last claim to life. It is indeed pathetic that any supposedly intelligent human beings would be willing to make any sort of stand on such an unsubstantial argument.

To view the matter quite logically one can easily see the folly of this contention. Were the members of the various publication staffs selected on the basis of class distinction or something of the sort, the matter might take on an entirely different light. But when the fact is considered that any student in the University of North Carolina regardless of his academic standing, inheritance, or general appearance is at all times eligible to become a member of the staff, this statement as to the undemocratic nature of the plan loses its weight.

Immediately, however, the critics come back with the feeble contention that the editor will place on his staff only those men whom he knows will vote as he says. Herein these critics show a lack of knowledge as to the purpose every editor has in mind when he makes up his staff. Knowing that he was elected to put out the best publication that he is possibly capable of, he is certainly not going to be foolish enough to place men on his staff with no regard to their ability. Realizing that he must secure a staff which can aid him in publishing the best paper, magazine, or annual, as the case may be, the editor will choose only those men who show themselves capable of fulfilling this capacity.

The critics of the plan will all admit that the staff members are better qualified to select the editor than any other group. And when the democratic nature of the staff's selection is brought into account, all criticisms in this quarter of the plan fall through for lack of intelligent support.

Despite all the critics' blabberings against the Buccaneer plan, it still stands unmarred by the arguments thrown against it. It is unquestionably the only sane method to use with respect to publication elections, and there is little doubt but what the more intelligent members of the student body agree on this point.

The Stark Future

Youth of today is starting life in a period of transition and change which seems to presage a gloomy future for the human race. Biologists concede us a rather weak chance in the struggle to survive and to the pessimist the day is in sight in which man shall take his place in extinction along side the dodo and the dinosaur. We are living in an age marked by titanic resurgings of thought and action. Tides that have rolled steadily on for aeons now seem to be turning back or dashing themselves against unseen and incomprehensible reefs.

The struggle of man to wrest food and clothing from the soil has progressed so far with the aid of the machine that today he freezes and starves because there is too much. The middle class which emerged painfully from feudalism and the Dark Ages was once thought to be the class that would dominate the world and for a time it did. Now it is submerging again to be divided between poverty and great wealth and to disappear. The flower of democracy which grew out of the past nurtured by blood and strife is withering. In Russia, Italy, and Germany it is dead. The home, backbone of civilization, which has evolved from the dim, dim past, is suffering numerous attacks. Arts have attained a certain peak and are on their way back to barbarism. Our religions, the perfection of morality and ethics are admittedly losing their hold on the people.

But our machines are more complex and more productive than ever. Our buildings are higher, our aeroplanes and autos are faster, and our radios more efficient. Our wars are bigger and our methods of destroying human life are increasingly perfect. We resemble a young man that born brilliant early manifests his ability and his desire to learn. He pushes through his grades and is never satisfied, always attempting more. He increases the intensity of his studies until some high point is reached—then his brain rebels and he is a hopeless lunatic.

The world today suggests that comparison; we are moving at a rapid pace, growing more and more proficient, attaining perfection. But symptoms of a break are at hand. Our institutions, religions, social, economic, and aesthetic, are showing evidences of stresses and strains that they cannot support. They are beginning to crumble while we stand looking in dumb amazement while things we have always viewed as perpetual and indestructible appear more and more transient and frail. The human race is drunk upon its own power. It has achieved much and is greedy for more. The apex must be reached and then there will be a descent. Perhaps we will disappear to start all over again, perhaps yield our place to another of the countless animals that time and nature have and will produce.—J.F.A.

Room for Improvement

The unsportsmanlike conduct of spectators at our boxing matches has called forth deprecating comments from all sides. The mythical Carolina gentleman has been held up to us as a shining example of what we are not, and on one occasion the referee has had to stop a fight during the middle of a round and threaten, unless the cheering stopped, to award the decision to the opposing team. However, in spite of all that may be said, our "manners" have improved greatly since the past few fights and show every sign of continuing to do so.

Cheering in itself is no offense. It is natural to want to see the home team win. Even more, it shows an admirable school spirit. But cheering has its place and it does not belong in college boxing. Intercollegiate and Southern Conference rules forbid any cheering or any other demonstration on the part of the spectators during the progress of the rounds. The restriction is perfectly justifiable when we consider, as Coach Bob Fetzer has said, that college boxing requires the utmost in sportsmanship of its participants and should require the utmost in sportsmanship of its spectators. Otherwise, without this restriction, college boxing would be liable to degenerate into the sadistic exhibition of the prize ring.

It is undoubtedly hard to keep from giving vent to the excitement that fight fans love to feel, but it is merely a matter of personal self-control. We have only to refrain from cheering during the rounds; we can yell our heads off between. When Virginia and Carolina boxers mix it up in the ring tonight, we are confident that there will be a still bigger improvement in the consideration shown by the spectators to both contestants.—A.T.D.

North Carolina Tags Along

The bill before the 1933 session of the North Carolina Assembly to confer upon the governor the power of the veto, if passed, will bring the last state withholding such power into line. We have long been the only state refusing to permit the man we have chosen to be our executive to reject such proposals as he may see fit. Such tardiness on our part scarcely does our state credit. It is true, as Dr. Van Hecke, of the University law school, has pointed out, that we have been able to profit by the experience in other states, yet even that does not excuse such unwarranted backwardness concerning such an important move.

It has taken the legislators of North Carolina a hundred and fifty years to wake up to the realization that an executive veto was necessary as a limitation upon the General Assembly. Yet trust them to insert some clause to mar its effectiveness. Such a clause is that depriving the governor the right to veto after adjournment any bill presented to him more than forty-eight hours before the adjournment.

The apparent reason for such a clause seems to be to prevent the governor from having the power of absolute veto on such bills, in as much as the legislature would have no opportunity to pass it over his veto. North Carolina's statesmen should be commended for their democratic spirit, but even in the face of such arguments it is doubtful if such a restriction upon the veto will prove beneficial. In some instances this gives the governor only forty-eight hours in which to decide upon the fate of a bill, a decision which it is sometime difficult to make under any circumstances. It is hardly fair or sensible to force the governor under the rush of closing legislative business to make a hurried decision. At such a time is practically impossible for the governor to secure advice, consult departments, or in any other way prepare himself to make a sane decision.

The principle of the veto is to place more responsibility upon the governor. Why, then, deliberately place in his way any obstacle towards an intelligent discharge of such responsibility?—V.C.R.

Our Times

By Don Shoemaker

Capone

It has just come to the ever-to-the-ground ears of this department that Mr. Al Capone, the noted Chicago income tax violator, received an invitation last June to the commencement exercises of the class of 1932, University of North Carolina. The sender, who was something of a wit, got a prompt and thoroughly courteous reply: "Regret to inform you . . . cannot accept . . . kind invitation . . . will be detained here in Atlanta . . . pressing engagement . . . regards . . ."

Marriage

An informant of ours brings back from Raleigh a choice bit of news of the doing of the Legislature. The House, it seems, was all stirred up about the bill which would place a fine of say five hundred dollars and six months in jail for getting married anywhere outside of North Carolina without first taking out a one dollar license here. But this, they felt, was too severe a penalty.

Finally a solon in a back section scribbled industriously and sent up the first amendment " . . . that the fine shall not concern red-headed women." The House looked puzzled and shook its head.

Second amendment " . . . that the offender must live six months in the home of the mother-in-law."

Never could come to any agreement as to which offender would live with which mother-in-law or both, and the debate died out, leaving everybody pretty glum about the whole matter.

function sufficiently and render the largest measure of service to the communities which they serve, the public has given to the industry privileges . . . Because of these privileges, and because an electric company usually has a monopoly in the community it serves, the state very properly reserves the right to establish rates and supervise the operation of the utilities in many respects . . . Utility rates in North Carolina are reasonable and have been fixed with the idea not only of enabling but encouraging customers to utilize these services to perform all the labor-saving and comfort-giving functions for which they are economically suited . . . The interests of any power company and its customers are identical. It is to the interest of the utility as well as the customer that the rates shall be reasonable and sufficiently low to encourage the use of the largest volume of service possible, because utilities must depend upon volume for their profits."

Private Propaganda Scheme

Dr. Gruening, on the other hand, stated that there were no ideal relationships between the power companies and their customers. The Federal Trade Commission uncovered the greatest organized propaganda since the World War, this propaganda was under the instigation of Samuel Insull; the purpose of the propaganda was to convince the people of the country that privately owned power companies is the best possible solution of the power question. The distribution of this propaganda was achieved through women's clubs, schools, universities and colleges, boy scout and girl scout organizations, professors, children, kindergarten, the press, books, and pamphlets. They wrote articles for magazines and asked prominent women to sign them; they gave lectures to the public schools; they gave courses in prominent colleges and universities in power; they became boy and girl scout executives; they paid underpaid professors to conduct research in the power field; they wrote editorials for country editors who were too busy to write; they told children the wonders of power; they got newspapers to see that the status quo was maintained; and they wrote numerous books and pamphlets; all this was done in an apparently disinterested manner, and all this may be certified by the report of the Federal Trade Commission.

State Regulation Inadequate
State regulation of power companies is not adequate because of the ability of the companies to issue watered stock, i.e. stock that is not bought but merely put on the books to allow the companies to make more money. Out of a total capital of about sixty million dollars of the Carolina Power and Light Company, twenty millions is pure water. This enables the common stock holders to make over twice the amount of profit allowed by the state.

In Ontario, Canada, the government delivers power at approximately one-fourth the cost to the consumer in North Carolina. In all municipal owned utilities in the United States, power is much cheaper than in those localities where power is furnished by privately owned companies.

After the lectures, over which Don Seawell presided, Professor W. A. Olsen presided over the open forum, in which many contentions were brought forward.

Physical Training Adds To Carolina Co-ed Life

the establishment of co-ed athletics in the University was made twelve years ago in the report of the adviser to women to the president. Each year following, the same suggestion has been made in her report. The request has always been met with the answer that since the majority of women were members of the upper classes they had already had a schedule of required physical education and would be uninterested.

However, several years ago the gymnasium was made available to the co-eds for certain nights during the week and tennis court was assigned. Dr. Lawson tried to organize a basketball team but the plan proved unsuccessful because of the unpopularity of the practice hour, and the attempt was given up.

This year with the largest enrollment of underclass girls in the history of the University, the opportunity for giving a required course to these students was more fully realized. President Graham appointed an administrative board of physical education for women to make concrete plans for this project. They immediately made out a budget for the year, appointed Mrs. Beard director and authorized the equipment of an athletic field behind the president's house. The Women's association gave its official sanction with an initial contribution of $100. The members of this board are: R. B. House, F. F. Bradshaw, C. T. Woolen, N. W. Walker, R. A. Fetzer, Mrs. M. H. Stacy, and Mrs. J. C. Beard.

Carolina's varsity and frosh boxing teams will engage Virginia tonight at the Tin Can in the last home meet of the season. The freshman fights will begin at 7:15 and the varsity at 8:30.

When, among others, Levinson meets Rainey, Quarles meets Goldstein, and Brown meets Reiss there will be enough fur flying to make it appear that someone came in with a forty-eight dollar raccoon coat. The biggest crowd of the season is expected to witness the bouts and the center of interest is the Quarles - Goldstein lightweight tussle.

Quarles has never tasted defeat in intercollegiate ring strife. This year, his first on the varsity, he has gotten three straight kayoes as a lightweight after winning all his frosh bouts last year as a featherweight. Goldstein, now a senior, was featherweight champion of the Southern Conference last year and he can boast of three victories over Marty Levinson over a period of three years. This will be his first and last ring appearance in Chapel Hill.

Marty Levinson's battle with Gordon Rainey will be the Tar Heel featherweight's swan song to college boxing in Chapel Hill. He graduates in June and, during his three years of boxing, he has amassed one of the greatest fighting records ever made at Carolina. He is in his usual fine condition and he is determined to leave ring fans here with just one more victory.

In the light-heavyweight contest, Peyton Brown, who did not fight last week, will meet Lewis Reiss, who also, oddly enough, did not fight last week in Virginia's meet with V. P. I. Brown felt the power of Reiss' hammering fists last year when he dropped a decision to the Virginian at Charlottesville. He is out to erase the defeat and he has been pointing for Reiss all season. Brown is a terrific hitter and he is as tough as a comprehensive exam, so his playmate will have to hustle to take the verdict again.

Platt Landis, heavyweight knockout artist, will be after his third straight one-round victory. His last two opponents found themselves gazing at the roof with their skulls in the resin dust after a little over a minute of fighting apiece. Campus gossip has it that Platt will again send the boys home early tonight.

THE ATHLETIC CODE WHICH has been adopted by the Monogram club appears in complete form elsewhere on this page. To a number of our Kate Smiths and Lydia Pinkhams who sit around on their cushions (ha) all day and are always the first to crab at defeats and bad errors on the playing field, this code may appear somewhat like the preface to a Boy Scout guide. These Katies and Lydias, who always ridicule any move for a revived Carolina spirit, should snap out of their narrow rut. Ridicule can do more to undermine this movement than anything in the world. These athletes have taken this on their own shoulders and are doing their best to live up to the code. If they were not sincerely interested, seventy-five would not have signed the book.

AS STUDENTS, WE CAN JOIN this movement and do a great deal towards whether or not it succeeds. Our athletes are striving to raise their conduct in regard to training rules and clean sportsmanship, let's add encouragement by showing them that we respect and admire their move. All of us know who our athletes are and we can make it awfully hard for them to fall down on the code they have adopted. The harder we make it for them to break training by frowning on their actions, instead of encouraging them to smoke, drink, or stay up late in a poker game, the better their spirit is going to be and in the long run the better ours will be. Take Peyton Brown for instance. Tonight he meets a conference champion in the ring. Peyton is one of the most enthusiastic monogram wearers. He is convinced that something is coming

Fetzer Cites Examples Of Noble Sportsmanship By Carolina Stars

Director of Athletics Relates Incidents of sacrifice for Spirit of College Sportsmanship in Plea for Better Conduct.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this, the third in a series of his articles on sportsmanship, R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics, again asks Carolina students to exhibit the splendid sportsmanship which has been traditional with Carolina students in the past, especially in contests with its old rival, Virginia.

The boxing meet with the University of Virginia here tonight marks the first varsity clash of the winter season with our oldest athletic rival and brings to mind many incidents of sportsmanship which are typical of the spirit of keen though friendly rivalry that has characterized these contests.

The rivalry was a lean one for Carolina football teams for many years, but the magnificent spirit of the Tar Heels on their annual trek to Richmond brought expressions of admiration wherever intercollegiate sports were discussed. In recent years the tide has turned somewhat, but the spirit of the rivalry has remained unchanged.

Wrestlers To Meet Strong Team Tonight

Coach P. H. "Chuck" Quinlan's wrestling proteges will meet the Washington and Lee Generals tonight in Doremus gymnasium, Lexington. This will be the fourth meet for the Tar Heels, and they have yet to count a win.

The Generals boast an exceptionally strong club which has been undefeated in Dixie during the interim of three years. This year's edition is stronger than last year's fine team. All the Tar Heels are in good shape with none of the regulars missing from the lineup.

TAR BABIES TAKE CAVALIER FROSH

Virginia Yearlings Drop First Game of Season to Carolina By Score of 38 to 21.

Carolina's freshman basketball team got off to a fast start Thursday afternoon on its Virginia trip by downing the Cavalier frosh 38 to 21. This was the first defeat of the season for the young Cavaliers and the fourth win in five starts for the Tar Babies.

The first half was slow with Virginia holding a slight advantage and leading 14 to 12 at the whistle. The Tar Babies put up a great defense in the second half, holding their opponents to seven points. The Carolina offense also got going and soon ran up their long lead.

For the Tar Babies, Rankin, center, led the offense, counting nine points. Nelson and Moore, forwards, were not far behind in the point-making, having eight and seven points respectively. McCachren as usual led the play of the Tar Baby defense. Booker, forward, starred for the losers, ringing up eight points.

Yesterday afternoon the Tar Babies were scheduled to meet Woodberry prep school at Orange and this afternoon A. M. A. prep school is on the card at Fort Defiance.

GROUP FORMULATES CODE Members of Monogram Club Reorganize and Adopt Code To Guide Conduct.

With the appointment of the executive committee of the Monogram club by John Phipps, new president, the machinery for the re-organization movement will get under way at once.

President Phipps announced yesterday that he had named seven men to serve on the executive committee along with the president and secretary. Those named were George Barclay, Dave McCachren, Stuart Chandler, Ralston LeGore, Peyton Brown, Percy Idol, and Lenor Wright. This group of seven will sit with President Phipps and Secretary Weathers as the executive committee and "will have full power to arrange and conduct initiations, to suspend members for violations of the constitution and the code, though those suspended have the right of appeal to the whole club, and to decide if and when special committees are necessary, and to exercise general jurisdiction over all matters of policy and administration."

The code for Carolina athletes, which was adopted at the meeting is printed below in complete form. The seventy-five members who signified their desire to live up to its requirements by signing the book will be held to close observance of the code. There are several monogram wearers who have not as yet signed the book and they are urged to get in touch with John Phipps immediately

CHI PSI DEFEATS ZETA PSI 30-26 TO KEEP RECORD

Best House Wins; Ruffin Decisively Defeats Aycock; K. A. Bests Phi Alpha.

Four of the teams taking part in yesterday's intramural basketball program in the Tin Can were undefeated before the start of the day's play, but only three retained their clean slates when the last whistle had sounded: Zeta Psi dropped its first decision of the season, losing to Chi Psi, 30-26.

Chi Psi started strong and ran up an early lead, which dwindled, however, and was gone at the end of the half when Zeta Psi held a slight advantage. Early in the second half Chi Psi launched a furious attack which swept it into a lead from which it was never again ousted. For Chi Psi the play of Phil Lawrence and Vinnie Baukey, who scored twelve and ten points respectively, was spectacular throughout the game. Clark, of Zeta Psi, took individual scoring honors for the game, however, with a total of thirteen markers to his credit. Barber added seven to the losers' total.

Best House Wins Easily

Everett was no match for the fast Best House five yesterday, and fell before the brilliant attack of the league leaders, 32-8. The win was the sixth in a row for Best House. Herman Snyder scored eight points to lead the winners and tie Robbins, of Everett, for the scoring honors of the game. Irwin and Leonard got six each for the winners.

Led by Weathers and Royster, who scored twenty and seventeen points respectively, Ruffin breezed to an easy 54-9 triumph over Aycock. Silberg got seven of the nine points scored against last year's campus championship quintet.

Kappa Alpha crushed Phi Alpha, 53-18, as Everette fell just short of the record individual score of the season with thirty-one points. Skinner added fourteen to the K. A. total while Bernie Friedman scored twelve of his team's points.

Old East and Theta Kappa Nu won from Carr and Pi Kappa Alpha respectively on forfeits.

And the attitude of France on paying her obligations to this country suggests that in the hands across the sea there is a chisel.—St. Joseph News-Press.

French Department Robbed Of Picture

The department of Romance languages is perplexed by the theft of a photograph from Murphy hall Thursday afternoon. The picture was on display with scenes from the French production Jean de la Lune, which will be shown here Sunday night. The stolen photograph pictured the hero bending artistically over his lady. Friday morning it was discovered that this photograph had been purloined. The picture was presumably stolen by an art-lover, since the rhythm and composition of the photograph are certain to appeal. The picture is an original and cannot be replaced. Its loss will prevent any further exhibitions being sent here. The department believes that an appeal to the culprit will make him understand his selfishness in robbing the world of such a treasure and Chapel Hill of further exhibitions.

Collective Bargaining Lessens Class Work

(By College News Service)

Elinor Marshall, age seventeen, learned about collective bargaining in Professor Corwin D. Edwards' economics class at New York University.

Last week she boasted with justifiable pride that she had been able to put that knowledge to practical use, with the result that she and other members of the class now have to worry about only six books of outside reading, instead of eighteen.

Led by Miss Marshall, thirty students in the class served notice on Professor Edwards that his collateral reading schedule was too heavy, and that unless he lightened it, he might have a strike on his hands, with picketing, sabotage and other strike phenomena. The whole method had been very carefully explained in Professor Edwards' lectures.

But the professor was willing to discuss a compromise through collective bargaining, so the six-book requirement was decided upon.

TRACK MEN TRAIN FOR CONFERENCE MEET IN TIN CAN

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson Prepare Tin Can for Strenuous Work-Outs Before March 4.

Carolina's track men have started their first preparations for the coming Southern conference indoor track meet which is just a little over a month off. The conference will hold the meet in Chapel Hill, March 4.

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson have ordered the jumping pit in the Tin Can to be opened for candidates in the jumping events. All men who are out for the high and broad jump are taking daily work-outs while some of the pole vault aspirants are also doing work.

Towards the middle of the month, the team will settle down to hard work for all the events in the meet. The team will take work-outs on the Tin Can track.

Fairbanks Robs Cat In Film Here Today

While Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., never has been accused of stealing candy from a baby, he did swipe a fish from a cat.

It happened when Doug was working on the Warner Brothers picture, "Parachute Jumper," now showing at the Carolina theatre. Doug plays the part of a young aviator who, while starving in New York, takes a fish from a cat to satisfy his own hunger.

King, a big black cat from Animal Land, a Hollywood trained cat emporium, plays the feline role. Its trainer taught the tabby to sit on some steps with the fish in its mouth. It went through the performance perfectly until Doug reached for the fish. The cat had done the trick before and believed himself entitled to the tid-bit. He backed against the wall, growled, and when Fairbanks reached for the fish, King slapped at the star with his paw, scratching the hungry movie actor's hand.

Leo Carrillo, Bette Davis and Frank McHugh are members of the cast with Fairbanks in "Parachute Jumper." The story is by Rian James, Alfred E. Green directed.

(Continued from page three) opposition and, before the night is over, it may remain for one of these three boys to steal the show. Hahn, Fishburne, Stuart, and Smith are great foemen and the question of whether or not Carolina wins the meet will rest largely on the chances of their being beaten by their Tar Heel opponents.

The frosh team is undefeated and has taken victories over V. P. I., State, and V. M. I. Stiffer competition is expected from Virginia, but the Tar Babies have a punch in their line-up and are expected to blast their way through to an undefeated season.

The starters will probably be: Eutsler, 115; Edwards or Frucht, 125; Glenn, 135; Sutton, 145; Brown, 155; Ellisberg, 165; Henson, or Owlick, 175; Kaner, heavyweight.

Carolina Athletes' Code

I believe in the University, her traditions, her standards of scholarship, her devotion to sound, clean manhood.

I believe in the team. We are all for one and one for all. The failure of my team-mate is my failure and his power is my power. I do not wish to be a star, but I will give all I have for the team.

I believe in the game. It challenges my courage, and tests my skill. It teaches me patience and self-control. It requires me at times to "take it on the chin" and get up with a smile, ready and eager for more. It does not tolerate wrangling or jealousies or alibis. It expects me to be fit in body and mind, and to keep fit by building sound and efficient mental and physical habits. It rewards intelligent and unwearied drive and condemns sloppiness, haphazardness, laziness and loafing. It is a man's game, built solely for courageous, clean, and intelligent men.

I realize and assume my duty as a Monogram man. The University has trained me and built its schedules counting on me. I pledge my best to stay in school, to continue participation in the game, to keep in training to give my best, to work always for greater excellence. I will strive to be a better athlete each successive year.

Mine is the responsibility for the attitude and the standards of the successive generations of athletes who are coming up at Carolina, for the standards of sportsmanship among all the students and not just among athletes, for the good or bad repute in which the people on the outside hold Carolina athletes. As a wearer of the "NC" I will at all times remember and fulfill my duties in keeping our standards and reputation high and spotless.

I want to be deserving, not asking hand-outs. I want to win my place because I am the best man, not by waiting until a better man graduates and I attain it by right of succession. I want to meet non-athletes in the classroom on even terms without thought of favors, for after all I am at college to get an education and make a man of myself. I engage in sports for the love of the game and the glory of the school, and if I have a job on the outside I want to secure it and keep it because I am a good workman.

I believe in victory. The score board is an incident. Victory is in the heart. It is born in hard, clean fight. It is the consciousness that I have done my best.

I will fight for the University's glory until the last sound of the whistle.

NORM QUARLES, WHO wears a hat around here designed after somebody's rowboat, is going to stack up against Bobby Goldstein tonight in what will be the greatest fight ever held under the big tin tent. Mickey Doyle, V. M. I. boxer who lost to both Goldstein and Quarles on successive Saturdays, told the writer after the fight last Saturday that he looked for Quarles to win. "I have fought Goldy twice, Goodridge once, O'Connell once, and the Navy fighter who was national intercollegiate champion," said Doyle, "but tonight was the first time that I have ever been knocked out. That Quarles is one sweet fighter and looks like the one to stop Goldy."

"LOOK AT MARTY LEVIN-son, he piles in there this year, what has changed him?" asked Captain Knox, coach of the Cadet boxers. "He looks much better now," added the Captain. "I don't know about that now, I wouldn't want to be quoted, but Quarles looked mighty good tonight, I'd bet on him," said the Cadet mentor after the matches. Several other members of the Cadet club spoke of the excellent frosh club Virginia has. They even ventured to predict a shutout victory for the Cavalier frosh. What about that, Archlets?

PRINCETONIANS KEEP PHONE SYSTEM BUSY

Two hundred and ninety miles of wire connect 325 telephones on the Princeton campus and more than 1000 calls a day are made over this system according to an article in the Daily Princetonian, student newspaper. There are thirteen trunk lines that are continually kept busy during the day, requiring three operators during the busy period while students alternate on the job during the slack hours of the night. At midnight most of the phones are disconnected and the trunk lines are hooked up to the main buildings such as the infirmary and police office from which any emergency calls may be made.

Fetzer Cites Examples Of Fine Sportsmanship By University Stars

of Virginia in the other bracket of the welterweight division. Peerless boxers and heavy hitters, intense rivals through the whole span of their college career, they could always be counted on for a great bout with the result in doubt until the very last, but this meeting found Allen severely handicapped with a bad eye-cut sustained in a collision in a preliminary bout. The match proved the royal battle that was expected. Rainey won the decision in the extra round, but not once did he aim his attack at Archie's injured eye.

The behavior of the student body at the V. M. Saturday night was indeed gratifying to those interested in Carolina's conduct and sportsmanship. Although the rivalry with Virginia will be even more keen and the excitement even more intense, we are counting on you to continue this fine exhibition of sportsmanship to our gallant and highly respected rivals.

ITALIAN DIPLOMAT TO LECTURE HERE ON CLUB F...GRAM

Count Carlo Sforza Will Speak
February 13 Under Auspices Of Relations Group.

Continuing its policy of securing men of international interest as speakers in Chapel Hill, the International Relations club of the University has obtained Count Carlo Sforza, former Italian diplomat and minister of foreign affairs, to speak Monday, February 13, in Memorial hall. The subject of the talk has not been definitely determined.

The club has been able to secure Count Sforza through the sponsorship of the Carnegie Foundation which sends lecturers of international importance to various universities in the country. At present Sforza is at Duke University where he is delivering a series of four lectures this month.

Lectured in Belgium

Count Sforza has come to Duke directly from Belgium and during the past several years he has been lecturing in foreign countries. He first became an international figure in 1911 when he was appointed Italian minister to China. He held this post until 1915, when he was named minister to Serbia. Throughout the war he retained this job of superior diplomatic relations with the Macedonian front. At the close of the war Count Sforza entered the Italian senate and subsequently became minister of foreign affairs.

Since the advent of Fascism the Italian diplomat has conducted lectures outside his native land. He has recently published a book on the Chinese crisis.

PRESS RELEASES NEW VOLUME BY DR. J. M. WILLIAMS

Book, "Human Aspects of Unemployment," Makes Clear Need for Organized Relief.

The poignant realities of the depression, particularly the tottering morale of millions of unemployed and the pathos of the catastrophe for sixteen million children, are pictured vividly in a new book just released by the University Press.

The volume, Human Aspects of Unemployment, is by Dr. James M. Williams, professor of sociology in Hobart College, New York. The author makes clear the urgent need for nationally organized relief and shows what must be done to save the health and morale of a large and increasing part of our population.

Facts From Experience

The facts of the book are gathered from the author's own experience as a relief worker. Dr. Williams has talked with many of the 200,000 boys who are wandering over the country and has been with them in their "jungles." He exposes the political goshawk who rations relief on a slow starvation basis, and who often poses for the adulation of the poor while protecting the well-to-do from taxes to relieve the poor. He shows clearly that so far the burden of relief has fallen on the poor and the less prosperous. He argues for a nationally organized system of social insurance.

Try-outs For Play Set For Tomorrow

Try-outs for the ten parts of the next production of the Playmakers Sad Words To Gay Music, are scheduled for Monday at 4:00 and at 7:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. Those interested may secure typewritten copies from the reserve shelf in the library. The production, which will be staged February 23, 24, and 25, is a comedy written by Alvin Kerr, '28. Kerr, since attending the University, has had parts on the professional stage and secured a leading role in Five Star Final.

McCORKLE WILL PRESENT RECITAL HERE NEXT WEEK

Music Instructor Will Offer Program of Violin Solos at Music Hall Next Sunday.

Professor T. Smith McCorkle, instructor in music theory and appreciation here, will present a violin recital Sunday afternoon, February 12, at 4:00 o'clock in Hill Music hall. He will be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. McCorkle.

Professor McCorkle's program will consist of compositions entirely idiomatic in character and expressive of distinct trends in musical composition. A half of the program will be given to modern American works for the violin.

Among these will be included the recently composed American Concerto by Michael Guskoff, former soloist and concertmaster with the Philadelphia and St. Louis symphony orchestras. This composition was offered last fall by the composer with Paul Whiteman and his orchestra at one of the celebrated "experiments in modernity" concerts given by the jazz maestro in Carnegie hall, New York City.

Annual Recital

This concert is in accordance with Professor McCorkle's custom of presenting a solo recital each year for the benefit of the student body and the people of Chapel Hill. In addition to this, however, he will appear February 22 playing the solo part to the Bruch G minor Concerto for violin and orchestra with the Carolina symphony, conducted by Professor Harold S. Dyer. Professor McCorkle will appear at Flora-MacDonald College during April and will offer a recital in Washington, D. C., the latter part of the same month.

HUDSON WILL SPEAK ON LEGEND OF OLD SOUTH

The philological club of the University will meet Tuesday at 7:30 o'clock in the lounge of Smith building. Dr. A. P. Hudson of the English department will read a folk-legend of the lower south, "The Bell Witch of Tennessee and Mississippi." Dr. Hudson has made an intensive research into the field of folklore.

Yackety-Yack Meeting

All members of the staff of the Yackety Yack will meet for the regular February meeting Monday in Graham Memorial. The meeting of the division heads is scheduled for 2:00 o'clock, the entire staff at 2:30 o'clock, and the pictorial board at 3:00 o'clock.

Graham Defends Cause Of Future Generations

President of University Pleads at Mass Meeting in Raleigh for Sufficient Appropriations to Keep Public Schools and Institutions of Higher Learning From Degradation.

(Editor's Note: Following is the address delivered by Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the greater University of North Carolina, before the Citizens Mass Meeting on Public Education and members of the General Assembly in Raleigh last Tuesday.)

In this presence of members of the legislature and more than four thousand people from all over North Carolina, gathered in this new, magnificent Memorial auditorium in this historic capital city, we feel stirring within us the traditions and hopes of an undefeatable people. Overtaken by a world catastrophe while carrying with a high heart the heavy load of their recent great investments in roads and schools, they are, in spite of all, resolved to pay their debts and to carry on their bit in North Carolina for a better state and a fairer world.

We take our stand today against no man or party or section or creed or class, but as North Carolinians for all of North Carolina. Every part needs to consider all of North Carolina, and all of North Carolina needs to consider every part. We are trying for our part to put into the whole picture the crisis in public education as a basic problem of the commonwealth. We are grimly aware of the miserable condition of the country, the desperate situation in this state, and the mood of the times—critical with economic high tensions and social potentialities far and near.

The Economic Prostration

All America at this time looks into the face of a prostrate agriculture, paralyzed industry and commerce, and millions unemployed. The government has begun to challenge the hunger that stalks our streets, but neither the political nor economic order has yet lifted the cruel shadow of a wide despair that falls across millions of homes where children are born.

North Carolina, an acute part of it all, facing the present and future, must look through the eyes of a previous agricultural depression and textile decline, the subsequent world collapse, and the peak load of debt payments in high money in the low years of depression. The state debt at the beginning of 1932 was one hundred and sixty-one millions. The local debt was three hundred and seventy millions, and the combined debt was five hundred and thirty-two millions. The state will end the year with an operating deficit of twelve and a half millions.

Public Credit and Public Service

These are hard facts, of which we must all take account, as we share with the governor and the legislature the responsibility to preserve both the public credit and the public service. The public credit is basic to the public service and to private enterprise, and it must be preserved. The public service, with its public schools, colleges, humanitarian institutions, state departments and commissions, and all indispensable agencies of public health and welfare, is basic to the public credit, to economic recovery and the social advance. Without these and the vision back of them, the people perish. They, too, must be preserved. The public credit and the public services go up or down together. We owe it to the legislature and the people to present public education as a fundamental part of the public responsibility in making up the budget of the state.

Place of Education in Budget

In bringing figures to you we are not bringing merely cold figures on a page, but we are bringing flesh and blood in the running stream of life and youthful opportunities in the policies of a commonwealth. The total expenditures of the state and its subdivisions were in 1928-1929, the year the depression began, $117,964,513, and in 1932, $99,206,978. The decrease in public expenditures of all kinds was almost nineteen million dollars. The average decrease in the whole state in all its subdivisions, departments, institutions, and agencies was 15.9 per cent. Public education showed a decrease of 23.4 per cent in its own expenditures. Most of this reduction in the cost of public education was in interest and capital investment. But over three million dollars of the total was in the reduced operating cost of the public schools. Yet 4675 more children, enrolled for a two weeks longer term with an increased attendance of 83,303, were taught by 1220 less teachers, with over three million dollars less money. What other enterprises in North Carolina can show so large an increase in business with so large a decrease in cost.

Cost of Schools Before 1929

But it is truly said that the costs of public education had gone up in North Carolina before.

Eight Law Students Pass Bar Examination

The Supreme Court of North Carolina has granted licenses to all eight of the law students from the University who took the written bar examination last Monday. Out of a class of seventy-nine applicants who took the examination, only sixty-eight, the smallest number in recent years, were successful. The test was prepared by Associate Justice Connor.

The eight University students who were given licenses are as follows: James O. Moore, J. C. Eudy, John W. Graham, J. M. Bailey, E. A. Daniel, J. K. Harrison, S. B. Sternberger, and Joseph Suisman.

English Majors Must Meet With Instructors

Members of the English department are meeting individually all English majors who are expecting to take comprehensive examinations, Saturday, February 18. Each senior has been assigned to a member of the department for a conference before the tests. All seniors who have not had a final check on their required courses must confer with Professor W. D. MacMillan from 10:30 to 11:00 o'clock, Monday, in 105 Saunders.

A copy of the comprehensive examination given in December may be obtained in the reserve room of the library.

Sophomores To Meet For Smoker Tuesday

The first smoker of the year for members of the sophomore class will take place at 9:00 o'clock Tuesday night in Swain hall. Plans were announced yesterday by J. J. Binder, newly appointed president of the class.

W. A. Olsen, professor in the English department, will be the principal speaker at the affair. Binder will preside. Jack Wardlaw's orchestra will furnish music. After the smoker the class will attend a late show at the Carolina theatre through the courtesy of the manager.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST OFFERED CONCERT AT AGE OF SEVEN

Fritz Kreisler Will Appear Here
February 27 Under Auspices of Phi Alpha.

Fritz Kreisler, who is coming here for an appearance in Memorial hall February 27, under the auspices of the local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity, is a living refutation of the theory that child prodigies rarely fulfill their promise in maturity. Kreisler was himself a wonder-child. His interest in the violin began almost with speech. He appeared in concert in Vienna at the age of seven and entered the Vienna Conservatory the same year, though an exception had to be made in his case as the entrance age was fourteen. Three years later, he carried off the gold medal for violin playing, and having learned all that Vienna could teach him, went to Paris.

At the Paris Conservatory, Massart, the celebrated violin pedagogue, and Delibes, who taught theory, raised their eyebrows somewhat at the inclusion of the "petit Viennois," then ten years old, into their classes. But when, two years later, young Fritz won the Premier Grand Prix de Rome against forty competitors, all of whom were twenty years old or more, there was general recognition of the presence of a towering talent in their midst.

Undertook First Tour

From Paris, Kreisler returned to Vienna and undertook his first tour. This was with the famous pianist, Moritz Rosenthal and was routed through the United States. The American tour was successful; but at its close Kreisler did an astounding thing, a thing which marks him for

PUGH ISSUES BOOKLET ON EDUCATION IN STATE

In an effort to acquaint the people of the state with the plight of educational institutions in North Carolina, W. M. Pugh, president of the local Kiwanis club, has issued a pamphlet entitled "Facts about Education in North Carolina." The pamphlets have been sent to other Kiwanis clubs in the state to be distributed.

Phi Mu Alpha Meets

There will be an important meeting of all active and inactive members of Phi Mu Alpha, national honorary music fraternity, tonight at 9:00 o'clock in Hill music hall. Preparations are now being made by this organization for the forthcoming concert by Fritz Kreisler.

DRAMA FESTIVAL WILL CLOSE WITH PROGRAM TODAY

Percy MacKaye, President Graham, and Dr. Henderson Will Be Principal Speakers.

The University, Chapel Hill, and widely known figures in literature will pay formal tribute tonight to George Bernard Shaw, noted Irish wit, and to Dr. Archibald Henderson, his official biographer, in an event expected to be of great significance in the field of drama.

The affair will commence in the Playmakers theatre at 8:00 o'clock with Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University, Percy MacKaye, nationally known dramatist and poet, Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Playmakers, and Dr. Henderson himself taking part on the program.

Henderson Principal Speaker

Professor Koch will preside at the event tonight and will read tributes from distinguished men and women of letters who have sent messages of congratulation to Dr. Henderson on his latest volume Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet. Dr. Graham will express the University's appreciation to Dr. Henderson in a brief message. Following this, Percy MacKaye will speak on "The World of the Theatre and the Drama." Dr. Henderson will then deliver the principal address of the evening on "Shaw as a World Power."

MacKaye is among the foremost characters in the field of drama and letters. A graduate of Harvard, MacKaye has spent a great part of his time delivering lectures on the theatre at Harvard, Yale, and Columbia. In addition to writing a number

Toward Better Spirit

A few years ago the Daily Princetonian threw a minor bombshell into the eastern athletic world "Smooth or Shaggy?" It was immediately seized by college and national publications, who earnestly debated whether the college man in his sport interests took the passive or enthusiastic attitude.

To make the question more involved, the new liberalism movement of the late 'Twenties took sides and soon it was pointed out that college men "thought of something more serious than football and other sports." This was heralded by a falling off in gate receipts, unfavorable propaganda instigated by the emphasis of football injuries, and a group of pseudo-sophisticated college journalists who were resolved to outlaw "King Football."

It thus seems strange that this University should not feel the effects of this moratorium on school spirit. Perhaps the student body manifestations of school spirit have reverted from the demonstrative to the serious and more sincere. In the latter case the revitalization of the Monogram Club, for several years more or less inactive, indicates that the rebirth of school spirit is coming from a concerted and inviolable source.

Many sneer at school spirit as too demonstrative and unbecoming a gentleman. Yet without a whole-hearted manifestation of spirit from the student body, a team cannot be expected to display any but an apathetic attitude toward an athletic encounter. The spirit of the spectators makes the player feel that his efforts are appreciated and that the rooter is playing just as hard, even though vocally.

A revitalization of school spirit from such a source as the Monogram Club will do much to coordinate all the elements of the campus. When such a group, which is naturally more concerned with playing a fair game in a square manner, leads a crusade for better spirit, the campus must inevitably fall in line.—D.C.S.

Young Carolina To the Fore

The late John Galsworthy once said that Youth was poor in everything but Promise. If that be the criterion of wealth, North Carolina need never despair over what the future may have in store, for surely, despite the scathing condemnations of David Clark and the News and Observer, the Youth of the state has never before displayed such a golden store of Promise.

North Carolina's younger generation is making a name for itself in music, literature, and in political leadership. The most recent evidence of North Carolina leadership is the part played by North Carolina students in the growth of the National Student Federation. North Carolina is the only state in the union having a Student Federation of its own, and for a long time its leaders have been the leaders of the National Federation. The North Carolina Federation recently took another forward step with the publication of a monthly Student Journal, a move that met with such success that the National Federation decided to follow suit.

At the meeting in New Orleans in December North Carolina delegates led the way. Said an editorial in the Student Journal, "At every discussion group North Carolina delegates commanded the respect of the entire body and their opinions were received and respected by all. . . . Probably the most significant tribute to North Carolina leadership in student thought was the election of John Lang, formerly of the University and founder of the North Carolina Federation, to the presidency of the National Federation."

The new president in a message to North Carolina said that it had become apparent that "North Carolina is leading the way in a very large degree to a new day in student government." Such active leadership in national student activities foretells future leadership in other national activities. Such Promise should be gratifying to those of the older generation who sometimes become clouded with despair at the future of America.—V.C.R.

With Contemporaries

Mature Men

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor-elect of New York University, recently made the statement that the functions of a university should be directed "to help people to be the sort who can keep on growing with their world."

It is quite apparent that we have permitted our world to grow beyond ourselves; under our present social, moral, and educational standards we are not at home in our over-developed civilization. We have reached a point of educational fixity, but this point is far behind the development of the world. An educated man is at peace with his environment; placidity is certainly not the earmark of twentieth-century America.

Our governmental and economic leaders are like men groping in the dark; they have builded something which they cannot control, which has turned on them with merciless power.

The present decade is one of readjustment, of instability. How long it will take the American people to catch up with their civilization no one knows. We are wholly out of balance. Our machines have outgrown our population; hence millions of us are without wherewithal to live. We are still class-conscious; but our machine age is fast reducing men to a common level, a situation which we will not accept because it is called Socialism.

Thus we see our civilization calling for a condition of harmony; we ignore its demands and chaos is the result. Machinery would have uniformity; but we are lop-sided in our educational, moral, and social lives. We over-specialize in education; this leads to a host of widely divergent moral and social standards. It makes us narrow-minded. We are not yet capable of a cosmic point of view, a necessary factor if we would be at peace with our world. We cling to our preconceived ideas, unable to array facts in their order and to treat them in an objective manner. We insist on building a uniform civilization based purely on facts but refuse to adjust our standards of living thereto.

We may well say then, that the need of the hour is mature men, men who hold to certain irrefutable fundamentals, but who are growing with the world, who can adjust themselves to new situations in their emotional, moral, and social lives with a minimum effort.—Auburn Plainsman.

The Oldest State University

If the University of North Carolina were merely the oldest of the state universities, it would have an antiquarian interest outside of the Old North State but nothing more. The institution at Chapel Hill, however, has more than age in its favor. It is in the front rank of American institutions of higher learning. Its publications are read with an interest surpassed by those of few universities in the world. Of recent decades its fame has gone out through the whole country, particularly because of what it is doing in both a practical and a cultural way for the citizens of its own state. There is no exaggeration in saying that it has added materially to the physical wealth of the state which under Governor Aycock made a record of educational advance which constitutes one of the brightest pages in the nation's history. For it to be seriously crippled in its task would be a national calamity. It is actually facing such a blow in the proposal by the State Budget Commission to cut its appropriations by almost one-half. This cut would follow one of twenty-two and one-half per cent which it has already sustained. Economies are necessary in these times in education as well as in everything else, but there is a point at which economy becomes extravagance. At an hour in which there is special need of sound thinking, no state can afford to drain the lifeblood of its highest intellectual institutions.—New York Evening Post.

Another of our better magicians has laid the wand aside till better times. It had got so he was pulling pennies from atmosphere that formerly yielded quarters.—Des Moines Register.

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

Fact or Fable?

Many, many years ago, in one of the fairest provinces of a land just then become free, there was no institution for training the youth to take part in shaping the destinies of the commonwealth. There were only a few Dame schools for teaching small boys the rudiments of reading and writing and a half-dozen Latin schools, perhaps, where the wealthier young men could learn a little Latin and simple mathematics. Some from the very richest families were sent to the North or to Europe to receive instruction in the arts, law, politics, and the professions, but the great cost made this prohibitive for most. Girls received no instruction outside the home.

Some of the more far-seeing public men recognized the need for an institution to train future leaders, and when a constitution was adopted for governing local affairs of this new state entering into a great Confederation of free and democratic people, provision was made for the establishment of an University. Through much hardship was the money raised and the school built and opened to the public, the first state University in all the wide nation.

From the first, the University rendered a noble and indispensable service to its state. Its graduates went into all walks of life, filling places of highest honor and reflecting glory upon the state. Many became great and constructive governors. Others sat in the councils of the state and nation. A son of the University filled the highest place in the government of the country. Others performed invaluable service in the sciences, arts, letters and professions.

The University passed safely through civil war and economic and social disturbances. The people were proud of it. The nation was thankful for its services. The state prospered.

University leaders helped inaugurate a state system of public elementary and secondary schools. A technical college and a woman's college were established. Education for the masses had come. The state finally could quit thanking God for her neighbor to the southward.

Then the commonwealth became economically ambitious. Millions were borrowed to build roads. Industries were encouraged to come to the state. Visions of a great metropolis.

Mighty trusts reared up their heads. The state had become a manufacturing center. Cement roads threaded from mountains to coast. Great tourist centers sprang up.

Time came to pay. Bonds bear interest, and principal must be paid some day. Depression. World-wide economic disorder. The poor people, who bear the brunt of taxation, have no more money. Industries won't be taxed. Politicians can't take salary reductions. School expenditures cut to the bone. Teachers' salaries reduced below living wage.

The technical college and the woman's college merged with the University into one greater unit to reduce expenses. Great things expected.

Depression becomes panic. Red Cross feeds working people. No money except in places of the mighty, where it must not be touched. Power is king. Cigarette is queen. God protects divine right of royalty. Legislature takes first step leading to the end. The Greater University reduced to secondary level. Conditions become worse, and the whole state system of public schools dies struggling death. University given to bond holders to make crushed stone for factories and more roads in wealthier states. Democracy is dead.

Without public elementary and secondary schools, private colleges struggle along for a short time to prepare a few students sent from neighboring states, and finally close their doors. Education in the state is no more.

A mighty commonwealth finds itself educationally back just where it started many, many years ago.

And, then?

THE THEATRE

PLAYMAKER PRODUCTION OF "YOU NEVER CAN TELL"

By Ben Napier

The Playmaker choice of the Shaw play You Never Can Tell has served at least one excellent purpose—it has made possible the clarification of this department's ideas towards Playmaker productions in general. Your reviewer has been bewildered in the past by the elusiveness of that one definitely bad quality which seemed to destroy the value of the several productions. In each case there were decidedly good elements and decidedly bad ones. The focusing of the interest on the merits of the play itself must have prevented recognition of the fact that the good elements were always counter-balanced by the poor ones—in a word, that the productions were always of an uneven tone. It required the presentation of a familiar work to throw this defect into bold relief.

Then, too, this Shaw play was of peculiar efficacy for this purpose of unmasking the hidden traits. You Never Can Tell is a concoction that requires perfection in production to lift it from mediocrity to the high comedy it is. Dialogue and situations are all imbued with that supremely pleasant tomfoolery that is most difficult of attainment in reproduction. If the high level of this Shavian tomfoolery is not attained, the whole play is a failure; if it is reached and not maintained, it is what is nearly as bad for a Shaw comedy—uneven and halting. The Playmaker production was the latter. It only required this particular play to demonstrate this quality as one characteristic of their past performances.

The foregoing is not meant to be as carping a criticism as it sounds. To have failed in a perfect presentation of a Shaw play is no new thing—many more highly esteemed companies have done so. Indeed, it is a matter for congratulation that the production was as good as it succeeded in being. Nor is their faint praise for the sake of damnation. The high spots of the evening were definitely peaks; that the low ones were just as definitely valleys may be due to the fact that Miss Hatton is their last resort for a feminine lead.

To be more explicit, the unevenness of the production may be ascribed to the poor ability of this lady and Mr. Fitz-Simons as actors. The former's talents are unfortunately all exterior. Also to Mr. Fitz-Simons, he succeeded perfectly in creating the illusion of an American boy on a Playmaker stage trying to handle Shaw dialogue. It is to them chiefly that the low spots of the performance were due. One other lesser defect was the tendency of a Mr. Wang to mouth his lines.

The peaks of the evening were undoubtedly the performances of

Mr. Selden as William, and Miss Ewart as Dolly. The latter was sprightly, charming, and made most of the humor of her lines. Miss Ewart is one of two of the Playmakers good actresses of this year. Mr. Selden was very nearly perfect. The applause for his performance was a well-deserved tribute.

Despite the imperfections, the Playmakers gave an enjoyable evening to its audience. It was a Shaw play, after all.

Quarles, Landis And Reiss Provide Thrills As Tar Heels And Cavaliers Tie

Carolina 135-Pounder Piles Up Large Margin to Win From Goldstein.

TAR BABIES GET 5-3 WIN

The 4,000 spectators who saw Carolina tie Virginia 4-4 in their annual boxing meet last night, turned into 4,000 raving maniacs as five of the eight bouts ended in knockouts.

Every fight was replete with thrills from beginning to end, and Referee Brockman found it impossible to keep the crowd quiet as man after man hit the deck in the Tin Can ring. It was the final home meet of the season and the most exciting one.

Quarles Scores Win

In the long-awaited argument between Norm Quarles and Bobby Goldstein, the Tar Heel Express rolled over the Virginian and clubbed him to the king's estate, taking a one-sided verdict.

Quarles stood the gendarmes on their respective heads when he cornered the Cavalier in the first round and nearly dropped him. Goldy's knees were buckling as the gong rang and if the round has lasted but a few seconds longer, there is no doubt that the blonde bomber would have hung up a knockout victory. Bobby's ringmanship and experience were all that saved him in the second as Quarles tore into him again, beating Goldstein at his own boxing game and throwing beautiful straight left hands into his mid-section. Goldstein looked like the master of former ring battles in the third when he made Quarles miss repeatedly with left hooks but Norm had plenty to spare at the end. It was the first time that Goldstein has ever been defeated in over three years of college boxing.

Reiss Kayos Brown

The Brown-Reiss return affair was ended in a stunning manner when Reiss hit Brown a terrific blow square on the jaw. The Tar Heel went half way down but his fighting heart made him come erect before he had taken the benefit of a count. This proved to be a fatal error, for he was out on his feet and easy prey for the charging Reiss who flattened him for good.

Platt Landis once more sent the boys home talking to themselves with a one-round kayo. Platt embalmed Dawson in exactly 40 seconds of milling, during which it was quite obvious that the bout would not last long. The seconds in the Virginian's corner threw in the towel with Dawson on the floor.

Levinson Stops Rainey

Captain Levinson wound up his great boxing career in Chapel Hill in a blaze of glory, stopping Rainey in less than a round of fast milling. Rainey had just risen from the floor after dropping there as a result of a clip from Marty's left when the towel came hurtling into the ring.

Perhaps the most shocking ending of all the bouts occurred in the Nat Lumpkin-Tom Fishburne welterweight scrap. The going was fast, even throughout the first and until 1:52 minutes of the second, when Thomas got Nat against the ropes and hung a paralyzing right hander on the Tar Heel's button. Lumpkin collapsed to the floor.

Hal Stuart, Virginia's 155-pounder, reopened an old cut over Frank McIntosh's eye and Referee Brockman stopped the fight after only 1 minute and 20 seconds of the first round.

In the middleweight fight, Sam Giddens again was the master boxer and he scored this

SPORTS SCHEDULE HEADED BY CO-ED GAME TOMORROW

Chi Omega and Pi Phi Both Confident of Easy Victory in Game in Tin Can at 8:00.

Women's basketball will take the spotlight of sports here tomorrow night when the Pi Beta Phi cage team will meet the basket tossers of Chi Omega in a contest expected to climax the co-ed's athletic season this year. The game will start in the Tin Can promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

Both the sorority teams have undergone two weeks of strenuous practice sessions and their supporters claim each team is in shape to take the contest in a walk. Which is only one indication that the contest between Carolina's two woman's fraternities will be a real, hard-fought game.

The probable starting line-up for the Pi Phi's will include Virginia Yancey, captain, at center; Julia Bates Brown and Betty Harding, forwards; Grace Bowes, Jane Smoot, and Peggy Rawlings, guards.

In the Chi O. camp, Dot Bradley, center; Vivian Grissette, captain, and Evelyn Page, forwards; and Jac Small, Laura Ross, and Elizabeth Coates, guards, have won positions as first stringers.

Tickets for the event will be on sale at Pritchard Lloyd's tomorrow, and also at the gate. The price is only twenty-five cents and the proceeds will be devoted to charity institutions maintained by the organizations.

time over Smith, a rangy, hard-hitting boy, in one of the few bouts that went the limit. Sam had a clear edge at the end.

Archie Hahn is now the bantamweight champ of Chapel Hill as a result of his eye-lash win over Cliff Glover, the Tar Heel entry. The boys were in a dead heat at the end of the third and the fight went into an extra round.

Freshman Bouts

The freshman bouts proved far less spectacular than the varsity match with the Carolina yearlings taking a 5-3 decision from the Virginians. All the bouts save two went full length. In the 175-pound class, Wilkins of Virginia coming from behind, gained a technical knockout over Henson of Carolina in 1:05 minutes of the third round. Ellisberg of Carolina received a forfeit over Woolmer after the Virginia 165-pounder suffered a wrist injury.

The first two matches, between Eutsler of Carolina, and Epps of Virginia in the 115-pound class and between Frucht of Carolina and Carey of Virginia in the 125-pound class provided excitement for the meet, with the Tar Heels scoring better blows in heavy exchanges to gain the decisions.

Brooks, powerful Virginia 135-pounder, overcame Glenn's reach to win in that weight. Leonard of Virginia took the second and third rounds of his match to win over Sutton, Tar Heel 145-pounder.

In the 155-pound match, Brown, Tar Baby fighter, took two rounds to get completely on to McClung, Virginia lefthander, and gained the last round by a big margin to win his fight.

Kanner's reach and strength played a large part as the Carolina heavyweight completely out-classed his opponent.

BETAS AND ZETA PSI LOSE CHANCE TO WIN PENNANT

Best House and Old East Lead Dormitory Loop in Intramural Contests Last Week.

Last week brought disaster to two pennant contenders in the fraternity loop of the intramural basketball scramble for the campus championship. Zeta Psi, which dropped a 30-26 decision to Chi Psi Friday, and Beta Theta Pi, which succumbed to an upset at the hands of Alpha Tau Omega the preceding day, were the leaders who dropped from the top of the standings.

Dormitory teams still undefeated are Best House and Old East, with six wins each, and Mangum and Swain Hall with five apiece. In the Greek-letter league Chi Psi's six victories put that team a jump ahead of S. A. E. and T. E. P. which have five victories each in as many starts.

Only seven men had passed the sixty mark in the race for individual honors in scoring at the end of the fourth week of the season. Longest, of Theta Kappa Nu, established a new record for points scored in one game as he amassed thirty-three Monday against Phi Gamma Delta, and advanced into a tie with Fox, of Old East, idle last week. Both men have eighty-six to their credit for games to date. Hinson, another Old East man, kept idle by a forfeit last week, was in second place with eighty points, while Alexander, Deke center, had seventy-four to place third. Ed Everette, Kappa Alpha star, garnered thirty-one markers against Phi Alpha Friday to advance into fourth position with a total of seventy-two points. Everette has taken part in only four games so far and has a fine chance of overtaking the leaders before the close of the season.

Snyder, of Best House, with sixty-eight, and Lawrence, of Chi Psi, with sixty-one, were the other men who had scored higher than sixty points for the season. Chi Psi meets Pi Kappa Alpha this week. S. A. E. should experience little difficulty in downing Theta Chi, a second division club, while T. E. P. has two games, the second against Kappa Sigma, a powerful club, and may succumb.

In the dormitory circuit Best House will wind up its eight-game campaign this week, meeting Old West. Best House will receive a forfeit from Steele, which has dropped out of the race. Old East's game with Manly should offer little opposition to the leaders, Swain Hall should have little difficulty with Everett, and Mangum takes on Old East and Ruffin, the latter a threat to any team.

Monday's Schedule

3:45—(1) Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Chi; (2) Theta Kappa Nu vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; (3) Delta Psi vs. Phi Alpha.
4:45—(1) Ruffin vs. Independents; (2) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (3) Phi Delta Chi vs. Delta Tau Delta.

CAROLINA CAGE TEAM DEFEATED BY OLD LINERS

Maryland Runs Up 14 to 1 Lead in First Eleven Minutes of Game in Decisive Victory.

Taking a fourteen to one lead in the first eleven minutes, and holding its advantages by a tight defense, Maryland's cagers handed Carolina's White Phantoms their second defeat of this season Friday night at College Park. The final score was 42 to 29.

Maryland held a nineteen to nine lead at the end of the first half and were never in danger of being overtaken by the White Phantoms. Carolina pulled up within eight points of the Old Liners during the second period, but near the close of the game the winners jumped far ahead to get their decisive win.

Snyder, forward, and Vincent, center, led the play of the Old Liners, getting twelve and eleven points respectively. Wilmer Hines, usually high scorer for Carolina was successfully stopped by the Maryland guards. The White Phantom captain was limited to one lone field goal. Weathers and Brandt, with seven points each, led the Carolina point-making.

TAR BABY QUINT TEAM WINS OVER WOODBERRY PREP

Nelson, Rankin, and McCachren Lead Fast Play of Carolina Freshmen In Game Friday Afternoon.

Carolina's Tar Baby basketball team kept their Virginia record clean by handing Woodberry's five a 37 to 25 beating Friday afternoon at Orange, Virginia.

Using a fast passing attack and an airtight defense, Carolina's yearling team ran their total to twenty-three while holding the prep school team to twelve points during the first half. The contest was on more even terms during the last half with the Tar Babies counting fourteen points to Woodberry's thirteen.

Nelson and Rankin, Tar Baby forward and center respectively, topped the scoring with eleven points each. McCachren starred at guard for the Tar Babies and added six points to their total. Morton, Woodberry center, with nine points led the attack for the losers.

Duke in their first meeting of this season and need a win over the Blue Devils to stay in the race for Big Five championship honors. The freshman cagers of the same universities battle in a preliminary. Also on Saturday the varsity boxing team fights the strong Penn State mittmen at Penn State, and Archie Allen's freshman boxers take on Oak Ridge at Oak Ridge to complete the week's schedule.

of widely known works, he had direct charge of the George Washington Bi-Centennial program in Washington last summer. At present, MacKaye is delivering a series of lectures on poetry at Sweet Briar College.

As their part of the Festival program, the Playmakers presented the Shavian success, You Never Can Tell, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights before packed houses. Although this play was one of Shaw's earliest works, it is regarded by many as one of his best efforts. It was seeing this play in Chicago twenty-nine years ago that inspired Dr. Henderson to compile his biography of Shaw.

Sponsored entirely by the Carolina Playmakers, under the direction of Professor Koch, the Shaw-Henderson festival was designed to honor Dr. Henderson for his life of Shaw, Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet.

ever from the usual run of successful child prodigies and gives the real key both to his character and genius. He gave up violin-playing completely, announcing his ambition to become a physician like his father. He studied intensively for this, studies that were interrupted by a period of military service during which he became an officer in a regiment of Uhlans.

Not once during his year in the army did Kreisler touch the violin. Presently, the urge reasserted itself. He began playing and made several appearances, but was not satisfied. He felt he had lost something and retired into the country for eight weeks. In March, 1899, he made his return debut in Berlin, and the reception was brilliant. From then on his greatness was assured and recognized.

fore 1929 and must come down. The spokesmen for the public schools are giving you all the facts and figures on that subject. I would like to emphasize several reasons why school costs went up in the years before 1929. One chief reason is the educational, industrial, and social advance in North Carolina; increasingly large numbers of people came to North Carolina to work and live, and more and more children were born in North Carolina. The people demanded more and better schools, and they got them. The increase in school costs by and large has been due to the fact that there has been a tremendous increase in the number of students for longer terms and more years, in better buildings and under better trained teachers.

The larger number of better trained teachers in the schools has raised not only the costs of the schools but also the quality of the schools. Good teachers have to invest many years of their lives and many thousands of dollars to fit themselves to be good teachers. This is true in a special way of the best teachers and administrators in the public schools and the professors in the colleges. They reach about forty years of age before they become school heads or professors, and in many cases are still paying off the loans for their graduate training. The cut in their salaries, already below the scale of their peers in business and the lucrative professions, are taken standing up, as their bit for the state and the times. But the significant thing for the state is that they find already deep cuts in the laboratory, library, and the general tools of efficient work; and, also, as the cuts continue into their own personal sense of security for efficient work, they have to cut into their own personal tools: books, journals in their fields, attendance on professional and learned societies, and their general intellectual and cultural equipment for their best work. The cumulative cuts become not so much cuts of an individual or a group, but cuts into the life and equipment of a teacher of youth. In North Carolina cuts already have become cuts into what teachers, productive scholars, creative scientists, and thinkers have to give their students, the generation, and even posterity. The students in the public schools and colleges give the precious years of their lives, their eager minds, and youthful hopes. It is not the part of a great people who know what they owe themselves and their children to frustrate their hopes and cheapen the quality of the life of a state for a generation.

Salaries of Teachers

The quality of the public schools measures the quality of the life of a commonwealth. The salary scale of the public schools is considered the best standard of the social values of a state. To keep on cutting down the salary scale of the teachers of North Carolina is to tear down quickly the slow work of decades. Profits and fees in other fields jump back quickly to their former comparatively high scale, but not so the salary scale of teachers. The attraction of the best talent away from the teaching profession into business and the other professions, already strong, is setting in strongest at the top; and that's the rub—where it hurts the most. Within the year, three of the best school superintendents in North Carolina have been employed by commercial houses. Other states have captured some of our best trained supervisors. My own county of Orange this year cut out a supervisor whose absence has left not only the children but the whole county poorer for the loss of her radiant spirit. It was these better trained teachers, better buildings, more children, longer terms, more high schools, and consolidated county schools and buses, that increased the school costs in North Carolina before 1929.

Analysis of So-Called Frills

Moreover, a deeper knowledge of the springs of human behavior and development, a wider mastery of child psychology, and the differences in youthful personalities, needs, and aptitudes have placed upon the schools the responsibility of providing a wider range in the choice of courses for the development of the whole personality of the child. These are some of the frills which we are cutting out of our schools: music, art, and the handicrafts. The better schools are more and more recognizing that children are not only different but that all of them have plastic souls which need to be nourished on truth, goodness, and beauty, and the things of the spirit, which our civilization at its creative best has to give. I personally know teachers, white and black, teachers of frills, if you please, who never miss a chance to take, as best they can, to the eager children of their crowded classrooms some bit of appreciation of truth, goodness, and moral heroism, and some practice in expressing in various art forms more beautifully what is deep in the mind and soul of youth. These public school teachers of frills and the social sciences, so bitterly under attack today, have their reward in the faces of their students as they respond to the fugitive beauty of a great painting, the majesty of a great opera, the glory of an ancient art, or, in the field of the social sciences, as they respond to the challenge of social situations and perhaps assimilate into the core of their own character the heroism they meet in people and books. We teachers have stumbled and fumbled at our jobs, God knows, but the best educators of Europe and America have tried to work out school programs more adapted to the personalities and needs of the children. When we cut these out now, let us pray God against the necessities which tend to deny to many children a little more glimpse of the nature of our society and the beauty of the earth.

The needs and demands of the people added still other costs. The people all over North Carolina, as all over America, also demanded that in view of the fact that the larger proportion of school children do not go to college, the schools should prepare boys and girls not only for college but also for the life into which they were immediately going. Whence came commercial and industrial courses, and courses in home making, home economics, and ideals of the home, civics, social problems, and social ideals in the building of a nobler society.

Many of this generation are grateful to church or state for the opportunity in school to catch in the original Greek and Latin the sweep of imagination, the beauty, majesty and nobility of the literatures of an ancient but still gloriously living past. Yet we of this generation also feel great gaps in our education. We were not in a socially scientific way made even aware of the need of building up corresponding social controls of the machine and the mighty economic forces let loose upon earth by specialized knowledge with the power to destroy or rebuild the structure of the modern world. A chief hope of never again making such a mess of the world as our generation has, is in the development of a new sense of the spiritual worth of all human beings, as children of the Kingdom of God, rich and poor, white and colored, tenant farmer and industrial worker, financial leader, and the child in the remotest mountain cove; in the development of a new international sense of the brotherhood of men and nations; and in the development of a fresh and more intelligent sense of social responsibility and the need of social guidance, not only through the colleges, but also more daily through the high schools, in the adolescent years of youth, eager for the great adventure of building a fairer society.

When we have been cutting the schools, these are the imponderable values into which, in many cases, we have been cutting. Part of the cutting is a natural part of the deflation process, long since, however, become a part of the vicious economic spiral downward, cutting more and more into the thin purchasing power of the people. It should be remembered in this connection that the schools of North Carolina at their best, were not on an inflated basis. The farmers, industrial workers, teachers and low-salaried groups were not at all in on the speculative profits, but they are altogether in on the deflation losses. They were not, as is well known, on the great joy ride, but they are helping to pay the gas bill for those who were, and with a saving sense of humor about the tragic social irony of it all. But the thing has gone far enough.

It has been one of the contemporary American tragedies that the depression, together with the necessary drive in America to cut down the cost of government, is falling most heavily on the schools and libraries of the south, whose people, in their comparative poverty, have struggled so long and so hard to bring their schools up toward an averagely decent level of worth to all the children of the people. We must not forget that toll of the depression is heaviest against the Negro schools. We recall in this connection with democratic satisfaction that during these worst years of the depression all the schools in North Carolina, rich and poor, rural and city, white and colored, by virtue of the McLean law, have been kept open the entire constitutional term. Yet the North Carolina public schools at their best were far below the American average of costs in 1929. Three millions have been taken out already. Now it is proposed to take out two millions more.

The people of North Carolina have taken their stand here today and in a thousand communities from which this meeting draws its hopes and gathers its strength, as they present the case and the cause of the public schools.

University and Public Schools

It is only natural that the spokesman for higher education and the University of North Carolina should take his stand on, with, and for the public schools. The public schools of North Carolina were born at Chapel Hill. Caldwell, Murphy, Yancey, Wiley, Alderman, McIver, and Aycock are dead, but the public schools which they dreamed, founded, and builded still live and will live as long as North Carolinians carry on their most precious tradition and develop the resources of their strength. In speaking a word for the public schools, I am speaking for the University and higher education in North Carolina; in speaking a word for the University and higher education I am speaking for the public schools.

Let us look at the budget of the state and the proportionate decrease for higher education in North Carolina. The decrease in public expenditures for current maintenance and operation of all divisions and agencies of the state was from 63 million in 1929 to 54 million in 1932. The average decrease in all divisions and agencies of the state in current operating costs to the state was 14.8 per cent. The institutions of higher learning showed a decrease in costs to the state of 42.8 per cent. The University of North Carolina, as a fair illustration of them all, received $894,000 from the state in 1929, was voted $721,000 by the last legislature for this year, but will receive $504,000. It is proposed by the budget bureau that the University at Chapel Hill receive $390,000 or a cut of 56 per cent since 1929. It is proposed to give the three combined units of the consolidated University less money by $140,000 in 1934 than was given to one of those units in 1930. These figures are no less true of all the state educational institutions. As a symbol of the stakes of all the institutions, the proposal for $390,000 for the University at Chapel Hill has not only stirred the conscience of the state but has shocked the whole university world.

It is common knowledge among the great universities of America, all of which have tried to draw away the strongest men in the faculty of the University, and many of which have made no salary cuts, that these professors stayed at Chapel Hill at less than half the salaries offered elsewhere. They have stayed after being cut twice. Sixty-one have refused ninety offers totalling more than $100,000 annually above what they receive at Chapel Hill, not counting the second cut. Their work is a productive part of the life and thought of this state. Their names are respected and their research is utilized by scholars on five continents. We could not again perhaps gather a like company of teachers, productive teachers, scientists, and thinkers for much more than their total salary fund at any place in America. We can not at Chapel Hill build another such faculty in this generation. This is not my opinion. It is in substance the verdict of the university world. They love the University; they love the students hopefully gathered there under the ancient oaks with a rootage deep in the soil of a great tradition. They and their compeers in all our colleges love the state and people of North Carolina. Their work has been for all the people of this state, whether white people or colored people, tenants on farms, workers in factories, people in cities, or people in the countryside. They have joined in any cause that has had to do with trying to make our state a little better from day to day with bits of dreams thrown in out of which great commonwealths are made. They have refused to go. North Carolina will not drive them away.

Low Per Capita Cost

The University of North Carolina compared with like institutions in the country is a poor institution. It has the lowest per capita cost of any institution of its rank in America. As I stand here today as a spectator of history, I see rising again in North Carolina, out of the ruins of reconstruction, and somehow out of the poverty and dreams of a people, one of the acknowledged great universities of the world. She gladly and proudly joins hands today with the State College of Agriculture and Engineering and the Woman's College, both with noble traditions and high capacities, basic to the work and hopes of North Carolina for a better day, as the consolidated symbol of the cause of higher education in North Carolina—east and west, white and black.

In the common cause, she stands today with her back to the wall, but it is a wall of youthful hopes and a people's faith that will not let her down. She seeks to understand those who would strike her down. Her intellectual integrity and her freedom she would preserve at the cost of all her appropriations. The University, her sister institutions, and the schools ask for the right to live, the freedom to think, and the opportunity to help North Carolina do her bit in the great task of recovery and reconstruction.

The Long-Run View

We must see our state problem of reconstruction in the long-run view of history, with its eventual rejection of panaceas and magic formulas, and in the wide view of the world, in whose present catastrophe this state is deeply involved. We must not in an hour of hysteria cut to a cheap level the government of the people. A less intelligent government will mean a more wasteful government. Less government of the people will mean more privilege of the few. We can not hack our way out by an unintelligent attack on the public service and these agencies of social control which have grown up to protect, guide and develop the life of the people in response to their needs in the complex modern world. We can not back our way out into a simpler society without a crash of that great mechanical framework now flung around the earth and which even in the low year of the depression still holds up the structure of our modern world. To tear down is a wasteful way to pay up and to get out. We must pay our long running debt by the long-run building up of the intelligent and spiritual powers and capacities of the people and their children.

In the nineteenth century through the schools, the laboratories, and the colleges we mastered the earth for its productive power. In the twentieth century we must master our productive power for all mankind. In the schools, colleges and universities we stand with inquiring minds along the frontiers of the vast social possibilities of our yet unmastered civilization.

We must more intelligently and fairly adjust the social balance of the machines that produce and the people who consume. We must create our way out toward the great society and the Kingdom of God. We must invest in the intellectual and spiritual resources of youth. The children of this depression are not by our neglect to be the lost generation, but are by our faith to be the generation who will rebuild a fairer world.

MID-TERMS SHOW SHARP DECREASE IN DEFICIENCIES

Registrar's List Reveals That Number of Failing Grades Has Been Cut in Half.

Seven hundred and thirty-eight students in the University were reported with mid-term deficiencies in one or more subjects for the winter quarter, according to the statement posted in the registrar's office.

This number is 162 less than the total deficiency listing for the same quarter last year and 722 less than the total posted for last quarter. Based on the present enrollment of 2,600, the 738 deficient students represent twenty-eight per cent of the entire student body.

English Department Leads
Whereas mathematics caused the greatest number of deficiencies in the fall quarter, the English department showed the greatest number of poor grades this quarter with a total of 189, an increase of twenty. Mathematics was the next hardest subject, 146 deficient marks being reported as against 221 last quarter.

Although the French department showed a decrease of thirty-four, it was the third highest subject in the number of deficiencies with 130 warning grades. The number of failing history grades showed a sharp drop from 160 last quarter to only fifty-two this quarter. Chemistry, with 122, and Spanish, with eighty-four, were the fourth and fifth highest subjects in the number of deficiencies. Economics followed closely with eighty poor grades.

NOTED SPEAKERS TO APPEAR HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

Dr. Clarence Poe and Dr. Gordon Ward Will Discuss "Men and Land" on Forum Series.

"Men and Land," a discussion of important agricultural problems, will bring two distinguished speakers to the Open Forum platform in Gerrard hall Thursday night. Dr. Clarence Poe, the well-known editor of The Progressive Farmer, and Dr. Gordon Ward of the faculty of Virginia Polytechnic Institute will feature in this fifth lecture of the series.

Ward, who is speaking for the League for Industrial Democracy, is expected to reveal some interesting features of his vast amount of research data accumulated in ten years of investigation into farming methods in the United States. He believes that cooperative society is the only solution to the problem of achieving social justice for the 27,000,000 farm people of the nation.

Dr. Poe is well known through the south for his publication, which has a circulation in combined editions of 850,000 alone in the southern states. The program is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock as usual. The following week will bring Miss Minnifred Chappell, a member of the social service commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, North and Mrs. W. T. Bost, Commissioner of Public Welfare in North Carolina to the platform here.

Odum And Jackson To Speak At Emory

Two members of the University faculty, Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of the institute for research in Social Science, and Dean Walter C. Jackson of the school of public administration, left yesterday for Emory University where they will deliver addresses to the combined Georgia Press Institute of Citizenship.

Dr. Odum will address the Institute Wednesday evening February 8, on "Leadership in Public Affairs," and Dean Jackson will conduct a round table discussion on Friday morning, February 9, on "The Technique of Leadership."

FAMOUS PEOPLE HONOR SHAW AND HENDERSON HERE

Tributes From Celebrities of Entire World Are Read As Festival Closes.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, whose remarkable versatility has brought him distinction as mathematician, historian, and literator, today stood acclaimed by representatives of two hemispheres, noted educators, scientists, and authorities of the drama, who joined with the University Sunday night in paying joint tribute to Bernard Shaw, the famous Irish dramatist, and his distinguished biographer, Dr. Henderson.

The celebration Sunday night, which was held in the Carolina Playmakers theatre, with a large audience attending, marked the culmination of the Shaw-Henderson festival, which was opened last Thursday evening with the presentation by the Playmakers of You Never Can Tell, one of Shaw's earliest comedies, which prompted Henderson, upon seeing it in Chicago in 1903, to begin a correspondence with Shaw that led to the latter's acceptance of the Chapel Hill professor as his authorized biographer.

Celebrate Henderson's Work
The festival was planned chiefly in celebration of Henderson's splendid achievement (Continued on last page)

DYER TO DIRECT ORATORIO SINGERS AT FAYETTEVILLE

Head of Music Department Will Begin Supervision of Rehearsals for The Holy City Tomorrow.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the music school, will direct rehearsals of a group of Fayetteville musicians who will present Alfred Gaul's The Holy City at Fayetteville, Sunday, March 5. Dyer will begin his work tomorrow night and will continue to supervise the production until it is presented next month. Dyer has been chosen from a group of several music supervisors of the state.

DARST SUGGESTS TURNING TO GOD AS ONLY REMEDY

Bishop Cites Religion of Soldiers As Example for Youth of Today to Follow.

Enlistment of the cause of God was brought out as the only salvation from this period of financial depression by Bishop Thomas C. Darst, Bishop of East Carolina, speaking in the freshman and sophomore assembly yesterday.

According to Bishop Darst the fundamental cause seems to be that people had nothing very definite to which to devote their time. To illustrate his point he defined the religion of a soldier, which was given to him by an ex-soldier, and which is "The religion of a soldier is that of great cause and a great companionship." As a remedy for the evils of today Bishop Darst suggests that the youth of today enlist themselves in some cause that would lift them from themselves and eliminate selfishness.

In conclusion Bishop Darst stated that we shall see the dawning of a new day when the people return to fellowship with God.

CHAPEL SERVICES TO BEGIN TODAY

Voluntary devotional services will be inaugurated this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall with Bill McKee conducting the short scriptural reading and prayer. Similar ten-minute programs will be given every morning except those on which freshmen and sophomore assemblies take place.

Walter Patterson, University organist, will render two meditative musical selections, one at the beginning and the other at the close of the program. No account will be taken of attendance and no announcements will be in order. Everyone is invited to attend.

The services will be conducted by members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets. Lawrence Fountain and Ike Minor will read the passages on Wednesday, and Thursday, respectively.

Hugh McAmis Visits Department Of Music

Hugh McAmis, organist and choirmaster of All-Saint's Church of Great Neck, Long Island, who presented a concert Sunday afternoon at Duke University, visited the University department of music yesterday.

As a guest of Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, local instructor in organ, McAmis inspected the organ installed in Hill Music hall and played several selections for a small group of music students. He is considered one of the foremost organists in the eastern United States and is now visiting a number of organ locations in the east while on vacation.

YEAR BOOK STAFF CASTS VOTE FOR STAFF ELECTIONS

Staff of Yackety-Yack Votes to Elect Editor Under Plan Submitted by Other Staffs.

The members of the Yackety Yack staff met yesterday afternoon and by a vote of 11 to 3 favored the election of its editor by a staff vote. The decision was made after a long discussion of the merits of the new plan.

The first proposal to be passed was that the staff was against the old method of election by the student body. Following this negative action, the group was in a dead-lock for some time regarding the advisability of offering a recommendation differing in some respects from that ratified by the other three publications. It was finally decided, however, that, all-in-all, the plan already proposed by the other staffs was best suited to the selection of the best man for office.

All Staffs Agree

Now that all the publications have expressed approval and substantiated the merits of the staff-election plan it will be brought up for discussion tonight at a meeting of the campus activities committee, and then submitted to the student council for official sanction before being placed to a campus vote.

Fifty-One Books To Be Sold At Bull's Head

Fifty-one books, formerly in the rental library, will go to the highest bidders at an auction sale in the Bull's Head bookshop tomorrow morning during chapel period. These books have paid for themselves in the rental library and are being sold in order to provide funds for newer books to replace them. Mayne Albright will be the auctioneer.

Among those to be placed on the block are Obscure Destinies by Willa Cather, The Sheltered Life by Ellen Glasgow, Grand Hotel by Vicki Baum, Westward Passage by Margaret Ayer Barnes, Red-headed Woman by Katherine Brush, The Phantom by George Worts, and Mourning Becomes Electra by Eugene O'Neill.

Green Signed by Fox

Paul Green, University professor who is now in Hollywood, has been signed by Fox to write a rural story for Will Rogers. The company made the decision after the success of Rogers' "State Fair," adapted from the novel by Phil Stong.

FIGHT LOOMS AS HOUSE TAKES UP BUDGET SLASHES

Friends of Greater University Prepare to Wage Stern Fight If Cuts Are Proposed.

Friends of the Greater University of North Carolina, which now embraces the State College at Raleigh and the Woman's College at Greensboro, are making a big fight to increase the appropriations for the University, asserting that, if the budget bureau's recommendation for funds for the Greater University for the next two years is allowed to stand, the institution will be reduced more or less to the status of a prep school.

Whether to raise or lower the figure recommended is the big question now at issue. Members of the committee, however, seem to be of the opinion that the University's appropriations should be kept within the figure recommended by the budget bureau. Another floor fight may result if such a recommendation is made.

Study Being Conducted

Sub-committees of the joint appropriations committee are now engaged in studying State-supported teacher's college and Negro colleges with a view of "co-ordinating" the work. This "co-ordination" may mean consolidation, a rather popular word in this Legislature.

It is the belief of many legislators that the state can operate the schools at a minimum of $16,500,000, but the school people are represented as believing that it will take at least eighteen million dollars to do this.

DI AND PHI WILL ARGUE ELECTIONS AT JOINT SESSION

Senate and Assembly Will Debate Elections of Editors By Staffs Tonight.

The Di Senate and the Phi Assembly will meet in joint session at 7:00 o'clock this evening in the Di Senate hall in New West. This will be the first session which the two societies have held together since the spring quarter of 1932.

The committee appointed by President McKee of the Di to propose bills for discussion has placed the following resolutions on the calendar for the meeting:

Resolved: That the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly in joint session assembled on this February 7, 1933, go on record as favoring the proposal to vest the election of the editors of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the Carolina Magazine, the Buccaneer, and the Yackety Yack with the staffs of the respective publications.

Resolved: That the General Assembly of North Carolina now in session should by statute withdraw from students in the various state-supported schools of education the privilege of signing the free-tuition note, such statute to become effective at the beginning of the 1933-34 school year.

Resolved: That a general co-operative store should be organized by the students and faculty of the University for the purpose of securing at the lowest possible prices such merchandise as they may desire.

Power and Prejudice

Some time in the near future, the student body will be given the opportunity to express itself on the proposal set forth by the Buccaneer, and adopted by the DAILY TAR HEEL and the Carolina Magazine, which would place the election of campus publication editors in the hands of the respective staffs of the publications, instead of leaving this important duty in the hands of the student body as a whole.

Many arguments have been advanced in favor of the plan, and by the soundness of their arguments, its proponents have shattered the last stronghold of the opposition, namely: that, if adopted, the proposed plan would rob the student of the only grip which he has on the publications, would wipe out what little interest he might still have in them, and render them entirely independent of him. These arguments have been shown to be largely the work of campus politicians, who are reluctant to give up this important function, over which they have been wont to exert so large a control in the past.

The rational student can easily see the benefits which would result from an adoption of the proposed plan. Not only would it eliminate the evils of election by political machinery, but it would greatly simplify the procedure and leave the service uninterrupted from one administration to the other.

Under the present plan, it is necessary for the staffs, when nominating candidates for the editorships, to pick those men who are most popular on the campus, which might not at all be evidence of the candidate's ability. The new system would do away with all of these petty considerations and make ability to handle the job the primary requisite. The student will still have a distinctive voice in the policy of the publications through his representatives on the Publications Union Board.

Positions on the staffs of the various publications are open to any student who has the ability and inclination to fill them, which ought to be a sufficient guarantee against the assumption of unnecessary power on the part of the editor or the staffs, in contradiction to the interests of the campus and the students.

Every student should give this matter his earnest consideration, and arrive at some conclusion without being unduly influenced by campus politicians.—W.A.S.

Two Evils: Find the Lesser

From all indications it appears that the General Assembly has about come to the conclusion that if the state is to support an eight-months school term, a general sales tax is inevitable. No doubt there will be plenty of argument against the proposal, but in spite of its undesirable features, it remains the only solution in sight for the drastic financial needs of the state which must be satisfied if we are to uphold in any measure our standards of public welfare.

It is estimated that the sales tax, if ratified, will yield a maximum revenue of about $3,000,000 for each one per cent of the levy. This means, however, that under no consideration could an eight-months school term be financed on an amount less than that accruing from a two per cent tax. And if North Carolina does accept the sales tax of two per cent, she will rank with Mississippi as having the highest general levy in the country. But such a comparison proves no index to the wealth of a state, for a tax of the same amount is now being recommended by Governor Lehman for New York, the richest state of the Union.

In spite of all that may be said against it, however, a sales tax should be preferable to an unrelenting policy of retrenchment. At least, its effect will be distributed somewhat more evenly than is that of governmental economies in particular departments maintained by the state. For as yet the brunt of salary cuts and other efforts to save has been borne by our public school system. A sales tax, on the contrary, will more nearly approach the purpose of Lloyd George's budget—"to lay the heaviest burden on the broadest back," and the broadest back, in this instance, will be the millions of individual consumers in North Carolina. A sales tax merely means a slight lowering of the purchasing power of each; unbridled economy in our schools will require years to readjust. We have our choice of two evils.—A.T.D.

The Metropolitan's Last Stand

The Announcement carried in Sunday's New York Times to the effect that a proposal had been made to reorganize the Metropolitan Opera on a national scale in an effort to weather the present financial storm brings sighs of regrets to those of the old-timers who remember the opera of days gone by. Those were the days when the opera was a social event and its queen of the hour had her reign in the social whirl, the glamorous days of Schuman-Heink and the incomparable Scotti. The old Metropolitan has played a prominent part in cultural growth of America, even during times of intellectually-deadening prosperity. Now a depression threatens to banish her and all she stood for, to force her to go proletarian in her effort to stave off destruction.

Yet it is indeed an ill wind which blows nobody good. The new plan advocated by the Metropolitan directors contemplates a division of the season with all the larger cities and even with cities such as Richmond and Atlanta. Proponents of the plan pointed out that it would not be a radical departure from the past but rather a return to the custom of the "Golden Age." In the past greater America has been deprived of the opportunity to enjoy opera by the masters. She has been able to hear only the performances of second-raters, a fact greatly responsible for the present unpopularity of the opera.

The Metropolitan has been forced to move out of town to seek sustenance. Its future depends upon the support, not of just a few New York millionaires, but upon the everyday man. Will America permit its greatest of musical and dramatic institutions to join the relics of the past? It amounts, in its way, to a test of the intellectual and cultural interests of the American people.—V.C.R.

A Farewell to Whiskers

A Vienna doctor claims to have discovered a method for treating a man's face in such a way that never thereafter will whiskers grow on his physiognomical map. This is an amazing discovery and is loaded to the muzzle with important possibilities.

The treatment consisting of exposing the face to certain rays, is most successful, it is said.

It would seem that this Viennese doctor has discovered a great boon to mankind. We have never been able to appreciate the value of whiskers. They are not particularly pretty to look at and if permitted to grow in cultivated or uncultivated profusion, they clutter up a man's face to the extent of concealing his features. Think of the many smiles originating behind whiskers which are bound to remain unseen or be taken for villainous grins. The whisker ambush has often placed one in the embarrassing position of not knowing whether the wearer is laughing or crying.

It might be argued that man was originally endowed with whiskers to keep his face warm, but this argument is not consistent. When whiskers were handed around, then, why was the poor Indian and the Eskimo overlooked. The latter, who lives in the far north where whiskers would be a great comfort, with the mercury down to 60 and 80 degrees below zero, is short on whiskers.

Frequently one meets a man who, when he politely take off his hat, is bald as an egg—yet his face may be almost concealed by the finest crop of whiskers you ever saw. And they say Mother Nature never makes a mistake.

This doctor's discovery will be received with open heart by the man who has to shave every day of his life to suppress his beard. But the fuzzy-faced youth will speak disparagingly of this Viennese benefactor. The up and coming young man is very proud when he first begins to scrape his features and commits himself to the

Winter

It has been suggested that we write an editorial about the changing weather in the hopes that the Legislature or Congress or Mr. Brisbane or somebody will attend to it. It is out, friends tell us, too cold now for any good, but as the French-Canadian said "ve don't call thees cold in Quebec." Cold weather has a lot of advantages after all. You can make your own ice cubes, for instance, by placing a tray of water on your window ledge. And just think how fine it feels to come into the warm house from the cold outdoors. There must be many other advantages but we can't think of any right now except the "Animal Kingdom" joke. You can't tell that in July.

"A Protesting Student"

The person who turned in the contribution to "Speaking the Campus Mind" column signed "a protesting student" is asked to see the editor and make known his identity before his letter can be published.

The young man is somewhat grossly mistaken and were we he, before we wrote so openly to a newspaper we would be sure of facts, especially those which misrepresent the truth. As a matter of fact there is no student on this campus who

Political Hypocrisy

To the Editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

"The best and fairest way to choose the editors of our publications is by the vote of their respective staffs." Bobbie Mason and two of his fellow editors, backed heartily and earnestly by their staffs, have submitted this proposition to the student body and have asked for its approval, supporting their request with convincing arguments.

Think of the injustice and hardship that this plan would bring to these bosses who have dedicated themselves body and soul to the glorious work of duping the student body this spring. And, horror of that editorship to the Mu Pi Mus; they'll pull out if they don't get the job for the other party will give them a major office. And the Upsilon Upsilon might pull out with them. The Mu Mus say their man won't be elected by the staff which knows him too well and would vote for Smith instead; of course, Smith wouldn't get it in a campus vote as he isn't well-known and hasn't spent his time in boot-licking. Smith has spent entirely too much time on the paper to make campus contacts."

Then the "Campus Mind" Column was graced with two dazzling effusions of political propaganda. The authors were two of the old-timers—one of whom is dishing out in advance the hoped-for spoils of the spring; the other is grabbing hungrily at a juicy plum among these spoils. "We must fight dictatorship—we pay money—we want to vote—crime—unspeakable—undemocratic."

Significant was the failure by both to prove: First, that the proposed plan was not fairer and more favorable towards getting the best man. Secondly, they made no effort to prove that the old plan itself was democratic. They forgot that the privilege of casting a vote is vastly different from the privilege of sharing in who is to be chosen. The bosses who nominate really elect.

A prime principle of true democracy is to get the best men in office. Democracy has often admitted its inability to do this directly in some circumstances and the people have often delegated this power to a single person or a group of persons. What direct voice has the average voter in selecting the President's cabinet, Judges of the Supreme Court, Ambassadors, Heads of the Federal Reserve Banks? Nor could we average citizens vote intelligently for these officials.

A Mistake Corrected

To the Editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

In your issue of Friday, February 3 there happened to appear a letter from a young man who signs himself "A Democratic Student." Now, we have very little to say regarding this young man's letter, simply because we find that it is the best policy to totally ignore all such criticisms, good and bad. Publications have to stand for a lot of things that other people and officials would not dare to take, but some things are better left unsaid.

The young man is somewhat grossly mistaken and were we he, before we wrote so openly to a newspaper we would be sure of facts, especially those which misrepresent the truth. As a matter of fact there is no student on this campus who pays a fee of two dollars ($2.00) for the Buccaneer. He and all the others pay exactly forty cents ($0.40) or just five cents, one nickel, for each and every copy of the Buccaneer. It just so happens that Mr. Democratic Student and the twenty-six hundred others at Carolina pay for their publications in advance simply because they as DEMOCRATIC STUDENTS WITH RIGHTS TO VOTE voted to pay their publication fee in advance. Both the editor and I do our very best to give the students on the campus just what they want, and if Mr. Democratic Student is not satisfied with the Buccaneer we will be glad to have him come by our office sometime during the following week and we will refund his forty cents out of our own pockets.

Something About A Bad Egg

To the Editor,
THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

All the thousands of people who recently voted in the state elections against a short ballot are outmoded; a system that depends upon the people for the authority it confers is outmoded. This is an age of centralization of power and all the elective governments of the world are wrong! Or so Mr. N. L. in his recent article seems to believe.

The proposed plan of staff elections is unsound, in my opinion, and I don't care if every school in the country uses it. What it is suggested that we do is to follow docilely the lead of political maneuverers who have an end in view. That end is the will of those in power to extend their influence a little further into the future, to have a say about who shall succeed them. The same motive makes a person want a tombstone at his grave.

It is claimed by those sponsoring the newly suggested plan that would-be-crafty politics did not influence its proposal. If that be true, why did the framers wait until election time is near to bring it forward? Why is it that they are so anxious to put it into effect immediately? Obviously, some pressing need is stirring them to action.

Much is made of the fact that the staffs voted unanimously in three cases and three to one in the other (DAILY TAR HEEL) for the change. My information, if correct, explains that. The meetings were called hurriedly—at least for the campus daily—and without announcement of purpose. Only its good points were discussed by the proponents, and in theory, without inquisitorial criticism, it sounds feasible. But just because an egg looks all right does not necessarily mean that it is. It may be bad on the inside, just as this scheme is. There the analogy ends. A hen wouldn't lay a bad egg; time makes the change. But the ones who would put this plan into effect dig it up and polish it over to make it look good and throw it out as fresh.

Our paper is acknowledged as one of the leading college dailies. If we have an unusual way of electing its editor and still can maintain that position, we should be proud, in this day of mass production and standardized methods, that we are different.

CAROLINA FROSH WILL MEET BABY DEACONS TONIGHT

Tar Babies Will Be at Disadvantage as Result of Winter Football Practice.

With one win and one loss in Big Five circles, Carolina's Tar Baby cagers take on the yearlings from Wake Forest in their third Big Five encounter of the season. The game is scheduled to be played at Wake Forest.

The Tar Babies are just back from a very successful trip into Virginia where they took three wins out of three starts, downing Virginia's freshmen, Woodberry, and A. M. A. in three days. In the first meeting of the Tar Babies and Deacon freshmen, Carolina's yearlings came out on top with a wide margin. In their only other Big Five start the Carolina first year men lost a close game to the State wolflets. Wake Forest's Baby Deacons can boast of a win over the Blue Imps in an early season game but besides the loss to the Tar Babies they have been defeated by the freshmen from Duke and State.

Coach Dameron's team will be at some disadvantage tonight as a result of winter football practice. Coach Collins has made a call for all freshmen, regardless of other teams, to report for football. Bill Moore, first string forward on the Tar Baby cage team has decided to report for the Collins' team and as a result will only be used in the freshman home games.

Jim McCachren and Melvin Nelson, first string guard and forward on the cage team are also football players, but as yet they have not reported for football and will start in tonight's battle. Tilley will probably start at the forward position left vacant by Moore while the starting center and other guard positions will be filled by Rankin and Glasgow respectively.

HEEL WRESTLERS GIVE GENERALS STIFF BATTLES

Mat Men Working Hard in Preparation for Duke Meet Scheduled for Next Thursday.

Although beaten 19-13 by the Washington and Lee Generals Saturday night, Carolina's mat men considered this meet a fine moral victory and are priming themselves for the Duke meet Thursday night in Durham.

Coach Quinlan's proteges entered their Lexington matches as under dog, not doped to cop more than five points. When the 155 pound class fight came off, the Generals were enjoying a huge margin, leading 16-0. Don Conklin carried the Tar Heels' colors to their first scratch, gaining a good time decision over Thomas, fine General star. Spell lost the 165; "Mac" Auman entered the 175-pound division against a behemoth. Auman gained a fall as did Captain Percy Idol, and Carolina trailed the Dixie title holders by a measly six points.

Yesterday afternoon found the Tar Heels mat men working hard in preparation for their Duke meet. The Blue Devils claim to have a strong club capable of going places. Orniske of the 115 pound class, is one of their most brilliant grapplers; he will meet Hussey in the matches Thursday. Hussey did not wrestle Saturday, but should be back in the line-up this week.

No major injuries hit the Carolina wrestlers on their Virginia invasion, and should be in top form for their tiff with the Blue Devils.

THE KINGS ARE DEAD! Long live the kings! Goldstein and Smith were the kings but now Quarles and Giddens reign in their stead. Bobby Goldstein, national intercollegiate champion, lost his first collegiate battle in his three-year career Saturday night to our man Quarles. Then Sam Giddens came in and gave Red Smith a beautiful boxing lesson and Smith lost his first varsity fight in two years. He had had two straight knockouts this year before Saturday night. Yeah man, they had climbed well but Saturday they fell and great was the fall thereof.

THIS MAN QUARLES certainly allayed any suspicions as to his ability to hit. One ardent boxing follower told the writer Saturday that I was a fool for making such wagers as I had, and he based his argument on the fact that Norment could not pok'em. The bets I made were o.k., I lost but in the first round came so close to collecting enough for an Easter trip to Florida, that it was not funny. Quarles connected with a beautiful left to the face and Goldy came damn near collapsing. The fans went wild but why not, they

CAPTAIN YANCEY LEADS PI PHI TO WIN OVER CHI O.

Scores Twenty-Four Points to Show Way in 46-10 Victory in Sorority Contest.

Playing far superior and more effective basketball than their opponents, the Pi Phi hardwood artists ran wild to hang up a 46-10 victory over the Chi Omega sextet in the Tin Can last night.

Led by Captain Yancey, the Pi Phi outfit sailed into an early lead which was never closely approached by Chi Omega. The score at the half stood: Pi Phi, 22; Chi Omega, 6.

Pi Phi wasted few opportunities to score, and their passing became better as the game progressed. Chi Omega squandered several good chances to ring up goals, and their passing was rather wild.

Yancey opened the scoring with a goal shortly after the initial toss-up, and counted again before Bradley, Chi Omega, sank a shot. From that point on, the Chi Omegas were never able to get near the victors' score.

Second Half

Chi Omega tried a shift at the opening of the second half in an attempt to stop Yancey, but the Pi Phi captain was soon dropped

TAR HEELS MAKE STRONG BIDS FOR BOXING LAURELS

Quarles, Levinson, and Landis Loom as Favorites for Southern Conference Crowns.

Out of Saturday night's sock carnival that ended in a Mexican standoff between Carolina and Virginia, the figures of Norm Quarles, Platt Landis, and Marty Levinson emerged as good bets to take Conference honors for Carolina, while Tom Fishburne looked like Virginia's brightest prospect.

Quarles turned in the most outstanding boxing feat of the year in handing Bobby Goldstein the first defeat of his intercollegiate career. Although Goldy came fast in the third, Quarles had a vast margin of points in his favor and the Virginian was far too late in his attempts to stem the tide of defeat. With the exception of Goldstein, no one on the lightweight horizon at the present time can even extend Quarles and, barring a tremendous upset, he appears to be the one who will wear the title diadem in his first year on the varsity.

GRANT INCREASES NATIONAL RATING ON MIAMI COURTS

Carolina Captain Advances to Semi-Finals in Recent Championship Matches in Florida.

Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, captain of this year's varsity tennis team, has been hitting his stride for the past two weeks in the All-South and Pan-American tennis championships in Miami. Grant's showing will boost his national standing.

In the All-South Grant advanced to the semi-finals, where he lost a lengthy battle to Cliff Sutter, number one ranking player in national intercollegiate tennis and third ranking player in America. Sutter won in the fifth set 7-5.

In the Pan-American George Lott, former Davis cup star, stopped "Bitsy" in the semi-finals after five hard fought sets. "Bitsy" made a great comeback after losing the first two sets, but his rally fell a slight bit short. The scores were 6-4, 6-3, 2-6, 1-6, 7-5. Grant teamed with Sutter to reach the doubles' finals in this same tourney.

PHANTOMS FIGHT TO REGAIN STRIDE FOR DUKE GAME

Tar Heel Basketeers Take Drubbing From Maryland and Navy on Northern Trip.

Carolina's basketball squad of ten men will return tomorrow from an already disastrous northern trip. The White Phantoms met V. M. I. last night and tonight they engage the Generals from Washington and Lee. The Tar Heels left here with only the heart-breaking Duke defeat to mar their season's record. They met Maryland first and the Old Liners tripped them 42-29. Carolina supporters here were stunned at this report but Saturday night the 66-40 lacing at the hands of the Navy made it certain that the Phantoms were in a lapse.

Last night they met the Cadets and tonight they tackle the Generals, both conference foes. Duke, Davidson, and N. C. State are the three remaining games on the Phantom list before the conference tournament in Raleigh starts February 24. State will be played in Raleigh while Duke and Davidson will be met in the Tin Can.

Alexander, Longest Stage Duel For Scoring Lead in Deke-Theta Kappa Nu Tilt.

No leaders saw action as the intramural basketball program swung into the final week of the season with yesterday's card of six games.

The feature of the day was the scoring duel between Longest and Alexander, centers for Theta Kappa Nu and Delta Kappa Epsilon respectively. The men are running one-two for scoring honors in the fraternity circuit and Alexander outscored Longest yesterday by seven points to reduce Longest's margin to five points.

Kappa Sigma Scores

Eagles, whose return to intramural campaigning has revived the Kappa Sigma five, led his team to 41-20 win over Sigma Chi. The former all-fraternity star accounted for twelve of the winners' points, while May and White got ten each for Sigma Chi, which was dropping its fifth game in six starts. Wall scored seven points while Phelps and Barney made six apiece.

Delta Psi chalked up its fifth win in seven attempts as it crushed Phi Alpha, 58-15.

Delta Tau Delta Bows

Crumpler led Phi Delta Chi to a 25-24 win over Delta Tau Delta, which lost its sixth game in a row. The pharmacists' leader got sixteen points, and Womble and McCullum added three each to the total.

Sigma Phi Sigma dominated Phi Sigma Kappa, 20-13, in a slow contest. All the leading scorers, Froneberger and Loveland, for the winners, and Mitchell, for the losers, scored eight points.

The Mid-dies beat Carolina four more points than they conquered the Dukemen, and Duke's margin of victory over the Tar Heels was also four points. Like the first game, this one Saturday will be fast and furious as both teams are determined to win. If Carolina loses, their chance at a state title will be definitely cut off. A win from Duke and State, and a defeat of Duke by State would give the Tar Heels the inside track.

had all waited three years to see this man Goldy and now here he was, the Great Goldy, almost out in the first round. Ten more seconds and there would have been some heavy swinging in Florida about Eastertime. Oh yeah man.

SOME STATE PAPERS CARRIED an account of Goldstein's having protested the decision. The writer was in the dressing room after the fights and Goldy had no protests to offer, he was broken up about the loss but all he said was "I just couldn't take it tonight." He was beaten and soundly so, there was no question about that even in Goldy's mind.

HE HAD SOME SORT OF manager who stayed down here after the bouts and sent word to me by Jimmy Williams that Bobby had been sick and was out of shape. You know, all the hokey funny looking managers can sling. You can bet there was nothing wrong with Bobby. Coach La Rowe would not have stopped Levinson's murder when he did if he had not been counting on a Goldstein victory, no sir, not La Rowe. No champion is going to talk like Bobby did Saturday afternoon and not be in great shape. Quarles beat the champion when he was right and he will do it again. Somebody said yesterday that Goldstein had never been hit with a left hand. Oh well, live and learn Goldy. It may be a right in Charlottesville, who knows?

FRANK McINTOSH GOT ANOTHER tough break against Stuart, Cavalier captain. He was fighting in his right weight and was making good headway. Then Stuart opened the cut over his eye and Referee Brockman, who had the queerest little skull cap on, along with a few other beauty spots on his face, stopped the fight. Frank will come through before long. He has plenty of "guts" and a fighting heart, which can't be kept down.

HOW 'BOUT OUR TWO

heavyweight stars. You know, Popeye Landis and ole Percy Idol. Landis caught Dawson with a left hook Saturday, the first time he has used his left hand this year, and Dawson literally sat down, you know from way up. Landis told Coach Rowe about connecting with a left after the fight. Crayton turned and said, "That makes two blows you've got now, Popeye, one left and one right, you're o.k." I don't know what Percy used up at, Washington and Lee to gain his fourth straight fall but he yelled something to me the other night going east on Franklin street about knowing a new hold that he was going out to see how it worked on the coach. Then I remembered that Coach Quinlan lived in just the opposite direction. What ho! Percy?

CAPTAIN YANCEY LEADS PI PHI TO WIN OVER CHI O.

ping them in. Second half scoring was run up largely in the last few minutes of play.

All the spark was gone from the Chi Omega offense after the removal of Captain Grisette near the close of the game, and the defense weakened greatly.

The Pi Phi offense was led by Captain Yancey with twenty-four points. She was followed by Brown with ten, and Harding with eight. Grisette led Chi Omega with eight points.

The work of Page and Grisette, Chi Omega forwards, featured the offensive play of the losers, while the guarding of Bradley and Coates stood out.

Smoot and Rawlings starred at guard for the winners. They pretty well smothered the combination of Page and Grisette, which the losers counted on heavily.

The audience was rather quiet, although goals did get some cheering. The Pi Phi rooters busted out in a cheer at a large time. It started off with a half group, it ended with about two or three furnishing the lung-power. The referee got the bird on the occasion of a mistake, but otherwise the crowd was satisfied with his decisions.

ed his last three opponents to bid a farewell to arms in a little more than a round of fighting all put together. Dawson of Virginia went to sleep quickest of all, Platt using up exactly forty seconds of ring-time to stanch him. There are few heavies who will trouble Landis, for Stephens of State was the most promising of the lot and the Tar Heel assassin divorced him from consciousness with one punch.

In flattening Gordon Rainey, Marty Levinson finds himself one of the leading candidates for the Conference featherweight title and one of the centers of interest in the next individual contest that the fans are already beginning to discuss. The other party in the spot-light is Fred Lloyd of Duke, and the contest will be their meeting on February 18, when Carolina meets Duke in Durham. Last year's champion of the Conference bantams, Lloyd has moved up to Marty's class. He stopped Rainey in the third, while Marty did it in the first so the fight promises to be an affair of murderous hitting.

Fishburne Looks Good

Tom Fishburne, Virginia welterweight, scored a sensational knockout over Nat Lumpkin, who was winning on points up until the blow landed. It was a terrific wallopp and no disgrace to Lumpkin, for it is certain that no one would have been able to remain erect after receiving it full on the chin. Nat's fighting spirit came to the surface as he was being led from the ring, for he struggled to remain and continue fighting.

In one of the most gallant gestures of the night, Peyton Brown, after being clipped by Reiss sank half way to the canvass but instinctively pulled himself to his feet without taking a count. Brown was out on his feet and the count would have helped him, but he disdained going to the floor. Scarcely able to raise his arms, he was dropped by the next punch and the referee stopped it. It was his first knockout, and he was as graceful in losing as he ever was in winning.

FAMOUS PEOPLE HONOR SHAW AND HENDERSON HERE

over a period of thirty years, through his writings and lectures, that the one-time obscure Irish playwright, who was known chiefly as Socialist and vegetarian, is today regarded by many as the world's greatest living dramatist. The climax of eight volumes by Henderson, dealing in whole or in part with the Irish dramatist, is Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, which recently came from the press.

To the assemblage here Sunday night came messages of high tribute to Shaw and Henderson from celebrated people the world over—from Albert Einstein, the German scientist, now residing temporarily in Pasadena; from such educators as Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; James R. Angell, president of Yale University; Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University; and William Louis Poteat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College.

Tributes From Abroad

From abroad the tributes included messages from Ada Galsworthy, wife of the English novelist and playwright who died last week; Lord Olivier, distinguished author and playwright and ex-Secretary for India; Holbrook Jackson, eminent English literary critic; and R. F. Rattray, well known British editor and formerly president of University College, Leicester, now at Cambridge.

And from noted authorities of the drama and others in America came similar appraisals from Walter Pritchard Eaton, one of America's foremost critics; Harry S. Canby, editor of The Saturday Review; Edwin Bjorkman, author and translator; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York; Henry L. Mencken, editor of The American Mercury; Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly; Edwin Markham, author and poet; Barrett R. Clark, dramatic critic; Princess Pierre Troubetzkoy (nee Amelia Rives), playwright and novelist; Gerald W. Johnson, author and editor the Baltimore Evening Sun; George Fort Milton, Chattanooga editor and author of The Age of Hate; Gene Tunney, ex-champion boxer and student of Shakespeare; Arthur Hobson Quinn, of the University of Pennsylvania, historian of the American drama; and others too numerous to mention.

How To Avoid BONERS

MONOTONY IS THE CUSTOM OF HAVING ONLY ONE WIFE

HEAVEN have pity on the poor lad! He also thinks a parapet is a tropical bird.

But where there's life there's hope. If somebody will introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco, perhaps he'll improve. You see, a pipe helps a man concentrate, think right. And be sure you fill his pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco. As you know, Edgeworth has proved to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Ah! There's a smoke for you! Notice how that blend of fine old burleys helps you think out a difficult problem. See how cobwebs fly from a tired brain on its fragrant wisps of curling blue smoke!

TAYLOR TO READ
COWARD PLAY IN THEATRE SUNDAYWoman's College Professor Delivers First of Monthly
Readings This Year.

Professor W. R. Taylor, of the Woman's College, will give a reading of Noel Coward's successful play, Calvacade, in the Playmaker theatre Sunday, February 12, at 8:30 o'clock. Professor Taylor is head of the Greensboro department of dramatics.

The offering will be the Playmakers' regular monthly reading for February and the first of this quarter as last month's event centered around the observance of the Shaw-Henderson festival.

Historical Play

Calvacade is a panoramic view of the history of England from 1889 to the present day as seen through the sensitive eyes of a mother. Coward has caught vivid pictures of crises in English history at a time when corresponding crises were taking place in the lives of Sir Robert and Jane Marryot and their family and in the lives of their butler and maid. It is a tender and sentimental play, quite different from the usual clever and brittle nonsense for which Coward is best known. It received the unreserved approval of all British royalty during the year or more when it was running at the Drury Lane theatre in London.

Calvacade has recently been made into movie by Fox, and it is now running at the Gaiety theatre, New York. Movie critics have praised the production.

Percy MacKaye Expresses Faith In Development Of National Theatre

Dramatic Interpreter Believes State-Maintained Theatre Will Be Ultimate Manifestation of Country's Spirit; Bi-Centennial Cited as Example of Participation of Audience.

A national theatre is in the offing. An organization subsidized by the federal government and dedicated to the dramatic efforts of the entire country is the dream which Percy MacKaye believes fully capable of realization. The distinguished American poet and playwright, who recently participated as the representative of the theatre in the local Shaw-Henderson festival, expressed his unswerving faith in the establishment of a state-maintained theatre yesterday in an interview with a member of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff.

"It will not be," cautioned the famed translator and dramatic interpreter of The Canterbury Tales, "anything like Radio City. Rather it will work from the bottom up. First will come civic theatres, then governmental theatres of larger units, and finally there will arise the complete manifestation of the country's spirit, the national theatre."

Government in Theatre

As an example of the trend in this direction he mentioned his share in the George Washington bi-centennial celebration. Literary director of the commemoration, MacKaye wrote a symbolic story of the life of the first president, which he styled Wakefield, A Folk-Masque of America.

The production of this play marked the first time that the United States government spon-

JACKSON BOOK OF FOLK SONGS OFF
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Volume Traces History of Negro Spirituals and Other Peculiar Southern Music.

The University press has released White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands by George Pullen Jackson. This volume deals with the old folk songs and negro spirituals sung in North Carolina and the other southern states. Jackson uncovers the heretofore hidden phase of America's folk-cultural tradition and tells its story in a comprehensive manner. The tradition is one of folk-songs mainly but not of the churches.

The book traces the story of the folk-song from its origin, over 200 years ago until its present state of almost oblivion. Jackson attributes the apparent disappearance of the folk-song to its separation from the civilized world and the birth of the new type of song, the jazz.

The author found copies of many of the old songs in old garrets and forgotten trunks. Some of these songs have been completely forgotten with the exception of some of the older ones.

The volume shows that thousands of new tunes comprised in a score of new books are coming from twenty-five selected printshops at the rate of about 500,000 copies a year.

Co-ed Tea

The Woman's Association of the University will sponsor another weekly tea today for students in Spencer hall from 4:30 until 6:00 o'clock. Misses Sarah Vann and Sarah Walser will be the hostesses.

The February issue of the High School Journal was mailed Tuesday and has been mailed to subscribers. The magazine carries the contributions of persons prominent in the educational fields of the state, and the usual science, Latin, and mathematics columns.

J. Henry Highsmith, of the North Carolina state department of education, has written an article that deals with the high school graduates in college, in which he brings out the fact that there is a marked tendency for graduates to attend a school in or near their home towns; according to Highsmith the junior colleges were also well patronized.

Dr. Edgar W. Knight, of the University, has contributed another of his articles on Iraq. This article deals with excavations in this land by scientists in search of material on ancient civilizations, and the classifications of the evidences found.

L. R. Johnson, principal of High Point high school, has contributed a continuation to his article on the relationship between the principal and the teacher that appeared in the previous issue. This article stresses the value of faculty meetings and conferences in improving this relationship.

The columns deal with the teaching of mathematics, adaptation of text books in the various types of schools, and information concerning the Latin contest, and the method of managing this contest in other states.

Student Discovers
New Fossil Species

E. N. Kjellesvig, a geology student at the University, has discovered a new species of eurypterid, a fossil somewhat resembling our present day horseshoe crab, while looking over some fossils gathered by Dr. G. R. MacCarthy from Hamilton Shales, near Ithaca, New York. The discovery was verified by Dr. Rudolph Ruedemann, the eurypterid expert of the New York state museum at Albany, who examined the fossil.

The fact that the eurypterid came from so early in the Devonian is of much geological significance. It is called eurypteridus macCarthyi, in honor of Dr. MacCarthy who discovered it in the Hamilton Shales. This type of species will presently be placed in the geological museum along with about thirty new species of fossil invertebrates from the Silurian rocks of Maryland.

Guests of Dr. Knight

Professor and Mrs. Edward H. Reisner of Columbia University are the guests of Dr. Edgar W. Knight at his home on East Franklin street. Professor and Mrs. Reisner arrived in Chapel Hill Monday night and will conclude their visit today. Faculty Believes Technocracy
Dramatizes Economic Weakness

Although Some Faculty Experts Believe Technocracy Is "Inexcusable Blunder," and Many Call It Pipe-Dream, Others Express Favorable Opinions in Census.

By A. T. Dill
Consensus of opinion among faculty members of the school of commerce seems to indicate that technocracy remains as yet little more than a pipe-dream of arm-chair economists. However, it was generally agreed that technocracy, in the words of Associate Professor H. D. Wolf, specialist in labor problems, has at least "succeeded in dramatizing the most effectively certain well known weaknesses in our economic system."

Commending the fact that the "economics of glut" (as technocracy has been called) has tended to force into the minds of the public a consideration of the industrial problems which we face today, Professor Wolf continues: "The present and potential possibilities of our industrial machine to turn out goods, quantitatively and qualitatively, are held up, side by side, with our crying need for those goods. This paradoxical state of affairs throws into bold relief its major cause: the conflict between society's interest, which, as one of its major objectives, is the maximization of production, and the business man's interest, the maximization of profits. . . . There appears to be a growing number of people who believe we have reached a point in our development where a greater degree of conscious control must be applied if we are to get along tolerably, if, indeed, we are to avert catastrophe."

Doctrines Inconsistent
"Their (the technocrats') program of reform cannot be taken seriously by any student of economics," declares Dr. Murchison in his criticism of proposals for monetary correction. He sees a glaring inconsistency in technocracy's doctrines, that it advocates abolition of the price system, and yet proposes a new standard of value. "The 'energy' dollar which they propose would be a much less stable form of money than the present one. The conditions under which mechanical energy is produced are undergoing constant change. During the past fifteen years, I know of no greater variable than the value of a given unit of energy. The technocrats fail to see that in our monetary system the major defect is not the stability of money, but the means of its distribution among the masses of people."

Although he admits the general truth of the technocrats' ideas on the vast increase of productive facilities, J. G. Evans, assistant professor of economics, criticizes them on the grounds of careless use of statistical data, which, he asserts, may be responsible for bringing them into disrepute. Nevertheless, he continues, "such beliefs have a substantial foundation. Strong evi-

Trust

Those who object to the staffs of our publications selecting their own editors raise as one of their greatest objections the fear that politics will enter and dominate these selections. The expression of this fear is an expression of lack of faith in the persons of the publications and it is hoped that these are not the sentiments of the campus. There would be great resentment were it rumored that the captaincies of our teams (excepting football) were being filled by politics. The student body has faith in its teams, faith that they are doing their best for Carolina and that they select able and representative leaders regardless of personal interests. Why not the same faith in the men of our publications? These men are as sincere and as interested in the welfare of their product as the athlete is in the success of the team.

As it now stands the position of editor on any of our publications is openly a political one. Some of the men chosen have been very able, some grossly inefficient, but they all arrived there through the devious workings of machine politics. They represent not the true choice of the campus, but the choice of some few men in the backroom of a fraternity house who parcel out the positions in return for the support of the fraternity whose man receives the editorship. The present editors have all been selected through this method; knowing how it works, they stand flatly opposed to it.

Perhaps the most potent argument against the supposed fear of politics entering is the tremendous effort being made by the politicians themselves to prevent the new plan from going into effect. They are the ones who would delight to see the publications further under the control of politics yet the greatest opposition has come not from the student body at large nor from the faculty which favors the new plan but from those high up in campus politics. They oppose it because they see slipping from their grasp what they have always considered their just property—the valuable political tool of the editorships.

One of these men has made the statement that it is more in keeping with the spirit of this University to keep the inevitable politics on the campus and not confine it to a small group. There are those who are not politicians and who consider this utterance an insult to Carolina. These men believe that a complete absence of politics from publications is the true spirit of this University. They believe that positions of trust and responsibility should not be the property of a few fraternities. They believe that there are men here who are more interested in the integrity of Carolina and the publications that represent her than in the advancement of their fraternities in politics. They believe that there are here men, fraternity and non-fraternity, who are glad to sever all political ties in order to work hand in hand for publications worthy of the principles of Carolina—freedom from the political line-up and the party boss.—J.F.A.

A letter from a drum manufacturer inquiring as to the satisfaction given by his make of drums brings forth the following answer from the University band, 'tis reported: "Dear Sir: We have been using your drums for ten years and find them hard to beat."—U. of S. C. Gamecock.

Please Walk On the Grass

One heritage which present-day landscape gardeners have received from the hands of the husbandmen of old is the knowledge that if a soft, verdant carpet of grass is wanted, no amount of care and artificial fertilization can take the place of a genteel good grinding under the feet of man or beast, occasionally.

Of course a few straggling gardeners of the mid-Victorian school still subscribe to the theory that grass, like other of nature's daughters, suffers from such a castigation, but happily, these old timers are fast going to share the fate of those who advocate woman's equality and all the other absurd and antiquated theories, and Carolina gentlemen pass their suggestions as to how a University campus should be kept with a cynical smile, or, at best, quietly ignore them, for, haven't they seen the farmer's belabored struggle to drive this green intruder from his fields result only in its increased density and verdure? They well know that grass is, by nature, indomitable, and that opposition only serves to heighten its salubrity, so they turn a deaf ear to those whose well meant admonitions are so freely published.

But, granting that grass is susceptible to all the frailties to which natural beings are heir, and would suffer under the tread of number tens, surely no reasoning being would advocate walking a hundred weary yards, over a devious pathway, when only fifty yards away, as the crow flies, lies the destination; time is too valuable and too well disposed of to be wasted thus.

What is better, anyway, than good plain, substantial soil to walk upon? Nature and the so-called beautiful is out of place in this artificial age of technocracy and steel.

After all this is a free country, and this campus a center of liberalism, where such effeminate matters as grass are not to be fretted over. Let us make our campus distinctive with thousands of handy little paths, forming thousands of intersections, and, thereby, live up to the mathematically proven maxim that the shortest distance between two points is A STRAIGHT LINE.—W.A.S.

Another Round

Forward-looking conservatives say that Socialism in America will be forestalled because the two existing major parties will adopt the best of the Socialist reforms before they become acute issues. Most important of these Socialist proposals are government ownership of public utilities and nation-wide monopoly services.

Last week, on the Open Forum lecture series, Dr. W. S. Gruening advocated public ownership of the power industry. Predictions that one of the major parties would soon rip this plank out of the Socialist platform were freely made after Dr. Gruening's lecture. The collapse of the Insull empire, rate investigations in this and other states, and Franklin D. Roosevelt's recent pronouncements favoring stricter power regulations were pointed out as straws in the wind. But the wind is far from becoming a sweeping gale.

Americans are great people for "cycles," business or otherwise. To their way of thinking, anything that can be represented on a graph or chart is economic gospel. Optimistically, they believe that the valleys on depression charts, showing that there has been a business slump every seven years since Satan sold apples on the street corner in Eden, are as natural and inevitable as the Mississippi valley and that if we keep driving a hill is sure to turn up sooner or later.

An industry is assumed, by the laissez-faire economists of our capitalist system, to have completed its cycle when it stops making money. It has outlived its usefulness to capitalism when it ceases to return profits. Then it is abandoned to the protection of the government. Take the case of railroads in the United States:

Private capitalistic enterprise built our great railroad system, with considerable help from the government. When railroads became a public necessity rather than a luxury and abuses in rate-making and exploitation became dangerously widespread, the government stepped in with increasingly strict regulation. During the War, complete control of railways was taken over by the government.

The rapid development of motor travel over public highways took a big slice out of the railroads' pie. Unrestricted by government regulation, truck and bus lines have gradually encroached upon the transportation field formerly monopolized by the railroads. Rail dividends were cut, again, again, and again. The government, which is both midwife and undertaker to Big Business, has been called in on the case.

There are many things the government could do to protect the railroads. Already, it has let down its restrictions against consolidations; companies in and near receivership are clinging together, merging for mutual protection. Huge sums from the coffers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—called by Dr. Broadus Mitchell a "salvaging, rather than reconstruction, corporation"—have been administered as tonics and body-builders to the railroads.

Next, the Interstate Commerce Commission could extend its control to the regulation of bus and truck lines, putting their rates up to the competition-point for the railroads. Heavier taxes, to pay for the wear on public roads, and stricter regulation are inevitable measures for the bus and truck lines; neither business nor the government has forgotten the regular course of the industry-cycle. Yet, it is hardly logical or fair to tax the bus lines out of existence as long as they give efficient, rapid and cheap service. That, after all, is what the common man wants.

So, if after the government has used all its resuscitation methods on the railroads, little or no favorable reaction to the treatment is seen, government ownership will be the outcome. Already, railroads are conveniently consolidated; government ownership during the War was a successful precedent; and if the railroads cannot pay their R. F. C. obligations, the government will own many of them anyway.

It must be the same with the power companies. The cycle of development-regulation-federal aid-government ownership must be first completed. The development stage has practically been completed. Recent exposures of power company abuses are bringing on the regulation stage. The beginning of a trend towards public construction of power plants on natural sites, such as the Muscle Shoals and Hoover Dam projects, will within a generation put public plants in competition with private companies. Then beset by ruinous regulation and competition, the privately owned companies will come to cry on the government's broad shoulder. Then, public ownership.

If the utilities would scare off the bugaboo of public ownership they must either by bold force or contrite stalling prevent the completion of the cycle. Issuing this warning is like shipping sausages to Bologna. The power companies know their business; the decline and fall of Insull gave them a bad bounce and they got up weaving and feinting.—E.C.D.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

For Staff

Elections

To the Editor

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

Not very convincing is the chief argument against the movement to allow the staffs of the respective publications of the University to choose their editors; the argument being, that if the student body subscribes to the publications, they should choose the editor. A man who buys Time has no choice of editors. A man who buys Ivory soap has no vote for the election of the company's president. Such a man cannot be intimate enough with the requirements of office. Although he is the one who keeps the company in existence, he does nothing for the betterment of the product.

The staffs of the respective publications on the campus devote most of their spare time preparing them as well as possible for the other students of the University. As a reward (they get no other) they should be awarded the privilege of selecting the man under whom they wish to work. This is owed them for their loyalty and work.

Staff elections would not in any sense limit the student's power. Anyone who can prove himself eligible to write news for a daily paper, or produce literary accomplishments, or think of funny jokes, or tabulate names, dates, and achievements, as the case may be, can become a member of the staffs of the publications. The editor would still be morally responsible to the student body and would also have a hitherto unknown practical responsibility to the staff.

That there may be an amount of politics within the staff if they elect the editors is only to be expected. But whomsoever is chosen, he will at least be the choice of the majority and will be an experienced man. As campus politics are now controlled, a man who knew nothing of the work of the publications could be 'persuaded' into office by the machinations of some huge political machine backed by large fraternities and a few non-fraternity favorites.

Many students, who are taking an interest in the publications for the first time, show their ignorance of these institutions by their narrow and selfish arguments, and yet they feel that they can choose editors better than those who have devoted four, three, or two years of their college life working on these publications, working with the man they know to be the best fitted for the position.—C.G.T.

A Journalist

Speaks

To the Editor

THE DAILY TAR HEEL:

The recent discussions regarding the proposed change to place power of electing editors in the hands of staff members have interested me no little. Having had a great deal of experience in journalism, I readily see the innumerable advantages to be gained by the selection by staff members only.

After all what share have we students, directly, in the choice of the basketball, baseball and football managers or the captains and coaches? Or the business managers of the publications? Yet indirectly our money helps to keep their posts in existence.

Again, it must be remembered that the students pay only about fifty per cent of cost of the DAILY TAR HEEL for example. The other half is raised by the advertising staff. We only pay a most reasonable subscription price—a price little more than that charged by many college weeklies.

As students, we necessarily know little about our average fellow students except as regards their personality, their integrity, possibly, and their scholastic standing, maybe. We are possibly qualified, to choose, on this basis, class officers. But the editor of a publication needs vision, fearlessness, executive ability, and above all, mastery of the arts of newspaper writing. Only the men who work in the offices with these men have the intimate knowledge which should qualify them to vote intelligently and fairly. Popularity is no standard by which to measure the eligibility of men for journalistic offices.

"The editors will dictate their successors" shout the political whips (or, more frankly "we can't easily dictate to the staffs")—But the editors have a pride in their respective publications, a sense of professional honor, which demands that the interests of the publication be put first. The staff vote should be by ballot. Always the student body could assert itself, if the situation demanded.

Neither the present plan nor the proposed one is perfect. But the present plan places the control of the choice of the editors of the publications, at worst, in the hands of those who cannot possibly know the best men for the positions; at worst, (and the normal, customary, conditions) the nominations will be in the hands of the political machines who are rarely guided by the precepts of fairness and justice. The best man will get it if he has the strong machine behind him, but will be crucified if he is not backed by the machine or is not tremendously popular (if he is popular, he meets the prime prerequisite of the politicians—little do their brains cudgel over matters of honor or merit).—F.J.M.

BOXERS UNDERGO USUAL LETDOWN AT WEEK'S START

Meets With Duke and Penn State Remain After Undefeated Season Thus Far.

The usual reaction to a strenuous meet followed when the boxers returned rather languidly to training Monday. The team is on the last mile of the present season and only two more meets remain before the boys pull up stakes for Charlottesville and the tournament.

So far, the team finds itself with two 6-2 victories, two 4-4 ties, and no defeats. The tie with Virginia assumed the proportions of a moral victory for the Tar Heels, as the visiting team was rated as the most likely one to take conference honors this year. In the tie score of that meet and the one with State, the objection to the new 155 pound class was evident, for without it, the meets could not have ended in anything other than victories for Carolina.

Prospects Favorable

Penn State, looming big for the leather-pushers on this Saturday night, always has a formidable team. The boys from the Quaker State visited Chapel Hill last year and treated Coach Rowe's boys to a shellacking; but this year, from all advance gossip, the story will be different. State has lost nearly all its last year's letter men through graduation, while Carolina has been strengthened considerably by the unexpected return of several veterans and the brilliance shown by the newcomers. The Tar Heels are conceded excellent possibilities to trip the Pennsylvanians, but the meet will be anything but a breather for the boys before the Duke affair which comes on the following Saturday.

VIRGINIA'S COACH AVERS GOLDSTEIN GREAT IN DEFEAT

First Loss Finds Cavalier Captain Eagerly Awaiting Return Match With Quarles.

University, Va., Feb. 7.—Bobby Goldstein, Virginia's boxing captain and national collegiate lightweight champion, appears greater after his first defeat at the hands of a college rival than he did in any of his string of more than 100 victories, thinks Johnny LaRowe, coach of the Cavalier ring team.

Goldstein was awarded his first adverse decision in an intercollegiate match last Saturday night in Chapel Hill. Norment Quarles, North Carolina 135-pounder, was the winner. Goldstein is looking forward to a return bout with Quarles in the seventh annual Conference ring tournament here on February 24 and 25.

Coach LaRowe bases his opinion on the strategy and skill shown by Goldstein in the second and third rounds after Quarles had him in trouble during the first. The Virginia coach had seen Goldstein win so often that he did not know what fine courage the Cavalier captain could show with the match going against him.

Coach LaRowe also has praise for the way Goldstein has taken his first defeat in a college match. The captain was an inspiration to all others on the Virginia squad as he started preparations yesterday for the bouts with Florida.

Goldstein will probably be matched against the Gator captain, Stanley Peckham, who has not been defeated this winter.

MATMEN PREPARE FOR DUKE MATCH AWAY THURSDAY

Final Practice Stage Reached as Wrestlers Work Toward Important Meet.

Coach Quinlan sent his wrestling charges through the final stages of preparation yesterday afternoon as he primed his men for the double-header meet with the Duke Blue Devils in Durham tomorrow night.

The Carolina mat coach pressed his proteges hard in anticipation of the matches with the highly publicized Blue Devils' mat aggregation. Coach Quinlan is expecting some very hard bouts and these fights should climax the Tar Heels' unimpressive wrestling season.

Coach Add Warren, the Duke mentor, boasts a fine club built around the experienced abilities of a trio of veterans, Captain Orniske, Apple, and Keifer.

Carolina's varsity and freshman line-ups should remain intact, having the same men in action as against the Washington and Lee Generals last Saturday.

English Tea

The members of the English department will have a tea today in the lounge of Smith building from 4:00 until 6:00 o'clock.

GOBBLER CAPTAIN CONTINUES LEAD OF HIGH SCORERS

Bus Hall Has Individual Scoring Record of Ninety Points to Lead Southern Quints.

Although the V. P. I. Gobblers have had tough sledding on all basketball courts in Dixie this year, Bus Hall, flashy captain of the Virginia Techs, continued to set the pace among high scorers in the south in all games up to Monday.

In nine games, Hall has copied 90 markers. He is closely followed by Vincent, giant pivot man on the Maryland Terps quint, who has counted 73 points in his seven games. The best-point-per game average is held by Sawyers, brilliant forward on the Washington and Lee Generals. The Lexington boy has hit the basket for a total score of 63 in his five games.

Local Record Not Complete

Hancock, V. M. I. center, has 63 markers to his credit in his total of seven conference games. Jim Thompson, Duke, is fifth with 61 counters in seven contests. Johnson, State, ranks a close second with 58 in seven family meetings. Weathers and Hines, crack Carolina forwards, do not rank high in this standing of the high scoring cagers in the south, since their games with V. M. I. and Washington and Lee are not included in the summary.

FOOTBALL GAME THIS AFTERNOON

Coach Collins Divides Squad Into Four Teams to Engage in Competition.

Coach Collins will inaugurate intra-squad play between his winter football candidates this afternoon when Georgia and Virginia clash at 4:00 o'clock in Kenan stadium.

The complete squad was divided into four teams by the Tar Heels' coaching staff, Virginia, Georgia, Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt are the teams formed. These clubs will play a complete schedule of games running over the interim of two weeks, the final game coming off February 25, Saturday afternoon between Georgia Tech and Georgia.

Line-ups are as follows: Georgia: ends, Ellisberg, Orr, Yeager, and Denti; tackles, Foley, Watkins, Bryan; guards, Harrell, Shipman, Webb, and Cannon; centers, Yoder and Reid; backs, McDonald, Stein, Moore, Ison, Kenan, Cox, Sutton, Jones, Montgomery. Virginia: ends, O'Kelly, Folger, Farrell, Berry, and Wilson; tackles, Barrett, Moser, and Parker; guards, Caldwell, Douglas, and Blythe; center, Gardner; backs, Jackson, Bell, Leonard, Shaffer, Little, Burnett, and Connelly.

DORM AND FRAT TEAMS CONTINUE PLAY UNBEATEN

Mangum and T. E. P. Beat Old West and Z. B. T. Respectively to Preserve Record.

Mangum and Tau Epsilon Phi continued undefeated at the end of yesterday's play in the intramural basketball races. Each team chalked up its sixth win yesterday, the dormitory team downing Old West, while the fraternity outfit breezed to an easy win over Zeta Beta Tau.

Mangum's win was won at the end of a great battle. The score was 28-24. At the end of the first half the teams were deadlocked at 10-all. From that point on the game became a seesaw with the lead changing hands eleven times before the Mangum five finally ran the game out in the closing minutes. For the winning outfit Smith scored twelve points, Giobbi eight, and Vick six. Bost led the Old West attack with seven markers, while McNair and Parker got six each. The defeat was Old West's sixth in seven starts.

T. E. P. Scores

Jacobs, last year's freshman star, led T. E. P. to its sixth win in as many starts as his team crushed Zeta Beta Tau, 38-20.

What Is it about CHESTERFIELDS?

Well, I can't tell you much of anything about what is in Chesterfields

BUT I smoke a good deal, and I noticed that they said that Chesterfield Cigarettes were milder and tasted better; so I smoked a package or two and found it to be true.

I also noticed that the cigarettes were well-filled, seemed to be the right length and the right circumference, and burned uniformly—not up one side and down the other.

I liked the aroma—very pleasing. I liked the appearance of the cigarette—the paper, dead white. The package rather appealed to me.

I don't know exactly what it is, but I just like 'em. It's about the only luxury that I enjoy; so I think it's all right for me to have a good cigarette, and I believe Chesterfield is just about the best.

British Debt Question Aired

Observers in Washington yesterday were inclined to place stress on the fact that reports of a new British offer came to light at the same time as Sir Roland Lindsay, ambassador to Washington, went into conference with Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald and other members of the British cabinet. He supposedly had with him a vast amount of information direct from Roosevelt himself, gathered at a personal meeting with the incoming president at Warm Springs, Georgia.

Committee Refuses All Decoration Bids

At a meeting Monday night in Graham Memorial, the junior-senior dance committee refused all bids for the decorations for the junior-senior dance. None of the bids received ten days ago were satisfactory to the members of the committee.

The committee will meet again Monday night at 9:00 o'clock in 215 Graham Memorial to receive new bids. It is understood that the committee has the power to refuse any and all bids if they should prove unsatisfactory.

"Scarface" Actor Has Role In Today's Film

Vince Barnett has the role of studio cop in "The Death Kiss," showing today at the Carolina theatre.

Barnett's first profession was that of hiring himself out for parties to spill soup and salad down proper necks. However, when he became so well known that he was recognized by his victims, he had to give this up and become an actor. Proving that he could do this as well, he was given one of the important roles in "Scarface" by Howard Hughes. His death scene remains as one of the memorable scenes in the picture.

ISSUE OF N. Y. U. PAPER FEATURES DR. HARRY CHASE

February 1 Issue of "Daily News" Contains Articles by and About Former President Here.

The New York University Daily News honored the university's chancellor-elect, Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, who recently assumed this post after resigning as president of the University of Illinois, by dedicating the February 1 edition to him. This issue contains a number of articles written by Dr. Chase and about him, giving his philosophy of education, his education creed, and several short feature articles dealing with his public and private life.

Two of these articles were written by students at the University. One, "A Thumb-Nail Sketch of Dr. H. W. Chase," was written by Frank Mannheim in 1930 at which time Mannheim was connected with THE DAILY TAR HEEL staff; another article, which related a brief summary of the policies of Dr. Chase, and the progress that was made by the University during the decade 1920-30 under his leadership, was written by Joseph Sugarman, at present chairman of the feature board of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Gerald W. Johnson, formerly a professor of journalism here, and now an editorial writer on the Baltimore Evening Sun, contributed an article on Chase and his remarkable success as president of the University.

Jacobs got sixteen of his team's points, while Eisenberg and Ostrow accounted for six each.

Zeta Psi, which fell from the league leadership last week as a result of a defeat by Chi Psi, resumed its winning ways with a vengeance yesterday, downing Phi Kappa Sigma, 60-20. Clark Zeta Psi center, played his usual stellar game, leading the attack for his team with twenty points. Barber and Arthur added thirteen and twelve respectively, while Odum and Reid, for the losers, got six points each.

Pi Kappa Alpha's five was no match for the strong Phi Delta Theta outfit which scored at will to hang up its fifth win in six starts to the tune of 50-13. Four men, Tucker, Moffitt, Mosier, and Hershey, stood out in the attack for the winners, scoring fourteen, thirteen, eleven, and ten points respectively. Spiers scored eight for the Pika team.

Led by Pfeffer, who got twelve points, Lewis downed Mitchell House, 37-14. Willis, Lowdermilk, and Unger added six points each to the winners' total, while O'Hara scored twelve of the losers, fourteen points.

Pi Kappa Phi won its third game in six attempts, scoring over the up-and-down Lambda Chi Alpha five, 23-15. Cannon and Pendleton scored ten and seven points to lead the victors, while Griffin, with six, and Lothian, with four, stood out for Lambda Chi Alpha.

Percy MacKaye Has Faith In Development Of National Theatre

the recent St. Louis presentation of one of his, the theatre is no longer a limited affair but is an instrument of literary and histrionic expression which belongs to the masses. From the development of this tendency toward greater inclusiveness in production will come the national theatre.

Against Standardization

Though a classicist in his own dramatic efforts, MacKaye was vehement in his opposition to standardization of the theatre. "Put me down," he cried, "against anything like that. We must have all forms and styles for a thoroughly national product. No method can be omitted or allowed to fall by the way. In like manner, no one type of expression can ever become truly predominant." It is his conviction that the dramas of social propaganda offered by the Workers' Theatre of New York have equal place with the purely classic work of several university dramatic groups.

He was unequivocal in his belief in the immortality of the drama. Admitting the serious challenge that has been offered it by the radio and the cinema, MacKaye observed that these diversions could never entirely replace the theatre because of the fundamental differences between the art forms.

Three-Way Arrangement

"In the theatre it is a three-way arrangement of actors audience, and play," he asserted. "There is the element of interaction between the audience and the players in the spoken drama which does not and never will exist in motion pictures. When the spectators laugh at a joke in the talkies the show goes right on. The performers are not men and women, but mere machine-like creatures. On the other hand, the actor on the legitimate stage is constantly reacting to his audience.

"To him no two audiences are alike. Hence, no two of his performances are similar. As Joseph Jefferson, the great old character actor told me when I was a boy, 'Every audience is a new problem for the performer to solve. Never did I give duplicate performances of Rip Van Winkle.'"

"Since the audience is a part of the production of a stage play, ever responsive to the actors, and they in turn are sensitive to the spectators, so long as a live and breathing art is desired the theatre is insured of immortality," he concluded.

Technocracy Shows Up Economic Weakness

dence in their behalf is presented by the depression. As this economic disaster spreads more and more, people are willing to question the desirability of the present economic organization. The present crisis offers a rare opportunity to obtain a popular mandate to improve the economic order. In so far as technocracy has assisted in moulding the popular psychology toward this objective, it is to be commended."

No Solution Offered

Professor Evans sees other difficulties: "We may all agree that we need to install a scientifically correct management of our distributing machinery, but we do not know how to bring about the installation. Not only do the technocrats offer no help in solving this problem, but they bitterly deride all those who have attempted to deal with it."

Dr. Zimmerman is frankly skeptical: "We owe the technocrats a vote of thanks for having performed before our eyes a valuable experiment in mass psychology. Their whirlwind publicity campaign served to test the gullibility of a modern people, most of whom have some schooling and can read and write, and some of whom can think. The specific point to be proved was: Will such a people when subjected to an unusual nervous tension 'fall for' the old tricks of the medicine man? The promptness with which the raid on popular credulity seems to have been stopped by the forces of critical thought is gratifying, for it means the triumph of sound ideas over hollow phrases."

An Old Idea

Dr. G. T. Schwenning, associate professor of business administration, sees nothing new in the fundamental idea of technocracy. "It has been used by Karl Marx in his Das Kapital," he points out, "by Veblen in his The Engineer and the Price System, by the Webbs in their Deceit of Capitalist Civilization, by the Russells in their Prospects of Industrial Civilization, by Stuart Chase in his numerous writings, and by a great host of social scientists.

"When it comes to details as to the attainment and functioning of the technocratic state, we are left wholly in the dark. How will the engineers assume leadership and bring us to the promised land without some political organization? What political system will they institute since they eschew all existing and known systems? Will the abolition of private ownership be more successful in the technocratic era than in Soviet Russia? Have the technocrats

FROSH PLEDGES OF FOURTEEN LODGES PLAN FOR DANCE

Fraternity Pledges Announce Inter-fraternity ball Scheduled for February 24.

At a meeting of freshmen representatives of fourteen fraternities Tuesday night, tentative plans for a pledge dance to be given Friday, February 24, were drawn up. The dance is under the general chairmanship of Jim Jackson, while four committees have been appointed to handle the more detailed work. The purpose of the dance is to foster better feeling among the various fraternities.

The fraternities which had representatives at Tuesday's meeting are Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Delta Psi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, and Zeta Psi. The regular freshmen representatives of these houses automatically form the executive committee of the dance.

Four committees have been appointed: finance, Armistead Maupin, Frank Causey, Jim Jackson, and Lewis Morris; orchestra, Henry DeVane, Howard Hoyt, and Buddy Upchurch; bids and arrangements, Frank Rogers, Marc Lynch, and Henry Hatch; decorations, Henry Henderson, Henry Mayo, Sam Clark, and Dave Scott.

Medical Dance Postponed

The dance that the Medical Association was to give Saturday, February 11, has been postponed to February 18. This dance is to be given in conjunction with two dances given by the law school.

thought through these problems?"

Data Inaccurate

Assistant professor W. F. Fenger as a statistician delivers the most scathing denunciation of technocratic assertions. "The inexcusable blunder of an engineer or statistician is to compile and use inaccurate figures. Technocrats have played fast and loose with their figures, exaggerating the feats and terrors of machines in some cases thousands of times. The statement, 'One man today produces 9,000 times as many incandescent lamps as in 1914' has been revised, on being challenged, to read, 'the correct ratio is 550 to 1.' An exaggeration of only 1600 per cent!"

"A second blunder of technocracy is the confusion of figures showing present possibilities with actualities or immediate prospective realization. 'A new cigarette machine produces 2,600 cigarettes a minute against a previous maximum of 600 cigarettes.' But our cigarette industry is not thus equipped, and cannot afford to scrap its present machinery even for this saving. Furthermore, on being questioned, technocracy admits, 'General practice with a new equipment averages 1,200 to 1,600 per minute.'

Professor Fenger concludes with the significant statement: "Figures don't lie, but liars (and careless technocrats) do figure."

Rally to University.

An active campaign to restrain further state slashes of appropriations to the University has been launched under the official leadership of W. A. Whitaker, president of the New York chapter of the University Alumini association, according to the New York Herald.

The Herald stated that news of the plight of the University, already seriously handicapped by drastic cuts in appropriations in the past few years and at present threatened with such an additional reduction in the budget now before the state legislature as to endanger its first rate institutional standing, found the New York alumni eager and ready to rally to its cause.
